Twenty-four students from 12 different countries are taking specialized training in the UNC School of Public Health this term. Included are representatives of the Far East, Middle East, Europe, and Latin America. They are registered in seven different departments, but most of them are in sanitary engineering and public health administration.

Three students come from the Philippines, three from Thailand, three from Formosa and one originally from China, now New York; one Vietnam, two from India, two from Peru, one from Uruguay, one from Chile, two from Puerto Rico, one from Finland, three from Iran and one from Egypt.

The departments in which they are studying include sanitary engineering, with 11 students; public health administration, six; health education, three; biostatistics, one; maternal and child health, one; parasitology, one and one in public health nutrition.

They all will return to key public health positions in their own countries. While here they gain not only professional knowledge, but a better understanding of the American way of life. In Chapel Hill they are learning about the way Americans really live, both in cities and rural regions.

Part of the training program is carried on out in communities of Alamance, Guilford andGranville counties, affording the students a chance to see rural North Carolina.

Special interest is attached to the presence of Dr. Doung Thuc Huy of Vietnam; Moo Ping Chow, Kuan Mu Yao and Dr. Yao Teh Hong of Taiwan (Formosa); Balcrisna Rama-Chondra Naique of Portuguese India; Miss Alcira Florez, who is an asistant sanitary engineer in Peru; and Miss Alice Hau Ying Yen, who is a Wellesley graduate and is a daughter of James Yen of the Mass Education Movement in China.

Miss Armi Hallsten-Kallia of Helsinki is executive secretary of the World Health Organization in Finland; Challie Iralu comes from the Nan Naga Hills in Assam, India, to study parasites; Akbar Moarefi is chief of the public health education section in Tehran; and Dr. Udom Pranich is from the Dept. of Health in Bangkok. These are some of the notable personalities in the school.

Marquette 19 Holy Cross 14

WORCESTER, Mass. —(AP)— Marquette's Warriors, apparently beaten by their own mistakes, battered their way for three touchdowns in the final period through a tiring Holy Cross team to score a 19-14 come - from - behind victory yesterday at Fitton Field.

Bob Girman slammed the final half yard at 14:05 of the fourth period for his second touchdown of the day to climax the tremendous closing burst.

The thin-ranked Crusaders entered the final 15 minutes of play with a 14-0 lead gained by capitalizing on Warrior fumbles and errant passes.

But Girman gave Marquette its first score at 1:07 on a two yard dive to end an 80 yard march in 15 plays.

Sophomore quarterback Jere Carmody hit end Dick Varish on a 24 yard scoring pass at a little over five minutes to make it 14-13 for the hometowners, then Girman put it away.

Colgate 13 Dartmouth 7

HANOVER, N. H.—Colgate remained in the thinning ranks of the unbeaten major football teams yesterday by coming from behind in the second half to earn a 13-7 victory over Dartmouth, o a sustained drive of 99 yards march.

Stiffening on its own goal line, in a brilliant defensive stand, Colgate took the ball from Dartmouth on downs when the Green had four cracks from inside the three midway in the thir period.

Trailing 7-6, Colgate then drove 99 yards for the winning score, with fullback Johnny Williams dashing 49 yards to the one after taking a pitch out lateral from quarterback Dick Lalla. Williams smashed over frm the one.

Breaks Duke's Undefeated Spell

Army Rolls Over Duke, 28-14

DURHAM (AP) — Quarterback Pete Vann worked black magic for Army's Black Knights yesterday and the fast improving Cadets knocked Duke out of the undefeated ranks with a 28-14 upset victory. It was Army's third straight triumph after an opening loss to South Carolina.

Vann, best known as a passer, gave a remarkable display of ball handling and blossomed out as a hard to stop runner. But it was a fast charging Army line and an alert defense that shackled Duke's running attack until late in the game.

During the first half Duke, losing the ball twice on fumbles and once on an intercepted pass, failed to come close to the Army goal. & when the powerful Blue Devils finally got rolling it was too late and Army won.

Army, hitting with lightning speed, scored two touchdowns in the second quarter and another at the start of the third to pile up a lead that Duke threatened but couldn't overcome.

When Duke got its second in the final period to cut Army's lead to 21-14, Vann sneaked over for his second touchdown to put the game beyond Duke's reach.

Army's second team accounted for the ice-breaking score in the second period. The reserves took advantage of the third Duke misplay and gave Army the ball. Sonny Jurgensen, sophómore quarterback, tried a pass from his own 44. The ball glanced off the intended receiver's fingers into the hands of Army's Joe Gygler, another sophomoe, who ran it back to the Duke 40. From there Army moved steadily to the 15 where Pete Lash found a big hole in theh middle of the Duke line and went for the touchdown. Howard Glock converted.

Army's starting team returned after that play and scored almost as soon as they got the ball. The big play was Pete Vann's pass to Don Holleder, his favorite target. It was good for 59 yards as Holleder caught the ball on the 20 and raced to the five before he was caught from behind. On the next play Mike Zeigler ran around right end to score and Radph Chesnauskas converted.

Army, fired up by this success, nearly ran the Duke team out or the stadium as it traveld 58 yards on five plays to score at the start of the second half. Vann, who gained a lot of ground by running instead of passing on option plays, sneaked over from the two for a touchdown that tgave Army and 21-0 lead.

Three other times during the game the underdog Army team amazed the 40,000 spectators by coming close to scoroing o a Dixie team that had been ranked sixth in this week's Associated Press Poll.

Duke's two scores were made on a 38 yard run by Bernie Blaney, a and on a 4 yard plunge by Bob Pascal. Both came at the end of long drives as the slow starting Duke team seemed to be moving irresistably against the airing Cadets.

An 80-yard run by Tommy Bell from the Army to the Duke 13 changed that picture suddenly. Army didn't score as a direct result of that play but it paved the way for Vann's second touchdown a few moments later.

They Want The Athletics

PHILADELPHIA — A band of "last-minute" men plunked their check books on the line yesterday and joined a cross-country tug-of-war with Chicago's Arnold Johnson for the suddenly much sought after Philadelphia Athletics' franchise.

Through a spokesman, 10 prominent Philadelphia businessmen announced they had pledged sufficient cash to keep the Athletics in Philadelphia but said the details of their offer would have to be worked out over the coming weekend.

That time element would take matters right down to the 11 a.m., EST, deadline set by Will Harridge, American League president, for a final stand by Roy Mack, the A's executive vice president and key figure in the situation.

In Chicago, Johnson — the baseball-minded financier who thought he practically bought the ball club at an American League meeting last Tuesday — said he still has hopes of purchasing the franchise he wants to transfer to Kansas City.

Johnson said at this point he was a little bewildered but thought it was time he issued "a statement of position." In that statement, Johnson said he was prepared to give Roy Mack a five-year concontract and a stock interest in the A's organization at Kansas City. Johnson also said he had promised to give Roy's son, Connie Mack, 3rd, a job with the club.

Jack Rensel, the Philadelphia syndicate's spokesman, said the 10 members had matched the $3,375,000 offer made by Johnson for the A's franchise.

While Rensel refused to disclose the names of those in the group, reporters on the scene were able to identify the following as they emerged from today's meeting:

Paul Harron, president of Radio Station WIBG; Barney Fischer, oil and automobile industrialist of lower Merion Township, Pa.; Arthur Gallagher, Philadelphia trucking firm executive and formerly nationally known oarsman; William Anderson, heating and plumbing contractor; Arthur Rosenberg, food chain executive; Joseph Leibman, clothier; Leonard Strick, truck-trailer manufacturer; and Isadore Sley, parking lot company operator.

Rensel issued the following statement after the breakup of today's meeting:

"A group of Philadelphia businessmen is negotiating with Mr. Roy Mack and the Mack family and negotiations are still active and no definite decision will be made until after the weekend at which time it is hoped a meeting of the minds will b reached.

"Mr. Roy Mack's daughter is being married tomorrow and if a decision is reacned before then, we shall notify the press.

"Needless to say, all of the people involved are responsible citizens of Philadelphia and are vitally interested in keeping the Athletics in Philadelphia. I am not at liberty in revealing the names of the parties involved."

A spokesman, who attended the meeting, said that negotiations had been conducted with the entire Mack family — Roy, his brother, Earle, and their father, Connie Mack Sr. — and tha tall the Macks "were happy."

Earle Mack, vice president and general manager of the A's, said at his home later, that his attorney, Alfred Luongo, had alerted him to be ready on Sunday to pick up his father, Connie Sr., to drive down to an attorney's Philadelphia office.

Earle refused to elaborate on the statement and he declined to say whether he was aware of what went on at today's meeting of the Philadelphia syndicate.

It was learned from a reliable source that one of the big hitches in the situation was Roy Mack's insistence that he be given a five-year contract as an executive of one sort or another in the A's front office before he will agree to sell his stock.

Maryland Air-Land Combination Whips Tar Heels

end to the 21, Bielski went thru center twice to the 11 and then he took a hand off from quarterback Charlie Boxold, slanted off right end and wound up in th end zone. His placement split the uprights to make the score 7-0.

In the ensuing kick-off Carolina showed it's best offense of the day, which still was not good enough to score. The team ran out of steam on the Maryland 30. The Tar Heels unveiled a new set of plays whereby the ball is centered thru the quarterback's legs straight to the fullback, in most cases Marshall Newman, who passes from this position. Newman comp. ted three passes during this drive, while Larry McMullen and Connie Gravitte did the carrying. When Carolina reached the 30, downs were scarce and Frye punted into the end ozne.

After an exchange of punts, Carolina again threatened to score. From the Maryland 26, Long tossed to Keller in the end one. The completion was made after Ed Sutton deflected the ball tinto Keller's hands, but the Tar Heels had the play nullified on a penalty for having an illegal receiver downfield.

The quarter ended shortly thereafter and that was all the 26,000 fans saw of a Carolina offense.

A UNC threat in the second quarter died when Doug Farmer fumbled twice on third and fourth downs on the Maryland 28.

Maryland began to strut its stuff in the third period. Taking over on their own seven, Boxold, Horning and Waller slanted through the Carolina tackles and guards to their objective in seven plays. The key maneuver was a 43 yard pass from Boxold to end Russell Dennis. Waller went over the center of the line and Bielski's placeemnt was good to make it 14-0.

Then the Terps subbed their third string. The bench riders took over on the Tar Heel 38. From there it was a breeze in three plays with Selep sweeping right end for the score Selep's placement was perfect for a 21-0 margin.

Carolina could do nothing after the kickoff. Frye punted and the Terps began to move from their own 37. Nusz dashed through the middle of the Carolina defense to the N. C. 39. Howard Dare took off around end to the 33 and a Frank Tamburello aerial was good to Tim Flynn on the 24.

Selep movzed behind a flock of blockers to the 17 and Tamburello passed from this point to Dare for the score. Selep's placement was topped, but wasn't needed. Maryland led, 27-0.

Selep also topped the next kickoff. The ball bounced off Carolina center George Stavnitski back into Maryland territory. Dare recovered the bouncing pigskin and the Terps moved in a fashion which belies their nickname. Lyn Beightol, Maryland's third string quarterback, engineered a touchdown drive of 64 yards, with Nusz going over. George Albrecht's kick was poor.

Connie Gravitte, Carolina's leader in indiivdual rushing in the Atlantc Coast Conference, apparently was not feeling well today. He carried only one time, gaining two yards. Don Klochak and McMullen also failed to come thru.

Newman, passing from fullback, gained most of Carolina's aerial yardage. He tossed six, completing three for 39 yards. Bullock, the pilot, threw only 1 pass for 20 yards.

Jack Maultsby was the outstanding Carolina linesman. He seemed to be the only man of any size who could stand up against the crushing Maryland blocking. Frye looked good at times.

North Carolinians Experiencing:

Life-Saving Operation

WINSTON-SALEM —(AP)— A life-saving operation on the heart in which a surgeon's finger is used as the chief operating instrument —has opened new horizons of activity to several Northwest North Carolinians.

A 45-year-old secretary who lives in Cooleemee is the latest to know its benefits. When she entered the North Carolina Baptist Hospital in September, she was a virtual invalid.

She'll return to her job soon with her doctor's prediction that she will have more energy than she has had since she was a child.

She is one of fewer than 10 people who have undergone the operation rcently in Winston-Salem hospitals.

Not Simple

Details of the surgery make it sound almost as simple as putting a finger in a mouth to pull a loose tooth. But a surgeon who has done five of the operations says that "it isn't child's play."

Nothing involving work on the heart is, of course. But the technique of the operation is so comparatively simple that surgeons now wonder why it wasn't discovered earlier.

The operation is called a mitral valvotomy.

It is used to correct a closing or the mitral valve in the heart — a common after-effect of rheumatic fever.

Doctors don't know why, but sometimes a layer of itissues will begin closing this valve after an attack of rheumatic fever. This is not good, because the valve performs a vital function in the circulation of blood from the heart's ventricles to the body.

The narrowing of the valve causes the ventricles to work overtime, pushing blood through a slowly decreasing opening.

Bad Results

As a result, victims are bothered with symptoms ranging from shortness of breath to heart failure. Other unpleasant results are the coughing up of blood and water in the lungs.

Needless to say, these people can't do much work. In fact, little is left in their future but rest in bed and an earlier death than they could otherwist expect. The operation is a last chance for them to return to normal living, and happily, its results have been outstanding in almost every case.

The first successful mitral valvotomy was performed in England in 1925. The patient lived and did well, but for some reason, the operation wasn't repeated for anyone else's benefit.

Between 1920 and 1930, two American surgeons attacked the problem. But six patients on whom they operated died.

Their mistake was that they were punching out the leaves of the valve with their operating instrument. The leaves open and shut with every heart beat, much like the action of valves in a pump.

Perfected Technique

In 1948, Dr. Charles Bailey of Philadelphia perfected the technique which was to bring so much hope to rheumatic fever victims affected in this way.

He discovered that, by using his finger as an operating instrument, he could reopen the mitral valve to its proper size, thus taking the extra pumping load off the heart.

The inside of the heart can be reached without an unusual loss of blood through an appendage in the left atrum.

The surgeon's finger enters snugly through this appendage and serves as a plug against the flow of blood and as an operating instrument.

Finding The Valve

Slowly, the surgeon crooks his finger and begins feeling for the mitral valve. Ah, there it is! Now he enlarges the tiny tissue-covered opening by tearing away the unwanted tissue, literally punching a new hole in the valve with his finger.

Every few heart beats, he retracts his finger to allow blood to circulate from the ventricle into the arteries.

He knows that he must not damage the important valve leaves.

If he hits a stubborn piece of tissue, he can fit a special instrument onto his finger and cut it away.

The operation completed, the appendage is closed, the patient sewed up and the heart resumes its normal operation—something the patient has not known for a long time.

Two surgeons in Winston-Salem who have performed the operation are encouraged by the results. None of the aptients has died and most of them are leading active lives today.

. . heads '55 March of Dimes

Palmer Laughridge Jr., insurance executive of Salisbury, has accepted appointment as North Carolina Chairman of the 1955 March of Dimes campaign, succeeding Secretary of State Thad Eure, who resigned after heading the 1953 and 1954 drives.

Laughridge's appointment was announced yesterday by Basil O'Connor, New York, President of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, at the Chapel Hill office of the Foundation.

A native of Salisbury, Laughridge served with the Army Air Force during World War II, and was discharged with the rank of major after 33 months of service.

From his office at Salisbury today, Laughridge appealed to the people of North Carolina to support the coming March of Dimes, which will be held next January. "The National Foundation depends entirely upon the voluntary contribution of generous citizens to to March of Dimes," he said. "On its record, open to all the people, the Foundation is entitled to support. I welcome the opportunity to help forward this great work in our state in every way I can."

Folklore Volume Published

Volume II, No. 1, of "North Carolina Folklore," published by the North Carolina Folklore Society and the UNC Folklore Council, is now being sent out to subscribers and other interested persons.

The editor is A. P. Hudson, Kenan Professor of English here, and secretary-treasurer of the Folklore Society.

"North Carolina Folklore" is a printed journal of 44 pages containing contributions by a number of trained writers and scholars including Paul Green and Manly Wellman of Chapel Hill, Professor W. F. Bryan of Tryon, Dean Ernest Bird of Cullowhee and John Q. Anderson of Texas A&M College and students and citizens of North Carolina.

The contests range from ballads and folksongs (with music) to folktales, riddles, superstitions, anecdotes and articles. A special feature is a story by a 9-year-old daughter of a university professor. One of the illustrations is a woodcut to accompany a song. It was made by a professional book illustrator who was once a student here.

Dr. Odum Delivers Paper

CHICAGO, Ill. — "Nothing in our educational history is more striking than the steady pressure of democracy upon its universities to adapt them to the requirements of all the people . . . Making public education the open sesame to good citizenship and equality of opportunity for all men has been a basic assumption of the 'American dream'."

This view was stressed in a paper by Dr. Howard W. Odum, Kenan Professor Emeritus in the University of North Carolina, delivered before the American Council on Education's annual meeting here yesterday by Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University.

Dr. Odum, who was unable to attend on account of illness, prepared his paper as a study of the expansion of higher education, "Which Way is Forward, The Social Sciences?" He was formerly chairman of the UNC Department of Sociology and Anthropology and director of the Institute for Research in Social Sciences.

In his paper, Dr. Odum traced the development of the universities, from the privately endowed eastern schools, to the state universities of the Middle-West and Southeast, and later the land grant colleges of agriculture, engineering and mechanics.

Sauter And Finegan Play Here Monday

Admission To Popular Show Is One Buck

ANITA DARIAN
. . featured with Sauter-Finegan

One of the most musically-daring aggregations in the history of the band business, the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra, will appear on the Carolina campus tomorrow in two concerts, sponsored by Graham Memorial Activities Board.

The concerts will be held at 4 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. in Memorial Hall. Tickets for the concerts, which are $1 for students, can be obtained at Ledbetter-Pickard, the Caroline Sport Shop, Town and Campus and the Information Desk at Graham Memorial. Tomorrow they will also be on sale in the Y court.

Like most fine swing musicians and arrangers, Sauter's and Finegan's musical training has not been restricted only to jazz. Sauter, born in Brooklyn, N. Y., played trumpet and drums in Teachers College Symphony while still a high school student. He studied theory at Julliard in 1935, later with Louis Gruenberg, and from 1945 to 1950 with Stefan Wolpe and Bernard Wagenaar. His first proefssional job was at 17 with Archie Bleyer, but six years later he gave lup the trumpet to concentrate on arranging.

Finegan, who was born in Newark, N. J., studied theory and piano at Rumson (N. J.) High and was playing professionally at the age of 16. He joined the Glenn Miller band as its arranger when it was first ofrmed and remained with it unti Gyenn accepted an Army commission.

Whatever style or identity our band has will grow out of our own writing," Ed and Bill stated. 'All our arranegments are written for live presentation, without artificial gimmicks, so that well sound the same in person as well as on records."

In May, 1953, the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra took to the road to bring its vibrant new music in person to the very many who were enjoying it on recodrs.

Street Memorial

Dean Norval Neil Luxon of the UNC School of Journalism and Holt McPherson, editor of the High Point Enterprise ,yesterday acknowledged Journalism Foundation contributions totaling $150 as a memorial to James Street, novelist, who died here on Sept. 28.

McPherson is the president of the Journalism Foundation.

"James Street generously supported the Foundation during his lifetime and it was particularly fitting that Mrs. Street requested friends to give to the Foundation in lieu of sending flowers," said a joint statement by the dean and Foundation president.

Funds donated to the Foundation go into endowment, income from which is used to advance professional education for journalism at UNC.

Violinist In Recital In Hill Hall

The second concert in the Tuesday Evening Series of programs at Hill Hall will be presented by Maurice Wilk, American violinist, tonight at 8 o'clock.

Wilk was born in New York City and undertook his entire musical education and training there, the only exception being last summer while on tour in Europe when Pablo Casals took him as a pupil.

He made his first professional appearance at 14 when he played a Bach concerto with the orchestra of the Mutual Broadcasting System under Leon Barzin.

At 15, he gave a recital in Steinway Hall and at 18 he was chosen by Toscanini for the NBC Symphony, becoming the youngest member of the group.

During his two year stay with the NBC Orchestra, Wilk played in the Stuyvesant Quartet, was concert-master under Sir Thomas Beecham of the Brooklyn Symphony, and appeared in recital at Town Hall.

During the war, the young violinist was concert master of the Army Air Force Radio Orchestra. With them he gave a weekly coast-to-coast broadcast and toured the country playing at Air Force installations.

In the last few years, Wilk has had three Carnegie Hall recitals, at least 15 Town Hall appearances as both recitalist and guest artist, a six-month tour of Europe when he visited Paris, London, Stockholm, Amsterdam, Zurich and other leading cities, besides frequent recitals at colleges and universities over the U.S.

Wilk's program will include "Grave in the Style of Friedemann Bach," Kreisler; "Sonato in D major, op. 12, no. 1," Beethoven; "Sonata in A minor," Bach; "Variations on a Theme by Corelli," Tartini-Kreisler; "Intermezzo," Schumann; "Tambourin Chinois," Kreisler; "Nocturne in C sharp minor," Chopin-Milstein; "Caprice," Paganini-Kreidler; and "La Clochette," Paganini-Kreisler.

Wilk will be accompanied by Dr. Wilton Mason of the University Music Department.

Shades Of Carry Nation

Customers of a local alehouse had reason to believe Carry Nation and the WCTU were coming the other day.

But it was only Hurricane Hazel lifting off part of the Goody Shop roof.

Some of the Friday afternoon customers of the local pub didn't know whether to run out or stay, but most were upset because their beers were being cut by water coming through the ceiling.

Spero Doughton, popular owner of the Goody Shop on Franklin St., was upset because his shop had to be closed for the day.

"That was the biggest damage," he moaned, in a business-must-go-on manner.

Hazel managed to soak the walls, shower the customers and curl the roof.

For State Student Legislature:

Interviews Begin

Interviews began last night for candidates for the delegation from UNC to the North Carolina State Student Legislature, which will meet in Raleigh on Nov. 18, 19 and 20.

The delegates to the legislature will be chosen by the traditional method of having interviews wth the selecton board. The board met last night and with meet again tomorrow afternoon from 2 until 4:30, Thursday night from 9 until 10:30 and Friday afternoon from 2 until 4:30. All of these meetings will be held in the WWoodhouse Conference Room of Graham Memorial.

All colleges and universities in North Carolina have been invited to send delegations, depending in size on the enrollment. The delegates will debate issues of educational, state, natonal and international importance.

All students of the University are eligible for membership in Carolina's delegation to the State Student Legislature. Applcants will be asked questions on primarily political topics when they appear before the selection board.

The criteria used in determining the delegates will be their interest, the presentation of their information and the factuality of theii information.

The two members of the Interim Council, governing body between legislature sessions from Carolina are Joel Fleishman and Susen Fink.

The first assembly of the North Carolina State Student Legislature was sponsored in 1936 by Pi Kappa Delta forensic fraternity at State College. This group was more a debate society than a legislative assembly.

The State College Pi Kappa Delta in the fall of 1947 announced that it had dissolved itself and the Student Legislative Assembly. This act resulted in action on the part of the Debate Council at UNC to make an all-out effort to revive the group.

Representatives from State, Meredith, WCUNC and UNC decided to continue the Assembly. In November the nucleus group formed a council and elected Earl Fitzgerald of UNC, president, and Rames Cranford of State, secretary-treasurer.

Panhellenic Council Sponsors Get-Together For 6 Sororities

The Panhellenic Council sponsored a picnic supper for members of the six sororities and the Stray Greek organization on McIver Lawn recently. The picnic honored new pledges of the sororities.

Every group was responsible for a table of food, and the Panhel Council provided Cokes. After the picnic supper, the six pledge classes entertaned wth individual skits.

Frist, after a welcome by Panhellenic President Joan Leonard, the Alpha Delta Pi peldges presented an orginal song, an amusing portrayal of life as a pledge. The skit featured a typical pledge, portrayed by a member of the class.

Alpha Gamma Delta's pledge class described the characteristics of an Alpha Gam pledge by mean of a song and dance routine, complete with chorus line.

Six Chi Omega pledges, dressed in costumes representing each of the six sororities' flowers, carried out the pledges' skit about a Carolina flower garden.

Delta Delta Delta pledge class compared life at UNC to the glorious life of the old Southland, as they presented a medley of Dixieland songs, rearranged with original wording.

Members of Kappa Delta pledge class enacted a ballet entitled "Ballet de Rouch," a parody in rush week. The ballet involved four scenes: preparation for rush, the rush party, th ebetween party session, and the "I've had it" feeling.

Last, Pi Beta Phi pledges presented a medley of songs, a take-off on rush week and the plight of a pledge.

Di To Debate Farm Supports Tonight At 8

The topic for the Dialectic Senate's debate tonight will be on "A Bill Abolishing Farm Price Supports."

The first order of business for this evening's meeting will be the re-motion on the bill to censure Charles Wilson for his untimely comment concerning canines.

The Dialectice Senate has resolved that all current farm price support is hereby repealed.

Their reasons for this resolution are that our present system of farm price support is subject to grave charges of mismanagement and injustice, and, this inept system of acreage control and Government purchasing fails to accomplish its avowed purpose.

Also this purpose is in itself the worst sort of economic and political folly in a hunger-ridden world.

The Di meets at 8 p.m. on the third floor of New West.

Two More Days

All dentistry students, fourth year medical students, Germans Club officers and members of the Dance Committee will have Yack pictures taken today and tomororw from 1 to 8 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

Juniors and seniors who missed having their pictures taken can have it done today and tomorrow for a $1 charge.

Vets' Club Meets Tonight

The newly-organized University Veterans' Club will hold another meeting tonight.

The club, which was organized during the first week of school by Korean vets Darwin Bell and Jerry Clark, had swelled its membership to 87 as of last week.

Tonight's meeting will be held in Gerrard Hall at 7:30.

Vet's plan to ask the University "why we can't get the old Vet's Club" building, a frame structure behind Lenior Hall, and "why Vets here have to take physical education and oral hygiene, while those at N. C State don't have to take it."

The club plans to elect officers tonight.

There are approximately 1,200 veterans enrolled in UNC.

Management Institute Opens

The annual North Carolina Wholesalers Management Institute will open here today and will continue through Oct. 27, Dr. Rex Winslow, Director, UNC Bureau of Business Services and Research, announced yesterday.

An educational project for the direct benefit of top management of indepentent wholesale businesses in North Carolina, the Institute is the first in a series of conferences, seminars and institutes planned for the 1954-55 academic year by the School of Business Administration's Adult Education Program.

Enrollees were picked for their considerable business experience and important management responsibilities. Thirty hours of intensive instruction and informal conferences and discusstons will make up the curriculum.

Some of the topics to be studied are sales management, managerial accounting, human relations, public speaking, the procedure for conducting a sales meeting and other general business problems.

The Institute is sponsored by the North Carolina Wholesaler's Association and the North Carolina Distributiive Education Service in cooperation with the UNC School of Business Administration and Extension Division.

Chancellor Reports On UNC

Chancellor Robert B. House, in his report to President Gordon Gray on the University during the scholastic year 1953 - 54, covered many points including enrollment changes, special achievements of the University, student affairs, needs of the University and plans for the coming year.

Concerning enrollment, Chancellor House reported, "The total enrollment of 5,656 represented a moderate recovery from the low point of 5,474 reached in 1952. Composition of the student body has changed slightly in the last 5 years, mainly on account of growth of enrollment in Dentistry, Medicine and Nursing."

Heartening

"During 53-54 one of the most heartening developments was the increased appropriations from the Legislature for books and journals for the Library," said Chancellor House in part of his report concerning special achievements of the University.

About permanent improvements to the University, Chancellor House reported that "We dedicated during the year the $1,700,000 addition to our Chemistry building which doubles its capacity and gives us the distinction of having the best-equipped chemistry department in the South, and the 100-bed Gravely Sanatorium which is located on the campus.

"The University at Chapel Hill has a fortunate tradition for student government, the honor system and a vigorous program of student activities. These traditions and intangibles contribute to a happy and wholesome atmosphere for learning and a stimulating pride among alumni. I am happy to report that the administrative personnel and student leadership have worked harmoniously together durig the past year to maintain these values in the Pniversity situation," reported the chancellor on student affairs.

Needs

In stating the needs of the University, Chancellor House said, "The Department of Physics is the outstanding example of urgent need for rebuilding. We are requesting the addition of nine persons to the teaching and technical staff and a substantial increase of the annual appropriation for supplies and equipment."

"More adequate State support of faculty research continues to be a basic requirement," the chancellor reported.

Concerning plans for the University, Chancellor House included the following points in his report.

"Prominent among those already started is the attempt to improve

Fifty 'Research Stipends' Will Be Awarded In Social Science

The Social Science Research Council will this year again award up to 50 "Undergraduate Research Stipends" to college juniors who devote eight or more weeks during the summer to social science research under the guidance of designated faculty supervisors.

Faculty members of the departments of economics, sociology and anthropology, history and political science are available for further consultation. Fields in which research may be supported, however, are not bounded by departmental lines.

An acceptable project must consist of scientific research on some problem of human behavior, at a level at which the student will be able, with guidance, to participate actvly in all phases of the research rather than merely to perform routine tasks. Experimental as well as documumentary data may be employed.

Applications to the Social Science Research Council should be filed not later than Jan. 10, 1955 for action on or about April 1. A small number of awards may be allocated about June 1, 1955.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Small Business Administration SBA yesterday designated as hurricane disaster areas 27 counties in North Carolina.

The action makes residents of the counties eligible to apply for loans to repair homes or business buildings damaged by hurricane Hazel last Friday.

W. Norbert Engles, SBA acting administrator, said loan applications for summer beach homes would be disapproved unless the dwellings were occupied by their owners year-round or were rented and returned prime income to the owner.

President Creasy Says He Doesn't Approve Measure For First-Offense Leniency

By LOUIS KRAAR

PRESIDENT CREASY
. . . may use veto power

President Tom Creasy said yesterday he would not support the Honor System leniency bill—even if passed by the Legislature.

The Student body chief executive said he thought the "principle of the plan was good," but added he objected to an automatic probation in every case.

The leniency bill, sponsored by Student Party Vice-Chairman David Reid, calls for probation as the usual punishment for first offenders. The Legislature will decide whether or not to pass the bill this Thursday night. The Ways and Means Committee, which reviewed the bill recently, will report it without recommendation for or against.

Creasy said that if the Legislature passed the leniency bill, he would veto it. He added that he has told Reid, sponsor of the leniency measure, that he would veto it if passed in its present form.

State-Of-Campus

The student body president said he will elaborate on his proposed program and its progress in a Thursday night state-of-the-campus address before the Legislature.

Asked if he would campaign for a University Party Legislature in the coming fall elections, Creasy said:

"I think while it's my duty to work for the student body in general, I also have a duty to work for my party."

Presiden Creasy called the system of having campus political parties "a necessary evil," and went on to explain that he has had a great deal of cooperation from the Student Party-controlled Legislature. (The SP holds a 39-11 majority in the Legislature.)

Creasy said he thought enforcement of the drinking rule on campus was effective. The rule is being enforced by the Inter-Fraternity Council, he said.

'Coalition Cabinet'

The student body president pointed to his "coalition cabinet" as an example of the cooperation between the parties that he said he has been trying to foster.

Thus far, the Cabinet has discussed the drinking situation on campus and the Honor System, he said. "With the rule that any member can call a meeting, everyone has a chance to present his particular problems to the Cabinet," Creasey explained.

Rushing Committee

Creasy also declared that the Student Rushing Committee formed last spring to consider various fraternity rushing problems, has been meeting. He said that a report from that group was expected soon.

Members of the Rushing Committee are Artie Newcombe, Warren Heeman, Bob Yonng, Myron Konklin, Gil Raglaud, and Joe Maveritc. Faculty member is Dr. Clayborn Jones and Assistant Dean Roy Holsten represents the administration.

Sauter's Band Rated Hit In Concerts Here

BY BERNIE WEISS

Eddie Sauter is a quiet man; his band is a loud organization, but together they made a big hit yesterday and last night at Memorial Hall when the Sauter-Finegan Orchestra presented two concerts for exponents of renovation in music.

Led by Sauter while his partner, Bill Finegan, remained in Atlanta to write more renovations, the band presented 21 numbers of top quality in a two hour show which captured the imagination and tapping toes of approximately 350 Carolina students. The second concert was given last night before a much larger audience.

Sauter was quite a contrast to the band, adding to the varieties of sound which filled the auditorium. He was quiet, seemingly nervous, but drew ripples of laughter with his quips. After one especially long session of applause following "Witchtalk," Sauter said "Thanks. I'm inclined to agree with you."

Superb

The band was superb. Eighteen men played some 75 instruments producing an infinite variety of sounds emanating from such unusual pieces as kazoos, sleigh bells, chimes, a harp, tubas, glockenspiel, recorders and oboes. The averaege popular band does not carry these instruments in its repertoire. The Sauter-Finegan group is different, producing different music with the accent on rhythm and percussion.

There was plenty of this yesterday. Three percussionists were going full blast throughout.

In "Witchtalk," an original developed by drummer Mousey Alexander and percussionists Joe Venuto and Sperry Karris, the three men took off on an Afro-Cuban beat, each sideman replying to the call of another. The too

Wash. & Lee Talks Football

WASHINGTON, D. C. (AP)—The governing body of Washington and Lee University talked over the weekend about an earlier decision to drop football, but its chairman reported no official action was taken.

James R. Caskie, rector of the board of trustees, said he "couldn't say" when asked whether the subject was slated for later action.

The Lexington, Va., university abandoned football this season There has been agitation from some alumni quarters to resume the sport.

Eleven of the 16 trustees, along with University President Francis P. Gaies, met today at a Washington hotel on what Caskie described as a number of 'internal" school matters.

Church Union Meets Today

The meeting of the Southeastern Region of the American Church Union will be held today at St. Joseph's Episcopal Church in Durham.

At the meeting the Southeastern Region, which includes Georgia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina, will gather to hear an address by the Rt. Rev. Philip Nigel W. Strong, Bishop of New Guinea.

Bishop Strong was Senior Chaplain to the Australiian Forces in 1943-45.

The program, beginning at 10:30 this morning, will also feature a student discussion group by members of the UNC student chapter of the ACU. Participating in the discussion will be W. H. Conrad, Greensboro, chairman; Patricia Carter, Chapel Hill, Willam G. Edwards, Tarboro, Richard Turner, Charlotte and Fredrick W. Vogle, Burlington, Vermont.

The 2,749,999 & You

As you walk to class this morning, you may be interested to know, there are about 2,750,000 other college students stepping into American classrooms. That is not a particularly interesting fact until it is compared with this one: By 1970, the colleges will have about 6,000,000 students, more than double the current fall enrollment.

The problem of crowded dormitories and classrooms, already being felt on this campus, thus becomes magnified into a real poser. And last week, the American Council on Education met in Chicago to take note of the impending tidal wave of students and try to work out a solution.

They talked over several plans, nearly all of which sound reasonable. A Harvard English professor, however, came up with a panacea that sounds simple and easy and strikes us, moreover, as singularly unsound. His name was Dr. Douglas Bush. And Dr. Bush wants to cut down on admissions.

He reasons this way: "The public must be convinced that higher education is not a birthright . . . The rising flood of students is very much like the barbarian invasion of the early Middle Ages, and then the process of education took a thousand years."

We are happy to report that those who agreed with this Harvard English teacher at the Chicago conference were in a minority. Not many logical students of education, we venture, would allow Dr. Bush's comparison of the knowledge-hungry 20th Century American high school graduate with the Middle Age barbarian. If he meant that we need a stronger, sounder system of higher education, we agree. But we do not think the way to that system is the denial of a college education to half the students who want one.

The course of education, as we see it, is in the opposite direction, toward the day when anyone who wants a college degree and who can stand the academic pace can graduate from an American college. This is not only proper, it is basic if we are to have a citizenry equal to the tasks and rigors of a world in turmoil.

So we support speeding up the education of superior students; and we suggest that present educational facilities in the country might be used more efficiently without decreasing academic standards. The colleges of the land, we believe, will meet the problem of increased enrollment with plans like these—rather than with the expedient, but undemocratic, and potentially disastrous scheme of setting up an educational hierarchy, to which students with only medium-high past scholastic records but with an intense desire to go farther, may not gain admittance.

'Christianity Is So Simple'

A disastrous series of typographical errors in the editorial column Sunday garbled hopelessly a few beautiful words. The words were not ours; they were J. C. Herrin's, part of a statement he made at the request of The Chapel Hill News-Leader last week. Mr. Herrin, who was fired from his job as Baptist Student Union secretary here in a doctrinal dispute last year, is now at work at the Baptist Community Church, Scarsdale, New York.

We wouldn't bother to print the statement again but we suspect you were out of town anyhow, and missed it. So take a minute to reflect on the meaning that underlies Mr. Herrin's closing paragraph:

"Once again, I repeat that Christianity is so simple that we miss its essence. Let me illustrate what is meant by Incarnation. The Fourth Gospel defines it as the 'Word became flesh and dwelt among us.' This refers to the wisdom of God, specifically as it was embodied in Christ. But it in no way limits this wisdom to the Christ. And it is not wisdom as we usually define the word. It is imagination, sympathy, tenderness, insight, mercy; it is to feel as Eugene Debs felt: 'As long as any man is in prison, I am not free.' It is to feel hunger so long as one-third of the world's children go to bed at night crying for bread. It is to lay one's own dignity in peril so long as any race or nation is deprived of self-respect."

Will Muntzing Followers Bolt Student Party?

IS A third campus political party going to be formed The obvious Student Party split between Chairman Joel Fleishman and aggressive Manning Muntzing reached a climax recently when the SP caucus refused to censure Muntzing. Fleishman led the censure movement.

As the SP politicians met in their closed caucus, I wondered what the possibilities of a third party were. And now—although Muntzing and Fleishman have apparently patched up things within the party—there is still a chance for this third party.

Muntzing wants to be student body president.

For some time now Fleishman and Muntzing haven't agreed on many matters, including national politics. Muntzing is esentially a conservative, while Fleishman is of the liberal school. This is, perhaps, the crux of most of their disagreements.

If Muntzing gets the SP nomination this spring (and he probably will) then things will rock along with just two parties. But if he should lose, chances of a third party are great. And the new party would be made up of disgruntled Muntzing supporters.

LAST TIME the campus had e third party it was because of a split within the Student Party.

It all happened back in the spring of 1947. A party leader, Al Lowenstein, had a disagreement with another SP leader, Chuck Heath. Heath picked up his political marbles and formed the Campus Party—a third party.

The Campus Party became a powerful group on campus because it could throw its support behind either the SP's or the University Party's candidates. Many times, the CP's backing made the difference between victory and defeat.

Ironically enongh, that first year the Campus Party was formed hte Student Party endorsed the same presidential candidate as the CP.

But as time went on it was a different story. The following year, 1948, the third party supported the University Party's candidate, and the UP man won And in 1949—the Campus Party's last year—it supported the UP presidential candidate, and he lost.

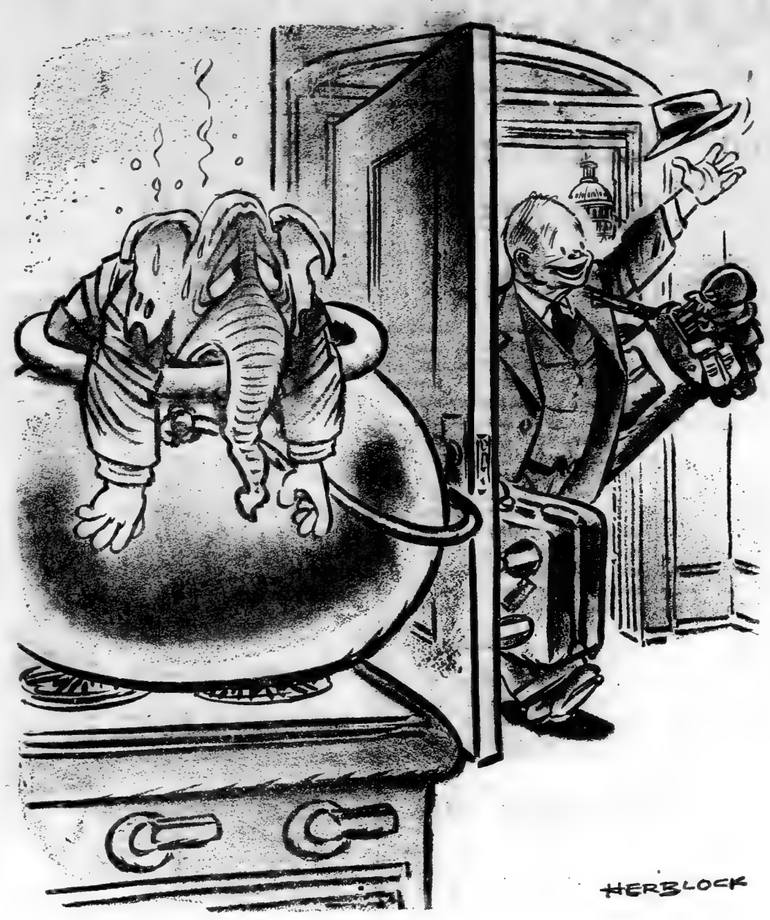
FLEISHMAN, the colorful and able SP chief, is a senior this year. His presidential hopes (if he ever had any) have passed. His chief pleasure now is that which he derives from the role of manipulator.



Muntzing refused to support certain Fleishman bills in the student Legislature. He also refused to attend the caucuses and other committee meetings at which the Fleishman bills were discussed. This is what prompted the Fleishman censure move.

Keenly aware of the history of the Student Party, Fleishman is going to be careful not to cause another party split. His power is still there, but it is equally as evident that Fleishman's failure to get Muntzing censured indicates something—probably party admiration for Muntzing.

Meantime Muntzing heads the Inter-Dormitory Council, a group that could be mobilized for a presidential campaign. And because he is producing a dynamic program this year in the IDC, his popularity is great.

The big question mark now concerning the third party possibility is: Will Fleishman support Muntzing this spring for president?

$10 Billion Loan To USSR

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—Here is more on the probe of Henry Morgenthau's secret diary, faithfully kept during the long years when he was Secretary of the Treasury, and now the object of scrutiny by the Senate Internal Security Committee headed by Sen. William Jenner of Indiana.

What Jenner's "G-men" are probing for is any subversive links between members of the Roosevelt Administration and Harry Dexter White, whom Attorney General Brownell has charged with being a Russian spy. White worked in the Treasury Department under Morgenthau.

To that end, Jenner has had two men, Jonathan Mitchell, former Washington correspondent of the New Republic, and James Cardiello, regular staff investigator, working at the Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park where the many volumes of the Morgenthau diary are kept.

The operation is supposed to be super hush-hush. However, this writer has obtained copies of some of the advance reports.

So far the diary has never been scrutinized by outsiders. Morgenthau, however, has given permission to Jenner to let agents examine every scrap of paper collected when the Secretary of the Treasury held that office longer than any other man in history.

One thing the Jenner probers have found is that Harry Dexter White proposed a $10,000,000,000 loan to Russia toward the end of the war and that Morgenthau pushed this loan idea in talks with President Roosevelt.

Senate probers have not considered this pay dirt, however, because it was well known at the time that Morgenthau urged a loan to Russia. He was quite open and emphatic in urging that the United States work closely with Russia for peacetime reconstruction.

The Jenner committee has hoped to make headlines with parts of the Morgenthau diary during the closing days of the election campaign.

Husband Of Feminist

Just how the committee happened to pick Jonathan Mitchell to probe the Morgenthau diary is a mystery which members of the committee flatly refused to discuss. They admitted Mitchell had been assigned the job, that was all.

Mitchell is a former New Deal writer and Roosevelt admirer married to Doris Stevens, one of the leading American feminists, who boasts in her book "Jailed For Freedom" that she was sentenced to 60 days in prison for presenting a woman's suffrage petition to Woodrow Wilson in 1917. She also boasts that she was arrested in France for presenting an equal-rights treaty at a meeting of the Pact of Paris.

Miss Stevens is a high officer in the Lucy Stone League of Women who use their maiden names, and lives with her present husband, Mr. Mitchell, not far from Henry Morgenthau on the Hudson River.

Mr. Mitchell, when questioned about his work for the Jenner committee, acted like a witness before the McCarthy committee. He refused to say almost anything except to admit his name and the fact that he was working on the Morgenthau diaries. However, here is the full text, word for word, of one of his reports to the Jenner committee:

Yalta Talks

"The diaries examined last week show that White, through Morgenthau, made strenuous efforts to have Roosevelt open the Yalta Conference with an offer of a $10 billion postwar loan to Stalin. White was insistent that the offer be without conditions. Only by doing so, White argued, would Stalin be convinced of America's good faith.

"Book 808, p. 103, Jan. 9, 1945 — Telephone conversation between Morgenthau and Grace Tully in which Morgenthau rehearses what he proposes to tell Roosevelt about the proposed loan to the USSR.

"Book 808, p. 300, Jan. 10, 1945 — Memo by Morgenthau of conversation with Stettinius at White House when they were both waiting to see Roosevelt. Morgenthau says loan must be offered without conditions and on the opening day of Yalta.

"Book 810, p. 149, Jan. 17, 1945 — Meeting of Morgenthau and White with Stettinius and other State Department officials on loans to USSR and also on discussion of German industry. Morgenthau argues that Germany must be rendered helpless to convince the USSR that America and Britain were not shieldini secret designs on using Germany later.

Views On Fulton Lewis

"Last week I got through only 14 volumes. I was held balk by documents of British and French lend lease. Since White was in charge of these negotiations, I hoped to find material of interest to the committee. But in fact, although I read the documents with great care, I found very little.

"Morgenthau — so I am informed by Kahn — is back in the country. He telephoned Kahn last week apparently to pick up whatever Kahn knew. My impression is that the sooner Jim and I go away, the better Morgenthau and Kahn will like it.

"For your information, Kahn is an egg-head. He held himself in very well until Muskie's election. Next day, he sidled up to Jim and me and delivered himself of a sudden, sneering attack on Fulton Lewis Jr. The attack was apropos of nothing. I don't think he meant to make it. I think his suppressed feelings got the better of him."

Note — The "Kahn" referred to above is Herman Kahn, archivist of the Roosevelt Memorial Library at Hyde Park. Kahn was referring to the election of Gov. Edward Muskie in Maine, a Democrat. The "Jim" referred to above is James Cardiello, Jenner committee prober working with Mitchell. Fulton Lewis, the radio commentator, is a friend and champion of Senator Jenner, which probably explains Mitchell's implication that Kahn should have known better than to criticize Lewis.

Rambling — Ron Levin

Speaking of garbage cans and fraternity houses I might tell you what happened the other morning. I was walking behind the Orange Country Health Department on Old Frat Row and noticed a small row of garbage cans filled with refuse. Just then a dog came alone and turned one over spilling the contents out all over the nice clean ground. Goodness me . . . a health department. Where is their little house?

I publicly apologize for an item I ran in my column a few days ago. I said that no popular music could be played in the main lounge of Graham Memorial after seven o'clock in the evening. I was wrong. After checking with Jimmy Wallace, I found out that it was not true. Viva la GM!

Quote, Unquote

It had been a particularly hard day for first-grader, Little Johnny, and his disposition when he reached home was anything but sunshiney. His mother pretended not to notice anything amist, suspecting that it would soon be forgotten if no attention brought it to the forefront. But Little Johnny was not to be denied his aggrievement and continued to go around with a lower lip that protuded oninously. A bit annoyed, his mother asked: "All right, son. What's on your mind?" The little boy scowled as he replied: "It's the old teacher. She made me sit with Little Mary Jones all morning." His mother smiled: "Why, that wasn't bad, dear, Little Mary is such a nice little girl." Little Johnny's reply to this was quick and decisive: "But I wanted to sit with Alice."—Frances Gilbert Frazier in Waynesville Mountaineer.

Honor Council On Reid Bill

Editor:

The David Reid Honor Council Bill has led to much confusion about the present policies of the Honor System.

It has resulted in many students, faculty members and townspeople believing that anyone convicted of cheating at our University is automatically suspended. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The Council has always prized itself on its very flexible system of wide distribution of penalties. Suspension certainly has not been the answer to all students convicted by the Council of cheating.

I wonder if David Reid and the others who believe that the Council in the past has tended to catorize all offenses into one sentence of suspension know that since 1946, 10 out of the 18 cases accused of cheating were voted not guilty? Two girls were placed on social probation, one on general probation, and one was given an official reprimand. Thus only four—less than one-fourth —were suspended.

Reid states in his bill that "the primary function of our educational institution is to teach, not to punish." Certainly our policy in the past has been in accord with this statement. But it seems that no matter to what depths or richness one's knowledge of other things in life may be brought about by our University, if our University has not taught honesty, then it has failed as a teacher.

I thus feel that only through the high standards of the Honor System can one secure the best education.

The so-called leniency bill appears to question these ideals of our Honor System. If it is passed, I believe that it would lower the entire standards of the campus, and thus would greatly damage the future of the present Honor Syster.

I sincerely hope that the Student Legislature will give the Reid Bill the serious consideration it deserves.

Nancy Whisnant,
Chairman, Woman's Honor Council

Others On The Same Question

Editor:

There has been talk of suspending punishment to one-time violaters of the Honor Code. We believe we have a better solution: abolish the Code. It evidently does not mean much anyway. Try getting up at 5 a.m. in the morning to place newspapers in the Honor System racks around the campus, only to have some sneaking, thieving students take half of them without leaving a nickel.

Frankly, we are getting tired of this dishonesty and would like to make it clear right here that if we ever catch the thieves, we plan to prosecute to the full extent of the law—by-passing the Honor Council if it is too weak to do anything about it. We'll take the case straight to the civil authorities.

The only reason we continue to leave papers in the stands is to benefit those honest students who enjoy reading their paper and don't mind paying for them.

It is a strange thing that the "Honor" racks work well in big cities, but not here in good old Carolina, where we have the good old Honor System. Why, there are even some students who are dirty enough to break the locks on the boxes to steal what little money we've collected for the papers.

Most of us are students here (some of us married with children) and we wouldn't be in school if we didn't like Carolina. However, we feel if students would be dirty enough to take a newspaper, they certainly would be dirty enough to cheat if it would save them from repeating a subject. So, as we said before, why not throw the Honor System out of the window?

'This-- Our Noble Deed'

Ed Yoder

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20, 1961 — After almost ten years of running, Owen Lattimore today finally stumbled and fell in the Justice Department's gauntlet. The ex-professor at Johns Hopkins University and Far-Eastern expert was led, a convicted man, from a tense courtroom here.

It took the government exactly 60 trips to court to get a favorable ruling on its terminology of Lattimore's indictment. The first summer 1954, ended in a ruling that Communist "sympathizer" was too vague a term. Later that same year, the word "follower" was also ruled too vague.

The court fights went on until finally the U. S. Attorney General produced a statement in which Dr. Lattimore said Eddlekovsky, a minor Communist theorist, was right about a Southeast Asian question.

The climate of opinion, having changed considerably, was aflare because Lattimore had said a Communist could be right.

As Dr. Lattimore was led from the courtroom through a wave of derisive hisses and shouts of "Communist!" a white-thatched colleague of Dr. Lattimore's at Johns Hopkins arose.

Whispers crossed the room. He was an old Shakespearian scholar with the pallor of the Dark Ages on his face. There was a rumor that he would soon be fired for "undemocratic interpretation of literature." But the audience fell silent. They didn't think they'd respect what he had to say. But they had respect for his years He glanced about the room and began to speak:

"Friends, Americans, Countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to imprison Lattimore, not to praise him.
The evil that men do lives after them:
The good is oft interred with their bones:
So let it be with Lattimore. The noble McCarthy
Hath told you he was the top Russian espionage agent:
If it were so, it was a grievous fault,
And grievously hath Lattimore answered for it.
Here, under leave of McCarthy and the rest,—
For McCarthy is an honourable man;
So are they all, all honourable men.—
Come I to speak at Lattimore's conviction.
He was my friend, faithful and just to me;
But McCarthy says he was treasonous;
And McCarthy is an honourable man.
And hath been an enlightener on the plight of the East,
Whose problems did our nation perplex:
Did this in Lattimore seem treasonous?
When that our nation hath been unjust, he hath wept:
Treason should be made of sterner stuff:
Yet McCarthy says he was treasonous;
And McCarthy is an honourable man.
You all did see that on the May Day
Russia twice presented him a kingly bribe,
Which he did twice refuse: was this treason?
Yet McCarthy says he was treasonous;
And, sure, he is an honourable man.
I speak not to disprove what McCarthy spoke,
But here I am to speak what I do know.
You all did respect him once, not without cause:
What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?
O judgement! Thou are fled to brutish beasts,
And men have lost their reason. Bear with me:
My heart is in the prison cells with Lattimore,
And I must pause till it come back to me . . .

As the old scholar's voice broke, a rattle of hollow, nervous laughs sounded around the room. Most of the people the the courtroom—reputable doctors, lawyers, teachers, businessmen—wore an expression that hung somewhere between amusement and bewilderment.

"Crank," some said.

"Undemocratic interpretation of literature sure enough," someone else whispered. (He happened to be a very pedantic English teacher. Few of the others recognized the Shakespearian allusions. After all, how many groceries, cars, or television sets could you buy with pedantry or reciting Shakespeare?)

The old scholar still stood there. There were more lines and he pursed his lips. He glanced about the rows of dull, scornful, and amused faces.

"What's the use?" he muttered and dropped wearily into his chair.

There was a loud rumble. He watched through misty eyes as the crowd bolted out the open doors toward Pennsylvania Avenue—where a long black motorcade moved in the distance. The people were jubilant and carefree.

They were going to see the inauguration of an honourable man.

The morning after every football game those dogs of Victory Village which heard the yelling in Kenan Stadium are out, nosé to the ground, to haunt the edges of the highways and nooks. They are after the chicken bones and other scraps flung away by the people who bring lunch with them. It means a feast for those dogs who know where to look, or rather, smell.

Keller, Stavnitski, Malone On Sidelines With Injuries

The University of North Carolina Tar Heels, weary and battered, were back on familiar ground yesterday after their 33-0 defeat at the hands of a suddenly revived Maryland team at College Park, Md., Saturday.

The surprisingly powerful Terrapins, assisted by Mother Nature, smothered the Tar Heels, much to the chagrin of a sizeable entourage of Carolina followers who accompanied the team to Maryland for the FESTIVITIES. Mother Nature scowled malignantly on the Tar Heel hopes, sending Hurricane Hazel to bear the malevolent tidings. The careful training schedule necessary for athletes was disrupted when Hurricane conditions turned what was supposed to be a five-hour train ride into a 13-hour nightmare. Traveling in a coach, the players were unable to get their all-important sleep. They arrived in Washington shortly after 5 a.m. Saturday morning.

After playing valiantly for two quarters, physical exhaustion undoubtedly took its toll and the Tar Heels succumbed to the Terp juggernaut.

Yesterday the locals got down to work for their contest with Wake Forest Saturday. After viewing films of Deacon games, they worked out at Kenan Stadium for about an hour.

Sitting out the strenuous tasks were three first string players: Halfback Ken Keller, who suffered a separated shoulder in the last play of the Maryland game; Ceter George Stavnitski, with a back injury; and End Doug Maloe, pained by a bruised elbow.

Frosh, Varsity Cross Country Teams Grind Spiders In Dust

By RAY LINKER

Carolina's varsity and freshman cross country teams both turned in perfect scores against Richmond here yesterday. The varsity swamped the Spiders, 15-53, while the Tar Babies were out in front by a 15-44 score (Low score wins).

Sophomore Jimmy Beatty set the pace that brought seven Carolina men across the finish line before a Richmond runner. Beatty toured the 3.8 miles course in 21 minutes, 12 seconds, with Bob Barden, Glenn Nanney, and Marion Griffin following at a distance. Co-captains Tony Houghton and Don Wright finished in a tie for fifth place with Boyd Nenam for the Tar Heels.

Dick Keith and Warren Chukinas were the first Spiders to finish, taking eighth and ninth places.

Everett Whatley and Richard Rigsbee led the way for the Carolina freshmen, as Whatley turned in a time of 12:42 for the 2.2 miles course to finish first with Rigsbee five seconds behind. Ben Williams, Gray Nichols, and Bailey Llipfert rounded out the Tar Babies first five to finish in front of Richmond's Johnson, who was sixth.

Overfelt, Steele, Langley, and Woolwin placed eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh to help give the Little Spiders their 44 points.

Science Fair Closes

The first steps in organizing school science fairs in North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were completed Saturday as a two-day regional Science Fair Work Conference closed here.

Dewey E. Large, field representative of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies and Conference, co-chairman, summarizing the results of the sessions, said that "the outlook for the science fair program is very encouraging."

Despite the adverse weather conditions, the expected registration of 150 was reached, and much of the groundwork for the district science fairs was laid.

The conference, which opened Friday, was held by the University, the State Academy of Science, and the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, for science and mathematics teachers, school administrators and instructional supervisors from the three states.

Following an hour's study of exhibit materials Saturday morning, the conferees assembled in work groups according to educatinoal district: western, northwestern, north central, southeastern, northeastern, South Piedmont and out of state.

They discussed plans for the science fairs which will be held at a college or university in their district next spring. Representatives of the host colleges, including N. C. State, Woman's College, Flora McDonald, East Carolina and Western Carolina, served as consultants for the planning sessions.

Henry A. Shannon, State Department of Public Instruction, and Dr. Thomas Reynolds, Duke University, addressed these groups.

A discussion of science fairs on the national level was given by Joseph H. Kraus, Washington, D. C., Home Science Editor of "Science Service." He was introduced by Dr. Arthur Roe, UNC Chemistry Department head, who is conference co-chairman, along with Large.

Dr. John A. Yarbrough, secretary, N. C. Academy of Science, chairmed the final planning session on the State Science Fairs. Other panel members were Dr. Rynolds and Dr. Hollis Rogers, Woman's College, who has been named State Science Fair Director.

In his recapitulation large emphasized the progress of the conference toward its goal of "stimulating interest in matters pertaining to organization, administration and coordination of science fairs with the expectation of starting a chain reaction of activity in the advancement of science and mathematics."

Following the summary remarks of Charles G. Wilder, chairman, Oak Ridge Exhibits Divison, and Dr. Roe, the formal sessoins adjourned. Some conferees remained through the afternoon for the study of exhibits and individual counseling on fair operation.

small, excited crowd responded to the call.

"Witchtalk," however, was only one highlight of the affair. "Honey Jump," "Pennies From Heaven," "John Henry" and "Midnight Sleighride" also stirred up the gathering.

Everybody Jumping

The numbers mentioned above accurately describe in cross-section what the band can do. "Honey Jump," an arrangement of A-1 calibre, had everybody jumping. "Pennies From Heaven" featured Sonny Russo on trombone with a solo which left all listeners limp. During "Midnight Sleighride," Sauter again came up with something different, imitating the sound of horses' hooves by beating his palms on his chest.

And Andy Roberts and Anita Darian vocalized expertly on four numbers each.

Though the big feature of the band is the complicated and expert arrangements, many soloists stood out. Among them were Venuto, Russo, Nick Travis and Bobby Nichols (trumpets). Sauter himself even got into the act with short bits on a harmonica and a toy trumpet.

Research Aids Are Established

The National Research Council has announced the inauguration of a new program of National Research Council-Natonal Bureau of Standards Postdoctoral Research Associateships in chemistry, mathematics and physics for the academic year 1955-56.

These research associateships have been designed to provide young investigators of unusual ability and promise an opportunity for basic research in the following fileds: pure and applied experimental thermodynamics and mathematics, applied mathematical statistics, numerical analysis, excalorimetry, statistical mechanics, molecular structure and spectroscopy, low temperature physics, solid state physics, theoretical and nuclear physics, radiological physics, analytical chemistry, inorganic chemistry and physical chemistry.

These fellowships are open only to citizens of the United States. Applicants must produce evidence of training in one of the foregoing fields equivalent to that degree and must have demonstrated superior ability for creative research.

In order to be considered for awards for the academic year 1955-56, applications must be filed at the Fellowship Office on or before Dec. 10. Awards will be made about April 1, 1955.

Associate YMCA Secretary

Riebel On UNESCO Post

Chancellor Robert B. House announced the appointment of John D. Riebel as UNESCO Publications representative on the UNC campus.

"In this capacity," Chancellor House said, "Mr. Riebel will keep the students and faculty members informed as to publications that are available from the United Nations Educational, Social and Cultural Organization. He will also be prepared to answer inquiries as to how these publications may be obtained. I am happy to announce this appointment as a part of the United Nations Week observance on our campus, October 18-25."

JOHN RIEBEL

In commenting on the announcement, Riebel, who is Associate Secretary of the University YMCA, said, "This is an opportunity for all of us in Chapel Hill to keep in touch throughout the year with some of the important work of the United Nations, which doesn't reach the headlines of the daily newspapers."

"One of the most interesting publications available now is the UNESCO Courier. It comes out monthly and is well illustrated with photographs and drawings. It depicts the people and problems of many nations and tells the dramatic but little known stories of men and women working in all parts of the world to raise the standards of living and to combat ignorance and disease," said Riebel.

"Previous issues have featured articles on the world's language families,, on press freedom and censorship, how news is collected and distributed, how and why news evaluation should start in school and the dangers of twisted science stories.

"In addition to a comprehensive coverage of the lead story in each issue, there are also many other articles and features of interest," he continued. "A random glance through past numbers reveals varied and skillfully handled articles on a teacher's unusual experience in the Solomon Islands, how science clubs combine creative study with organized play, and ancient Indian Ajanta cave paintings and the story of a century and a half of urban development, with three hitherto unpublished maps.

"Other articles tell of ingenious experiments with usual and unusual sounds, the racial spectrum of Hawaii, and the experiences of volunteer teachers in a Berber village.

"The American edition is produced in the U. S. from film flown direct from Paris, assuring timely distribution," Riebel said. "Several copies of recent issues are on display in the University Library, and I have a recent copy for interested persons to see in the YMCA office. I shall be glad to answer any inquiries by mail, phone or personal visit in my office at the YMCA."

UN Week Observed OnCampus

United Nations Week is being observed on the UNC campus and all over the nation this week.

Next Sunday has been designated as "UN Day."

The local YMCA is promoting United Nations Week with UN displays which went up Monday in both the Y lobby and Graham Memorial. These displays will remain up until next Monday.

Persons working on the displays from the YWCA are Kathryn Groves and Carol Webster. Members of the YMCA who are also helping are Ray Long, Bill Brown, Mike Furuhata and Ram Desikan.

In the YMCA lobby are many items concerning the United Nations with the "World News of the Week" map being the most popular. The map will appear in the Y lobby continuously starting this week. It summarizes recent world news and locates the news on the world map. The World News Map is a new service to the campus sponsored by the YMCA-YWCA World Understanding Commissions.

Jody Derry, senior from Washington, D. C., and Ram Desikan, graduate student from Madras, India, are chairmen of the World Understanding Commissions.

Chamber Orchestra Plays Here Tonight

THE AMERICAN CHAMBER ORCHESTRA
. . . tonight at 8 in Memorial Hall

Series Starts Tonight At 8

The Chapel Hill Concert Series will start tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall when the America Chamber Orchestra will appear in concert.

The Chamber Orchestra, first in a series of four presentations by the concert group, will feature Conductor Robert Scholz and violin soloist Helen Kwalwasser, along with 16 string and wind instruments.

The orchestra's repertoire consists of classical and pre-classical compositions, "best enjoyed in the rather intimate aristocratic environment for which they were intended,' according to a member of the group. he program will consist of work by Purcell, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Dittersdorf, Mozart, Boyce, Schubert, Hugo Wolf and David Van Vactor.

The aims of the orchestra, as set down by spokesmen, are "to present more recent but rarely heard works written specifically for chamber music."

Founded in 1950 as the Mozart Orchestra, the group of artists "owes its existence to several years of patient preliminary experiment and training under Robert Scholz, made possible by the generous support of a group of devoted enthusiasts."

A student ticket drive for Series subscriptions was underway last week, with university students being offered $5 season tickets to the Series' four presentations this scholastic year.

The drive closed Saturday, but tickets will be sold at the door tonight.

The second presentation in the Concert Series will consist of two performances of the Salzburg Marionette Theatre on Feb. 15, 1955.

Walter Gieseking, famed pianist, will appear in Memorial Hall on March 31, 1955.

Tenor Jan Peerce will sing here April 15, 1955.

Lawrence Has Jazz Combo

Elliot Lawrence, who will be featured with his orchestra for the annual Fall Germans this weekend, will have a jazz combo composed of five of his 16 piece orchestra.

Eddie Bert on the trombone, Al Cohn on the tenor saxophone, Stan Tishleson on trombone, Hal McCusic on clarinet and Jack Hunter doing vocals, will comprise the combo.

Bert has played with Stan Kenton, while Cohn has worked with Woody Herman.

Lawrence, who has been featured at over 300 college dances, including those at University of Pennsylvania, Florida State University, Iowa State, the Citadel and Purdue, has appeared on television and in motion pictures. He has also done recordings.

On Friday afternoon Lawrence will present a concert in Memorial Hall. Friday night he will play for the dance. The weekend will be climaxed by the Wake Forest-Carolina football game on Saturday afternoon.

Yack, Quarterly & Tarnation Are Progressing On Schedule

UNC publications are rolling along at the usual rapid pace. Each of the three, "Yackety Yack," Tarnation" and "Quarterly" yesterday issued the following progress report:

Quarterly—According to Jim Dunn, editor, "The Carolina Quarterly" officially goes to press today. The magazine, slated to come out some time near the middle of November, is one which Dunn says "will have appeal for everyone." Subscriptions are now on sale at the information booth at Graham Memorial. Copies will also be available at the Y as soon as publication is complete. Literary contributions to the magazine, poetic or otherwise, will be welcomed.

Yack—"The 1955 'Yackety Yack' is progressing according to schedule with the majority of contracts assigned and all back debts paid," said Jay Zimmermon, assistant business manager. Picture taking is virtually completed with staff members now concentrating on layouts. The primary drawback seems to be that fraternities and other organizations are hesitant in contributing information.

Tarnation—3,000 copies of 'Tarnation" will be available, by subscription only, around Nov. 10. The magazine, with Jack Markham as chief artist, will contain a large picture of Lilli Christine plus intimate shots of other leading cheese cake artists. With humorous illustrations from cover to cover, even including cartoon advertisements, the magazine promises "to be one of the funniest ever," said Rueben Leonard, editor.

SSL Interviews

Interviews for delegates to the State Student Legislature will be held today in the Woodhouse Conference Room on the second floor of Graham Memorial from 2 to 4:30 p. m.

They will be continued on Thursday from 9 to 10:30 p. m. and from 2 to 4:30 p. m.

Duke's Jordan Leads Society

Dr. Charles E. Jordan, vice president of Duke University, was re-elected president of the North Carolina Symphony Society at the annual meeting of the Society and its Board of Trustees here recently.

Other officers, all of whom were re-elected for a two-year term are: Russell M. Grumman, Chapel Hill, executive vice-president; James G. K. McClure, Asheville, vice-president; L. C. Gifford, Hickory, vice-president; Thomas M. Stanback, Chapel Hill, secretary, and A. C. Hall, Raleigh, treasurer.

A number of new trustees were elected, names of whom will be announced later.

Progress reports were given by members of the various chapters. Dr. Jordan presided.

Representatives from the following chapters were present: Chapel Hill, Durham, High Point, Morehead City, Raleigh, Roaring Gap and Southern Pines.

This Is The End

Juniors and seniors who were not photographed for the Yackety-Yack may have their pictures made today only upon payment of a $1 charge, editors said.

Fourth year medical students and all dental students will also be photographed today only. The pictures are made in the basement of Graham Memorial from 1 to 8 p. m. Coat and ties are required for men; dark sweaters for girls; senior girls will be draped.

Wholesalers Session Hears Dr. Graham

Wholesalers' problems, from income tax to sales meetings, were discussed at the first sessions Monday of the annual North Carolina Wholesalers' Management Institute being held this week here.

Dr. Willard J. Graham, director of the UNC executive program, reviewed various types of managerial accounting.

"Every business decision demands special accounting information based on present costs rather than past costs," he said, adding that "there is no such thing as 'cost' except in terms of a specific current situation."

Dr. Graham explained that every business decision is basically a choice between alternatives, such as time of purchase, amount, most profitable item or line, and means of transporting material.

Other members of the institute faculty, who lecture daily, are Clement S. Logsdon, professor of marketing, "Sales Management," Harold O. Langenderfer and William A. Terrell, assistant professors of business administration, "Managerial Accounting;" Richard P. Calhoon, professor of business administration, "Human Relations," and Norman W. Mattis, professor of English, "Public Speaking," all of the UNC staff. W. G. Slattery, teacher trainer in distributive education at Woman's College, Greensboro, is leading a course in con-

Pulpit Players Cast Is Named

The cast for the first production by the Pulpit Players, new religious drama group in Chapel Hill, was announced here yesterday by the organization's director, Mrs. Louise Lamont.

Scheduled for a premiere at 8 p. m. on Oct. 24, at the Chapel Hill Baptist Church, the Players' first undertaking is Christopher Fry's religious festival drama, "The Boy With A Cart." A second performance will be held at 8 p. m., on Oct. 28.

The title role will be played by David Pelton and his mother by Josephine Sharkey. Other cast members will be Gloria Di Costanzo, Clarissa Joyce; Walter Spearman, Louise Lamont, Harold Frazer, Clinton Lindley, Dwight Hunsucker, Pete O'Sullivan and Patricia Liston. Narration will be done by John Clayton and Earl Wynn.

Assisting in other phases of the production will be Harvey Whetstone, Nancy Riley and Harold Fraser. Special music was written for the play by Wilton Nason.

John W. Parker, chairman of the drama committee, explained that while the public is invited to attend without admission charge, a limited number of patrons' tickets at $1 each are being sold to underwrite the cost of production. They may be obtained at Sloan's Drug Store, Ledbetter-Pickard Stationery Store, The Playmakers Business office, the Baptist Church, or from Mrs. B. L. Ward, 307 Pitchard Ave., Chapel Hill.

Lettermen Set Meeting

The Monogram Club will hold its first regular meeting of the year at 7:15 Thursday night in the club room.

Harry Pawlik, president of the Monogram Club, urged that all members be present. He asked also that all letter winners who have not yet been initiated attend. They will have the opportunity of receiving their certificates and Monogram charms.

Rushing Ends Today

Fraternity rush will end at noon today.

Strict silence will terminate at that time.

Final fraternity bids will be available to freshmen at Gerrard Hall from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m. Freshmen will pick up the cards during these hours and keep the bid they wish to pledge.

A pledge list will be available tomorrow afternoon, according to IFC Rush Chairman Ed McCurry.

Decided At CDA Confab:

Drama Festivals Slated

Plans for district dramatic festivals to be held throughout the State next spring, and establishment of a new playwriting award were announced yesterday by officials of the Fall Directors Conference of the Carolina Dramatic Association, which met here recently.

Six guest speakers addressed the sessions, at which CDA president, Mrs. Lazelle M. Northrop, Winston-Salem, presided.

John W. Parker, Association executive-secretary, presented reports at the business session, which approved two proposals for expanded activity.

District festivals will be held throughout the State to screen the best plays in all CDA classifications of membership in deciding entries for the State Festival next spring, he said.

Drama Award

The new drama award, known as the Pearl Setzer Deal Award in Playwriting, will be offered by the Association for the first time this year, and will be presented at the Festival.

Established by Florence B. Carriger of Landis in memory of Mrs. Deal, the cash award will be given to the best one-act play of a religious nature. Competition is open to anyone in the State, and manuscripts should be submitted to John W. Parker, Abernathy Hall.

Samuel Selden, Carolina Playmaker director and president of the Southeastern Theater Conference, stressed the view that art "provides an adventure found nowhere else in life—and the most stimulating of all arts is the theatre.

"Make-believe is natural to everybody, and it appears in many forms, but there is one type peculiar to the theatre, which involves not just the performer's acting instinct but the whole of his character, Selden added.

The theatre and art appeal to those who are unsatisfied, who wish to feel that certain power within themselves—but they must have the challenge of demand for performance in order to really produce, he added.

Robert F. Schenkkan, director of television, Consolidated University, explained plans of his department for televising dramatic productions on campus. One or two will probably be telecast, he said.

WC Experiment

Miss Josephina Niggli, well known author and professor of dramatic art at Woman's College, was the principal speaker at the luncheon. Noting the great scarcity of good dramatic material for women, she outlined a new experimental program being carried out at WC, in which plays for all-women casts are being readied for production.

These original materials, which are being tested with college girls, will be released later in the year without royalty to the schools in the State, Miss Niggli said, and will be distributed by the WC Extension Division.

Mrs. Louise Lamont, director, The Pulpit Players, newly-organized Chapel Hill religious drama group, which opens October 24, discussed the recent revival of the drama within the church, where it was born centuries ago. She noted that the revival began on the west coast and spread to New York. Chapel Hill—the home of the Playmakers and the birthplace of the outdoor drama—is the logical site for such a revival in this state, she said.

"Countless churches over our land are dark on Sunday night; they have all of the facilities, with millions of dollars invested within their walls. They are sleeping giants wherein drama can once again return to its birthplace," Mrs. Lamont said.

Other speakers included Dr. P. N. DeVere, Morganton, and Julian C. Burroughs Jr., Burlington.

University Party Nominates Slate For November Elections

The University Party started nominating candidates for the Student Legislature for the November elections at its meeting held last night.

Those nominated were: Dorm Men's I, Davis Merritt and Steve Phelps; Dorm Men's II, Bill Ballew and Dave Whitaker; Dorm Men's III, Bob Stapleton, Bill Groce, and Ken Argo; Dorm Men's IV. Bill Kirkman; Dorm Men's V, Jim Montieth, Pat Hunter, and John Zollicoffer.

Reuben Leonard, party chairman, stated, "I feel sure that with the candidates that we have nominated, we can not help but come back to a majority in the student legislature. I know that our party's candidates, principles and ideals are far superior to those of the SP." Other party members acknowledged the high calibre of the candidates nominated and stated with these candidates, the University Party would regain the majority in the legislature, which was lost in last year's elections.

Martin Jordan gave a student legislature report and discussed the bills which were introduced in the legislature at its last meeting.

It was announced that nominations for Dorm Women's, Town Women's and Town Men's will be bein on Tuesday, October 26, and that nominations for class officers will begin on Tuesday, November 2.

Our Strength Is In All Mankind

A New York Republican named Harold C. Ostertag, a member of the United States Congress, has asserted what he calls "an ancient and honorable truth — that our strength lies in ourselves." No longer, he crows, are Americans accepting the idea that this country's safety lies in dependence on other nations: "There is an increasing tide running in the direction of the 'Fortress America' concept."

Rep. Ostertag's statement came just a few days after Britain's Prime Minister Churchill told the Conservative Party conference at Blackpool:

"There is one risk that we must never run. Our policy is peace through strength. We must never run the risk of subjugation through weakness. There is already in the United States no little talk of a return to isolation, and the policy is described as 'Fortress America.' We may, however, be sure that all the strongest, wisest forces over there, regardless of party, will not allow the great republic to be turned from the path of right and duty . . ."

Despite what Sir Winston said, he is probably not sure that the strong, wise forces in America will prevail against an isolationist resurgence. And neither are we. There are far more Ostertags in the Congress today than there were even five years ago, and as the years pass the cry for an American withdrawal behind a continental Maginot Line grows stronger in the land.

The fact is this: Men must cooperate or die. American strength is not in ourselves alone, but in all mankind, and if we have not learned that lesson yet, there is not much hope for our survival.

The task of building one world from many ought to be second to no other job in our lives.

It is United Nations Week. Had you heard?

A Week For Academic Freedom?

The Congress of the National Students Association framed a resolution last summer mandating its national staff "to sponsor a Natonal Academic Freedom Week."

This freedom, as Alan Barth reminds us in his book, The Loyalty of Free Men, has not always had free course. A growing segment, gathering impetus in the face of attacks on the free sowing of ideas, seems to have gained a new enthusiasm toward Academic Freedom. It is still to be recalled that the broad way of liberty in the classroom remains a daring concept.

The inherent danger, as we see it, in having a week for Academic Freedom is that it would tend to give those who neglect to keep abreast of the issues the notion that we are according forebearance rather than celebration to the idea.

Academic Freedom, in its highest connotation, is not something that will admit of one week of celebration and 51 others of neglect. In believing that it will, we may be making the schools safe for hypocrisy—not for freedom.

Biggest Party In Washington Had No Slate

Louis Kraar

"HELLO, ROOM service, send up about a hundred set-ups to room 607-F," he said over one of two telephones in the plush Hotel Shoreham suite.

This is how the biggest party in Washington began last weekend after the Maryland game. And it ended as dawn sent the last couple home for sleep—after being broken up earlier in the evening by two house detectives.

At 10:30 the people started coming. Manning Muntzing, Student Party mogul, met the guests at the door and SP Floor-leader Jim Turner took their coats. Soon the crowd started spilling over into the huge bedroom. By midnight, one couple had no room except in the closet and another had found a home in the bath tub. The party had hit its peak.

About 250 people attended the party in room 607-F, including beer-seller Spero and countless other alumni and students. Students who made the Washington jaunt tell me that more people were at the party than the Carolina dance down in the ballroom.

Sunday morning Washington visitors were talking about the Shoreham party as much as the hurricane. And a maid sent up to room 607-F learned, to her amazement, that nothing was broken — except the students who threw the party.

HAS IT struck you that although Hurricane Hazel was coming FROM the southeast, all the trees fell TO the southeast?

Here's why: The eye of the storm passed about 40 miles east of Chapel Hill. Hurricane winds move counter clockwise about the eye. Therefore, the winds approached Chapel Hill from the northwest.

PRESIDENT CREASY'S comment on campus political parties—that they are a "necessary evil"—interests me.

It would seem that the parties are no more an "evil" than those in them. Creasy didn't call the parties "a necessary evil" when he was running as a candidate of one of them.

Creasy's efforts at cooperation with the rival Student Party are admirable, but with the SP's three-fourths legislative majority, there is little more he can do.

AFTER THE Student Party's imitation of the Watkins Committee (the Fleishman-Muntzing censure battle), I wondered what the University Party would do to emulate national politics.

President Creasy said he would campaign this fall to get a University Party Legislature elected, bringing my wondering to an end.

A PRESS service, the United Press surveyed major colleges in the country on fraternity hazing recently.

The survey revealed that old-fashioned hazing is on the wane for two reasons:

1. "Student bodies are now made up of large numbers of war veterans who are too mature to go in for the old kind of pranks."

2. "Upper classmen have discovered that a freshman can be hazed just as effectively by making him work. Besides, the freshman class is a good source of cheap labor."

Nearest school to Carolina in the survey was the University of Miami, where "hazing is a thing of the past."

Apparently, throughout the country, "Hell Week" is giving way to "Work Week."

State-by-State Senate Race

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Here is a quick run-down on how the election is shaping up in the most bitterly fought Congressional race in 20 years—a race into which Republicans are throwing almost as much money as if the Presidency were at stake:

NEW YORK—Whoever carries this largest electoral state has a leg up in nominating the Presidential Candidates in 1956. So far it looks as if Sen. Irving Ives, Republican, is slightly ahead in the run for governor. However, contributions began to flow in to Averall Harriman, Democrat, in increased quantities the day Charles Wilson barked his dog remark. In the end he could win.

PENNSYLVANIA — For the first time in 20 years it looks as if the Democrats would elect a governor. When young George Leader, relatively unknown Democratic chicken farmer was nominated, he was tabbed a throw-away candidate. Now thanks to GOP bumbling, the scandals of Governor Fine's organization, and unemployment, he's likely to win. Democrats will also pick up about five House seats.

CALIFORNIA—Gov. "Goody" Knight, Republican, holds the lead for re-election, but Democrat Richard Graves is pushing him more than expected. Congressman Sam Yorty, Democrat, an early odds-off candidate, now looks like an even bet with GOP Sen. Tom Kuchel. Some polls place him slightly ahead.

IOWA—Sen. Guy Gillette, Democrat will be almost unbeatable despite Iowa's rock-ribbed Republicanism. This time, young Clyde Herring, son of the late Democratic Senator by that name, is making quite a race for the governorship.

WYOMING—Ex-sen. Joe O'Mahoney, long a fixture in the Senate, is a sure-shot to come back. This will reduce the Republican margin by one seat.

COLORADO — John Carroll, live-wire ex-Congressman and former member of Truman's White House Staff, is ahead in race for Senator. Carroll and retiring Sen. Ed Johnson, once political enemies, have patched up their feud and are pulling together—a combination hard to beat. Johnson is running for governor.

IDAHO—A few years ago, Glen Taylor, Democratic Senator and Vice Presidential candidate on the Henry Wallace Progressive ticket, was considered all washed up politically. Now he's giving GOP Senator Dworshak such a race that he's likely to win. Taylor has cut out the cowboy crooning and is campaigning on a straight anti-Republican ticket. The electric power lobby and Hells Canyon are his biggest issue.

OREGON — Hasn't elected a Democratic Senator in 40 years, but it looks as if young Dick Neuberger, author and newspaperman, might make it. GOP Sen. Guy Gordon has lots of money behind him, but Neuberger has two great assets—in addition to his own ability—his wife, and Oregon Legislator, and the indefatigable Sen. Wayne Morse who is talking in every nook and corner of the state.

SOUTH DAKOTA—Normally, a Democrat hasn't a chance in this state. However, a secret Republican poll shows GOP Sen. Karl Mundt, who reaped both fame and criticism in the Army-McCarthy hearings, to be only slighlty head of Kenneth Holum, the farmer-Democrat. In other words, South Dakota is a doubtful state.

KANSAS—Sen. Andy Schoeppel, incumbent Republican, told Vice President Nixon when he went through Kansas recently that "if the election was held today, I'd lose." He urged Nixon to stay and make an extra speech, which Nixon did. Despite this, George McGill, the ex-Senator who wrote the first farm price support bill under FDR, is running like a house afire, may upset all the political timetables. Kansas is also a doubtful state.

MINNESOTA—Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Democrat, is considered unbeatable.

NEW MEXICO—Ex.-Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, Democrat, is also just about unbeatable.

WEST VIRGINIA—Sen. Matt Neely, Democrat, is unbeatable.

OHIO — Congressman George Bender, Republican, is running neck-and-neck with Sen. Tom Burke, Democrat, the long-time and able former Mayor of Cleveland. Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey, the biggest businessman in Ohio, is putting big money and heavy pressure behind Bender, while Burke is running with a bare campaign cupboard. It's anybody's race.

NEW JERSEY — Republican squabbling plus the serious GOP scandals in New Jersey seem certain to defeat Clifford Case, Republican, in the Senate race. Election of Congressman Charles Howell, Democrat, would take one seat away from the Republican margin.

KENTUCKY—The Veep is having a tougher time defeating Sen. John Sherman Cooper than any other previous Republican, but it looks as if he would win. Barkley is one of the most revered figures in Kentucky. His election would take another cut out of the Republican Senate margin.

ILLINOIS—If all the Republican money poured into Illinois is officially tabulated, it should prove larger than that of any other state. The McCarthyites, the Chicago Tribune crowd, and various ther Republican factions wuld like nothing better than to defeat Sen. Paul Douglas, ex-Marine hero Democrat, who has stood up against Eisenhower on economic policies. However, they are going to have a tough time. It looks as if Douglas would win.

MASSACHUSETTS—As a result of Sen. Jack. Kennedy's desertion of ex-Congressman Foster Furcolo, Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, Republican, will be re-elected.

MONTANA—Republicans are throwing a lot of money into Montana to try to defeat elder Statesman Jim Murray, who would head the Senate Labor Committee if the Democrats control the Senate. Despite this, Murray will win.

NEVADA—Allan Bible, unstudy and friend of the late Pat McCarran and a Democrat, will be elected to fill his friend's seat.

MICHIGAN—After Sen. Blair Moody died, everyone figured that Sen. Homer Ferguson, Republican, was certain of re-election. However, an unspectacular, tenacious Democrat named Pat McNamara has been creeping up on him. When Charlie Wilson let loose his dog remark in Detroit the other day, Ferguson almost wept. In hard-to-get-work Detroit it could cost Homer the election.

Forum Funds Badly Spent Says Mundy

David Mundy

The $1800 in student fees expended by the Carolina Forum undoubtedly is the worst spent of any appropriated by the student legislature.

More than a third of the audience at the Forum's first presentation were non-students. Had they been students, only about 5 per cent of the student body would have been there. It doesn't seem reasonable that so many should pay so much for so few and so little.

No blame should rest on the students, except perhaps for allowing such shenanigans. Why should we have to pay to hear a string of politicians, mostly second rate? You can find them on radio, television, and in the newsreels—that's enough.

The money could be much more effectively spent—if, indeed, it MUST be spent—in presenting speakers from other fields than politics.

My strongest objection isn't to the quality (some being assumed) of the speakers, but the use of the Carolina Forum.

For a state university to collect money from a political conservative to help finance a speaker's bureau for the left wing of the Democrat party somehow bothers my sense of fairness. Even the "campus liberals" should see the inequities, but self interest is indeed blinding.

Jonathan Daniels, liberal, former Democrat Natonal Commteeman, showed too much of the hand when at the Dialectic Senate's inaugural ceremonies he remarked: "I've worked with Joel in securing several speakers for the campus, and hope to continue in the future." And he probably will, considering the political influence on North Carolina's educational system.

I am certainly not the one to say that no benefits accrue from the Carolina Forum. The Chairman traveling about the country on Forum business, has been able to make invaluable political contacts. The leftists of his party certainly owe him a vote of thanks for his distinguished forum services to the "cause."

And I am somewhat amused. The state's "liberals" have been busily boosting Judge Parker for a seat on the Supreme Court —apparently they wish to show how unreasonable the Republicans are if he isn't appointed. They are the same class of liberals who accused Judge Parker of being narrow minded, reactionary, and anti labor when his appointment to the Supreme Court was before Congress for confirmation some 25 years ago.

Last week a Chapel Hill newspaper said that his being a Republican wasn't held against him in North Carolina.

Apparently the only way for a Republican to be liked by Democrats is for him to be either very old or dead. Were it not for Lincoln and T. Roosevelt, both quite dead, Democrats would classify all Republicans under an unprintable delineation. They can't be satisfied, not even with the fulfillment of their highest aims, election to office.

The most popular and efficient misquote is that about General Motors. Wilson never said, "What is good for General Motors is good for the nation." His philosophy as a businessman had long been what he happened to remark after taking political office: "What is good for the nation is good for General Motors, and what is good for General Motors is good for the nation." Pray that a few labor "leaders" would substitute the name of their union and adopt the same philosophy.

And despite what Mr. Reuther would have us believe, Secretary Wilson never called workingmen "dogs." Until recent years it was a good old American principle that people should get off their rears, and work, instead of whining. Wilson was using this principle in his analology of bird and kennel dogs seeking food when they were hungry. It did bear an unfortunate proximity to remarks about unemployment.

The Most Perfect Line

Harry Golden
In The Carolina Israelite

What is "the most perfect line of poetry" in the English language? The Greensboro Daily News comments on the question raised by the London Times. The British paper submitted several entries. For example:

The uncertain glory of an April day.
(Shakespeare)

Dawn skims the sea with flying feet of gold.
(Swineburne)

The Greensboro editor submitted a few of his own, all of them magnificent of course:—

Have I not made blind Homer sing to me
(Marlowe)

The moon shines bright. On such a night as this . . .
(Shakespeare)

In my own opinion, I believe the "most perfect line" of poetry in the English language is: "The ploughman homeward plods his weary way."

There you have, not only beauty of sound, but probably the universal theme all in a few words. Man, his work, his home, and his family. Thomas Gray wrote what may very well be "the most perfect" poem written in the English language. "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard." There are no less than FIFTY lines in this masterpiece, each of which could qualify as "the most perfect" line of poetry.

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The ploughman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

As it gets dark, you begin to "hear" instead of "see", and Mr. Gray was able to create the mood by the mere use of words. Note how the words have the ring of all the sounds you hear as it gets dark:

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillness holds.
Save where the bettle wheels his droning flight
And drowsy tiklings lull the distant folds:

Thomas Gray was writing about a churchyard in the English countryside. It took him over twenty-five years to perfect this poem, and "each word is a pearl." Gray writes of life and death—first he describes the burial ground:—"Beneath these rugged elms, that yew tree's shade . . . the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep."

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn
Or busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to lisp their sire's return,
Or climb his knee the envied kiss to share.

Just think what a wonderful rationalism we find in this "Elegy," in the England of 1750, And remember, too, the constant references to the "churchyard" itself. Mr. Gray speaks of the dead—"each in his narrow cell for ever laid"—and he tells us that death is as nothing, despite the many systems of consolation we humans have erected. "For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn." In other words, this is it; and the one to feel sorry for, (if indeed this finality calls for sorrow) is for the one in "his narrow cell," "The living" are the only ones who are still allright. For a while longer they will know the fireside and love, and kissing and the other sensations and pleasures of iving. Then Mr. Gray says to the "we-born" and the "talented" and the "rich";—don't you be so proud of yourself as to look down upon the graves of these "obscure" and poor farmers. You are only kidding yourself. No matter; wealth, power, beauty; it all leads to this same narrow little cell and it's all over for you.

The boast of heraldy, the pomp of power
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour,
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

Again Mr. Gray returns to the Humanism of his —an Anglo-Saxon Spinoza who was concerned more with whether "the roof leaks" HERE than with possible "rewards" to come "elsewhere." Mr. Gray turns his attention to the people "sleeping in those narrow cells." He wonders with a deep meloncholy —NOT whether they were "saved" for the future, but maybe, maybe they could have had a little more out of it while they were alive. "How oft the harvest to their sickle yield; how jocund did they drive their team-afield;—how bowed the woods beneath their sturdy stroke." He says maybe one of these farmers would have been a great man if he had had the opportunity. "Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid some heart once pregnant with celestial fire:—hands that the rod of empire might have swayed."

Yes, one of these farm boys might have ruled an empire; another have been a great poet, or waked to ecstacy the living lyre." But poverty, and lack of education: those were the circumstances "of obscurity." "Chill penury repressed their noble rage, and froze the genial current of the soul."

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear:
Full many a flower is born to unblush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

We owe the Englishman many a debt. He gave us habeas-corpus, trial by jury, the ballot, the free public school, and Shakespeare, Milton and Winston Churchill and also Thomas Gray, and his "Elegy."

Mr. Gray died in 1771 and of course was buried in the same "country churchyard" of his poem. He was a great intellect and spent most of his life reading the literature mythology and philosophy of the world. He was very careless about his personal affairs. He did not seem to care whether he was ever "published" or not and that was a pity. Some years ago they succeeded in collecting many of his letters for publication in a single volume. They are considered among the best in the English language.

Over The Hill

By

FRED BABSON

Head Coach George Barclay continues his policy of conducting secret practice sessions. Last week the veil of secrecy was designed to upset Maryland. The Terps must have had spies lurking in Kenan Stadium, because the Tar Heels were out-maneuvered at every turn. Of course, some of the Carolina strategy last Saturday did not require any sort of super spy system on the part of Maryland. Such things as Connie Gravitte, ACC leading ground gainer, playing only five minutes and running the ball once could not have been designed for Maryland's benefit more successfully if Jim Tatum had been directing the Carolina team. Gravitte was not sick or injured.

The scouting reports turned in by the Carolina scouts to date have been of little help. The week prior to the Georgia game the locals practiced diligently for perfection of a defense against an expected aerial attack. The Bulldog backs made shreds of the Carolina line from tackle to tackle. Very few passes were thrown. In preparation for Maryland, the Tar Heels worked on a defense to thwart the end sweeps of Joe Horning, Ronnie Waller, and other speedy Terp backs. So Maryland sent Dick Bielski up the middle all day. He averaged almost nine yards per trip.

Next Saturday UNC runs up against Wake Forest's very unpredictable Deacons. There is no telling what they might do. The Deacs were humiliated by Virginia Tech, 32-0. Then they turned around and tied three-touchdown favorite Maryland, 13-13. Wake Forest took command of the Terrapins from the beginning of the game and had victory snatched from their grasp when a penalty nullified a fourth-quarter touchdown.

From all indications, however, Carolina should be prepared for a passing attack. Deacon Quarterback Nick Consoles leads the Atlantic Coast Conference in forward passing. He has thrown 43 passes and completed 22, for 221 yards and two touchdowns. Six of his aerials have been intercepted. This is also tops in the Conference. Wake Forest does not have a single back in the League's top 11 ball carriers. All of the Deac runners average less than five yards per try.

Everything points to Wake Forest concentrating on the air lanes. But if the Deacs have seen films of Carolina's last two contests, they may come down to earth.

Wake Forest has a big, tough line, led by Tackle Bob Bartholomew, whom Maryland's Jim Tatum called "one of the best, if not the best, in America." At the beginning of the Maryland-Wake Forest game, the Terps ran a couple of plays toward Bartholomew's side and were promptly smeared. They ran the other side for the remainder of the day. Other bulwarks in the Deac forward wall are Captain Ed Stower's, end, Guard Gerald Huth, and Center Joe Dupree.

The Baptists will invade Kenan Stadium with vengeance. They are still seething over last year's fracas with Carolina. With only three minutes to go, the Deacs led 13-12, when Connie Gravitte made a dazzling 42-yard punt return to the Wake Forest 10. A five-yard penalty put the ball on the five, and four plays later the Tar Heels scored the winning touchdown.

Maryland Loses Two Players To Injuries

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 19 (AP)—Maryland lost two substitute backs to the injured list today but regained a first string tackle for Friday night's game against undefeated Miami.

Coach Jim Tatum reported that halfback Ed Vereb will be out and quarterback Lynn Beightol is on the doubtful list.

"However, we've got Dick Shipley back and that's going to help us," he said. "He was playing the best defense at tackle before he got hurt two weeks ago."

Shipley sat out last Saturday's victory over North Carolina while a sophomore, Alex Sandusky, filled in.

Attempt Made to Include Fishing In 1960 Olympics

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—A quiet campaign is being fought to right what its backers regard as a major wrong: The fact that the world's greatest participation sport, fishing, has no place in the olympics.

Cliff Netherton, a Washington high school teacher who is one of the prime movers in the campaign, said today he and his co-workers are convinced they can build up enough support for international casting competition to get it into the 1960 Olympics.

So. Cal's Arnett Back Of Week; Bielski Mentioned

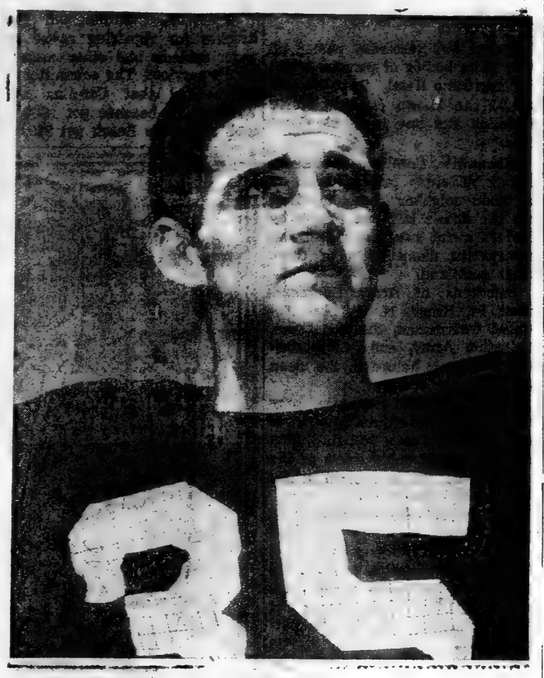
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern California's Jon Arnett, who did a great job of upholding football form on a day when upsets were a dime a dozen and stellar performances equally inexpensive, is The Associated Press Back of The Week.

Arnett was chosen today by sports writers and broadcasters as a worthy successor to such players as Purdue's Lenny Dawson and Ronald Clinkscale of Texas Christian in the balloting for this weekly honor.

The Southern California tailback, incidentally, is the second sophomore to be named Back of The Week this season. Dawson, the Purdue passing star, was the first.

Arnett, a 19-year-old speedster from Los Angeles, is quite accustomed to receiving such special mention. He was picked as "Player of The Year" in Los Angeles high school football in 1952; was a standout on the Southern California freshman team last year and was singled out as the Trojan sophomore most likely to succeed after spring practice.



This fall Arnett didn't take long to move ahead of senior tailback Aramis Dandoy in the Southern California lineup. Going into last Saturday's game against Oregon, he was the team's leading ground gainer, and he ran for 179 yards more in 18 carries and scored all three USC touchdowns in a 24-14 victory over the Webfoots. In addition, he completed four of five passes for 39 yards.

Arnett impressed the television audience with his exceptional shiftiness in addition to his speed. He can run 100 yards in 10 seconds and broad jump better than 24 feet.

Still, Arnett didn't have a very big edge over such players as Albert Elmore of Alabama, Duane Nutt of Southern Methodist, Fred Wyant of West Virginia, Dick Bielski of Maryland and Tom Gastall of Boston University when it came to picking this week's standout back.

Elmore completed eight of 13 passes for 100 yards and three touchdowns against Tennessee and rushed for 107 yards more. Nutt also threw three touchdown passes against Rice.

Wyant, a 60-minute quarterback, maneuvered West Virginia into a last-quarter victory over Penn State. He scored two touchdowns, passed for 130 yards and made a perfect pitchout to Dick Nicholson for the winning score. The hard-running Bielski not only gained 102 yards on slippery turf but added some devastating blocking and tackling.

KEN KELLER
. . biggest ground-gainer

Halfback Keller Chosen "Athlete Of The Week"

Ken Keller, speedy Carolina halfback who is just beginning to return to the form he displayed last season, has been selected by The Daily Tar Heel sports staff as "Athlete of the Week."

The shifty-running Keller injured his ankle in a preseason scrimmage against Fort Eustis and saw only limited action in the opening games of Carolina's schedule.

Two Saturdays ago he played extensively for the first time and fanned the spark of hope which was dimming in many UNC fans. Against Georgia he played very well and was slated for heavy duty last Saturday against Maryland in College Park.

Keller saw heavy duty against the Terps. As a matter of fact, he was the leading ground gainer among a number of Tar Heel backs who had trouble penetrating the Terrapin defense.

Keller ran the pigskin nine times for a total gain of 29 yards, slightly more than three yards per carry. Ken also caught three passes, one for a touchdown. The scoring pass and another, however, were nullified because of penalties.

On the third pass, a screen toss from Doug Farmer, he managed to elude a swarm of tacklers and gain four yards.

ONLY THREAT

A 19 year old junior who hails from Pennsylvania, Keller provided Carolina's only real scoring threat in the 33-0 loss to Maryland. In the first period he hung on to a deflected aerial in the end zone from Al Long, but the score was erased from the books when the Tar Heels were penalized for having an illegal receiver downfield.

Later in the game he was injured and removed. Sunday he was diagnosed as having a shoulder separation, although his condition is not believed to be serious. He will probably play this week against Wake Forest.

Ole Miss, Colorado Lead Offense Race; Sooners, UCLA, Army Rise

NEW YORK, Oct. 19. (AP)—Unbeaten teams and once-beaten but increasingly respected Army are making a mass assault on the top positions in major-college offense statistics, NCAA Service Bureau figures showed today.

Mississippi and Colorado, boasting five victories each, hold first place in total offense, rushing and passing, and coming up fast are Oklahoma, Boston U., UCLA, Minnesota, and the Cadets, who have won three straight after an opening loss to South Carolina.

Mississippi took over the total offense lead from Colorado this week, bringing its average to 423.4 yards a game, as the Buffaloes dropped to third with 416 behind Boston U.'s 418.8.

Mississippi also retained its aerial leadership, averaging 189.4 yards a game to Oregon's 134.6 with no one else within 20 yards.

And Colorado kept its grip on the top spot in rushing by a wide margin. It has made 368.8 yards a game on the ground, to 318.6 for Texas Tech and 292.5 for third-place Army. The Cadets moved up from 11th place, but behind them Oklahoma jumped into fourth from 35th, UCLA to 7th from 13th and Minnesota to 8th from 18th.

It's nothing unusual to see Oklahoma moving high in the rushing table, since it's the defending champion and has been in the top ten ever since 1945. The Sooners produced the biggest running attack of the season, 533 yards, against Kansas Saturday, to make their move.

And that was only one of several single-game highs produced last weekend. UCLA's 72 points against Stanford, Dartmouth's 24 completed passes and Stanford's 46 attempts were all high-water marks for 1954.

The UCLA outburst gave it the highest season total of points, too, 204. But in average per game, the scoring leader is Wichita with 44.3, followed by Boston U's 42.5, Arizona's 41.3, UCLA's 40.8, Colorado's 38.8, Denver's 34.6, Mississippi's 34.2, Army's 33.5, Cincinnati's 32.0 and Oklahoma's 31.8.

Behind Mississippi and Oregon in passing yardage are Washington with 166.6 yards a game, California with 159, Purdue with 156 and San Jose State with 151. Other passing distinctions are widely distributed. Washington has thrown most, 137; Oregon has completed most, 63; Mississippi has most yardage, 947; Alabama has most touchdown passes, 11.

In completion average, Houston has the highest rating, completing 20 out of 31 for 64.5 per cent. The actual leader, though, is California, with 62 out of 103 for 60.2 per cent. Another sport of efficiency is avoiding interceptions and only two teams have been able to keep entirely free of thm, Arizona State in 43 attempts and Miami in 41. At the other end of the scale is Stanford, intercepted eight times by UCLA for a season total of 13 aerials lost.

Virginia Tech, which is also unbeaten, Oklahoma and Colorado simply do not like to throw the ball around, although Colorado does right well. Six of its 15 completions have produced touchdowns but Virginia Tech, which has thrown only 18 times in four games, has chosen to run the ball on 92.8 per cent of its plays, Colorado on 91.1 per cent and Oklahoma on 89.6 per cent.

Tar Heels In Secret Drills For Deac Tilt

Coach George Barclay held secret practice for his Tar Heels again yesterday afternoon on Navy Fied. Press and nonstudents were politely asked to leave the field, as Barclay sent his charges through dummy and scrimmage drills.

On the sidelines were Ken Keller, George Stavnitski, and Doug Malone, who were injured in last Saturday's battle with the Maryland Terrapins. The freshman squad handled the ball for the majority of the afternoon, as The Tar Heels made an effort to bolster the sagging defenses which fell apart in the Maryland encounter.

The Wake Forest team, led by Nick Consoles, the Atlantic Coast Conference leading passer, are expecting to strike heavily through the air in the upcoming battle.

Phi Gam Ekes By TEP, 6-0

Four forfeits marred the 4:00 Intramural schedule yesterday afternoon. Phi Gam-1 and TEP-1 played the only game, with Phi Gam coming out on the long end of a 6-0 score. The first half passed scoreless, with Phi Gam on the move at the end of the period. Early in the second half, the Phi Gam squad struck for the only score of the game on an intercepted pass. The try for the point was blocked, and the score remained to be the final.

Phi Gam-1 scoring: Touchdown—Bill Greene.

Cobb-3 failed to put in an appearance on the field, and dropped a 1-0 decision to Mangum. Stacey and Graham did likewise, and Old West and Everett-1 captured forfeit decisions. Cobb-4 and Joyner double forfeited, as neither team made an appearance.

Carolina Plays Run By Deacs

WAKE FOREST, Oct. 19. (AP)—Wake Forest's reserves ran North Carolina's split T plays in an hour-long scrimmage today as the Deacons drilled for Saturday's game with the Tar Heels at Chapel Hill.

At times the varsity had trouble in halting the reserves. Halfback Jack Behrmann looked good for the reserves and End Ed Stowers was outstanding for the varsity on defense.

Prior to the scrimmage, the squad worked on pass defense with Charles Topping and Bill Barnes each intercepting two. The line drilled on blocking and tackling. The leaders were Tackle Cliff Brookshire and Guard Gerald Huth.

Gavilan, Saxon Tangle In Title Bout Tonight

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19. (AP)—After two postponements due to hand trouble and a case of mumps, Kid Gavilan finally is ready to defend his world welterweight title against New York's Johnny Saxton tomorrow night at Convention Hall.

The sleek Cuban remains a strong 19 to 10 favorite in the 15-round match, despite the usual rumors that he will have trouble making the 147-pound class limit.

Every time Gavilan goes to the post as a welter, you hear he may not make it. But he hasn't missed yet. It's beginning to sound like the same old story that preceded every defense by Sugar Ray Robinson when he held the welter crown.

The two fighters will weigh in at noon tomorrow at the offices of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission for the nationally televised CBS bout starting at 10 p.m. EST. The Philadelphia area will be blacked out but there will be a radio broadcast only in Philadelphia.

Promoter Herman Taylor talks of a gate of 11,000 and $60,000 with an advance sale of about $30,000. The advance sale just about matches the total paid back in refunds after the fight was postponed, July 14 and Sept. 1. More conservative estimates hint the crowd may be no more than 8,500 and the gate about $60,000. The TV rights will bring another $40,000.

Gavilan hasn't fought since April 2 when he failed in his bide for Bobo Olson's middleweight crown. He used his right hand sparingly in that bout and later claimed he had injured the hand in a Feb. 23 tune-up match with Johnny Cunningham at Miami.

The Saxton match was set back for the first time in July when Gavilan, trouping Cuba with a song and dance unit, reported his hand still was in a cast. The September show was postponed on the eve of the fight when the doctors discovered the Keed had the mumps.

Fully recovered—Gavilan claims—the champ is confident of defending successfully for the eighth time and moving on to a match with challenger Carmen Basilio or another shot at Olson's 160-pound crown.

"He give me good fight for five rounds," said Gavilan before leaving his Summit, N. J., camp. "Aft-

State College Youth Shot

PITTSBORO—(AP)—A North Carolina State College student, near death in Chapel Hill Memorial Hospital, went through the harrowing experience of being robbed, kidnapped and shot by his abductor Monday night.

Donald D. Johnson, 18, of Raleigh, a freshman at State who was working as night attendant at a tourist court near his home, was shot at least seven times with a .22 pistol. The hospital reported his condition as critical.

Chatham County Sheriff J. W. Emerson reported that Paul M. Fulton, 29, of Sanford, was arrested near the site of the shooting and is being held without bond.

No charges were filed pending the outcome of Johnson's condition.

According to Sheriff Emerson, Fulton verbally confessed to the robbery but denied the shooting. He said that Johnson identified Fulton as his robber-abductor-assaulter.

Here is the story Emerson said Johnson told him:

Johnson was working at the Fairfield Motor Court on U. S. 1, just north of Raleigh when the robber came in. After a preliminary discussion, the robber pulled a pistol and took $70.

He made Johnson get into Johnson's car and drive off, holding the pistol on him. Raleigh police surmised the robber drove out to the motor court in a taxicab.

Near Apex, the robber stopped at a drive-in for a beer and then took over the driver's seat.

Near the Chatham-Lee County line the robber stopped the car and without warning shot the slightly built youth.

He then drove across the Cape Fear River bridge into Lee County a short distance, turned around and stopped on the bridge and got out of the car.

Johnson told the sheriff he thought he heard the robber reloading his pistol and was fearful he would be thrown into the river. By putting one hand on the car's accelerator and the other on the steering wheel, he somehow managed to guide the car to a nearby farmhouse and attract attention by honking on the horn.

Formosan Shih-Liang Visits Campus

Dr Chien Shih-Liang, president of the National Taiwan University of Formosa in Taipei, visited the University last week on a tour of the School of Medicine and North Carolina Memorial Hospital, observing the operations of the two units of the health center.

Dr. Chien was accompanied by Dr. W. C. Davison, Dean of Duke University Medical School, who recently returned from Formosa where he was visiting professor of cal education.

The president of the National University is visiting various universities in this country under the auspices of the U. S. State Department.

While here Dr. Chien talked with Dr. James Andrews and Dr. Warner Wells, both of the UNC Medical School, who have been invited to accept teaching professorships at the University of Formosa.

Dr. Andrews, who is head of the Department of Biochemistry, has been invited to begin a visiting professorship in biochemistry in January and Dr. Wells has been invited to accepted a teaching professorship in surgery in the spring.

Hurricane Hazel's Toll Rises In N.C.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Helicopters yesterday picked up two more bodies of persons killed by Hurricane Hazel. That brought to 20 the known dead in North Carolina and one in South Carolina.

Meanwhile, Carolinas beach residents yesterday joined hands on a "good neighbor" basis to clean up the debris left last Friday by Hazel's awful sweep of death and destruction along miles of Carolinas coastland.

Hundreds of Army Engineers from Ft. Bragg, N. C., plus National Guardsmen, the Red Cross, Salvation Army, and Civil Defense officials helped in the clean up.

Wilmington said the entire community was constituting itself as an unofficial mass rehabilitation committee and a big share of the cleaning up was on a good neighbor basis, without charge.

Six hundred men of the 20th Engineers Battalion yesterday were ordered to Wilmington, headquarters for rehabilitation work on the North Carolina coast. Another 300 men from Ft. Bragg, part of the 981st Engineers Construction Battalion, was dispatched to Myrtle Beach, headquarters for South Carolina beach cleanup efforts.

The North Carolina Hurricane Disaster Committee yesterday recommended to Gov. Umstead that $420,000 be made available to Wrightsville, Carolina and Kure beaches for repairing sewer and water systems and other essential public services. The committee recommended that Carolina and Wrightsville beaches get $200,000 each and Kure Beach get $20,000.

President Eisenhower has cut through red tape and given blank check authority for federal hurricane disaster aid if state and local money is not available. This is only to restore water and sewer lines and other municipal services.

ducting sales meetings and a problem forum.

The institute officially opened Sunday evening at the Carolina Inn when the group was welcomed by Dr. J. Harrs Purks, University provost.

Provost Purks stressed the mutual benefits of the adult education programs at the University for the State's business men. "The benefits flow in two directions: From the University to the busness man, and also from the men to the University faculty. The School of Business Administration is fortunate in keeping in such close touch with the latest trends of the business world."

John Jordan, Raleigh, executive secretary of the N. C. Wholesalers' Association, presided at last night's gathering.

The institute, which will continue through Friday, is directed by Dr Rex Winslow, head of the UNC Bureau of Busness Services and Research. It is sponsored by the Wholesalers' Assocation and the N. C. Distributive Education Service, in cooperation with the UNC Bureau of Business Services tration and Extenson Division.

Thirty hours of intensive instruction in addition to the informal conferences and discussions make up the week's curriculum. Those participating hold important management responsibility in independent wholesale businesses in the State.

Gavilan, 28, is a veteran of 116 pro fights since 1943 with a 98-14-4 record. He has knocked out 27 opponents and never has been stopped. Only two men ever knocked down Gavillan—Ike Williams in 1948 and Basilio last year at Syracuse with a left hook.

Saxton likes to crowd inside, nullifying the power of free swingers. The strong New York Negro has been involved in several dull fights, especially with Livio Minelli and Lester Felton in New York and with Johnny Bratton in Philadelphia. Often it is not his fault. Like he says, "I fight to win and for the benefit of Johnny Saxton. What good is it if people say 'he fought a great fight—but he got knocked out.'"

The 24-year-old Golden Glove grad never has been knocked out in 47 fights as a pro since 1949. He has 43-2-2 record, losing only to Gil Turner and Del Flanagan last year.

Stop Naming 'Em After Women

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A letter to the People's Platform of The Charlotte News today complained that "the time has come to stop naming those nasty old storms (hurricanes) after women. It's an insult to the sex, that's what it is. Gives the whole feminine race a bad name.

"Think of all the Hazels in the world-sweet, demure young things—who have seen their fair name dragged in the mire."

The letter was signed:

Consolidated University Is Telecasting At State Fair

WUNC-TV is using its facilities to telecast the State Fair now in progress in Raleigh through commercial television station WTVD in Durham.

With a "telecruiser" bus as a studio and four cameras distributed throughout the State Fair Arena, WUNC-TV transmits three half-hour programs daily.

The first series was telecast Tuesday and the last will be telecast Saturday.

WUNC-TV's microwave transmitter is located on top of the Arena and sends beams 25 miles to WTVD's tower in Durham.

The first program begins at 2:30 p.m. It consists of animal judging in the Arena. The second program, beginning ta 4:15, is a production designed for women viewers. It features home economists from Woman's College and State College with flower arrangements and food preparation as a theme.

The final daily program begins at 5:30 p.m. and originates in the farm section of the Arena.

'Genuine Service'

Robert F. Schenkkan, director of WUNC-TV here, said yesterday, "This is a cooperative arrangement between WTVD and WUNC-TV." WUNC-TV considers this "a genuine service to the state," he said, "which could not be done any other way since our transmitters are not on the air yet."

Two of the cameras are situated in a studio built by State Fair personnel at the main entrance to the Arena. The other two are placed at different levels in the central part of the Arna.

The director in charge of the operation sits in the "telecruiser" with the telecast equipment, directing cameramen and sending messages to workers on the floor of the Arena.

Schenkkan said yesterday that he did not wish to release the names of those responsible for the operation since "it would be impossible to distribute credit properly."

Images 'Good'

He said that the images being picked up by WTVD were "good." "This is encouraging" he said 'because it assures us that in the future we will be able to get good pictures from the studio to the transmitter." WUNC-TV's transmitter, located near here, is scheduled to go on the air in December.

"Cooperation betwen a commercial and an educational station is unusual," said Schenkkan. "I don't know if it has ever been done before," he added.

He said that while telecasts from the fair were test programs, "at the same time they are a public service to the state and they give our people practice."

For Hurricane-Stricken State:

Governor Umstead Formally Asks For Federal Assistance

RALEIGH—(AP)— Gov. Umstead yesterday formally asked for $550,000 in federal aid to help Tar Heel communities repair essentinl services destroyed by Hurricane Hazel.

In addition, the governor and the Council of State allocated $100,000 from the State's contingency and emergency fund to help the stricken communities.

The State's hurricane disaster committee yesterday recommended to the governor that $420,000 be made available to Wrightsville Carolina and Kure Beaches. Wrightsville, whose sewage system was wiped out, and Carolina were earmarked for $200,000 each and Kure for $20,000.

Today the committee recommended $235,000 for the Morehead City - Beaufort area: $100,000 for Atlantic Beach, $75,000 for Beaufort, and $60,000 for Morehead City.

In a telegram to President Eisenhower today, the governor said "The hardest hit communities in the coastal areas wlil require, in addition to funds they are able to provide, an allocation from outside sources, of $655,000 for the temporary restoration of basic public services, including, of course, water, sewage and other essential utilities.

"In addition to the services being rendered by all state, local and private agencies, the governor and Council of State today allocated the sum of $100,000, which is the maximum amount available from state funds.

"I urge you to make immediately available an allocation of $550,000 under authority of public law 875, 81st Congress, to supplement state, local and private agencies in their efforts in this maor disaster."

Invited to participate in the program are 25 selected scholars from the United States and 25 from Latin America.

Dr. Leavitt, who came to the University in 1917, is considered one of the outstanding authorities on the humanities in the South and is a former chairman of the Southern Humanities Conference

Prof. Jaffee At Cincinnati

Dr. Hans H. Jaffe, a former UNC faculty member, has been appointed assistant professor of chemistry at the University of Cincinnati.

A native of Marburg, Germany, Dr. Jaffe lived in Chapel Hill eight years while working with the U. S. Public Health Service as physical chemist, and also serving as a faculty member of the Department of Experimental Medicine, UNC School of Public Health.

He completed his Ph.D. degree at UNC in 1952. He holds a B.S. degree from the University of Iowa and an M.S. from Purdue University.

Dr. Jaffe came to the United States in 1940, and served with the U. S. Army from 1943 through 1946.

The author of many papers in scientific journals, he holds membership in the American Chemical Society, Phi Lambda Upsilon, and Sigma Xi.

Dr. Jaffe's wife and three children have joined him at their new home in Cincinnati.

Dorm Socials Discussed

Social chairmen from the men and women's dorms met jointly yesterday with Dave Reid, GMAB vice president, to discuss and outline a program of social events for the coming year.

Women's dorms have already outlined a social schedule with Sandra Wax serving as chairman.

Reid announced proposed plans to renovate the Rendexvous Room and open its facilities to any dorm that wants to rent it. Socials held in the Rendezvous Room and approved by the IDC will receive financial aid from the GMAB.

Manning Muntzing, IDC president, said that the program "is one of the best ideas that has ever been instigated for dorm recreation."

Student Proofs Ready

The proofs for the student section of the Student Directory will be at the Y this afternoon and all day tomorrow.

Anyone who wishes to check the proofs may see them during this time.

Legislature Interviews Today

Two days remain for students who are interested in attending the annual North Carolina State Student Legislature as delegates to be interviewed by the selction board. The board will meet tonight from 9 until 10:30 and tomorrow afternoon from 2 until 4:30 in the Woodhouse Conference Room. All students of the University are eligible for membership in the delegation from Carolina.

Applicants are asked questions on political topics primarily, and appointment to the delegation is based on the applicant's interest, presentation and factuality of information.

The legislature is composed of delegates from all colleges and universities in North Carolina, and size of delegations depend upon the size of the school represented. The body gathers to debate and make resolutions concerning matters of education, North Carolina, the nation and the world.

In 1936 the North Carolina State Student Legislature convened for the first time under the sponsorship of Pi Kappa Delta, forensic fraternity at North Carolina State. In the beginning the body was more a debating and oratorical society than a legislative group. In 1945, at the Ninth Annual Assembly, the controversial Glenn Resolution to admit delegates from North Carolina's Negro colleges was debated and passed. In 1947 Pi Kappa Delta and the Student Legislative Assembly were dissolved, but the Debate Council at Chapel Hill began all-out efforts to revive the assembly. Representatives from State, Meredith, WCUNC and UNC convened and agreed to continue the assembly, and in November of 1947 elected Earl Fitzgerald of Carolina president of a nucleus committee and James Cranford of State secretary-treasurer.

The Interim Council of the Legislature announced last week that the Student Legislature will convene in Raleigh November 18, 19 and 20. Carolina students Joel Fleishman and Susan Fink are members of the Interim Council.

Condition 'Fair'

RALEIGH—(AP).—A young North Carolina State College student who narrowly escaped death in a fusillade of pistol shots was reported in "fair" condition last night at Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Paul Fulton, 29, Sanford, identified as an ex-convict, is accused of shooting Donald J. Johnson, of Raleigh after holding up a motor court near here. Police said Fulton forced the youth, employed at the motel, to drive him into Chatham.

Original reports were that Johnson was shot seven times. A Memorial Hospital spokesman reported he was shot nine times, seven times in the body and twice in the arm. The weapon was a nine-shot .22 caliber target pistol.

Fulton is being held without bond on an open charge pending the outcome of Johnson's wounds.

Creasy Sets 'State Of Campus' Talk To Solons At 8 O'Clock

By LLOYD SHAW

After three weeks in committee, SP Vice Chairman David Reid's bill "liberalizing punishment in first offense cheating cases" will come before the student Legislature tonight.

The bill was reported out of the Ways and Means Committee last week by a vote of 4-2 with no recommendation to the Legislature.

Reid's bill has caused considerable controversy on campus. Student Body President Tom Creasy, who will deliver his "State of the Campus" speech at Legislature tonight, says he will veto the bill if it passes in its present form. A two-thirds vote of the Legislature is necessary to override a presidential veto.

If the vote does not pass the Legislature, a petition bearing approximately 600 names could call a referendum.

Creasy said this week that the "principle of the plan is good," but added he objected to an automatic probation in every case.

Reid says "There has long been a need for rehabilitation and correction, instead of mere punishment in first offense cases."

Sophomore Dance Bill

A bill asking $125 to help pay for a sophomore class dance will be voted on tonight. It was reported out of Finance Committee favorably by a 6-1 vote. An amendment was added to the bill in committee saying that the money appropriated should not exceed half the cost of the dance.

"The Summer School Activities Fee" bill, introduced by Student Party Chairman Joel Fleishman, was reported out of committee unanimously favorable for the second time. An amendment was added setting at 75c the money from the summer students fee going to Graham Memorial. The bill calls for a fee of $1.50 per student per term.

In his "State of the Campus" speech, Creasy will speak "on his program, what has been done, and what is planned."

The first article of Reid's bill says: "Convictions of persons for cheating where it is the first offense shall carry with it a maximum penalty of suspension for a period of one semester. The maximum penalty for first offense cheating shall only be imposed on such offenders as are judged by the council involved to be flagrant and premeditated violators. The usual punishment for first offense cheating convictions will be probation for a period of not less than one semester nor more than two semesters."

Article two says: "Individuals who have been placed on a probation status for cheating will be assigned by the Dean of Students office to a faculty counselor to whom the probationer shall report biweekly and at other times when needed to report progress and/or problems of adjustment."

Article three says: "No portion of this bill is to be interpreted as prohibiting or discouraging the imposition of more moderate penalties in cases where the council involved feels that the circumstances warrant a more lenient penalty."

In his reasoning before the bill, Reid says, "There has long been a need for rehabilitation and correction instead of mere punishment in first offense cheating cases brought before the Honor Council; and reform in this area would encourage more widespread participation in the operation of the Honor System since reporting an individual would not necessarily mean automatic suspension; and additional flexibility in the distribution of penalties of this nature would elevate the Honor Councils from their present positions closely akin to juries, to a position of true judicial bodies; and the primary function of the educational institution is to teach, not punish."

Miss Nancy Whisnant, chairman of the Women's Honors Council, in a letter to The Daily Tar Heel, said recently, "If it is passed, I believe that it would lower the entire standards of the campus, and thus would greatly damage the future of the present Honor System."

Phi Votes In Favor Of Bill

The Philanthropic Literary Society voted six to one last night in favor of the "leniency bill" introduced by David Reid in the student Legislature, and the vote of eight to three by the entire body at the debate also favored the bill.

Reid's bill, which will be voted upon in student Legislature tonight, provides for lesser penalties for students convicted of cheating and other Honor System offenses.

Rep. John Curtis spoke against the Reid Bill. Speaker Frank Warren, Jr., called for the bill to be brought up at the next meeting in view of the fact that Sen. Reid was present.

Sen. Reid, speaking on the bill for leniency, said the bill was not his original idea and that it came from the Judicial Study Commission and from Gene Cooke, the chairman of the commission, when they met this summer.

Sen. Reid said Article 1 was the portion of the bill receiving the most misunderstanding.

The first article states that convictions of persons for cheating where it is the first offense, shall carry a maximum penalty of suspension of one semester, and that the maximum is only to be imposed on persons judged to be flagrant and premeditated violators. The bill proposes a period of not less than one semester nor more than two semesters for first offense violators.

Reid said first offense cheating cases not turned in promptly by the offender immediately would be suspended.

He said the Honor Council did not believe in Honor and that they did not know the meaning of the word, "premeditated."

Sen. Reid said it was sometimes impossible to keep from cheating under certain circumstances. The bill would violate precedent, but a new precedent needed to be established, Reid contended.

Opposition

Rep. James Duval, in opposing the bill, said the Honor System may as well be carried all the way. He debated that a second chance would not be granted outside . . . probation won't accomplish anything, he said.

Rep. Frank Warren said the previous speaker (Duval) didn't believe there was honor in mankind. Probation was punishment, Warren said.

Rep. Richard Albert pointed out that the Honor System was set up to encourage the honor of the individual. Albert approved the bill as it stood. Honor could not be brought to bear by a punishment or by a protector, Albert said.

Reid asked Albert if he had always been honest to everyone. Albert answered "yes."

Reid asked if Albert believed that no consideration should be given a violation of honor. Albert replied that consideration should be given, but no line can be drawn.

Second and Third Chance

Rep. Dick Iobst said that all mere humans should be given a second and third chance. Being human to err, man has violated principles and honor since civilization began, Iobst said.

Cord. Rep. Albert retorted that as it is human to err, so is it human to correct.

Rep. Warren reminded the de-

President Creasy & The 'Politicians'

President Tom Creasy's recent remark, "Campus politics are only a necessary evil," brings to mind the firm statement made last year by political science Professor Woodhouse that the campus is not big enough for political parties.

We dissent. Campus politics may be a "necessary evil" for some colleges and universities. But we see the phrase as wildly inapplicable to the University of North Carolina, where politics is rooted in the very soul of the place, where campus politicians began making speeches in the 18th century.

Surely, a student running for office with the support of one of the parties is engaged in no less educational a pursuit than a student reading about the political campaigns of America in History 72. Political activity justifies itself on more than an educational basis, however. During President Creasy's own student days at Carolina, political parties have reached a new high in liveliness and service to the campus; they have grown large and largely respectable and from their ranks come students willing, for their own good and that of their party and the University, to tackle jobs nobody else wants, the tedious, time-consuming tasks that must be done in student government.

If student politics at the University is only a "necessary evil" it is an evil that exists in every free and deliberating society, where there must, from the nature of men, be opposite parties, and discords and dissensions. Thomas Jefferson remarked that an association of men who will not quarrel with one another is a thing which never yet existed, and that is still true for every free association we know anything about. Out of these disagreements, political parties spring naturally, consolidate, and then keep things going, wheels turning. That's the way it is here. Maybe Tom Creasy would like to change it: we wouldn't.

It is high time that those elected to high office stopped calling politics bad names. The survival of a democracy, the survival of even a student democracy, depends for its life on politicians, and politicians, from the president of the student body down should face their responsibility to the democratic system which put them in office.

If the word "leadership" means anything to President Creasy, it should mean, not scorn, but vocal and frequent support for the student political system. The lesson of history is that a community without political parties sooner or later pays a heavy penalty. Viewed in that light, the campus party system becomes, not a "necessary evil" but an essential condition to campus freedom.

A Fleishman By Any Other Name

And while we're talking politics, shed a tear for the University Party, poor, mistreated juto that it is. It is not enough that the Student Party should have a whopping Legislature majority and practically exclusive power in the dormitories. Now the UP learns it must put up with Joel Fleishman Gene Cook, and Jim Turner for four more years. These names have been the Big Three Thorns in the UP side; now that they are graduated, or on the point of graduation, what happens? Why, the Student Party finds three men with these identical names in their ranks and promptly nominates them to freshman class offices. It will probably be good for dorm votes 'til 1958! There just ain't no political justice for the harried old UP. We've checked: Only one Tom Creasy in the whole student directory.

Carolina Front

Forum Brings Speakers From Both Parties

Louis Kraar

THE CAROLINA Forum, the student group that brings speakers to campus, invited more Republicans than Democrats this year.

Despite columnist David Mundy's attack on the nonpartisan group, Forum records show that the organization is anything but "a speaker's bureau for the left wing of the Democrat Party."

Mundy objected to the fact that the Forum brings speakers from the field of politics. He said that the group was wasting student money because so few sudents attended the programs. And Mundy argued that Chairman Joel Fleishman has been able to "make invaluable political contacts" through his Forum business.

Let's look at the record.

Last year the Forum sponsored three speakers—Democratic Sen. Russell Long, Republican Attorney-General Herbert Brownell, and non partisan diplomat Sir Roger Makins, ambassador from Great Britian. What could be fairer politically?

This year 24 Democrats and 30 Republicans were invited to speak on campus. When the initial refusals came in, 30 GOP speakers turned Carolina down, while only five Democrats said they couldn't speak here.

Mundy's objection to having speakers from politics because "you can find them on radio, television, and in the newreels" is, it seems to me, a good argument for having these speakers. The speakers answer student questions after their talks and chat with students at receptions later in the evening. What could teach us more about current politics?

The argument that few students attend the speeches—if applied to other activities supported by student funds—would mean that few student activities would be retained. Like any other citizens of any other community, most students simply aren't interested in many of the things going on about them. But that's a shortcoming of man — not the Carolina Forum.

As far as Fleishman's political future and the contracts he makes by traveling for the Forum, I can only say what Fleishman himself says: "Even if it were true, most of the people I see in government won't be there when I'm out of the Navy."

BECAUSE OF the great criticism of my column on the recent Student Party split and the possibility of a third campus political party, I have a standing offer to make to any student on campus—politician or not—about whom I may write.

If anybody about whom I write feels he (or she) has been unfairly treated, I will open this column to them upon request. I made this offer to both Joel Fleiishman and Manning Muntzing this week. So far, neither of them have accepted. The offer still stands.

This reporter has always believed in student government and campus politics. It is because of this firm belief in them that I have tried to write the truth about them—regardless of party. This has not always been a popular task.

The column on the Student Party was not a mistake. It is entirely correct in every detail. And if any members of the SP would like to disagree, this column is open to them.

The David Reid leniency bill will reach the Legislature floor tonight after much committee debate. Reid, with a patience not often seen in campus politics, has been trying to tell his legislative associates that giving students a second chance will not undermine the Honor System.

This reporter, who believes there can be little honor in a system that doesn't grant mercy, urges the Legislature to support the leniency bill.

'He's A Liar'

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Generous Doug McKay, the likeable Secretary of the Interior, let loose a blast at me the other day for describing him as generous in selling part of the Rogue River National Forest to a private mining company and for considering the releasing of the Navy's and Interior Department's oil reserve in Alaska to private oil company exploitation.

This is the first time I hve been called a liar by a member of the Eisenhower Cabinet—an "honor" frequently bestowed upon me during the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. The fact that the Eisenhower administration has been so mild-mannered has caused my wife to insinuate that perhaps the old man was slipping.

Of course, generous Doug McKay was a little more adroit with his language than some of his democratic predecessors. They fired blunder-buss broadsides of earthy words not to be found in the dictionary. Secretary McKay, on the other hand, reached into websters and pulled out such choice, high-falutin terms as "calumnies of this columnist!" and "sinister innuendo."

Now the fact is—all kidding aside—that I have enjoyed the respite from name-calling under Eisenhower. Tough-skinned as I am supposed to be, actually I don't relish having this type of bonquet hurled in my direction. And though I am convinced that Secretary McKay has been far too generous with the public domain and will illustrate this point further and more conclusively later, I still don't relish being called names by such a nice guy as Doug McKay.

The Liar Scoreboard

I suppose, however, that this is inevitable. For any newspaperman worth his salt in Washington necessarily must step on people's toes. He must offend people. And when he does, naturally they get mad and hurl epithets.

Clinton McKinnon, publisher of the Los Angeles News, asked me the other day what the score was onthe name - calling business, and here is part of the "you're-a-liar" tabulation.

CONGRESSMAN BRAMBLETT of California hurled the liar charge and also sued for libel to the tune of $1,000,000 when this writer accused him of taking kickbacks. A jury convicted him criminally just the same.

ATTORNEY GENERAL FRED N. HOWSER of California also used the liar charge and sued for $350.000 when this writer charged him with taking money from a Long Beach gambler. A jury found that I had told the truth.

SEN. ELMER THOMAS of Oklahoma called me a liar when I reported that he had been speculating on the cotton market from his privileged position of Chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee. Two years later the Agriculture Department officially confirmed this, and Senator Thomas was defeated by the people of Oklahoma.

SENATOR MCCARTHY of Wisconsin called me a liar and all sorts of other names from the safety of the Senate floor after I reported that he received a $10,000 fee from Lustron for a brief Housing Pamphlet. Since then, a Senate Committee passing on McCarthy's record has confirmed this up to the hilt.

CONGRESSMAN PARNELL

a new twist . . .

THOMAS of New Jersey denied kickbacks and callled me a liar, but went to jail because of those kickbacks.

JOHN MARAGON, the influence peddler, also called me a liar for exposing his operations, but ended in jail as a result of that expose.

TANFORAN RACETRACK OFFICIALS called me a liar and threatened a libel suit when their violation of housing regulations (in connivance with Maragon and Gen. Harry Vaughan) was exposed. They went to jail.

Harry Had A Name

PRESIDENT TRUMAN gave a new twist to the liar charge after I critized his friend and aide, General Vaughan, for accepting an Argentine Medal at a time when Dictator Peron was maneuvering to get a large loan from the United States. Afterward, Congress refused to approve Vaughan's medal, and a Senate committee found Vaughan guilty of considerable influence wirepulling, giving away deep freezes, demoting Army officers who tangled with John Maragon, and getting building materials for the Tanforan Racetrack at a time when veterans were supposed to have preference.

PATENOTRE TAX FRAUDS —Attorney for the Patenotre family called me a liar and wrote to every newspaper threatening a libel suit after this writer exposed their fraud in connection with the sale of the Philadelphia Inquirer. Later the Patenotres pleaded guilty and paid a $1,000,000 fine. (Present owners of the inquirer were not involved.)

CONGRESSMAN ANDREW MAY of Kentucky called me a liar so many times that it got monotonous in connection with his various under-the-table operations with war contracts. He went to jail.

CONGRESSMAN BREHM of Ohio threatened a libel suit over this column's story that he accepted kickbacks. He was convicted.

LOUISIANA SCANDALS—When Bribery and corruption was charged by this column regarding Gov. Richard Leche of Louisiana and other members of the old Huey Long gang, the charge of liar echoed all over Louisiana. In the end, all the officials named went to jail, including not only the Governor but the President of Louisiana State University.

Now I don't want to give the impression that I am always right. I'm not. Being human, I make mistakes. But I endeavor when I do make them to correct them.

Apropos of that, I want to correct an unfair impression I gave regarding Congresswoman Leonor Sullivan of Missouri the other day when I reported that she had inserted 13 pages in the Post-Congress Congressional Record at some cost to the taxpayers. While she did make the insertion, I now find that it consisted of the full text of the Federal Trade Commission's report on coffee prices, which certainly the housewife should have a chance to read. Mrs. Sullivan's insertion made distribution of the report easier and I am delighted to make this clear.

However, regarding Secretary McKay, much as I like him, I am still convinced he has been much too generous in leasing out the public domain. Tomorrow I'll report on this further.

Wolfe Seen From England: 'Magnificent, Raw Vigor'

Ed Yoder

Thomas Wolfe, Carolina's native son and novelist, has had his share of critic-trouble. Whenever domestic Wolfe cultists have despaired at derogatory criticism they have turned and said: Look what a fabulous reputation Wolfe has in Europe!

Is this true? Generally, it is. European critics have always looked at Wolfe as one of the mammoth, if not the mammoth figure in American literature. If one reason for this special admiration could be singled out, I suppose it would be that they see Wolfe as one of the few American writers who detached himself from European preoccupation—who saw himself working in a native literature that was to America as Chaucer's literature was to England. It was young.

Wolfe's reputation on the continent of Europe has been better, however, than it has been in Great Britain. Wolfe's first novel, Look Homeward Angel, was translated into the Scandanavian languages, German, French, and Spanish very soon after it was published in America and England.

However, a recent special edition of the London Times literature supplement, crustily entitled, "American Writing Today—Its Independence and Vigour," tends to bear out the relative lightness of Wolfe's recognition in England—at least as seen through the critic's eye.

This supplement, whose fiction section devotes many paragraphs to the work of novelists Hemingway, Fitzgerald, and Faulkner, turns a rather cold shoulder to Wolfe, together with, of all people, Sinclair Lewis. "There appears to be an increasing conviction," says the Times critic, "that Sinclair Lewis will not bear serious re-reading and that Thomas Wolfe's faults are more trying than they seemed at first." Other than this too brief appraisal, the special edition gives Wolfe a blank.

Later on in the section, though, Wolfe's Look Homeward is one of those works picked by the editors for a little retrospective criticism. Reviews of novels like The Great Gatsby, by F. Scott Fitzgerald, A Farewell to Arms, by Ernest Hemingway, The Ides of March by Thornton Wilder—novels that that have had big opening seasons in Great Britain—appear, along with the original Times comments on Look Homeward Angel in the back of the supplement.

The review, unsigned but searching and perceptive, poses many of the pro-con issues that have since risen to importance in connection with Thomas Wolfe's work.

The article, which appeared July 24, 1930, commented:

"Such odysseys of youth are not uncommen: and by this time the crudities of the American scene are so familiar that the strange, squalid, extravagant life of the Gant family in the hill town of Altamont . . . will hold no particular surprise: what is amazing is the pressure under which this narrative is shot forth. To use a homely American metaphor, it might be called a 'gusher': for Mr. Wolfe's words come spouting up with all the force of a subterranean flood.

"Such native force is rare in England now: and it is impossible to regard this unstinting output of magnificent, raw vigour without a thrill and a hope that it will be channeled to great art."

To the unknown reviewer the death-scene of Eugene Gant's brother Ben is most magnificent.

"Mr. Wolfe," the evaluation goes on, "reveals himself as one who has fed upon honeydew and everything else under the sun. And his most astonishing passages, crammed though they are with the clangorous echoes of English poetry and prose, too often falling into sheer meter, come when, in contemplation of his past, (Eugene) sends out a cry of lyrical agony for lost beauty."

Praising the "Marlowesque energy and beauty of Wolfe's poetry, the reviewer poses what to become one of the great Wolfe issues:

"What is going to be done," he asks, "with this great talent, so hard, so sensitive, so unsentimental, so easily comprehending and describing every sordidness of the flesh and spirit, so proudly rising to the heights? Knowing the times and the temptations of the times, we may well watch its fresh emergence with anxiety; for if Mr. Wolfe can be wasted there is no hope for today."

Probably the most noteworthy qualities of the review, seen over the passing of some 24 years, is the critic's sympathetic recognition that Wolfe is to be viewed largely as a poet. This is one view of Wolfe to which critics in this country have been blind, understandably since his work was first published in prose format. Much of his writing, however, has epic meter and content. I sometimes wonder whether Wolfe, if he lived, could have been persuaded to write an epic poem.

If true to form, it could have changed the course of Wolfe criticism.

On Modern Art And Egotism As The Exit

Ron Levin

We were all sitting in Philosophy 41 the other day at ten o'clock discussing the plight of modern man. Our text was Ideas Have Consequences by Robert Weaver, and brother, believe me, if you want to be shaken up and shaken up good, you might take a gander at what Weaver says. With regard to modern art, the author criticizes rather sharply the egotism prevalent in most of the various art forms. Instead of being an interpretation of the wonder and beauty of life or of the love of man, art has come to be little more than a receptacle for the emotional catharsis of modern man. Because of the fast and quite false mode of life existent today in the majority of esistent today inthe majority of societies, particularly our own, the inner desires and needs of man are repressed to such an extent that a torrent of fustration builds up inside and must have an outlet. This precisely the point that Weaver fails to notice.

It is because of the thwarting of these same desires that man has sought, found, and clung to this last possible outlet. Thus feelings of aggression, hostility, sexual impulses, and others are circumvented from their original path and channelled into the line of creative endeavour.

Many philosophers point out today that this factor is a basic one in the decline of modern man . . . this egotism in art. Yet, if all the various forms of expression in music, painting, and ther art forms were taken away from man, it would not be too long before these desires sought another exit . . . any exit available. Instead of poems like Tamar by Robinson Jeffers, you might have a crime of violence very much like the one narrated ing the poem. In his poem, Apology for Bad Dreams. Jeffers explains his position as the modern artist . . . and one quite similar to those held by many others of the same ilk.

In short, until man can retrace his steps somewhat and get back on the intended track, this "egotism in art" will have to do. Without it, there is no chance at all of recovery from our, and I say our . . . not his, present dilemma.

Congratulations on standing up for hte United Nations! It's high time somebody did. Here we are, 150,000,000 Americans, huddled on our continent, scanning the skies like Walt Kelly's Churchy and half-expecting immediate destruction to come raining down on our heads and what do we do about it? Nothing!

The UN remains man's only real hope for a lasting peace. I don't think you'll have much success on this campus or anything else, but keep plugging. It is hopeful to see somebody speak out for the UN in a day when Sen. Knwland is talking about the United States withdrawing from it.

Turning The Tables On 'The New Yorker'

(An excerpt from a New Yorker profile of the president of the National Broadcasting Company.)

When Weaver goes into high gear in his efforts to fill himself with information, he presents a dynamic picture of the communicator in domestic surroundings. With an open book on his lap, and open magazine by his side, other books and magazines strewn all around him, a glowing television screen in front of him, and a radio going at his elbow, he soaks the latest intelligence; his ears attuned to the loud speaker, his eyes flitting from book to screen and from screen to magazine, he simultaneously looks, listens, reads and thinks.

Looks, listens, reads and what?

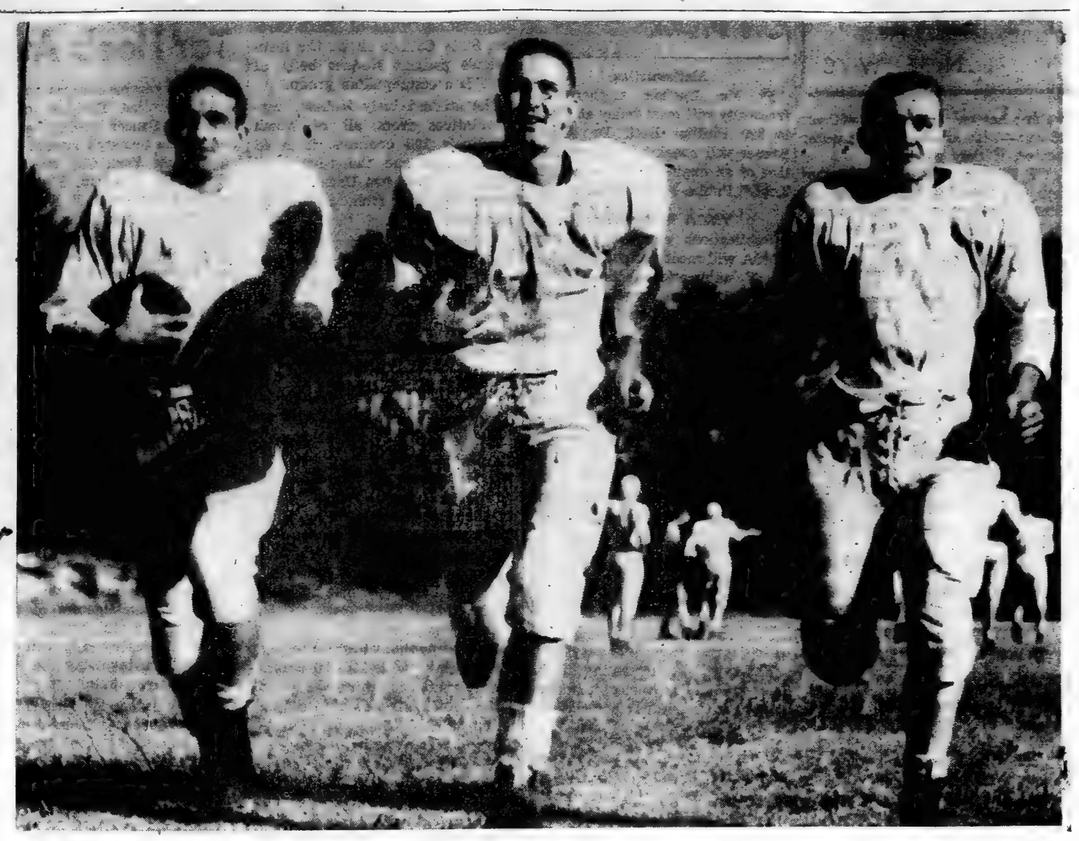
Tar Heels Stress Defense For Deacon Tilt

Return Of Koman And Parker Bolsters Carolina's Chances

Colorful Half-Time Ceremonies Planned With 53 School Bands To Participate

By BOB DILLARD

The Tar Heels, seeking their second victory of the season continue to stress defense in this week's practice sessions. Barclay, who was keenly disappointed in his team's play last week, is counting on the return of Bill Koman and Larry Parker to bolster the Tar Heel's sagging offense. To add to the hope of victory against Wake Forest, tackle Jack Maultsby, who was a standout against Maryland, despite the fact that he was not in top shape, will be back at his peak.



Barclay could not explain his team's total collapse against the Terrapins last week. He said in a statement released to the press, "I know they can play better football than that and they do on the practice field." In evidence of his words the varsity pushed the freshmen over the field yesterday afternoon in a rough and tumble practice session. However, the passing defense did not look too sharp as freshman Buddy Sasser and his cohorts provided opposition for the Carolina backfield.

Last year, in one of their best performances of the year, the Tar Heels downed Wake Forest by a score of 18-13, with the aid of Connie Gravitte's breakaway running. Connie is the team's leading ground gainer this year, and until the Maryland game, led the AC Conference.

The up and down Deacons, who outplayed Maryland, only to gain a heartbreaking tie, and stomped N. C. State 32-0, will be odds-on favorites on the basis of past results. The Deacons' season's record is two wins, one loss and one tie, compared with Carolina's one win, two losses and one tie.

Ken Keller, who took over the major ball carrying role against Maryland, was back in practice yesterday afternoon, after sustaining a shoulder separation at the hands of the Terrapin squad. TeeDee Bullock and Albert Long will again divide the quarterbacking, with Marshall Newman running again at fullback.

colorful halftime program with 51 high school bands and the bands of the two schools participating, will be a feature of the game.

Pictured above are three good reasons why the University of North Carolina freshman football team is rated as one of the best aggregations ever to bear the Tar Baby monicker. From left to right: Joe Temple, 5'11", 180 pound halfback from Valdese; John Gaca, 6-foot, 195-pound fullback from Munhall, Pa.; and Steve Kupchick, 5'10", 175-pound halfback from Scranton, Pa.

Frosh Booters Edged By Duke

The UNC Frosh soccer team succumbed to superior forces yesterday as Duke's frosh booters took home a 4-1 victory.

Carolina's lone tally was by Center-forward Covell. Duke's scores were made by Christmas, who garnered two, Sadler, and Gauld.

Coach Harry Pawlik cited Harris, Blair, and Foster for their fine performances. The frosh's next game will be Oct. 29 against NC State here.

Washington & Lee Tops UNC Booters, 4-0, In Virginia

The UNC soccer team suffered a sound thumping at the hands of Washington and Lee College yesterday by a score of 4 to 0.

The tilt was played at the Virginia school. The Tar Heels travel to Roanoke today for a game with Roanoke College.

Frosh Runners Defeat Duke

By RAY LINKER

Carolina's Freshman cross country team scored their second straight win of the early season here yesterday by turning back the Blue Imps of Duke, 21-34.

Richard Rigsbee, Everett Whatley and Ben Williams copped the first three places for the Tar Babies, while three Duke runners—Ted Berger, Dave Pearl, and Paul Bollman—took the next three places.

Whatley and Rigsbee started out together and ran the majority of the race that way, but Rigsbee pulled away slightly during the last half mile to finish half a second ahead with a time of 12:07.5 for the 2.2 miles.

Carolina's Gray Nichols was only a few yards behind Pearl and Bollman as they neared the finish, but failed to overtake them coming down the home stretch as the three of them finished with a second of each other.

Bailey Liipfert followed at a short distance to take eighth for the victors, and Duke's Tom Hassler and Bob Nordie came across together for ninth and tenth places.

The meet left Duke with a record of no wins and two losses, and enabled the Tar Babies to collect their second victory in three outings.

The summary: 1—Rigsbee, C. C (12:07.5); 2, Whatley, C (12:08); 3, Williams, C (12:43); 4, Berger, D, (12:53); 5, Pearl, D, (13:04); 6, Bollman, D, (13:04.5); 7, Nichols, C, (13:05); 8, Liipfert, C, (13:17); 9, Hassler, D, (13:24); 10, Nordlie, D, (13:24); 11, Sylvester, C, (13:39); 12, Rose, C, (14:13); 13, Glover, C, (14:52).

Los Angeles Rams Top NFL In Total Offense

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20 (UP)—With one third of their season tucked away, the Los Angeles Rams today led the National Football League in total offense with 1736 yards gained—537 on rushing and 1199 through the 184.

Another West Coast entry—the San Francisco 49ers—were only 145 yards behind the Rams. San Francisco has gained 954 yards overland and 637 by passing.

Frosh Resume Action At Virginia Tomorrow

North Carolina's Frosh football team which was forced to cancel out its scheduled game with Wake Forest last week due to Hurricane Hazel, swings back into action Friday night against the University of Virginia freshmen in Charlottesville.

The Tar Babies have had only one game to date, a 25-12 win over South Carolina.

Carolina Coach Ralph Floyd, whose squad has been troubled by practice inuries, is expected to have his full forces ready for use against the Baby Cavaliers.

End Buddy Payne, who hails from Norfolk, Va., has been judged ready to return to his right end position, as has left end John Schroeder. Both suffered leg injuries in a scrimmage session last week.

With Payne and Schroeder at the ends, Floyd has indicated that he will go with the same line up he used against South Carolina. That line up had Leo Russavage and Phil Blazer at the tackles, Hap Setzer and Jack Lineberger at the guards, John Haywood at center, Buddy Sasser at quarterback, Joe Tempe and Steve Kupchick at the halves and Howard Williams at fullback.

Haywood, a 200 pounder from South Norfolk, is the only other Virginian in the line up besides Payne. Sonny Forbes, a reserve end from Virginia Beach, is slated for part-time action.

Cross Country Meet Saturday

Coach Dale Ransom's North Carolina cross country team, now on a two-meet winning streak following an opening loss to N. C. State, will play host to Maryland and Wake Forest here Saturday morning in a three-way meet.

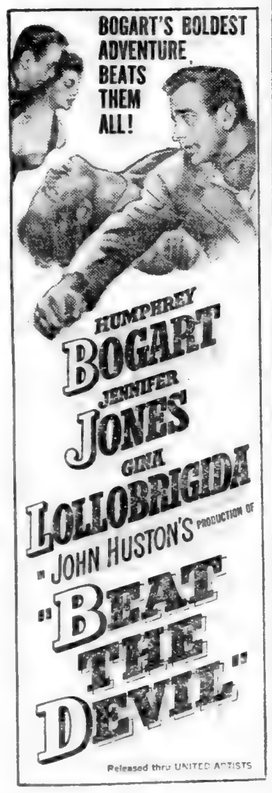
Starting time has been set for 10:45 a.m., with a freshman event between North Carolina and Wake Forest to precede the varsity contest.

North Carolina's two wins, much on the strength of the running of soph Jim Beatty and veteran Bob Barden, have been by perfect winning scores of 15 points.

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

Yesterday's column seems to have aroused ill will from certain quarters towards this corner. Some one even went so far as to ask, "whose side are you on?" Such a question is superfluous. I'm just another Carolina Student who goes out on Saturday afternoon and roots for the home team. Occasionally, I like to bring home a winner. But I'm not trying to condemn anyone when we lose. It is a well-known fact that Coach George Barclay is in the process of rebuilding Carolina's football machine, and he has got his hands full.



However, it has never been the opinion of the press that a college athletic systm is sacrosanct. Students here at Carolina are allowed to rate members of the faculty. By the same token, it is their privilege to rate paid members of the athletic system. It will be a sad state of affairs when an American sports fan is denied the right to bawl out a baseball umpire or second-guess a football coach.

But it is not my intention to make a habit of second-guessing anybody. Occasional observations that seem to hold interest for the reader will be made. Such was the case yesterday when the question was posed, "What was wrong with Connie Gravitte last Saturday?" Gravitte was the leading ground-gainer in the Atlantic Coast Conference going into the Maryland game, yet he played about five minutes, running the ball once. Many people asked me about that, so I thought it was worth mentioning. Actually, there may have been a very sound reason for his riding the bench.

The Daily Tar Heel is published for the benefit of the student body. It was not designed to serve as a publicity organ for the Carolina Athletic Association. Football teams were established, originally, from the student body. The student body reserves the privilege of cheering or criticizing their sports teams when they see fit. Nobody, at least not I, is going to criticize the players. They are just students like the rest of us; except they carry the double burden of trying to get an education and, at the same time, getting their brains jarred five days a week at Navy Field, and somewhere else Saturday.

This corner is not blaming anyone for Carolina's grid misfortunes. Nobody wins them all. And, except for State, nobody loses them all. We are due to win a few, and the Athletic Association is doing all it can to produce a winner. But I sincerely hope they don't mind a little criticism along with the cheers.

STUDYING MADE SIMPLE

I have passed my thirty-fifth birthday, and my dewlaps droop and my transmission needs oil. More and more my eyes turn inward, reminiscing, sifting the past, browsing lovingly among my souvenirs, for at my time of life memories are all a man has.

And most precious are the memories of college. It still makes my pulses quicken and my old glands leap to life just to think of it. Ah, I was something then! "Swifty" my friends used to call me, or "Rakehell" or "Candle-at-both-Ends" or "Devil Take the Hindmost." My phone was ringing all the time. "Come on, Devil-Take-the-Hindmost," a cohort would say, "let's pile into the old convertible and live up a storm. I know a place that serves all-bran after hours."

So it went—night after mad night, kicks upon kicks, sport that wrinkled care derides, laughter holding both his sides. "Come on, "Candle-at-Both-Ends," my companions would plead, "sing us another two hundred verses of Sweet Violets."

"No, my companions," I would reply with a gentle but firm smile, "we must turn homeward, for the cock has long since crowed."

"'Twas not the cock," they would answer, laughing merrily. "'Twas Sam Leghorn doing his imitation of a chicken!"

And, sure enough, 'twas. Crazy, madcap Sam Leghorn. How I miss his gaiety and wit! I never tired of hearing his imitation of a chicken, nor he of giving it. I wonder what's become of him. Last I heard he was working as a weathervane in Tacoma.

Oh, we were a wild and jolly gang in those days. There was Sam Leghorn with his poultry imitations. There was Mazda Watts who always wore a lampshade on her head. There was Freddie Como who stole a dean. There was Cap Queeg who always carried two steel marbles in his hand. There was Emily Hamp who gilded her house mother.

Yes, we were wild and jolly, and the wildest and jolliest was I . . . But not right away. I blush to admit that in my freshman year I was dull, stodgy, and normal. I finally corrected this loathesome condition, but for a while it was touch and go. And, dear reader—especially dear freshman reader—be warned: it can happen to you.

The makers of Philip Morris have bought this space so I can bring you a message each week. There is no more important message I can give you than the following: College can be beautiful. Don't louse it up with studying.

That was my mistake. At first, cowed by college, I studied so much that I turned into a dreary, blinking creature, subject to dry-mouth and fainting fits. For a year this dismal condition prevailed—but then I learned the real function of college. And what is that? I'll tell you what: to prepare you to face the realities of the world. And what do you need to face the realities of the world? I'll tell you what—poise, that's what you need. And how do you get poise? I'll tell you how: not by keeping your nose in a book, you may be sure!

Relax! Live! Enjoy! . . . That's how you get poise. Of course you have to study, but be poised about it. Don't be like some clods who spend every single night buried in a book. Not only are they not learning poise; they are also eroding their eyeballs. The truly poised student knows better than to make the whole semester hideous with studying. He knows that the night before the exam is plenty of time to study.

Yes, I've heard that lots of people have condemned cramming. But have you heard who these people are? They are the electric light and power interests, that's who! They want you to sit up late and study every night so you'll use more electricity and enrich their bulging coffers. Don't be a sucker!

Clearly, cramming is the only sensible way to study. But beware! Even cramming can be overdone. Take it easy. On the night before your exam, eat a hearty dinner. Then get a date and go out and eat another hearty dinner. Then go park someplace and light up a Philip Morris. Enjoy the peaceful pleasure it offers. Don't go home until you're good and relaxed.

Once at home, relax. Do not, however, fall asleep. This is too relaxed. To insure wakefulness, choose a chair that is not too comfortable. For example, take a chair with nails pointing up through the seat—or a chair in which somebody is already sitting.

Place several packs of Philip Morris within easy reach. Good mild tobacco helps you to relax, and that's what Philip Morris is—good mild tobacco. But Philip Morris is more than just good mild tobacco; it is also cigarette paper to keep the good mild tobacco from spilling all over the place.

Now you've got the uncomfortable chair and the Philip Morris. Now you need light. Use the lit end of your Philip Morris. Do not enrich the electric power interests.

Read your textbook in a slow, poised manner. Do not underline. It reduces the re-sale value of your book. Always keep your books in prime re-sale condition; you never know when you'll need getaway money.

As you read you will no doubt come across many things you don't understand. But don't panic. Relax. Play some records. Remove a callus. Go out and catch some night crawlers.

Relax. Be poised. Stay loose. And remember—if things really close in, you can always take up teaching.

VICTORY VILLAGE NEWS

IF YOU ARE LOOKING for a safe depository for your young ones during home football games or on Saturday nights, the Village Nursery is providing baby sitting service during these times.

THE NURSERY will care for children from 1 to 5 p. m. on Saturdays during home games and from 7 to midnight every Saturday night. For the games charges will be $1 per child, and $1.50 for two children of the same family, and for Saturday night charges will be 35 cents per hour. For the night service contact Mrs. Mildred Phillips at 8-0611, or 8-0125.

HURRICANE DAMAGE to the barracks on 179 Jackson Circle that is now under repair will cost several hundred dollars, P. L. Burch, manager of the Village, said yesterday. He said the repairs will probably be finished by today or Friday.

THE ENTIRE CORNER of the barracks was sheared off by a falling tree, taking off a room on the upper floor apartment occupied by the Howard Rolls and a room on the lower floor apartment of the H. A. Morse's. A new mahogany bedroom suit belonging to the Rolls was totally demolished. Two drums of kerosene were knocked from their racks on the upper floor and burst upon hitting the ground.

THERE WAS NO ONE hurt by the storm in the Village, Burch said, but there were at least 100 trees blown over, resulting in a lot of roof damage and some very closescrapes. Five trees landed on UK's but resulting damages were only holes in the roofs made by the limbs.

PRAISING THE SPIRIT of the villagers during the storm, Burch said that several students with electrical experience in their backgrounds came to the office after the height of the storm had passed, volunteered their services and went to work with the crews of the power company.

THERE WAS A SCARE during the hurricane when a tree fell across a power line and started burning, but before any damage could be done, a power company crew came out and cut the current off.

MR. BURCH ANNOUNCED that villagers who already have a 220 volt current installation in their apartments can have their oil hot water heaters replaced—without charge—with an electric hot water heater, if they so desire.

OF THE 96 APARTMENTS that had coal burning units, many of these already have been replaced with oil units and the rest will soon be changed. Thirty units have been installed this fall, Burch said.

THOSE APARTMENTS which have gas or electric cooking units will have oil cooking units installed only after their present occupants have moved.

THIS COLUMN WILL try to act as a sounding board for villager's views o nthe community, education, football games and the virtues of married life as a student. Write to this column, care of this paper, if you feel like it.

New ideas must be tried to promote improvements, Warren said. He urged the passage of the bill.

The speaker said that premeditation was hard to determine and the Honor Council now shows some small amount of discretion. Warren told the group he had not cheated since he came to the University and he believed there was no excuse for it.

Sen. Reid gave his approval of the Honor System, saying he was strongly in favor of it, but the environment was responsible for actions and an individual needed a second chance.

Placing no dividing line between honor and dishonor, Reid said he believed the individual to be more important. Leniency would strengthen rather than weaken the present system, he said.

United Nations Flag's Flying Over UNC Campus This Week

By J. D. McRORIE

The Demon Deacons of Wake Forest are bringing war to Kenan Stadium tomorrow. High above the war being fought on the playing field will be a symbol of peace —the United Nations flag.

This is United Nations Week and promotion in observance of U N Week on the UNC campus is being handled by the YMCA.

The card section at half time ceremonies of tomorrow's game will include a salute to the United Nations. At that time there will be a reminder over the public address system of the importance of the UN.

There will be no other public ceremonies concerning the United Nations.

The Cosmopolitan Club is planning a picnic Sunday, celebrating United Nations Day that day.

Monday the UN flag will dance to the breezes whipped up atop South Building. Ray Long, working with the committee in promoting United Nations Week on the campus, got permission to raise the UN flag for the celebration.

Several UNC students are on leave of duty from their field work. Bob Bogue, World Health Organization Advisor on Health Education in Egypt, a UN organization, is one. Bogue has just returned to the U. S. after five years of UN work in Egypt.

The United Nations is not only concerned with world peace. It is concerned with a total development of people—their economy, agriculture, food and welfare in general.

Specialized agencies, WHO for example, of which Bogue is advisor in Egypt, spell out how they develop. After the agency determines what is best, they petition the UN for help. The League of Women Voters of Chapel Hill is sponsoring a short, "Thialand's Stream of Life," to be shown at the local movie houses in conjunction with UN Week.

Yesterday a deputation of the YMCA and Cosmopolitan Club visited nearby Bethsda High School and presented a program celebrating United Nations Day.

Speakers of the group included Dr. Shafe, of Iran, a student in public health; M. N. Saddiqui, of Pakistan, a research assistant in statistics; Mike Furuhata, of Japan in BA school and Ram Desikan, of India, a graduate student in mathematics.

Third Musicale Announced

David Bar-Illan will be heard in concert here on Oct. 31 at 8 p.m. in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial.

Bar-Illan will appear here in the Petites Musicales series sponsored by the Dance Committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board.

A native of Haifa, Israel, Bar-Illan has been concertizing since the age of six. His stature as an artist of rare abilities and striking appeal has been firmly established in Israel, England, and, more recently, Canade and the United States.

The artist, who will give his Carnegie Hall debut on Dec. 1, has a background that includes winning the highest awards given by the Juilliard Conservatory and the Mannes College of Music. In June 1953, he was the recipient of the Coronation Year medal awarded during the coronation of Elizabeth II, the first time it has been given to a pianist who was not a citizen of the Commonwealth.

Last season wide critical acclaim was accorded Bar-Illan with such expert comment as "Possessing a whirlwind technique, an enormous amount of strength and energy.

Film Series Has Artists And Chaplin

By RUTH DALTON

A lecture on modern art and a burlesque on grand opera were mixed last night in the second of the Graham Memorial Activities Board's foreign film series in Carroll Hall.

The first of the films was the 1915 "Burlesque on Carmen," starring the young Charlie Chaplin. And he was at his best. Between intermittent kicking of the rivals for his decidedly flapperish Carmen and the coy fights over her affectations, the audience almost lost their chance to laugh at the typically witty printed dialogue.

This was definitely the silent speech movie at its height. But all was not silent. The musical score was also a burlesque on the classic melodies of Bizet. They were recognizable, but they were still jive.

Equally enjoyable, but in an entirely different mood was the second film, the French "Renoir to Picasso."

The English dialogue explained that Auguste Renoir represented a prototype for the sensual painter and brought out his proximity to the style of the ancient Greek sculptors.

Legislature Refers Controversial Honor Council Bill To Students

PRESIDENT TOM CREASY

. . . speaks on the state of the campus

Both Friends And Foes Of Bill Favor Referendum; Vote 23-15

By LLOYD SHAW

By a vote of 23-15, the student Legislature gave the students the decision of whether or not to pass the bill which "liberalizes punishment in first offense cheating cases." David Reid's bill comes before the students for a vote on November 16th.

Votes cast to put the bill before the students were cast by legislators both for and against the bill.

Reid said that "it was mentioned that students would not take serious interest in the bill." Answering this, he quoted Thomas Jefferson's statement: "The most honest and safe, if not the most wise depository of the public interest is the public itself."

Bev Webb asked if in the opinion of the speaker so grave a matter as the Honor Council should be put in the hands of a group Jefferson considered not always the wisest.

Reid was asked by another questioner, "Why did this amendment not occur to the speaker (Reid) before? Was it because he did not think that the bill would pass?"

Reid said that this consideration did enter in and that "no doubt, it (the bill) would not receive enough votes to override a veto. This bill shouldn't be stopped by one man's veto," he declared.

It was argued by several that referendums always passed. One legislator commented that a constitutional amendment has never failed to carry on this campus. Louis Brumfield (SP) said that a referendum would not definitely pass. He said he was against the bill but wanted it put before the people

Max Crohn (UP) said that he had not made up his mind on the bill, but thought the Legislature should decide.

Charlie Dean (SP) said the "students expressed their confidence in us, and I feel we should let the Legislature decide the matter."

Larry McElroy (SP), commenting on unthinking voters, said, "the unthinking voters voting yes and no will counterbalance each other."

Charlie Dean asked, if the voters have confidence to let the Legislature decide how to spend a $110,000 budget, why shouldn't the legislators decide this?

Warren (SP), a proponent of the original bill, thought the Legislature should decide.

The roll call vote of the legislators will be published tomorrow.

Summer School Fee

A bill establishing a Summer School Activities fee of $1.50 per term passed the Legislature with no negative votes.

The bill providing funds for a sophomore class dance also passed the Legislature.

A bill to abolish quizzes during fraternity rush week, a bill asking funds for the student audit board, and a bill establishing a Band Improvement Committee were introduced.

Creasy Hits Leniency Bill And Band Funds In Speech

By DICK CREED

"To become more lenient is, in a sense, to tolerate, and to tolerate is to condone."

With this statement as his theme President Tom Creasy last night reiterated to the student Legislature in his "State of the Campus" address his stand against a bill to provide leniency in the case of first offense violators of the honor system.

And later in the same session the Legislature decided to let the student body vote on the bill in a referendum. Creasy had indicated earlier this week that he would veto the bill if it were passed by the Legislature.

"There is no degree to honor," said Creasy. "In the words of Dr Frank Graham," he said, "we become what we tolerate."

The bill provides that the usual punishment for first offense violators will be probation for a period of not less than one semester.

Creasy said that if the bill were enacted, "those who feared suspension before will not fear a warning now." A person rehabilitated when he is sent away to "think about what he has done," he said.

Cases under the present system of courts are not "cut and dried," he said. "We rarely expel a student," he added.

The President also told the Legislators that the Consolidated University Student Council is working to reduce the "outrageous prices" charged by the book exchanges here and at State College. He said that a plan to reduce prices last year failed because State and Carolina did not present a "unified front to the Board of Trustees."

Creasy said that a committee is in the making to "prepare our case" against a raise in tuition. He said that the students here and at State and Woman's College have ""the support of faculty and administration" in opposing the suggested fee raise.

Progress is being made, said Creasy in the Foreign Student Exchange program. "We will probably have a student here from Goetingen University by next semester," he said. He added, however, that Goetingen is not yet able to receive a student from Carolina, but that it probably will be next year.

The University Band "is in dire need of funds to get back on its feet," said Creasy. The Band depreciates from one year to the next, he said, and "it is a disgrace" and "one of the worst things about Carolina. He said that the Band has done a "miraculous job" under the circumstances.

He said that for the last four years the Band has received a budget of less than $5,000. He asked that a study be made for the possibility of setting up a permanent source of funds for the band and "a few band scholarships" for students from good high school bands

Denmark's Visiting Professor Wants U. S. Optimism To Stick

By JACKIE GOODMAN

"What I really wish is to be influenced by the American optimism if it still exists. I am tired of the European pessimism."

This is the hope of Professor Sven Clausen, Professor of Jurisprudence at the University of Copenhagen, who is here under a Fulbright scholarship.

Commenting upon his stay in American so far, Dr. Clausen said, "In Europe we often wonder why the Americans take ice water, which we regard as a dangerous drink. We also wonder why they drive in cars for one or two blocks. Now, I understand better, having felt the heat and the distances. We understand better when we go and see."

"I have the habit of going places where thoughts have been born and nourished," said Dr. Clausen. He described visits to Carthage, home of St. Augustine, Basel, where Erasmus lived, Bologna, where Roman Law was revived, Levden and Delpht.

Dr. Clausen mentioned that in Leyden there is a marble slab on the church in memory of the minister who, in 1620, sent his congregation on the first lap of their famous voyage to America. "Now we are at the other end of that journey, and when we leave, we shall certainly know more about the results, both spiritual and political, of the famous emigration," commented Dr. Clausen.

Concerning differences between Europeans and Americans, Dr. Clausen said, "I find the American a more hospitable and gregarious sort of man than the Europeans I have met. But then again, you must remember that there is no such a thing as a European. It does not exist. We find that many things here differ from our homely ways in Scandinavia, but we find things even more strange when we go from Scandinavia to Italy, France and Germany. Between many European countries lies an ideology, but between Scandinavia and the United States lies only the Atlantic Ocean.

"I think it is cheaper for an undergraduate to live in Copenhagen than here," remarked Dr. Clausen on the differences between UNC and the University of Copenhagen. "As far as I can see, an undergraduate here will have to pay about $2 a day for his meals in the cafeterias. This corresponds to 15 crowns in Scandinavia. However, no Danish student could pay 450 crowns a month for his meals. He simply has not got the money, nor have his parents. But then again the salaries at home are smaller. Perhaps the differences are not so very great after all, except when you go abroad.

"Certainly no undergraduate in Copenhagen has got a car—but what would he do with it? Two hours in any direction will bring him to the shore and a snug old harbor, and there is the end of it," said Dr. Clausen. "The distances over here make me afraid In fact, I like our own modest distances."

Legislature Interviews End

All students who are interested in attending the annual North Carolina State Student Legislature as delegates and who have not yet been interviewed by the selection board will have their last opportunity to be interviewed today.

The selection board will meet this afternoon from 2 until 4:30 in the Woodhouse Conference Room of Graham Memorial.

The questions which the selection board will ask applicants are on primarily political topics. Interest, presentation and factuality of information will be the criteria by which the board makes its selections.

The Legislature, composed of delegates from all colleges and universities in North Carolina, will gather in Raleigh on Nov. 18, 19 and 20 to debate and make resolutions concerning matters of education, North Carolina, the nation and the world.

Rushing's Over

Over 400 UNC men pledged fraternities this week. Part of them plus Eleanor Saunders' campus society column, are listed today on Page 4. The rest will be printed tomorrow.

Composers May Compete For $1,000

Composers and would-be composers, professionals and amateurs, have a chance to win a thousand dollars, according to the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra.

The third annual Benjamin Award of $1,000, administered by the North Carolina Symphony Society, will be awarded to one composer of "restful and reposeful" music. The contest is open to citizens of the United States, Canada and Mexico, who are interested in creating works that fulfill the artistic purposes set forth in the conditions. The closing date for entering compositions is Dec. 31, Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, director-conductor of the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, said recently.

In addition to winning the $1,000 the winner is also assured of admission to at least one performance by the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra during its 1955 season.

Compositions must be "restful and reposeful" and are not to exceed 10 minutes in length. They must be written in one movement but should not be written for piano and orchestra or with any choral parts.

A $5 entrance fee is levied for office handling charges. Only conductor's scores (ink copies) which are prepaid should be submitted. All entries should be sent to Box 1211, Chapel Hill, N. C., and postmarked not later than Dec. 31.

Specific details of the award, which was set up in 1952 by Edward B. Benjamin, civic leader and music patron of New Orleans and Greensboro, can be had by writing North Carolina Symphony headquarters at Chapel Hill.

Paraguayan Gets Altrusa Grant-In-Aid

Miss Maria Elina Olmedo Jimenez was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Altrusa Club of Chapel Hill last night at the Carolina Inn.

Miss Olmedo was recently awarded a grant-in-aid by the Altrusa International, so that she would be able to continue her cultural studies at UNC.

Mrs. O. David Garvin, president of the Chapel Hill Club, presided at the meeting. Miss Mabel Brittain, chairman of Altrusa Information, reviewed the activities of Altrusa International and congratulated the club on this its birthday meeting. The local club was organized in 1947.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. Katherine Carmichael, chairman of International Relations for the club, who gave information on the grants-in-aid program, instituted as a cultural service for Latin American women. Ninety-nine Latin American women have been awarded $58,000 in grants-in-aid in the last nine years. These grants range from $250 to $750. Miss Olmedo is the second student here to hold such a grant, said Dr. Carmichael.

Miss Olmedo spoke on the status of woman in Paraguay, her native country. While women do not yet vote in Paraguay, they are active in social and civic circles, she said. Cultural activities are as varied as those in the United States, and many women's associations have charitable and social goals, she said.

We Like Ike! (Well, Anyway, We're Trying To)

"We must help to harmonize the divergent views of the many free, self-governing nations, and without encroaching upon rights which all people cherish."

That, believe it or not, was the President of the United States talking. And we like the sound of his words.

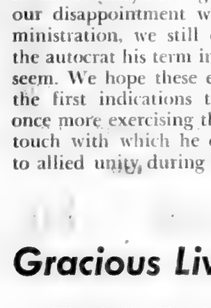
Mr. Eisenhower spoke that sentence night before last in New York amid reports that the administration has decided on a big change in the American attitude toward the rest of the world, a change from a forced and sometimes tyrannical leadership to an acceptance of partnership.

The significance of such a change can readily be seen when one remembers the threats, bluff and bluster which have characterized our foreign relations for the last two years. After the "dramatic unleashing" of Chiang Kai-Shek, the Dulles doctrine of "massive retaliation," the warning to France of an "agonizing reappraisal," it becomes real news when President Eisenhower speaks of America as a free world partner.

It is further reported that President Eisenhower took Secretary Dulles aside before Dulles left for the London conference and told him the United States should no longer attempt to lay down western policy for the whole world. Apparently, Dulles did not try to do so at London.

Moreover, President Eisenhower is becoming more and more UN conscious. In all his speeches this week, the President has mentioned the UN as a big hope for preserving the peace.

This may all add up to an idealistic Ike tailor-made for the political wars of October, of course, and may signify no basic change in the country's foreign policy. But despite our disappointment with Eisenhower's administration, we still cannot believe he is the autocrat his term in office has made him seem. We hope these encouraging signs are the first indications that the President is once more exercising the famous diplomatic touch with which he contributed so much to allied unity during World War II.



Gracious Living — XIII

The Daily Tar Heel today enters its plea beside that of the Greek, Ajax: We pray for light. We are dismayed, in this era of progress, that no step has been taken to brighten the paths of Carolina Gentlemen pedestrians on their way home from coed dorms at night. It has been brought to our attention that when the lights have flickered their last on Alderman and Smith porches and the Carolina Gentleman turns his face homeward (or to the Mouza) he finds the University's rustic lamps, too, have faded away.

A lengthening of lamp post hours is needed in the interest of Gracious Living (after coed hours) in Chapel Hill.

Gaiety Takes Over The Hill; It's Germans

Louis Kraar

CHAPEL HILL on a Germans weekend is like a popular song that everyone hums and enjoys, but with no two persons remembering just the same tune.

The campus politely parties itself into gaiety, lulled along by the strains of a name band, then gracefully slips off for lazy adventures in quiet places.

Beautifully-dressed young ladies arrive in a flurry and pause only to put on other, still more attractive clothes. Cars whisk along containing (at alternate stages) suiteases, couples, then suitcases again.

The reality of Saturday classes is ignored with studied imagination. Most of all, it's a weekend for students who dance, say clever things, watch others dance and say clever things, but never grow tired—even when dawn crashes their last party.

The athletic smells of Woollen Gym take a holiday to make room for powdered and combed couples. Colored lights and crepe paper turn the place into the plush land that student minds make it out to be.

Anything can happen at the Hill on a Germans weekend and usually does.

You may be able to talk the local police out of giving you a ticket, stumble into old friends, or blunder into innumerable other intrigues.

As much drinking as goes on at other colleges occurs along with as much non-drinking. The refreshments you drink may—or may not—make any difference, depending on who you are.

No matter what you do, Sunday will be a day that arrives with the swiftness of exams and will be over before you feel rested.

Big Fraternity Court is one of the many lively places on a Germans weekend.

I recall one balmy, spring Saturday night after a day filled with music from Dorsey (both versions, Jimmy and Tommy), Ray Anthony, and Kay Kyser. The couples were streaming into the fraternity houses.

We were grouped around the piano at one house trying to make louder sounds with an amateur jam session than the rest could make with their voices. Campus hepster Ron Levin was blowing some lively trumpet and Walt Dear, an old editor of this paper, was pounding the piano. I struggled along with my usual weekend clarinet playing.

It's funny the way you sort of run down the same list of old favorites when you're playing music with friends. We had just reached the "When The Saints Go Marching In" stage, undoubtedly inspired by the day's Dorsey concert.

A young fellow with dark hair flowed in with the tide of people, and someone asked him to sing. He said he would sing if we'd get him a chair. Not knowing what to do and not having a singer, we got him a chair. He stood on it and sang.

Starting with some dreamy ballad that we had never heard but liked the first time, the young singer hushed the noisy crowd down almost to silence. They liked to hear him sing.

A half-dozen songs later, we had all become pretty friendly. And gregarious trumpeteer Levin was practically ordering the singer around when it came to choosing songs.

An up-tempo chous of "All Of Me" ended the session. And our guest singer drifted out as quickly as he had arrived.

"Say that guy can sing pretty well," someone as my side said.

"You said it," I agreed.

"You know that Tommy Mercer was sure swell to come by after singing all day with Ray Anthony," he said.

McKay and the Oil Reserves

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—Douglas McKay, the likeable Secretary of the Interior, has taken exception to my calling him generous with the public domain apropos of turning over 454 acres of the Rogue River National Forest to a mining company and his consideration of plans to release Alaskan oil lands, now reserved for the Navy and the Interior Departments, to private oil exploitation.

The subjects are important ones and deserve careful consideration.

Before considering them, however, I should like to report on another act of generosity which Secretary McKay has in the making. On the desk of his Assistant Secetary of the Interior, Orme Lewis, is an order which would open up the wild life refuges of the United States to private oil drilling.

The order has not yet been officially promulgated and may be side-tracked following publication of this column. However, it has been apprved by Secretary McKay's top advisers, and there is every indication that it is all ready to sign.

Behind the order is the fact that for some years private oil companies have been maneuvering to drill inside certain wild life refuges, particularly the Okefenokee, Ga., refuge. These game preserves were set aside by Congress for the specific purpose of preserving the natural wildlife of the nation, and the Okefenokee refuge is a big swampland abounding in bear, deer and birds.

Chapman Says No

Some years ago, H. L. Hunt, the Texas oil man who has been such an ardent supporter of Senator McCarthy, approached Secretary Oscar Chapman, then secretary of the Interior, to obtain leases to drill on Okefenokee. Chapman refused.

"Congress set that land aside as a wildlife refuge not to be cluttered up with oil derricks," he told Hunt's representative.

Again, Ex-Sen. Burton Wheeler of Montana approached Chapman with a proposal to drill for oil on the Medicine Lake Refuge in Montana. Agian Chapman refused.

However, Wheeler, who is a good friend of Harry Truman, went over his head to the President, and later Truman took it up with his Secretary of the Interior. When Chapman explained the situation, Truman backed him up 100 per cent.

Now, however, the order which the oil companies have so long demanded, opening up our wild life refuges to oil drilling, is all prepared for signature on Assistant Secretary Lewis' desk.

This is one reason why I believe the present Secretary of the Interior should not object to being called "generous" Doug McKay.

Slice of Douglas Fir

Here are some other reasons.

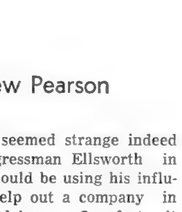
When I reported that Doug had sliced 454 acres of beautiful Douglas fir off the Rogue River National Forest and turned it over to the Al Sarena Mining Co., for only $5 an acre when it should have brought a total of $170,000—if sold at all—his able assistant Larry Smyth, replied to inquiries that this had happened some time ago, and he released a statement attempting to justify the sale.

But Larry carefully glossed over the fact that previous Democratic Secretaries of the Interior had refused to sell this valuable Douglas tract; also that Doug's GOP cabinet colleague, Ezra Benson, was opposed to the sale, and that all sorts of backstage wirepulling was resorted to through Oregon Congressman Ellsworth, a friend of McKay's, to get the sale okayed.

And it seemed strange indeed that Congressman Ellsworth in Oregon should be using his influence to help out a company in distant Alabama. In fact, it sounded like the old days of Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan.

Alaskan Oil Lands

Now regarding McKay's plans for Alaskan oil lands, the genial, generous Secretary of the Interior seemed to be under the impression that I reported he had already turned these oil lands over to private oil exploitation. I reported no such thing. I reported that he was considering releasing them, which he admitted; and that thanks to protests from Congress he was at least not going to open up the Navy's oil reserves in Alaska.



But I also reported that he was still seriously considering opening up the other half of Alaska's oil lands, namely the Interior Department's 25,000,000 acre oil reserve called "Public Land Order No. 82," to private drilling.

This is pretty much what Secretary McKay admitted in the very same breath while calling me names.

On Musicians, Politcians, And Affusions

David Mundy

An attack of boredom, compounded by calculus problems and cramming for a Chaucer quiz, drove me to attend the second of the "Tuesday Evening Series" sponsored by the music department.

My last venture into concert-going was the Templeton performance, which turned out to be a frighteningly "typical concert." I was expecting to return to the library after one or two pieces, but I was quickly dissuaded. Maurice Wilks hasn't the fame of a Kreisler, but he lacks only the press-agentry.

A competent performance had been expected, which made the excellence achieved only the more surprising. The audience matched the Carolina Forum's first presentation in size, and thus far surpassed the SEC's Templeton audience in enthusiasm.

If you can spare only an evening a week, it could certainly be best spent in Hill Hall on Tuesdays. The Music Department, especially Wilks' accompanist, Dr. Mason, deserve a higher degree of appreciation than Carolina customarily bestows on anyone.

And now, to unpleasant things. Democrats, especially at election time, always imagine that they are the ones who are looking into the "glorious future that is ours if you elect me."

Conservative or "Southern" Democrats seem to be suffering either a delusion or a severe case of astigmatism. They don't even have a future in their own party. They are indeed, as they style themselves, "Jeffersonian Democrats"; but their national party is led by "Super-Hamiltonians." Their respective political philosophies don't mix; yet these Democrats are so thoroughly conditioned to hate Republicans that they consider voting for one the unforgivable political sin.

They (both wings) have the liberty to render whatever harping criticisms of Republicans whenever they wish, but the left wing always sets the party line whenever the party is in power. Their policies are those of the "party." Although Congressional senority gives conservative Democrats important committee posts, the Democrat machines in Northern states control the national conventions. They call the tunes on national policy, for their own interests. The conservatives either rebel or conform.

Some Southern Democrats tried rebellion in 1948 with the Dixiecrat movement and failed.

Conforming sometimes approaches the ludicrous. Witness '52, and Sen. Sparkman, sometime "liberal" of Alabama, doing a buck and wing up to Northern labor leaders and explaining away his record on civil rights.

The only way in which they can effectively express their beliefs is, logically enough, through working in the Republican party. A few—a very few—have realized this. But with national policies out of the hands of left-wing Democrats, there is little impetus for the conservative ones to join the Republicans.

All hopes aside, conservative Democrats are likely to continue in their fetters; a permanent minority in their own party, used by the party's left wing solely for electoral votes and the organization of Congress.

On the other hand, the conservative Republicans and conservative Democrats might offer each other a little consolation.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

The Horse sees imperfectly, magnifying some things, minimizing others . . . "—Hipporotis, circa 500 B. C.

THE HORSE was hoofing along toward Graham Memorial when I saw him. Could one hazard a guess he was actually back on the job?

"Some people can only do so much," The Horse alibied his lack of columns, of late. "Count me among those people."

Oh, really? Well, teachers of The Horse — were of the opinion that far from doing only so much The Horse did only so little.

That, me bhoy," The Horse tried to cut me with too blunt teeth, "rates you not even a horse laugh. Why don't you try for genuine, risible humor? Why ape the Hollywood and TV apes whose idea of humor is to belittle? Some 'fun' at the other chap's expense? Where, oh, where are gone the Aristophanic fun, the Catillan elegance of bon mot, the wit of Moiere, the Shakespearian pun, the Twainish chuckle, the Shavian laughter, the gentle jests of Will Rogers, the smiling sallies of Tarkington, in short, the gentilesse of yore?"

I thought they had gone down the drain with much of our old, if now despised culture. Remembered, but not too well.

"Cast one of your jaundiced orbs," The Horse fell into his own casually insulting style, "on the sort of humor that now is the portion of Coach George Barclay. Some fifty per cent campus wit —specifically, one half of a wit, let us say—has come up with a new cheer he wants the stands to voice: Go Barclay, Go! Go, Barclay, Go! Is this funny?"

Well, some thought our idea of an improved team was funny.

"Didn't I once hear you say, Roger," The Horse closed in on me halitosically, "that a broken leg hurt a yellow-skinned man as much as a white man, and a toothache was the same pain in any language? Didn't -?"

I was afraid The Horse had heard me say that.

"Okay. Now, we want a winning team, most of us here. Right?"

Wasn't that sort of academic?

"You do not deny it?" The Horse accused me. "Okay. Now, when we win, some other guy loses. I think even you must grant the validity of that. Thus, if we are really clear-thinking about this, we concede that the ideal would be for us to win half our games, lose half our games. But, win or lose, play a good, clean game in the doing of it. Seriously, do you think we would be content to go year in and season out winning five and dropping five?"

Not the famous, or its converse, Century Club, no! They paid a C-note into Woollen's coffers — and felt they had bought the gilt-edged right to tell Coach Barclay not only that he must win every game, but how to win every game; or listen to their Monday quarterbacking on why he had lost this or that game.

"I hate to admit you are right, Roger," The Horse sighed mistly. "For the life of me, I don't know why the lads of yesteryear don't come back to the campus to gaze upon its ineffable beauties, both co- and geo-. Hoofball is fine, in its place, but its place is not first in our university lives."

The Horse was right! Excellence in classroom work was the desideratum! Economy & Excellence should be our watchwords!

Now you are back in your usual erroneous groove," The horse said with gusty satisfaction "Whaddya mean, excellence is the desideratum? In the words of one of our young savants, Hitler was an excellent dictator. Would you then stamp him as desirable, ipso facto, as Doc Ullman, of Classics, is wont to say? History records the yclepts of many scoundrels who were termed 'Your Excellency.' Nope, Roger, my fallacious fellaheen, the desiderata of a university is the will and the way to teach lads the basic truths of life, and to equip them to see and do their parts in life. I would rather see a Tar Heel laddie flunk a class and learn something thereby, than pass it with an A and gain thereby naught but expanded hatband."

So what did this have to do with Hoofball? Football, as we humans called it?

"For a mere sub in the human race," The Horse observed, "you do crowd the first-team bench badly. It has this to do with Hoofball: I'd rather have a bunch of good kids who lost games, but who knew why they lost and knew why the other guy won, than to have an all-victorious 11, or is it 66? who didn't know anything but that their biceps were bigger than their I.Q.'s, if they even knew that. The game lost goes into the record to accumulate dust on a yellowed page. The youths who lost the game go into the world with a sense of values superior to that of the muscled pachyderms who won because of the superior power of their hirers."

But seriously, didn't The Horse think we should be winning by now, at least half our games, as apparently was the equine ideal?

"Obviously we should not be," The Horse shrugged. "If it were in the cards, Canfield or cheering section type, we would be winning. I feel quite certain that Coach Barclay has no aversion to winning. I feel quite certain the boys on the squad have no aversion to winning."

Okay, then, why didn't we win?

"Everything averages," The Horse viewed it "after a time. If you think we are put upon by p Hoofball fortunes, how for the lads of State Colleg Eight years since they won a game from us, is it not? Besides, take the teams that were beating us three and four years ago—do you think they haven't been working to better themselves? Thus, four years after they were better than we were, or than we were then, they are also four years better than they were when they were betted than us four years ago. That is to say, we may be better, but they are still better than we are when we are better—oh, to hell with it!"

Ditto, me-to, and amen.

Look back in the records and see if we ever Beat Dook! four times running. Okay, things are averaging. We are being trimmed 4 years running."

Four years? Four years? How about—

"Shaddup, Roger," The Horse snapped. Don't go chicken before we are hatcheted. This is the year of the hoofball miracle, as Jimmy of Jimmy & Jeff's will tell you. And don't sell ex-All-Amerk-UNC Geo. Barclay short, either. It would be peachey with Coach B. if he were winning. Just tell your campus buddies that you don't sell a stock when it's up, nor kick a man when he's down. Copy me."

For once, Mr. Wump was speechless . . .

Tar Babies Play In Virginia Today

Frosh Gridders Tangle With Virginia Team, Rated As One Of The Best In South, At 2 P. M.

North Carolina's Tar Babies swing back into action at 2:15 p.m. today when they meet the vaunted University of Virginia freshmen at Charlottesville, Va.

Tar Baby Coach Ralph Floyd stated that the Virginia aggregation is rated as one of the best freshman teams in the South. They have four tackles weighing over 230 pounds each. Twenty-two of the squad are native Virginians. In their only encounter this season, the little Cavaliers downed the VMI Frosh, 20-7.

The much-heralded Virginians will have their hands full today, however, as the Tar Babies are rated as one of the best freshmen teams ever assembled at the University of North Carolina.

The locals have also been subjected to only one test thus far. They gave an excellent account of themselves in defeating South Carolina's freshmen, 25-12, in Laurinburg two weeks ago. The scheduled game with Wake Forest last week was cancelled due to Hurricane Hazel. This afforded a two-week rest, during which time Ends Buddy Payne and John Schroeder recovered from leg injuries incurred during a scrimmage session with the varsity last week.

In the South Carolina affair, Quarterback Buddy Sasser established himself as an able field general and a brilliant runner. Sasser, who is being compared with Carolina's all-time great Charlie Justice, broke away for touchdown sprints of 60 and 23 yards against the Baby Gamecocks.

Halfbacks Joe Temple and Steve Kupchick, along with Fullback Howard Williams, round out the formidable frosh backfield. All three figured heavily in the victory over South Carolina.

Leading the big, fast Carolina line will be Guard Jack Lineberger, termed by Line Coach Bill Kuhn as a potential All-America. Teaming with Lineberger at the other guard slot will be Hap Setzer, giving the locals a pair of former high school All-Americans at guard. At tackle will be Leo Russavage and Phil Blazer; ends, Payne and Shroeder; and center, John Haywood.

Tar Heels Sharpen Up Air Defense

Carolina continued to sharpen up their pass defense yesterday afternoon, and at the same time, worked on their own passing attack. Coach Barclay drilled his men hard in an effort to be ready for the Wake Forest passing combination of Consoles to Stowers, the conference's leading passing team. Using various combinations in the defensive backfield, Barclay seemed pleased with his team's response to the passing attack.

The Tar Heels seemed to be in good spirits, and practice was punctuated with plenty of chatter and noise. Coach Marvin Bass drilled the linemen on blocking and tackling and they responded well, tackling hard and blocking sharply.

'Cocks Down Clemson, 13-8

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 21—(AP)—South Carolina's sophomore quarterback Mackie Prickett today flashed the form that humbled Mighty Army a month ago to lead the Gamecocks to a 13-8 victory over Clemson in the 52nd State Fair football meeting of the ancient rivals. After running over for two second period touchdowns that followed a Clemson safety, Prickett saved the game with a late pass interception on the Clemson six.

An overflow holiday crowd of 35,000 saw the teams in their Atlantic Conference opener. Clemson scored first, getting two points when South Carolina punter Bill Tarrer fumbled in his end zone and fell on the ball for an automatic safety to open the second period.

Clemson appeared bottled up in the fourth when quarterback Don King, passing from his 19, hit halfback Joe Pagliei on the Clemson 40. Pagliei went untouched for 60 yards to complete the 81-yard touchdown play.

Prickett's passing and fine running preceded his own 3-yard plunge for his first touchdown. He sped wide around right and without blocking to score the second from the two.

Charlie Justice Moved To Defensive Position

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21 —(AP)—Charlie Justice, one of the country's finest running backs for the past decade, is shifting to the defensive platoon in a gambling move aimed at bringing the Washington Redskins their first National Football League victory of the year. The victory starved Redskins, who have lost four in a row and have not come closer than 28 points to their conquerors, travel to New York Sunday to meet the Giants, a 51-21 winner over Washington two weeks ago.

Campus Carousel

By ELEANOR SAUNDERS

Hazel swirled into town last weekend playfully flirting with her somewhat ferocious eye, but politely leaving her calling cards scattered throughout the Carolina campus.

From the climate predictions at this vantage point, there may be a sister hurricane, nicknamed Inebriety, after the weatherman's fashion of titling such winds alphabetically, swilling into town during the oncoming weekend. She will blow onto campus along with such foreign (German) elements as may be approaching, and her more socially correct form of calling card will be very much in evidence come Monday morning, 8 o'clock classes.

Yes, Fall Germans, enforced by Elliot Lawrence and the UNC-Wake Forest football game, are upon us once more. Parties, parties, and more parties seem to be the order of the day, and for once, these orders will be willingly and eagerly carried out.

For instance, St. A's have returned to their ritualistic form of entertainment—the ceremonial coon buffet supper Saturday night, will follow the lead of houseboy Eulas Mason and dogs in tracking down the Orange County coons. The safari will wind up at one of the brother's houses to discuss the success of the expedition.

And Delta Sig's will join in with the spirit of the oncoming hurricane to celebrate with a shipwreck party Friday night at a Durham cabin.

Phi Kap's undoubtedly will party this weekend, but it more than likely will be an occasion to relax after Wednesday night's entertainment at the Country Club, in honor of new pledges.

The Goat Hill Country Club will be the site of an SAE party Saturday night. And Lambda Chi's will be partying Friday night in the thick of the uprooted trees, at a local cabin. Also heading for the woods in preparation for a tremendous celebration will be the Pi-ka's.

Brothers at the Phi Delt house may surprise one another this weekend, for they will allow their innermost wishes to come to the fore at a "suppressed desire" party Friday night. To continue the long weekend, which began last night at a party with the Chi O's, their headquarters for Friday Phi Delt's will make Lloyd's barn night.

Ugly Club, still as unconventional as usual, will have their regular meeting this afternoon during the concert at an unannounced cabin in the woods.

Jack's, on the Durham Road, will be invaded Saturday night by Sigma Chi brothers, pledges, and dates. Pledges were socially welcomed Wednesday night by a party after pledging ceremonies.

More Blasts

Deke's will be summoning spirits from the deep and distant depths at their mystical seance Saturday night. Is there any need to explain just what kind of spirits will be called upon? And the spiritualists will continue their secret session until Sunday and their milk punch party.

Of campus-wide interest at the Zete house is the fact that the famed dungeon is being repainted at long last. And plans are being made for a party at the Washington Duke tomorrow night.

Yack sponsors for Theta Chi will be entertained at the chapter house for dinner Friday night. The fraternity will be celebrating its 5th anniversary of reactivation on the Carolina campus. Saturday night plans include a cabin-party after the game.

Zeta Beta Tau's plan a weekend of activities at their chapter house. Friday night will feature a just-plain-party, and Saturday night the unusual in masquerades will be in evidence.

Last night Pi Phi's held open house from 9 until 11. And Tuesday night, they will join forces with Chi Psi's for a shipwreck party at Jack's.

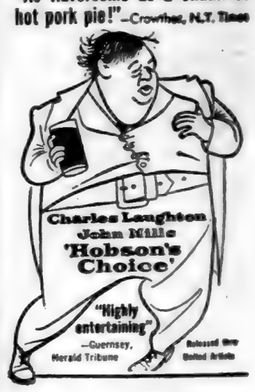
Georges Seurat, the next painter discussed, was likened to the Egyptian form of work. He represents the intellectual form of art today.



Pablo Picasso, the third man in the group, depicts the emotional in contemporary forms. His styles relate back to the African and Oceanian cultures.

There were long stretches where the audience had a chance to view close-ups of the artists' works with out dialogue. The only sound was the finely expressive modern French music.

Themes from Debussey and Faure were easily identified, and the rest was in the same mood.

Person Hall's Dr. Allcott Sees Improved Art School

By JACKIE GOODMAN

"I like to be mixed up with all phases of art," says Dr. John V. Allcott, head of the UNC art Department and director of the Person Hall Art Gallery.

Born in Wisconsin, Dr. Allcott attended the University of Wisconsin from which he was graduated in both creative art and art history. His next five years were spent at the Art Institute of Chicago. There Dr. Allcott realized that he wanted to teach instead of doing advertising art as he had previously planned. The decision to change his field of work was brought about when he began teaching Saturday art classes for children. After realizing that he wanted to teach, Allcott began instructing art at such places around Chicago as Lake Forest Academy, Chicago School of Sculpture and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Royal Academy

In continuing his studies Dr. Allcott next went to the Royal Academy in Florence where he studies both painting and art history. While in Europe he also traveled to France, England and Germany to visit picture galleries.

Upon his return to the United States Dr. Allcott, wanting to do graduate work and to teach, enrolled in the University of Chicago. Here he worked on art history while teaching art classes at Northwestern, Businessmen's Art Club and downtown branch of the University of Chicago.

Dr. Allcott took his first full-time job at Hunter College in New York. There he taught art appreciation.

Coming to UNC in 1941, Dr. Allcott has remained here ever since with the exception of 3 years, during which time he designed sound slide films for the Navy.

New Field

The work which Dr. Allcott did for the Navy opened up a whole new field of interest for him. The new field was pictorial continuity, which consists of taking ideas and translating them into stories with picture series. Dr. Allcott feels that this is an inexhaustible field.

"I do a little bit of everything is the department," said Dr. Allcott about his work here. "A little bit of everything" includes both lecture and studio courses and office work. The lecture courses, which Dr. Allcott teaches during the winter,concern modern (19 and 20 centuries) art and arch features. The studio courses, taught by Dr. Allcott in the summer, are in drawing and designing.

DR. JOHN V. ALLCOTT

". . . one of these days . . . there it will be"

Dr. Allcott's satisfaction with the teaching setup he has here is expressed thus: "I like to be mixed up with all phases of art. Usually one becomes a real specialist in some field, but that isn't my way of operating."

In connection with the art department of UNC Dr. Allcott said, "Our art department started as it is now, diversified and including all of art. The department is not specialized, but all embracive as it should in a state university."

Art Here

"Art at this university is within the humanities. We don't have a professional art school which just happens to be here. Art majors are within the regular program. Within the general program we are hard pushed to give them all basic art work they need, but they are strong and so they carry slightly heavier loads than other students. It's stiff but very good."

"Our main action for the past five or six years has been planning for a new gallery." Although it is still is in the planning stage, Dr. Allcott expressed his enthusiasm by saying, "One of these days we will walk down Columbia Street, and there it will be." The site for the new gallery is where Archer House used to be.

"We are really pretty thrilled about it and all it can mean. It is such a truly wonderful thing that all of our plans have been centered around it. The building will be for students of the University, people of the state and area who come to visit it. It is the spirit of students of the Greater University," said Dr. Allcott.

The new gallery is being planned so that it will contain space for a library, studios and public activities.

About the advantages which he thinks the new gallery will present Dr. Allcott said, "Right now we are scattered all around the campus in cramped spaces. For the first time since we had a one man department we will have a home base. More than that it means a really fine home base for Chapel Hill and this area.

Harrington Announces Visiting For Two More Home Games

The Co-ed Dorm Visiting agreement will be continued for the remaining home games this year, according to Bob Harrington, chairman of the Co-ed Visiting Committee of the Interdormitory Council. The one exception is the Duke game, which will be played during the Thanksgiving holidays. The other remaining games are with Wake Forest on October 23, and the South Carolina game on November 6.

These two remaining games should bring a good many visitors of the fairer sex to the campus of UNC and the mens' dormitories due to special events which are planned for those particular week-ends. Fall Germans will be held on the night before the game with Wake Forest, and Homecoming is scheduled on the day of the South Carolina game.

The IDC is striving to make the visiting arrangements more popular, as some of the men's dorms have not taken full advantage of the present privileges. Harrington is urging that the officers and social committees of each dorm provide refreshments for their visitors, which will be provided by the IDC. Pubicity on bulletin boards, announcements in dorm meetings will help the to plan meet with greater success.

Assistant Professor

Lt. William E. Hildebroudt has been appointed Assistant Professor of Naval Science here.

According to a statement made recently by Col. R. C. Burns, Lt. Hildebroudt is replacing Lt. Commander Loukff as Naval History and Orientation Instructor. Loukff is now commanding officer of the USS Brough, based at Newport, R. I.

Weather: Fair, Warm

"Skies over Kenan Stadium today will be clear and sunny," reports Paul Bowers, forecaster of the Durham Weather Bureau.

Spectators of the tilt between the Demon Deacons of Wake Forest and the Tar Heels will enjoy a moderate rise in temperature with the thermometer ranging in the high sixties and lower seventies.

Postgrad Med Course Opens Here Wed.

A study of rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease, set for next Wednesday afternoon, will oen an eight-week Postgraduate Medical Course on Cardiovascular Diseases here.

The first lecture will be given by Dr. Ernest R. Craig of the UNC Medical School, who is Chief of Cardiology in N. C. Memorial Hospital. He will present new methods recently devised to prevent or minimize damage to the heart in rheumatic cases.

General practitioners from throughout the state have been invited to attend the weekly course, which will continue thru Dec. 15, with various staff members from the Department of Medicine serving as lecturers.

The course will begin at 2:20 p. m. Wednesday in room 5001, Clinic Building. Participating doctors have also been invited to attend the hospital's Combined Staff Conference which meets in the Clinic Auditorium at 4 p. m. to review interesting cases of the week.

Dr. W. P. Richardson, assistant dean for continuation education in the School of Medicine, said that credits earned in the postgraduate course may be applied toward fulfillment of the requirements of the American Academy of General Practice.

The postgraduate series is sponsored by the School of Medicine in cooperation with the UNC Extension Division.

Other lecturers at later dates include Dr. C. H. Burnett, chairman, Department of Medicine; Dr. Carl Gottschalk, Dr. J. Mitchell Sorrow, Dr. Louis G. Welt, Dr. Kerr White and Dr. James Woods.

Friday Afternoon Dixieland

Chapel Hill's radio station WCHL instituted a new deal yesterday.

James Wright, announcer, and Steve Chasemen, senior here from Baltimore, Md., got together over a microphone and a turntable yesterday at 1:30 p. m., and flipped through Chasemen's collection of progressive Dixieland, Chicago and West Coast jazz for an hour and a half.

Wright said the program will become a regular feature if enough phone calls in favor of Friday afternoon Dixieland are received at WCHL.

At Author Betty Smith's House:

Tree That Grew In Brooklyn Still Stands

By PETER COOPER

Although the strong breath of Hurricane Hazel bowled over some of Chapel Hill's favorite old landmarks, its majestic trees, and bowled them onto Carolina's favorite machines, its majestic automobiles, still standing today are the revered Davie Poplar and a much-publicized Lanthis Glandouse, or something like that, which means "A Tree which Grows in Brooklyn."

In the back-yard garden of Chapel Hill novelist Mrs. Betty Smith stands a tree which reaches to the second-story roof of Miss Smith's home. It was given to her on the day in August, 1943 her unforgettable novel "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" was put on sale, and stood nearly 14 inches tall in a flowerpot.

In 1945 Miss Smith bought her tree-shaded home in Chapel Hill and gave her pet tree a home in her garden, where it stands today in spite of the best efforts of an unladylike hurricane.

"I first noticed the house because of the trees," said Mrs Smith, yesterday who insures her trees as others do their automobiles. One of the trees standing in her yard is the second largest in town and is valued at $1.000 It is about 200 years old, and while not a total loss, was damaged enough to require a nurseryman to attempt to save and set it upright again. Another of Mrs. Smith's prized beauties hit her fence and a car across the street leaving her home with two of its five chimneys damaged. But chimney tops come easier than ancient oaks, Novelist Smith's first concern. Chinaberry trees and elms were uprooted but most of the oaks remained faithful; her flagstone walk around the Brooklyn tree was torn up and one of a pair of crepe myrtles was riped. In all the damage amounted to $1750. That's counting her southern sweet-bud shrub the trees were insured by Mrs. Smith when she bought the house in 1945 and the policy was retained for about six years She was without insurance until June 8 of this year when she reconsidered her unprotected trees and reinsured them. She is believed to be the only policy-holder on trees in this area.

. . .rather die in Cadillac

Die In A Cadillac

Novelist Smith who lives at 315 Rosemary Lane was in Nag's Head, a fishook through her foot and her cat the mother of four new kittens, when the news of Hurricane Hazel's approach sent her inland. Cat, kittens, Cadillac and fishook looked homeward. Reaching Raleigh, the group took refuge in a modernistic restaurant called Roy's and were snugly comfortable there until Roy's two plate glass, modernistic windows came in, the restaurant with them. Thereafter, Mrs. Smith, animals and cigarettes weathered the storm in the car. "I'd rather die in a Cadillac," she said

Things are looking rosy again on Rosemary Lane, no squirrels killed or bird houses damaged, or anything dire like that. In a month, the writer says, the old homestead will look about normal, and all will be love and light again.

The Brooklyn trees grows on even if nobody, including Mrs. Smith, knows how to spell Lanthis Glandous, its technical name.

Deacs 2-Touchdown Favorite Over Carolina Here Today

Kickoff Slated For 2 O'Clock On Kenan Grid

By BERNIE WEISS

Wake Forest's Demon Deacons, currently tied for the lead in theAtlantic Coast Conference with Maryland, roll into Chapel Hill tomorrow to renew a 66-year-old rivalry with Carolina.

Kickoff time in Kenan Stadium is 2 o'clock.

The Deacs, on the basis of comparative scores, would be 33-point favorites. Two weeks ago they surprised Maryland, coming up with a deadlock 13-13, while Carolina bowed to the Terps last Saturday in College Park, 33-0.

Money on the game, however, is riding with the Deacons by two touchdowns. Tar Heel coach George Barclay rates his opponents 12 to 14 point favorites, but had a "no comment" pertaining to a prediction on the outcome. "They have got a very danged good club," he said, "but we'll give them a fight."

Carolina, having lost two consecutive games after winning the opener and tieing Tulane in their second game, is desperately in need of a victory. Many of the Tar Heel gridders have expressed themselves in no uncertain terms that they intend to play today's game "to the hilt." A better brand of football can be expected today from Carolina.

Same Team

Barclay intends to start the same team he did against Maryand. George Stavnitsky will open at center; Jimmy Neville and either Ed Patterson or Bill Koman at guards; Roland Perdue and Jack Maultsby at tackles; Will Frye and Norman Lane at ends. The backfield will consist of Len Bullock at quarterback, Larry Parker and Connie Gravitte at halves and Marshall Newman at full.

Maultsby was Carolina's outstanding lineman in a faltering defense against Maryland.

Last year the Tar Heels toppled the Deacons by 18-13, scoring two touchdowns in the last quarter. It was Carolina's best performance of the year, with three different players scoring touchdowns and Gravitte, who holds one of this year's highest ground gaining averages in the ACC, leading the offense. Gravitte leads the team in total rushing offense now, but lost his lead in the ACC when he sat out most of last week's contest.

Will Divide Attack

Barclay expects Wake to operate with equal emphasis on passing and running, though Carolina has been working on its aerial defenses all week. In quarterback Nick Consoles the Deacons have the top ACC passer. He has competed 22 of 43 for 221 yards and two touchdowns. The captain of the team is end Ed Stowers, and this pair works well together. Stowers had caught 10 passes for 125 yards.

Wake also has three too halfbacks, all of whom are acquainted with the art of gaining yardage, and it is through these men that the Deacons' ground attack will function. They are Bill Barnes, Dick Daniels and John Parham.

Carolina will probably counter with an extensive air attack, as the Deacon aerial defense is lowest in the circuit. Their rushing defense is second best.

Edge In Series

Since 1888, the teams have played 50 games, with the Tar Heels taking 34, the Deacs one and there has been one tie.

The officials for the game are: Referee, William Averette, Jr., (N. C. State); Umpire, Marion Bird (Presbyterian): Linesman, Dr. W. H. Breeland (Emory): and Judge, Tatum Gressette (South Carolina).

A colorful half time ceremony will feature 53 high school bands from over the state. The show will involve 4,000 musicians.

Athletic Office Manager Vernon Crook estimates an attendance of from 20,000 to 25,000.

During Rush Week

Frats Don't Want Quizzes

By LLOYD SHAW

A bill calling for the Legislature to pass a resolution asking the abolishment of quizes during the week of fraternity rushing was introduced by the University Party to the Student Legislature Thursday night.

Bev Webb (UP) introduced a bill "to establish a University Band Improvement Committee" to determine and report to the Legislature the needed improvements of the band.

The committee is to investigate the setting up of a permanent source of funds for the band, to meet with the proper University officials in order to investigate the possibility of establishing musical scholarships for band members and to prepare proper legislation to achieve its findings.

The reasoning for the bill said that "there now exists a dire need for many improvements in the band and the band will continue to need more funds in order to expand.

A bill asking funds for the student adult board was introduced by Max Crohn (UP).

Honor Bill Vote

A legislative debate on whether or not to pass the "Leniency Bill" became a debate on whether or not to put the decision before the students.

The bill with the amendment calling for "the provisions of this resolution to be voted on by the students in the fall election (Nov. 1)" passed by a vote of 24-14.

Joel Fleishman (SP) argued that those against the bill were "afraid of what the people would say." He added, "I would rather place my faith in the student body at large than in 50 legislators."

It was argued by an opponent of the bill that "because of the long investigation of the bill by the legislators, we can decide better."

The roll call vote on the bill is printed here. The first column contains votes on the entire bill after the amendment had been added. The second column contains votes on whether or not to add the amendment. The amendment called for a referendum.

IDC Gives Goodies For Dorms

IDC Social Chairman John Beshara announced this morning that the Interdormitory Council is providing refreshments for the guests at the open house in each of the 19 men's residence halls. Cookies and peanuts will be given to each of the dorm social committees to be served before and after the Wake Forest-Carolina game today.

Beshara also pointed out that the individual dorm groups will provide the soft drinks needed from their vending machines as the guests arrive. It is believed that this procedure will eliminate waste and confusion.

Campus Television Antennae Suffered From Hazel's Fury

Hurricane Hazel blew through Chapel Hill last week, uprooting trees, disrupting power services and demolished a few ears, she also left University TV viewers with somewhat of a problem, for it damaged a good many television aerials on the campus.

Old East and Old West had their aerials completely blown over. The antenna atop Carr Dorm was bent by the storm, and Everett reported its antenna also bent double. Other dorms on the campus had aerials similarly damage by the high winds. But Steele's antenna remained upright through the storm.

Local television repair companies reported heavy demands for repairs on Chapel Hill TV antennas. Village Radio and TV Service spokesmen said they have been going day and night since last Saturday, and still have about 150 requests for repairs to be handled. Best's Radio and TV Service also reported a long list of repair orders.

The Tragedy Of Our Time: Death On The East River

"I don't know. You don't hear much about it any more."

"It's a good theory, but it won't work."

"It's OK, but what is it doing?"

"It's just not realistic. We're paying for it and getting nothing in return."

"They ought to take that big glass building and turn it into something useful—a hotel."

Those were the casual answers of five acquaintances whom we asked yesterday a casual question: What do you think of the United Nations?

They are not different, we suspect, from the answers you would get if you asked the question anywhere in the United States during this UN Week, 1954. Therefore, we do not have to look very far to find the reason the United Nations is dying. It is dying because we don't care. And that is the incalculable tragedy of our lives.

Never in the whole history of the world have men come so close to building an enduring peace. And yet, with the ominous shadow of nuclear destruction growing taller on the Secretariat Building daily, we ignore the United Nations and look backward to the one alternative that, since the Trojan Wars, has always proved disastrously wrong—the arms race. If the UN fails, to be sure, military might is the only alternative. But if the UN fails, it will be because we didn't give it a chance.

It is not the Russians who are killing the United Nations. The heart-sickening truth is that it is the free world nations, and among them, the United States.

For example:

1. In Indo-China, where a war is being fought, the United Nations is told to keep its hands off.

2. In Geneva, where a peace conference is called to settle the Korean War (a UN war) the UN is left sitting on the sidelines.

3. Israel and the Arab States pay no attention to a whole string of UN resolutions.

4. France walks out when the Assembly decides to take up its disputes in Tunisia and Morocco.

5. The legislative leader of the Republican Party, in control in the United States, threatens to resign and try to take this country out of the UN if the organization votes against his will.

The United Nations is dying because even the United States refuses to take it seriously. If we did, the UN would work, and powerfully in the struggle against Communism.

If we earmarked special military units for use at UN call, it is certain that other free nations would do likewise. That would establish an international police force, making it less likely that one UN country would have to carry almost the entire burden of halting aggression as the United States did in Korea.

THE UNITED NATIONS BUILDING
. . . how tall is its shadow?

President Eisenhower lifted UN morale tremendously when he presented the US atomic energy plan to the General Asembly. What logic is it that says heads of state shouldn't take full part in the UN? The United Nations should not be a mere dumping ground for political favorites.

In the political field, the United States must stop allying itself always with the big colonial powers who cry "interference in domestic affairs" every time the issue of nationalism in one of their territories arises.

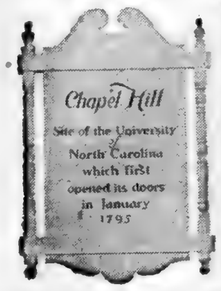
Of course, the big financial bite for support of the United Nations has come from the United States. But technical assistance can never be taken off Uncle Sam's shoulders unless it is given a firm footing first. Besides, do you begrudge the 20 cents the UN may have cost you by now?

If you feel that the United Nations can be more than a hotel on the East Side of Manhattan, there is something you can do about it. You can be a UN evangelist. You can let your voice be heard through your Congressman and your Senator. You can meet the unconvinced face to face, you can change the minds of skeptics. You can support the United Nations in the company of people you know are against it.

You have the best argument in the world, the record of this organization. It is a proud record, and if the world lethargy toward the UN and its short life are considered, it is a phenomenal record. And if your opponents are not convinced by facts, you can quote to them the words of Carlos Romulo, the Philippine Envoy to the United States. You can tell them this:

Kill the United Nations and you kill the last organization where the two sides in the world maintain the daily diplomatic and political contact which itself is a force for peace.

Kill the United Nations and you remove the last chance that the transition from colonialism to self rule—one of the world's critical problems—will be peaceful and sane, instead of bloody.



Kill the United Nations and you blow up a dam that has already prevented four wars from spreading—Korea, Indonesia, Kashmir, Palestine—and can do the same in the future.

Kill the United Nations and you blow up the millions now receiving from it medicine, milk and plows that there is no hope for the hungry and homeless—except, perhaps, in Communism.

Kill the United Nations and you increase tremendously the chances that man will one day wipe himself off the face of the earth.

WC's 'Humor' About Water Is All Wet

Louis Kraar

THEY USUALLY exhibit grace and maturity in everything they do. I'm talking about the young ladies at our sister institution in Greensboro.

But one stunt the student paper pulled recently at Woman's College makes me wonder.

At the height of a serious water shortage in the Greensboro area (before the hurricane), WC students were asked to observe certain restrictions. Most of them did.

Apparently, though, the editors of the "The Carolinian" lost their crew-cropped heads over the situation. In what must have been an effort at humor, the paper in a front-page editorial called on the state to "substitute beverages from the companies in areas not affected by a water shortage, such as Schlitz, Pabst, Miller's and Blatz."

In other words, in a rather ungraceful and immature effort to be cute, the WC editors asked for beer instead of water.

A sense of humor is nice, girls, but why use the front page of an important (and previously powerful) student newspaper to be cute?

If it's front-page editorials you're eager to run, girls, I might suggest many subjects more appropriate: the impending tuition fee raise that may occur, the problem of racial integration, the decline of the home-type girl, the struggle between communism and democracy, and the steps necessary to get Gordon Gray closer to students.

THE SHINE boy in the University barber shop asked his student customer the other day how he was betting on the Wake Forest game.

"I never bet on Carolina any more. When you decide the team is going to win, it loses. And when you decide it's going to lose, it wins," the student said in an irritated tone.

One of the barbers in the front of the long shop looked back at the student and asked, "Well, I wish you'd decide that we're going to lose for a change."

PRESIDENT TOM Creasy's statement that campus political parties are a "necessary evil" was first made last spring at a candidates meeting in Memorial Hall.

This reporter said earlier in the week that Creasy didn't call the parties a "necessary evil" when he was running as a candidate for one. And I was wrong. I am happy to make the correction.

However, I will still disagree with Creasy that campus political parties are evil. As for their being necessary, I might add that they were necessary for Creasy to be elected regardless of any alleged "evil" the student body president may feel is in them.

WHILE I'M not suggesting this, it does sound interesting:

The student newspaper at Texas Christian and campus politicians at that school were having a feud recently. And after a bout on the field of honor, mud-slinging was settled for the year.

A tug-of-war through foot-thick mud on the parade ground settled things properly. It was a draw.

THIS WEEKEND in Chapel Hill reminds me of the 500 students in Mexico City who all of the sudden quit going to school last week and raised cane.

Their reason: the students said they were just tired of going to school.

A UNIVERSITY of Chicago professor says American husbands help so much with housework these days that the only tasks left to the wife are "childbearing and sewing."

If that's true (and I've found it unwise to disagree with some professors), why do the gals have so much time to shop for Dior-look clothes?

Kemp Nye allowed he had some new jazz records that are really fine. With some slight realization that Kemp's enthusiasm has, on occasion, a variety of motives, we gave an ear to three of them. All ten-inch, off-brand LP's, they proved themselves most interesting, and quite often, agreeable.

The first of the three is the Oscar Pettiford sextet performing on the Debut label.

Of the five numbers included, four of them are Pettiford compositions, and since this is Pettiford's new group, we assume that the performance brings us Pettiford just as Pettiford wishes, and perhaps at his best. Definitely a part of the new era in jazz, Pettiford's group features a variety of instruments unknown to the jazz world until recently. Julius Watkins urges a very cool and quiet sound out of a French horn, while Pettiford features pizzicato cello, an increasingly popular method which he introduced while playing bass with Woody Herman some years ago.

The group is a good one. The music is as varied as the titles are odd. Opening with THE PENDULUM AT FALCON'S FAIR, they take a short bounce beat which allows for demonstrations of agility and skill. The melody is complete, and they stick to it rather closely throughout its very bop-like form. On TAMALPAIS, they employ the growing favorite trend, which is quite similar to the motet forms. TAMAPAIS is a plaintive, blue, and mournful tune, featuring Phil Urso on tenor with Watkins on horn. They create something close to a beautiful cantor-like chant effect, which may bring on a feeling of melancholy if the listener listens too carefully. The remaining three pieces are as different from each other as are the first two. Pettiford's cello solos are more prominent in LOW AND BEHOLD, a blues composition with a pleasant rock, and FIELDSTALKER, a happy-go-lucky jam-type tune. The cello here seems to find its place in jazz just as it has done with Harry Babasin.

LP number 2, is a West Coast performance of real note. Bob Tullys' quintet gives a thoroughly complete picture of the progressive school. Tully, who sounds somewhat like Chet Baker playing a little louder, leads the ensemble, closely backed up by Nash Maez on tenor sax. On the Skylark label, they open with ALADDIN'S DILEMMA, which sounds at first like background music for a harem scene in a third class movie. Lasting just long enough to arouse attention, the number turns into the cool lagging duet, another of the bop-motet themes.

Willie Maiden, arranger for Earl Hines and Maynard Ferguson prepared the tunes for the group and in doing this he has created an ensemble effect of real quality. Though the jump tunes are slightly loose jointed, the blues and ballads indicate honest imagination, and it is in the blues-ballad numbers that the musicians seem best suited. One exception found in JEEPERS CREEPERS, however, this being done rather quietly and carefully, the emphasis resting on harmony rather than solo ability.

MOOD INDIGO ssems quite the manic-depressive when done by the Tuly group. The mournful tune finds its beauty justified in the first chorus, but when the quintet breaks loose with a bouncy jump in the second, one might feel ashamed of his blue tears. But Tully regains control in the third chorus and winds it all up just as the Duke would have wished, leaving the listener with mixed emotions.

George Lewis rises out of New Orleans again, this time on the Jazz Man label. Leading the old Bunk Johnson group, Lewis and his clarinet don't seem to be able to hold them down. Though they have maintained the old-time New Orleans rhythm, the Ragtime Band sounds rusty. The group romps through several old favorites in addition to a few unknown songs. ICE CREAM, and CLOSER WALK WITH THEE suggest the authentic New Orleans style, and Joe Watkins' vocals sound clean and imaginative compared to those of Kid Howard. But the entire performance has an air of pressure and commercialism. One might say the George Lewis Ragtime Band has created a first class imitation of the early New Orleans jazz. This seems very true, and though it's hard to conceive that George Lewis doesn't come near his earlier performances, it sounds true on this record. It is our hope that the Lewis group is only rusty and not contaminated.

YOU Said It: Cheek Turning, Terp Style

Editor:

In the fall of 1953, the University of Maryland Band was the guest of the University of North Carolina. Here is a brief description of the reception which its members received on this campus: In front of the Rathskellar they were mobbed by a group of "Carolina Gentlemen." Majorettes were pawed and virtually undressed. Drums were slashed. Beer bottles and rocks were heaved at the larger instruments. The band was then followed to Woollen Gym by its "reception committee." Here the mob became more violent. One "Carolina Gentleman" walked around behind the Band and threw his unopend can of beer at a drummer. His aim was excellent. When the Maryland drummer was treated at the UNC Infirmary, stitches were required to close the ugly gash in the back of his head. A number of Maryland students and band members visited the Infirmary for treatment that night.

The next day, members of the Maryland Band had to make a trip to Durham to buy new drumheads. The total cost of damaged was more than eight hundred ($800) dollars. The University of Maryland Band presumably paid the entire bill.

In the fall of 1954, the University of North Carolina Band was the guest of the University of Maryland. Here is a brief description of the reception which its members received. They were met at Union Station by Tom Shipley, president of the Maryland Band, and several other students, who had waited all night for the UNC train. Busses were waiting outside the station to take the band to College Park. Shippley rode with the Band to its quarters, and remained with the band until he was assured that all arrangements were satisfactory. A dance and reception (which had to be cancelled) had been arranged for the UNC Band the previous night. Lunch was served—free of charge—at the University Dining Hall. The Maryland students were hospitable and friendly. The band received less heckling at College Park than it usually does on its own campus!

Real Fight Upcoming On Leniency Bill

Dick Creed

The Student Party proved an old truth Thursday night.

Namely, that the party which controls Legislature controls student government.

Dave Reid and SP supporters of his leniency bill admit that a major consideration in their calling for a referendum was to sidestep the veto which President Tom Creasy had threatened if the bill passed the Legislature.

Even though the Student P has a sufficient majority (38 in the Legislature to overri presidential veto, it knows to do so would be undiploma and, in the eyes of the stude body, unsportsmanlike.

It is true that referendums and constitutional amendments usually pass in campus wide elections. This is because students don't know or don't care what they're voting on, and the "yes" box on the ballot looks more positive than the "no."

But I believe it will be different on November 16.

Already Dave Reid has indicated that he will campaign for the bill. And there is no indication that President Creasy will back down from the strong stand he has taken against it.

Somewhere during the ensuing hubbub, 'midst claims of sincerity an interest in the welfare of the student body by both camps, ole' debbil politics is bound to creep in.

In the beginning, we believe, the bill was conceived with honesty and benevolence. And we believe that the criticism leveled at it until now has been equally sincere.

But now things are different.

Creasy could have killed the bill if the Student Party had not been wary enough to call a referendum. And Creasy's outspoken opposition was all that stood between Reid and a clear-cut victory on the Legislature floor.

Now the merits and demerits of the bill are likely to be overshadowed by a fight by both parties for the endorsement of the student body.

The UP will be saying, vote no The SP, vote yes.

And somewhere in the tangle of yes, no, charges, and counter charges, the merits and demerits of the bill will usually peek through only when they are needed by either party to get a vote.

A lot of criticism (none of it printed, unfortunately) has issued from Student Party headquarters lately over Louis Kraar's reportage and columnizing of the Muntzing - Fleishman dispute within the party.

Most of the criticism has been that Kraar has been playing "junior G-man" and that his presentation of the facts in the matter has brought about a distorted view in the minds of those who read his articles and columns.

As far as we have been able to learn, Kraar's facts were correct, except on some very minute points.

But I am inclined to agree that the facts were overemphasized and made to appear more significant than they are.

There is no danger of a split in the party, because the SP is too comfortable with its old guard majority in Legislature. Things are too comfortable for all concerned for anybody to t bolting the party.

Kraar admits that he is a crusader. I don't see how anybody can call himself a crusader, just as I have never been able to see how anybody can call himself a conservative or liberal or any of the other definitive terms used by political science instructors.

It seems to me that more important than saying without qualification, "I am a crusader," it would be better to say, "I will present my news not only in an impartial manner, but in a manner which will not over-pr to my reader its importance or implications."

The whole idea was probably summed up best by Charles Childs in a report on President Gordon Gray: "He hesitates to call himself a liberal because of the definitions which have come to be attached to the term. Gray prefers being known as a fair and just man."

Tar Babies Top Virginia, 20-14, In Free-Swinging Affair

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

Today may well be the Tar Heel's day. Last week a hurricane forced them into an all-night train ride, dampening their chances for an upset victory over Maryland. Two Saturdays ago Coach George Barclay's crew played a brilliant first half against a surprisingly strong Georgia eleven, only to mysteriously disintegrate in the final half. The week before that, the locals made the long journey to New Orleans, only to come away with a 7-7 tie after leading Tulane practically all the way.

Bad luck and a plague of recurring mistakes seem to have haunted the Blue and White this year. They haven't yet managed to 'click' solidly for 60 continuous minutes—in a game. However, there have been practice days when they looked devastating. In a secret practice session four days before the Maryland game they performed perfectly. They looked great. Some of the coaches and other experienced observers on hand expressed the opinion that Carolina could have whipped Maryland "hands down" that day. But Tuesday's don't count. It is only Saturday afternoon that matters.

The Tar Heels CAN play football, though — winning football. Hhe coaches know it, the players know it. At any moment they may start to "click." If they should catch on fire today, they will send a cocky crew of Deacons back to Baptist Hollow talking to themselves. Wake Forest is ripe for an upset, and the Tar Heels are due.

N. C. State has one bright spot in their otherwise dull grid picture. It is a pint-sized halfback named George Marinkov. Marinkov stands 5' 7" and weighs 165 pounds. He was chosen Atlantic Coast Conference Sophomore of the Week for the show he put on last Saturday. He ran from scrimmage for 53 yards once and hauled a kickoff back for 66 yards, caught two passes and intercepted two. He leads the league in kickoff returns, 267 yards in seven tries, for an average of 38.1 yards. No one is within 200 yards of him in this department . . .

Hopes for an investigation of the Gavilan-Saxton title bout seems to have been killed . . . The Boxing Commission says Saxton must defend his title against Carmen Basilio . . . Meanwhile, Cuban cartoonists are taking up the cry of "steal" with such quips as this: "Our countryman Kid Gavilan has lost the crown, but North American boxing has lost its last thread of prestige." Cross Country Team To Run In 3-Way Meet

Carolina will pin its cross-country hopes on Jim Beatty, a sophomore flash, and veteran Bob Barden, as the Tar Heels play host to Maryland and Wake Forest in a 3-way meet this morning.

The Tar Heels ride the crest of a two-meet winning streak, both by perfect scores of 15, after an opening season loss to N. C. State. However, Maryland is favored to take the meet.

The Maryland team, who have competed in only one meet, a loss to N. C. State, will be paced by two sophomores, Alva Grimm and Charles Party. Wake Forest, who returns to the cross country scene after a layoff of several years, has not been in a meet this season. Little is known about the Deacon runners.

Preceding the varsity encounter, the freshman team will meet Wake Forest. Three of the Tar Babies best meen will be unable to run because of quizzes. Richard Rigbee, who has won two of the three Tar Babies meets, Bailey Lippfort and Gary Nichols will not see cation in the meet. (The Tar Babies chances rest on Everett Whatley and Ben Williams, who have been running well throughout the season.

Both varsity and freshman teams have identical records, two wins and one loss, the loss coming at the hands of last year's ACC Champion Wolfpack. Starting time for the varsity meet is set at 10:45 a. m., with the freshman encounter preceding the main event.

Wake Forest Will Hold Back Their Pass Game, According to Deacons

WAKE FOREST, Oct. 22—Dig these crazy, mixed-up football coaches.

With the leading passer and the leading pass receiver in the conference at his disposal, Coach Tom Rogers has decided to stay on the ground Saturday afternoon when the Deacons invade Chapel Hill for an ACC battle with North Carolina's Tar Heels.

Quarterback Nick Consoles, a junior from Lynn, Mass., is the top hurler in the league with 22 completions in 45 attempts. His aerials have accounted for 221 yards and two touchdowns. His favorite target is Deacon captain Ed Stowers who has caught 10 passes for 125 yards and one touchdown.

Both are in the top spot in their respective departments, yet the Deacons may use the passing game sparingly aganist the Tar Heels.

Why this decision to play like the infantry and march on the ground? It's simple. The Deacs have gained 786 yards rushing in 202 carries for a nifty 3.9 average, and the ground game was instrumental in chalking up a 26-0 win over N. C. State and a 13-13 tie with Maryland.

Wake Forest's first-string backfield of Bill Barnes and Burt Harrison at fullback has a rushing average of your yards per try, and the second team backfield of John Parham and Bob Fredeick at halfbacks and Nick Maravic at fullback has a 3.8 rushing average. That's not bad for a team that was supposed to be as potent in the air as a squadron of B-36 bombers.

Rogers isn't saying that Wake won't pass against the Tar Heels. His quarterbacks have been instructed to pass if the ground game falters, and a few tosses now and then will serve to keep the UNC defense honest. But it won't be raining footballs in Kenan Stadium as far as the Deacons are concerned.

TACKLE JACK MAULTSBY, who was a standout on defense against Maryland last week, despite the fact that he was not in top shape, will be back at his peak for the game this afternoon.

Duke Rated Three-Touchdown Favorite To Beat N. C. State

RALEIGH N. C., Oct. 22 (AP) Duke's football team, dropped to 19th in this week's Associated Press poll following its loss to Army, starts the comeback climb here tomorrow night against North Carolina State as a three touchdown favorite.

The 30th meeting of the state rivals finds Duke leading the series, 21-7, with one tie. North Carolina State won the first four games of the series, but since Duke's 1933 victory State has won only one game, that in 1946 by a 13-6 score. The game will mark the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for Duke which has a 2-1-1 record. State is 0-2 in the conference and 1-4 overall.

State lacks the manpower reserve of Duke, but has a fine set of backfield starters in quarterback Eddie West, halfbacks John Zubaty and George Marinkov and fullback Don Langston. Sophomore Marinkov is second to none in the nation close to 38 yards for seven. Last week in the loss to Florida State he played all the way, returning a kickoff 66 yards and running 53 yards from scrimmage on one play. He also caught two passes and intercepted two.

Duke, its attack concentrated in its ground game, has seven backs who have carried from 11 to 54 times averaging 3.6 or better. Heading the list is soph halfback Bernie Blaney, with 6.3 for 10 rushes.

Kickoff time is 8 p. m. EST

Buddy Sasser Injured; Sub David Reed Engineers Show

Reed Passes for Two TD's, Williams Scores Another in Brawl-Marked Tilt

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 22—In a freeswinging game marked by a brawl and a near-riot here today, the University of North Carolina freshmen scored in the final period to down the University of Virginia frosh, 20-14.

Carolina's star quarterback, George "Buddy" Sasser, was injured in the opening minutes of the tilt and was replaced by David Reed of Shamokin, Pa. The previously unheard-of Reed proved to be the man of the hour as he ran and passed the Tar Babies to victory.

Both teams were scoreless in the first quarter, but Reed put the visitors ahead in the second stanza with a touchdown aerial to Vincent Olin on a play that covered 37 yards. Roland Goff's attempted conversion was unsuccessful.

With one and a half minutes remaining in the first half, Fullback Howard Williams crashed over right tackle for 10 yards and another score to give the Tar Babies a commanding 13-0 lead at halftime, Goff's conversion being successful this time.

During the third quarter the count remained the same, until, with 30 seconds remaining in that stanza, Virginia Quarterback Jimmy Moyer sneaked over. Bahktiar converted, making the score, 13-7.

Virginia kicked off what appeared to be an on-sides kick. But the kicker's foot inadvertently glanced the ball, sending it only 16 yards downfield. Virginia End Pat Whitaker recovered the kick on the Carolina 45, giving new life to the Baby Cavaliers. On second down, Moyer passed to Fred Pozer for a touchdown. Bahktiar again converted, throwing Virginia out front, 14-13.

Another weak Cavalier kickoff gave the Tar Babies possession of the ball on their 44 yard line. From there Quarterback Reed engineered Carolina down the field, finally making a 21-yard paydirt toss to Howard Williams with seven minutes remaining in the game. Goff converted, making the final score of 20 to 14.

Reed was easily the outstanding Carolina player of the day. He made a dazzling 55-yard TD sprint which was nullified by a penalty. Fullback Jim Bahktiar shone for Virginia.

Chi Phi, ZBT Eke Out Wins

Action on the Intramural slate was limited to two games for the four o'clock schedule. Chi Psi-2 and Phi Gam-1 double forfeited, while Lambda Chi took a forfeit decision from SAE, 1-0.

In the remaining games, Chi Phi squeezed past Sig Nu by a 1-0 overtime score, while ZBT gained victory from AK Psi-1 in the same manner. Chi Phi and Sig Nu played a wide open game, with action see-sawing up and down the field. However, neither team could muster enough power for a score, and the game was decided by an overtime period. The game ended with the ball 2 yards in Sig Nu territory, which was enough for Chi Phi to claim the victory.

The ZBT - AK-Psi-1 game was primarily a defensive encounter, with action limited to between the forty yard stripes. Late in the final period, AK Psi drove to the ZBT 10 yard line, but a pass interception ended the threat. Penalties helped the ZBT cause in the overtim period, and AK Psi went down to defeat.

"Don't Shoot!"

From recent Student Council minutes:

CHAIRMAN: Next we come to the problem of the appalling dressing-habits of our freshman. We have noted such unorthodox attire as long-point collars, garishly colored shirts, some actually made of dotted swiss!

SCH. OF MUSIC REP.: Definitely not in harmony with our standards.

JOURNALISM REP.: To corn a phrase, they ain't on the ball team.

SCH. OF LOGIC REP.: Why not shoot 'em?

MED. SCHOOL REP.: Great idea! I'll work up a "Good Taste" serum, refined from some Van Heusen Oxfordian shirts. We'll inoculate 'em all!

PHILOSOPHY REP.: Who cares!

LAW SCHOOL REP.: (Happily) Yeah, inoculate 'em. Then maybe some of 'em will get sick, and I . . .

JOURNALISM REP.: Now let's don't go all around Red Robin Hood's barn . . . what we need is a campaign to tell 'em about the Oxfordian . . . the silky, smooth oxford shirts with the smart, modern collar styles.

BUS. ADM. REP.: And don't forget . . . fine long-staple cotton, woven tighter to last longer . . . at the amazing price (thanks to excellent production facilities) of only $4.50.

JOURNALISM REP.: I think we got the gem of an idea here somewhere . . . but first off the bag, we gotta . . .

MED. SCHOOL REP.: Inoculate 'em.

LOGIC REP.: Yeah, shoot 'em.

CHAIRMAN: All in favor of mass inoculation say Aye. (MOTION CARRIES.)

JOURNALISM REP.: Maybe some of 'em already wear Van Heusen Oxfordians. Don't shoot 'til you see the whites of their shirts . . .

ART SCHOOL REP.: . . . and the colors! Don't forget Oxfordians come in the smartest colors this side of a Bonnard or a Klee.

PHILOSOPHY REP.: (eating Tootsie-roll) Who cares!

Disk Jockey Jimmy Capps Heads Blanket Party Here

MAESTRO JIMMY CAPPS

. . . there'll be dancing in the streets

Popular disk jockey Jimmy Capps and his "Our Best To You" radio show are coming to the UNC campus Nov. 5, according to the Interdormitory Council.

The Council is sponsoring the WPTF personality, along with the cheerleaders, University Band and a special floor show in its first "blanket party" for students, faculty and townspeople. Fraternities and sororities have been asked to take part in the program also.

The program will begin at about 10 o'clock on the night of Nov. 5, following a special pep rally. On Nov. 6, the Tar Heels will play South Carolina.

A parade, commencing in Y-Court at 9 p.m., will end in the Upper and Lower Quad courtyards. Cheerleaders and band will lead the pep rally until 10:30.

From 10:30 until midnight, Capps will broadcast "Our Best To You" directly from Lower Quad.

Capps will bring with him a five floor show, featuring David Phipps baritone; Chee-Chee and Tom Davis, Nashville dancing team; a girls' trio from Peace College in Raleigh, and Becky Lee (Miss Dunn, 1954), who will do pantomines.

The show will be a preview of a television show Capps is planning.

Raleigh Street will be blocked off for dancing. Those who don't want to dance will sit on blankets on Lower and Upper Quad courts.

Capps has said his radio show—from 10:30 until midnight Mondays through Fridays—has received better than 100.000 pieces of mail, much of it from Carolina, in its eight years. He said his show has imitators from Richmond to Atlanta. A F80 jet airplane in Korea is named for the program, too.

Photo Exhibit

A photographic exhibit, "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, is now on display at Person Hall.

The pictures, taken in the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts, show the growth of musical life in that part of the country.

Holman Talks On Counselling

Dr. C. Hugh Holman, Chairman of the College of Arts and Sciences,, spoke on "Academic Counselling" recently in Carroll Hall.

Dr. Holman was the featured speaker of an Inter-Service-Training Program for the personnel staff of the Dean of Women and for other interested persons on campus, the second in a series of five programs.

Speaking on "Academic Counselling," Dr. Holman outlined the present academic advisory system and discussed the policies and frequent points of difficulty regarding absences and attendances. Emphasis was upon the regulations, responsibilities and active obligations of women students, and the procedures set up to help the student meet them.

Dr. Holman received his Bachelor of Science, magna cumlaude, with a major in chemistry and a minor in biology in June, 1936. In June, 1938, he graduated cum laude with a Bachelor of Arts, majoring in English and minoring in history.

Dr. Holman was Director of public relations at Presbyterian College, 1936-39; Director of radio and instructor in English, Presbyterian College, 1939-1942; part-time instructor in English at Presbyterian College, 1942-1944; editor of Jacobs Press, 1942-1944; state publicity, South Carolina Council for National Defense, 1942-1944; Academic coordinator and physics instructor, 2199th AAFBase Unit, 1944-1945; Academic Dean, Presbyterian College, 1945-1946.

His Ph.D was received at the University of North Carolina in 1949. He became Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1953 and Chairman of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1954.

Nineteen Students Are Named Student Legislature Delegates

After a full week of holding interviews for membership in the UNC Delegation to the North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly (SSL), the Selection Board met Friday night, and after four hours of deliberations, announced those who will compose the delegation.

All members of the delegation will meet Wednesday night at 9 p.m. in the Grail Room for the first delegation meeting. Any member who is absent from this first meeting without excuse will be dropped from the delegation.

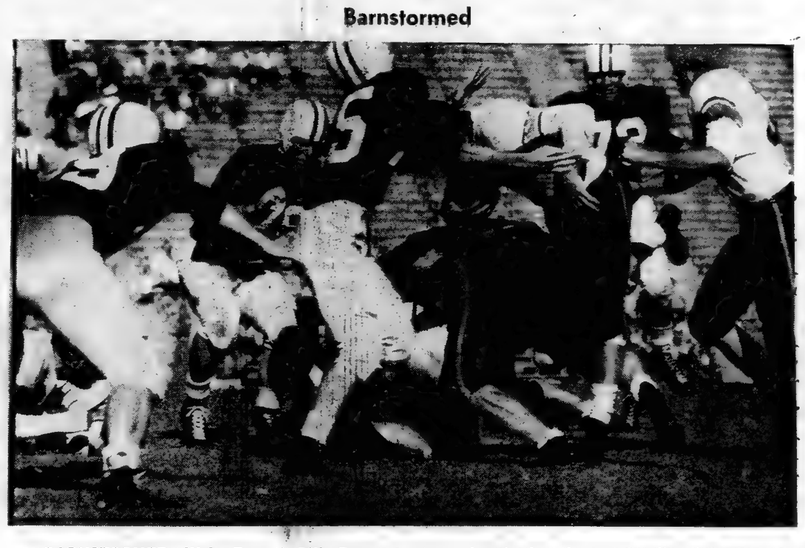
The following were designated as alternates: Dick Albert, Tom Bennett, Norwood Bryan, Tom Creasy, Max Crohn, Ruth Dalton, Bob Harrington, Scotty Hester, Al Isaac, Bill Moore, Lloyd Shaw, Luanne Thornton and Frank Warren.

The North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly will meet in Raleigh November 18, 19 and 20.



Campus Wheels To Speak

Freshmen students will have an opportunity to see many of UNC's student leaders and hear each speak on "Extra Curricular Activities" at the YMCA Freshman Fellowship Meeting set for tomorrow night in the South Dining Rom of Lenoir Hall. The program is slated to start at 6:30; students planning to eat are asked to go through the line at 6 o'clock.

Topping the list of six speakers is Student Government President Tom Creasy. Others will be Rueben Leonard, editor of "Tarnation;" Bob Young, sophomore class president; Gordon Forrester, GMAB chief; Joel Fleishman, Dialectic senate head, and Bob Hyatt, president of the YMCA. Each speaker will speak four minutes on a particular phase of extra-curricular activities and how freshmen are taking part.

Ed Sutton Scores Twice As Tar Heels Snap Slump Against Deacons, 14-7

Also Ends Deac Threat With Fumble Recovery Near Goal

By BERNIE WEISS
DTH Assistant Sports Editor

Halfback Ed Sutton scored two touchdowns and recovered a Wake Forest fumble deep in Carolina territory in the last minute of the game, averting a possible score for the opposition, to pace the Tar Heels as they defeated the Demon Deacons, 14-7, at Kenan Stadium yesterday before 24,000 fans.

Immediately after Sutton's recovery, killing the Wake Forest threat, tempers on both teams flared and a riot began on the field. It was brought to a halt when the benches of both teams raced to the scene and pulled the fighters apart.

It was Sutton's ball-carrying which pepped up Carolina's offensive attack and gave Coach George Barclay's their second victory of the year, snapping a two-game losing streak. The fleet halfback also scored a third touchdown but it was nullified when the Tar Heels were penalized for clipping.

Averaged 31.7 Yards

Sutton carried only four times, two of these going for a score. In his four carries, he ran up 127 yards, more than half of Carolina's total. His average was 31.7 yards per carry.

His first tally came toward the end of the initial period on a 21-yard run. Ken Keller's placement was good to give the Tar Heels a 7-0 lead which stood until the third quarter when Sutton broke loose on a 77-yard jaunt to paydirt. Keller's attempted conversion was good again to make it 14-0.

Wake Forest tallied on an 82-yard drive, terminating when Nick Maravic took it over from the one. Charles Topping kicked the placement.

Carolina's offense, which was superb in the first half, lagged in the second half of the game and it was Sutton who hung up the Tar Heels' only first down during this session. Prior to the contest, Sutton was averaging eight and a half yards per carry. He's toted the pigskin only 12 times all season.

Sutton, a pre-med student, is at-

"We'll Beat Vols," Say Tar Heels

By CHALMERS POSTON

The Carolina players poured into the dressing room, jubiliant over their 14-7 victory over Wake Forest. It was their best game of the year and they were very satisfied that this was it . . . .that this was the game that they needed to make them a football team.

George Foti, blood showing on his jersey, commented with a smile: "we'll beat Tennessee now tht we've started going." The players slapped each other on the back, repeatedly saying "nice game."

The players talked about the fight in the closing moments. Len Bullock said that he was not unhappy about the fight. "We won the game and that's what counts." Bullock pulled off his jersey and the red welts on his body showed that it was a rough game.

Line Coach Marvin Bass came in and made the rounds, congratulating each player. Bass had no comment on the game or the fight. Just then head coach George Barclay came in, and

TV To Serve Whole State

The aim of the Consolidated University's educational television station WUNC-TV, scheduled to begin operation late this fall, is to serve the entire state.

That point was emphasized by Provost J. Harris Purks, chairman of the Programming Council, composed of representatives of the three institutions, in an address before the Chapel Hill Rotary Club recently.

Hhe said that although telecasts directly from the transmitter here will be limited to a radius of around 100 miles, many of the programs will be carried all over the state through hookups or through kinescope recordings.

One of the primary objectives of the station, which will have studios on each of the three University campuses at Raleigh, Greensboro and here, will be to present the various social and economic aspects of the life of the state, to the end that improvements may be indicated, Provost Purks explained.

Although it will be strictly a non-commercial station, with em-

50-Some Bands & No Bushy

By FRED POWLEDGE

Although Bushy Cook wasn't there, Jim Fountain was recuperating from glandular fever and Carolina didn't start yelling until after the Tar Heels made their second touchdown, Kenan Pines rocked yesterday afternoon.

It was a good football afternoon.

Four thousand musical instruments, from 50-some North Carolina high school bands, played the "Anvil Chorus."

The boys from Old West Dormitory yelled for Miss "B" in Belmont (the curvesome high school majorette who took most eyes off the game last year—an autographed picture of her hangs in Old West to this day—they chose her their mascot) when they saw the Miss "S" in Shelby.

The Jones Pork Sausage airplane was there, flying higher than usual. (Couple of weeks ago, the pilot of the Jones ship was brought to court for flying too low over the Dook Stadium.)

Fellow wth a parrot on his should was there, both he and the bird paying very close attention to the game.

Another fellow jumped up and down when he saw the fight break out on the field. "Hot dog," he said to his date. "This is like the old days.'

And Bob Colbert, who manages to find his way into any University function, was there with his sidelines pass tied to a button on his pocket.

Says Pres. Gray:

University's Work Not Through

PRESIDENT GORDON GRAY
". . .but there are many objectives . . ."

(Editor's note: Following is a report on the president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, as seen by the chief of PNC's News Bureau. Recently The Daily Tar Heel printed a sketch of Gordon Gray, by Reporter Charles Childs, in which Gray's relations with his students were discussed. Now, part of the story of the president and his university:)

By ROBERT MADRY
Director, UNC News Bureau

Gordon Gray, rounding out four years as president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, feels the University is serving the state in a magnificent way and thoroughly justifies the support given it.

But he takes an extremely modest view of his own part in the University's progress during the period.

"The demonstrable accomplishments which exist have been the result of the dedicated efforts of the people of our three institutions," Gray says, "but there are many objectives we have not been able to reach so far.

"I'm convinced that much more needs to be accomplished to reach the level of excellence that all of us are trying to attain."

Gray's associates, however, take a more optimistice view of the situation. They saw that in his typically modest way he has underrated his personal achievements as well as those of the University in general.

One associate says Gray "has set such a fast, hardworking pace that none of us can keep up with him.

"He puts his mind, heart, soul and body into every job he undertakes and he has a deep-rooted passion for excellence and fair play. It is understandable, therefore, that he always strives for but seldom feels that he has achieved perfection."

Gray resigned as secretary of the Army in 1950 to accept the presidency of the Consolidated University, which includes the university here at Chapel Hill, North Carolina State College in Raleigh and Women's College at Greensboro.

Gray was named by a nominating committee which had spent more than a year seeking a successor to Frank P. Graham. Gray received the unanimous vote of the Board of Trustees.

In the last four years the Consolidated University has experienced a rapid growth in enrollment, physical facilities, state appropriations, private endowments and gifts, new schools and departments and in the variety of courses offered.

Gray emphasized in his inaugural address that he felt the University should "serve every man, woman and child in the state, rich or poor, planter or tenant, executive or worker."

He reported recently that an informal survey showed that the university now touches directly in an educational way more than two million people of North Carolina, approximately half the state's population.

"While many thousands of those educational services have been rendered at the three institutions," Gray said, "the great bulk of them have been off the campuses, thru such activities as extension classes, correspondence instruction, agriculutral demonstrations, the North Carolina Symphony, the Gaston Technical Institute and in many other ways."

The mission of the University, Gray says, is to "become and continue to be the brain, the nerve center, the heart and the conscience and the will of the state."

Two years ago Gray inaugurated a faculty conference on "The State of the University." Approximately 200 representatives of the three faculties were invited to participate for the purpose of examining basic educational problems and procedures at the three institutions.

The first conference proved so successful it has become an annual affair. Many of the recommendations growing out of the first two conferences already have been adopted.

A number of organizational changes have been made or are being made as the result of a management survey Gray instituted two years ago with the approval of the trustees. He felt some changes were necessary due to "the significant growth and expansion of the University."

Another of his goals is closer cooperation between the University and the public schools of the state.

Gray continues to work long hours, but he manages to find time for an occasional round of golf. He generally arrives at his office between 8 and 8:30 a. m. and often is there until 6:30 or 7 p. m. His general health is excellent, although he looks somewhat older than his 45 years.

On several occasions Gray has taken time from his duties at the University to accept special government and other assignments.

Young Demos Slate Rally Next Friday

State Commissioner L. Y. ("Stag") Ballentine will be principal speaker at the Sixth District Young Democrats Rally to be held next Friday at Carrboro High School.

Sixth District Chairman Bob Windsor, UNC law student, said Ballentine will deliver the main address. Other speakers will include Carl Durham, sixth district state representative, John Jordan, state YDC president and John Umstead, state congressman.

The speakers will follow an old-fashioned barbecue and Brunswick stew supper, which will begin at 6 p. m. Tickets for the supper will go on sale this week in Lenoir Hall and may also be bought from YDC officers. Price is $1.

The rally will be held for sixth district members and will include the local YDC, along with clubs from Guilford, Alamance, Orange and Durham counties. Arrangements have been made for delegations from Woman's College, Greensboro College and Duke to attend the rally.

A square dance in the school gym will follow the speeches.

Ken Youngblood is chairman of the rally. Bob Graham and Jim Lomax are in charge of ticket sales, delegations and arrangements. Youngblood, Graham and Lomax are law students here.

'But Sir—You're Just A Teacher, & I, After All, Am A Frat Man!'

The bill introduced into the Legislature Thursday night asking the abolition of quizes that conflict with fraternity rushing is a remarkably shortsighted measure that deserves a quick death.

It is hard to believe that the decline of our academic aspirations has proceeded so far that rushing is now seen as more important than class work, but that is apparently what has taken place.

Let the Legislature remember that the teaching role of the University must remain paramount. When, on this campus, teachers prepare their class schedules to conform to the whims of fraternity row or any other organized group, we have surrendered our last claim to scholastic integrity.

Whither TV?

Something strange, exciting and significant happened recently on the streets of downtown London.

Thousands of man-on-the street John Bulls filed every day alongside ruins of an ancient temple. Their acute interest was astounding; but, strangest of all, the flux of ordinary Londoners demanded that the temple be restored and allowed to stand.

The temple, dedicated to the pagan god Mithras, was erected by the Romans during their conquest of London. As building excavations progressed in a busy commercial district of the city, the temple was unearthed by the spades and machines of workmen.

What significance did the Londoners' strange request have? The explanation, according to Harold Hobson in the Christian Science Monitor, was not that the British have suddenly discovered that Virgil was a great poet, or that the Romans invented a very fine legal system, or that the Romans conceived hot baths and central heating.

"No," says the correspondent, "surprising as it may seem, the explanation is television. Television, which is blamed for its puerility, its tales of violence, its serials that wake up grownups to sleep long before bedtime, now blushingly finds itself responsible for causing the biggest outburst of classical enthusiasm among ordinary people that can be remembered since the Roman legions left these islands 1,500 years ago."

Television is, and has been, guilty of a number of sins. But this London incident, if we are not mistaken, marks some handwriting on the wall for the television industry if it will only read. Television, as a mass educational medium, has noble calling and possibilities. Television need not be the hobgoblin in he intellectual's closet; and the programs on television screens need not be an opiate of the people. As is so graphically shown here, television may be a galvanizing stimulus to the mass mind as well as a deadening drug. The choice is up to television sponsors and producers.

We have a feeling that the broad range of television watchers want, and will sooner or later demand, to have programs more stimulating than most of the present fare coming into their parlors.

Stained Rock Only Clue To Love Mystery

Louis Kraar

ABOVE A purple-misted valley just east of Chapel Hill stands a monument to the University's most mysterious student love triangle.

The monument—a blood-red stained rock — stands beside Gimghoul Castle. And that stain is the only clue to the mysterious disappearance of one Peter Dromgoole, a student at the University more than 100 years ago.

The locale of this saga of Carolina and a broken heart is called Piney Prospect, the site of the castle that resembles a fortress of pre-Norman England.

Dromgoole rock is there, a huge boulder with reddish discolorations, close beside the castle. This rock is supposed to cover the hurried grave of Peter Dromgoole.

There are several versions of the tale, but one written by a member of the Dromgoole family goes something like this:

PETER Dromgoole, son of a prominent Virginia family, entered the University here in 1831. History leaves evidence that he was somewhat reckless and unsteady, fond of card playing and wild company.

Peter fell desperately in love with a girle called Fanney. The object of his affections lived in Chapel Hill. (There were no coeds then.)

He and his girl chose Piney Prospect as their favorite trysting place.

Another admirer sought the affections of Peter's young girl friend Fanny, but he had been rejected in favor of Peter. In a fit of rage, the rejected suitor challenged the young Virginian to a duel.

Peter accepted the challenge. Seconds were chosen. And on a night when the moon was high over Piney Prospect, the contenders met there.

The members of the party stepped off the distance. There was a signal. Pistols flashed. Peter Dromgoole swayed and fell, blood oozing from a wound in his chest.

His second said that as he lay there he cried out that it was terrible to die when life was young and hopes bright. And, as death drew nearer, he called out the names of his mother and sweetheart.

The surviving rival secured tools and, with the two seconds, buried the newly-dead student under the big rock. Fanny is said to have died of a broken heart the next year.

TODAY RED stains still remain on the rock under which Peter was supposed to have been buried. The rains, the frosts, the snows of centuries haven't erased the dark splotches, according to the legend.

Whether Peter Dromgoole was shot to death will never be known. It is a fact, however, that Peter Dromgoole did come from Virginia to study at Chapel Hill more than a century ago. It is also known that he disappeared in some mysterious fashion and to this day has never been heard of.

Members of the University Geology Department consider the red splotches rust stains coming from metallic content of the stone.

An exclusive social group was founded in 1899 on campus—The Order of the Gimghouls. And even this group has uncovered nothing more of the strange disappearance of Peter Dromgoole.

Piney Prospect still is an occassional trysting place for Carolina students. But the answer to the mystery of Peter Dromgoole—like the purple mist in the valley is still far off and strange.

Ike Snubs Ali

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — The Prime Minister of Pakistan, our most important ally in the Middle East, abruptly canceled his visit in the United States and Canada last Thursday and flew back home.

He had news om political trouble in Pakistan and he was also given a series of personal brush-offs in Washington.

Even though he received a jovial semi-apology from President Eisenhower, his entourage made no bones about the fact that he had been snubbed.

The series of brush-offs began when the White House changed the Prime Minister's schedule at the last minute because Eisenhower was delayed by hastily arranged political speeches. Mohammed Ali was told he had to be in Washington between October 14 and 16, even though this interfered with an honorary degree he was receiving from Columbia on October 15. Nevertheless, he complied.

Arriving in Washington, he found neither the President nor Secretary of State Dulles at the airport to greet him—not even Vice President Nixon. And a chief of state is supposed to meet another chief of state.

In an effort to keep his engagement with Columbia University, Mohammed Ali tried to fly to New York on October 15, but Hurricane Hazel interfered, causing him to take a train at 4 a.m., Ocotber 15, then return to Washington on a 12:30 a.m. train next morning.

He got back to the Capital a bit sleepy-eyed for the White House lunch finally given for him on Saturday. But Mrs. Eisenhower failed to entertain Ali's very attractive wife, The Begum.She was not invited to the White House at all. To make up for this, the Pakistan Embassy gave a reception in her honor for the wives of Southeast Asia Ambassadors.

On top of all this, The President of Liberia came to town while the Prime Minister of Pakistan was still here and got the super-duper kid-glove treatment with all the trimmings, including a parade down Constitution Avenue, a special greeting at the airport, plus a tour all over the eastern USA, with Republican politicians falling over each other to get the Negro President to visit cities with heavy Negro populations.

Meanwhile, Mohammed Ali was supposed to go to Canada. At the last minute, however, Premier St. Laurent asked him to wait a few days, because he, too, was busy campaigning. This was too much for Mohammed Ali. He notified the Prime Minister of Canada that he was canceling his trip. Shortly thereafter, he got word that he faced political trouble at home, so he packed up and flew back to Pakistan.

Just before he left, however, the State Department woke up to the fact that Mohammed Ali was about to go away mad. Hurriedly, it announced that the USA would extend $105,000,000 economic aid to Pakistan. It's just barely possible that he got more money because his feeings were hurt. Anyway, it was five times what he got last year. So Mohammed Ali flew home happy.

Liberia & Georgia

President Tubman of Liberia has been advised to decline politely the invitation of Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia to visit the native state of Tubman's mother.

The Negro President of the Negro republic will go to Georgia, but not to be the guest of

HERMAN TALMADGE

. . . no formality for Pres. Truman

Governor Talmadge. This is because his political advisers, including Carl Murphy, publisher of the Afro-American, warned him vigorously against it. Any dealing with the Governor who made segregation such a bitter issue, they advised, would subject President Tubman to criticism from Negroes all over the United States as wesl as at home where he faces an election campaign.

The Talmadge invitation was considered so important and so full of potential danger that Murphy's warning was relayed to President Tubman by Liberian Ambassador Clarence L. Simpson well before the President left Libera. When he received it , President Tubman was disturbed. He didn't want to reject the invitation of an American governor and he did not quite understand why Talmadge was so hated by American Negroes.

So he had Ambassador Simpson fly all the way to Liberia for a one-day conference at which it was explained that the Governor of Georgia had vowed Negroes would be admitted to white schools only over his dead body.

As a result, President Tubman will go to Georgia to receive a degree from Atlanta University, but not visit Governor Talmadge.

Holy Smoke

Advisers might start calling cigarettes made from Maryland tobacco "Holy Smokes" when they hear about this. Following Hrricane Hazel, many Southern Maryland farmers were left with no place to keep their tobacco. Their drying barns had been destroyed by the storm.

But among the offers of help came one from Rev. Samuel Robb, S. J., Pastor of St. Michael's Church, Ridge, Md., who told his parishioners they could use the school hall and even the church, if necessary, to dry their tobacco.

We've hung up holly and Christmas greens in the church," he said. "In an emergency like this, I'm sure the Lord wouldn't be offended by the smell of tobacco if you have nowhere else to dry it."

Merry-Go-Round

Lamar Caudle went down to Ocean Drive, S. C., just after Hurricane Hazel hit and couldn't even locate his former beach cottage. Not a stick of furniture, not a sign of the building except the toilet bowl. The entire 22-mile row of beach houses had gone, except for row upon row of white toilets. The plumbing anchored them to the ground... Dr. Johan Bjorksten will unveil the home of the future before the National Academy of Sciences next week—made entirely of plastics—plexi-glass walls, plastic pipes, and fibre glass doors—completely plastic from top to bottom... James Selvage, the public relations tycoon, is in hot water with his partners for smearing Congressman Case in the New Jersey Senate race.

YOU Said It

Stern Examination Of Honor

Editor:

I would like to refute some rather confusing journalism which appeared on the front page of DTH Oct. 21 in the article on the debate the Philanthropic Literary Society conducted.

The Daily Tar Heel printed, and I quote; "Albert approved the bill as it stood." I did not approve the leniency bill. I approved the honor system as it stands, and as it will stand no matter what the result is of the legislation concerning the bill. what I did approve concerning the bill was that it showed the sincere interest and importance the honor system holds in the minds of many on the campus. The desire to help the violator is completely commendable, but I felt there were more dangerous ramifications in the bill as far as the interpretation of honor is concerned.

The other reference, which as it stands pictures me as a young Abe Lincoln, is the paragraph, "Reid asked Albert if he had always been honest to everyone. Albert answered 'Yes'." That's not the substance of Albert's answer, as anyone present at the debate will tell you. The question proposed by Mr. Reid was whether I had always been honorable. I said that to the best of my knowledge, with allowance for my interpretation of honor at different ages, I had always been honorable. This doesn't mean I have been scrupulously honest. Possibly at the age of 7 I stole a particularly attractive toy from the boy across the street. If so, I don't maintain any lingering recriminations about it. I recognize the fact that a sense of right and wrong develops gradually, and with varying degrees of emphasis in different people. However, I am sure you all recognize the difference between stealing marbles at the age of 7, and cheating on an examination at the age of 20.

I am not familiar with the etymology of the word Honor; I am aware that it has a variety of meanings. It has certainly run the gamut of interpretation this week. Permit me to jump aboard the bandwagon and deposit my two cents worth of interpretation to the coin collection.

In arguments and discussions in the last few days, I have encountered several students who actually do not believe in the existance of honor. Perhaps the history of mankind, and his present actions, support such a contention. There are others who feel that since Christ was the only wholly honorable man, we who claim to have honor are hypocrites. These are the citizens of tomorrow! These men, and you, dear reader; you will elect officials, enter business, raise families. What stamp does our generation deserve? How much do we think about the heritage we will pass on to our children? We do not want to be considered a "Lost General tion." We have already been called the "silent generation." I certainly hope we are not to be called the weak generation, one which resigns itself to letting the other fellow improve the world. We are weak, if we would compromise something as inflexible as honestly merely to alleviate its stern results on the hapless violator. Let him leave the University in shame. Let him disgrace his name, his parents; but do not permit him to develop even a shred of the idea that there is an easy way out of a tight spot. I would prefer he learn a stern lesson in his youth, when it is easier to correct, than have him learn it at the expense of others as a businessman, or a government official 20 years from now: when he would disgrace not only his name, but the integrity of his friends, and possibly his nation.

Remember this well. If you do not have a firm idea of the meaning, the far-reaching meaning of personal honor, then you had better forego a few dances, parties and football games, and spend a quiet moment or two considering what your responsibility is to yourself, your school, and to the future history of the world.

Didn't he mean, preposition . . .?

I understood. And the work?

"Gate-crashng," The Horse said. "Louise Lamont's Pulpit Players are putting on a show tonight—Sunday—and again on Thursday night, eight post-meridian. Christopher Fry's The Boy With A Cart. Well, when the ticket-takers see my gear, they will wave me in, free, thinking I'm going to pull the cart. I'm a real sharp hossie, I am!"

About as sharp as a meatball, I viewed him. The Boy With A Cart was being presented gratis, with the privilege to the audience of paying One Dollar toward sustaining expenses for the season, and nothing complusory about it.

"What?" The Horse glared menacingly at me. "Free? A play by the author who wrote Cocktail Party? Free, a play by the selfsame author of The Lady Is Not For Burning?

Yes, indeed. The Pulpit Players showed at the Baptist Church.

"You want people to think I'm a cheapskate, going to an affair where no dough is charged?" The Horse stretched out in front of Goody's and stared in the windows dejectedly. "Anyway, who ever heard of anything free being worthwhile looking at?"

How about That Something In Black, pre-Dior, I had seen The Horse eyeing? What did he pay to look at that?

"Plenty," The Horse said sadly. "Dottie O'Mare heard about it and I had to take her to The Carolina Inn Cafeteria, and you know what the prices there are now!" The Horse eyed me closely. "No kidding, you think I should go see The Boy With A Cart anyway, to-night and Thursday at eight p. m., at the Baptist Theater? Give me a reason! Anyway, what is a play doing in a theater, riddle me that!"

I answered the last, first. The Theater had started with Religious sponsorship: in Greece, five hundred years before the Christian churches; in church after A.D. in Italy, France, England. I thought everybody knew that?

"If you do, Roger, everybody must know it." The Horse tried to cover his ignorance with a gratuitous insult. "So you agree with me that The Church is the proper place for a stage play. We may agree that the Follies might be excepted? Continue!"

All right. Other reasons The Horse and everybody else who could do so, should see The Boy With A Cart, were, it was funny, it had a bang up cast, it was the work of the same author who had wowed Broadway at big prices. Also, it had in it crystal poetry!

"Yeah," The Horse ruminated, mentally and actually, "those are the same reasons I have in mind. But why should a good thing be given away free?"

Was The Horse, then, one of those cretans who might like a beautiful thing, but didn't dare buy it unless the price on it indicated that it had snob-value? What of Culture?

"Exactly," The Horse agreed, managing somehow to make the argument his own. "Cultoor, right down to the unguled. pedalists, that's me! What else?"

Look who was in it, among others! Jo-Fine Sharkey herself! Walter Spearman, of The School of Journalism! Dick Pelton who starred in The Last Unemployed American, one of the Summer Playmaker productions!

"A beautifully written opus," The Horse agreed instantly. "Next?"

Lighting by Harvey Whetstone! Costumes that were at once simple, artful and pleasing! Hadn't The Horse heard it said that it was not so much a wonder that stage plays got to Broadway as it was that plays that got to Broadway failed, there was so much of lavish costuming, beautiful scenery, top-acting talent, and road tryouts and rehearsals before they hit Big Time? The only trick in that, as a rule, was getting the financial backing to put the play over.

"You took the words out of my mouth," The Horse said reproachfully. "Next?"

Among the younger talent in the show was Gloria Di Constanza, who had starred in another Summer Playmaker production.

"Huh? You mean, that blood-curdling, gripping stark drammer yclept The Funeral Director?" The Horse asked excitedly. "Another magnificently written opus!"

No: I meant that third Playmaker Summer show. What was the name of it? A beautifully directed job, starring Lee Edwards, U. S. N.; Cynthia Herrin; Gloria Di Constana; Pearl Fischel; and Gene Parsons!

"The Three Leading Families, or, Boiled In Mount Olive Oil?" The Horse suggested, scratching his muzzle with a hoof. "Well, no matter. Next?"

Well, if The Horse had to have other reasons—the play was directed by Louise Lamont. Louise Lamont, Playmaker star, dramatic-coaach, cousin of Tullulah Bankhead's!

Jim Beatty Sets Course Record In Cross-Country Meet

Tennessee Edges By Dayton, 14-7

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 23 (AP)—Underdog Dayton put up an unexpectedly stiff fight today before bowing to Tennessee 14-7 in an intersectional football game.

The Vols were pushed to the limit to overcome the scrapping Flyers. Weak, kicking proved costly to the Ohioans, who yielded both touchdowns to Tennessee after short out-of-bounds kicks.

A short out-of-bounds kick set the stage for the Vols' touchdown in the fourth period. The ball sailed out on Dayton's 45 and Tennessee capitalized on the break to score in nine plays, P. T. Oleksiak diving over from the 1.

Duke Tops N. C. State, 21-7

RALEIGH, Oct. 34—(AP)— After getting off to a shaky start, Duke's Blue Devils downed N. C. State, 21-7, here tonight.

The way the fired-up State team started off, it looked like an upset was in the making. Pint-sized halfback George Marinkov, a sophomore from Lebanon, Pa., raced the kickoff from his goal to the 42. From there the Wolfpack launched a touchdown drive which featured a 28-yard run by Marinkov.

Fumbles kept Duke in hot water during the first period. Barger fumbled on his 33 and State quarterback Eddie West recovered. But the Wolfpack lost the ball on downs on the Duke 24.

Rice Noses Out Texas In Squeaker, By 13-7 Score

HOUSTON, Oct. 23. (AP) — Speedster Dicky Moegle specialized in short gains today while leading his Rice Owls to a 13-7 Southwest Conference victory over traditional rival Texas before a crowd of 17,000, the largest in Houston football history.

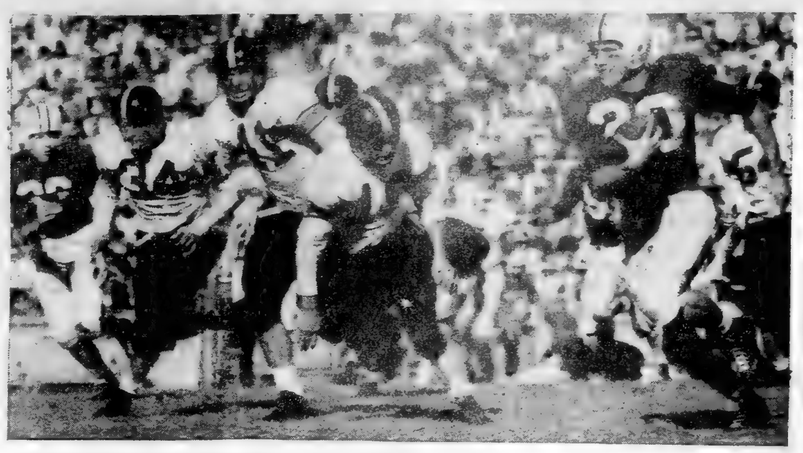
Moegle's longest gain of the day was for 12 yards but he finished with a net of 105 yards rushing in 21 carries while taking prominent roles in both Rice touchdowns.

After Moegle had climaxed a 72-yard first quarter drive by scoring from the 4, Texas gained a 7-7 tie in the second when Halfback Edward Hawkins circled left end from the 4.

Fullback Mac Taylor scored the tie-breaker late in the third period, ramming over from the 2.

W. Virginia Stomps VMI 20-6, To Stay Undefeated

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Oct. 23. (AP)—Unbeaten West Virginia's 10th-ranked Mountaineers crumpled Virginia Military Institute 40-6 in a Southern Conference football game here today with a powerful ground attack the Keydets were helpless to contain.



A "Coal Bowl" crowd of 11,500 watched the Mountaineers score in every quarter with overwhelming assaults through the outweighed Keydet line.

Clever quarterbacking by Freddy Wyatt and a horde of hard-running backs crushed the Keydets early in the game, but they stiffened slightly in the third period and sent Frank Boxley over left tackle from the WVA 14 for the only VMI score.

WA Halfback Jack Rabbits sped 46 yards to the VMI 10 in the third period for the most spectacular run of the game, and quarterback Walter Beene scored from the 10.

Money Found

A sizeable sum of money was found Tuesday night in front of the circulation desk of the main library. The claimant may inquire at the desk for Dr. Orr after 6 p. m. The lost and found department of the library is also to be located at the circulation desk in the future.

ED SUTTON skirts his own left end for 21 yards to put the Tar Heels ahead in the first period of yesterday's upset victory over Wake Forest. This was the first of two touchdown jaunts by Sutton.

Purdue Dumps Spartans; QB Lenny Dawson Stars

EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 23. (AP)—Lenny Dawson, Purdue's sensational sophomore quarterback, passed for three touchdowns and kicked as many extra points to lead his team to a 27-13 Big Ten decision today over Michigan State.

A homecoming turnout of 52,619, largest crowd ever to jam into Macklin Stadium, saw the Michigan State Spartans score first but then lose their fourth game in five starts because of Dawson's inspired throwing attack.

Dawson threw touchdown passes in the first, second, and third periods. Ed Zembal went over from the one-foot line for another score in the fourth period to cap the Boilermakers' scoring.

Purdue was on the MSC 34 when Dawson sailed his first scoring pass to Len Zyzda, standing on the four. Another Purdue surge carried 97 yards in the second quarter with Dawson passing to Zembal in the end zone for the score.

In the third quarter Dawson connected with Jim Whitmer in the clear on the 35, in a pass play that carried 73 yards.

In the opening quarter, the Spartans went 68 yards in 11 plays for their first score, Bert Zagers going the final six. In the third period, the Spartans went the length of the field to score with Leroy Bolden blasting the last six thru the middle of the line.

Cadets Turn Loose Steam, Roll Over Lions By 67-12

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. (AP)—Army's fast developing football team crushed Columbia today 67-12, the highest score ever made in a series that began in 1899.

Everyone on the Army bench got into the battle and 10 men had a hand in the scoring. Columbia fumbles were responsible for five Army touchdowns. The longest run of the game was made at the start of the second half, when the Cadets' Tom Bell dashed 68 yards for a touchdown.

This also was the highest score ever run up against a team coached by Lou Little, who this year is celebrating his 25th year as head coach at Columbia.

tending the University on a $4,800 Morehead Scholarship.

Wake Forest threatened to abolish the Carolina lead in the closing minutes of the game. The Deac offense, led by John Parham, Topping and Bill Barnes, had been kicking around all day, but finally began to move with emphasis as the game dre wto a close. In the last period alone the Deacons totaled eight first downs.

After they scored their first touchdown, kicked off and Carolina was forced to punt, Wake Forest moved down to the UNC 7-yard line. At this point Leo Ward, Wake halfback, fumbled on a line buck and Sutton recovered to kill the drive. The play was getting rough when Tar Heel quarterback Len Bullock was thrown rather heavily on a sneak. Within a pile-up, fists began to move with purpose. The officials banished Wake Forest's Burt Harrison from the game but that didn't help. Within seconds both elevens were trading blows. Both teams then came onto the field and quelled the disturbance.

Fans were kept out of the battle by police stationed at the entrances to the stands.

Offense Good

The Carolina offense looked like that of the days of old in the first half. Barclay alternated two "first teams" and one operated as well as the other. Between thm, Carolina had nine first downs by intermission with 145 yards total rushing. The passing was also up to form, with 49 yards.

Fullback Marshall Newman did most of the aerial work, completing three in the game for 25 yards. Bullock completed a pair for 16 yards.

The Wake Forest highly touted passing attack failed to materialize. Nick Consoles, the No. 1 aerial artist in the Atlantic Coast Conference, completed only two for 30 yards.

Carolina tallied its first touchdown in lightning-like fashion. The Tar Heels gainel possession when Wake's Nick Consoles punted out to the Carolina 47. Quarterback Al Long entered the game for UNC and on his first play swept around left end, faking his would-be tacklers out of position and moving to the Deacon 30. Sutton took over here, also running past left end on a pitchout from Long, and outraced three defenders to the goal. The time was 3:17 of the fihst quarter.

several people rushed over to congratulate him. Barclay broke out into a big smile and proceeded to shake hands around the room. Barclay later commented that the game-ending fight was one of those things that happen. It was evident that Barclay was ready to forgive and forget.

A spectator was standing in the middle of the room, holding a handkerchief to a bloody nose. A few players were talking to him trying to get the facts. Ed Sutton, who scored both of Carolina's touchdowns, walked by and the spectator with the bloody nose leaned over and shook hands with him. "Nice game." Sutton thanked him and went to take his shower.

The room was filling up with fans, friends, and lookers-on. Everyone seemed to be very happy over the outcome. One elderly gentleman stated that he would now take North Carolina even in the South Carolina game. Someone asked him about the Tennessee game and the elderly gentleman remarked that he still wants Carolina and seven. A player, walking by after his shower, stopped and said," After today, I'll give you Tennessee and seven."

Maryland Wins 3-Way Meet; Tar Babies Down Deac Frosh

Terrapins Victors Over Wake Forest, Tar Heels In Varsity Match Despite Beatty

Maryland's cross country team captured a three-way meet between the Terps, Carolina, and Wake Forest here yesterday, by taking five of the first seven places, despite the fact that Carolina sophomore Jimmy Beatty set a new course record in placing first.

Maryland's low winning score was 24, while the Tar Heels, managing to get only three men in the top ten, were second with 35 points. Wake Forest failed to get a man in the top 16 places, garnering 95 points.

the season in as many starts. Beatty was pushed by Maryland Soph Alva Grimm in establishing his record of 19 minutes and 42 seconds for the 3.9 miles, erasing a mark set by Carolina's Bob Barden of 20:05 against Tennessee last year. Beatty came down the homestretch just six seconds ahead of him, with Tar Heel veteran Bobby Barden 23 seconds behind him for third place.

Goode, Party, Fass, and New took the next four places for Maryland, with New edging Carolina's Glenn Nanney by only half a second.

Co-captains Tony Houghton and Don Wright rounded out Carolina's first five by finishing in eleventh and twelfth places.

Wake Forest, returning to the cross-country scene after several years layoff, had the last six men of the 22 running to account for their high score.

Although the Carolina freshmen did not have the services of three of their top runners, they still overwhelmed the Wake Forest freshmen, 16-51, as they captured the first four places and sixth place to miss a perfect score by one point.

Everett Whatley won his second meet in four outings, as he led three other Tar Babies, Ben Williams, John Sylvester, and Ray Montgomery to the top four spots.

A Wake Forest freshman, Mandrey, took fifth place and was followed by four Carolina men, Ronnie Austell, Nelson Wilder, William Gover and Lloyd Lohr.

Prior to the meet, Maryand had lost to State in their only meet, and Wake Forest had not run in competition, while Carolina had a 2-1 record, having lost to State also, and having defeated the University of Virginia and Richmond. The Carolina freshmen have lost only to State in their four meets to date, and today's victory left them with a 3-1 mark.

Sooners Drop Wildcats, 21-0

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 23. (AP)—Oklahoma failed to show the spark today that made it the nation's No. 1 football team but the Sooners still were good enough to toy with Kansas State and come up with a 21-0 Big Seven Conference decision.

The victory was Oklahoma's 14th straight and its 42nd consecutive game without a loss in the Conference. But the 48,000 fans watching the game were visibly bored by the lack of luster.

Wesley Play Set

By PAUL MASON

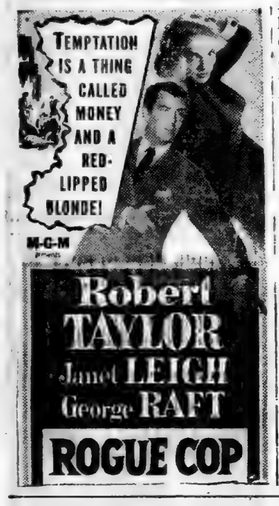
An interesting play is to be given next Saturday night at 7 o'clock at the Methodist Church. Entitled "The Sign of Jonah" the presentation, to be offered here by the Wesley Foundation, was written by a pastor in East Germany in the days following World War II. Intended as a church production, the play aroused popular interest and had an extended run in a theatre in West Berlin.

In it, the people see themselves in relation to the unbelievable horror of nearly 10 years of war, and try to understand their own responsibility for it. The somewhat surrealistic text indicates that this is applicable not only to Nazi Germany, but to the world as a whole.

For the author, Guenter Rutenborn sees the condition as it stands in regard to the personal guilt which Christianity states lies as a basic human condition. And from this comes the realization that even the most innocent bystander has direct personal responsibility for the condition of his time. And "condition" could be perhaps better phrazed by using the Christian term, which is sin.

But the play is written as this relates to our century, which it calls "one of the strangest of all ages . . . none more laden with blood and guilt." The face of the 20th century man, always with excuses to show that he is not the cause of his own fall, is pictured as a diabolical combination of cruelty, self-righteousness and emptiness. It has made itself bare of real religious feeling.

After a trial scene in which the Man of our age is willing even to lay the guilt for our times upon God—rather than accept it at his own door—finally it is shown that the guilt and the hope of redemption belong to man. And that it is he who is the real criminal.



As the audience sees this crisis of man, it becomes aware that it too is involved in the indictment—which extends to everyone. The presentation used helps get this message across, as well as the implication that Christianity is not only a message of guilt but of Hope.

In keeping with publisher's recommendations, the play is being given without cast credits of any kind. This is to assist in making the happenings seem less remote from the audience itself, making it more in the nature of an experience rather than just another dramatic presentation. Admission is free.

The presentation was made in New York, where the Ambassador attended the Plaza Theater premiere of the M-G-M picture "Valley of the Kings," which was filmed in Egypt on the site where Mr. El Mallakh made his sensational discovery of the tomb with its solar ships. Mr. El Mallakh becomes the first International honorary member of the National Cartoonists Society.

—Pres. Gray & His University—

In 1950 shortly after he assumed the presidency, Gray turned in to President Truman a special report on the foreign economic situation—a project he undertook as special assistant to the President after resigning as Secretary of the Army.

Gray was chairman of the Committee on Manpower of the American Assn. of Universities that recommended that military training be made compulsory for all high school graduates.

In 1951 President Truman appointed Gray director of the Psychological Strategy Board. In that capacity he coordinated the activities of all government agencies in directing the non-military aspects of the cold war with Russia.

More recently Gray served as chairman of a special three-man board that ruled atomic scientist J. Robert Oppenheimer should be barred form further access to atomic secrets because of one-time Communist associations. The board ruled 2-1 that Oppenheimer was a loyal American, but said he showed "poor judgment in continuing some of his past associations into the present." Gray, voting with the majority, said the assignment was the "most difficult" task his government has handed him.

The station will be able to operate until June 30, 1955, on the $1,200,000 contribution by organizations and individuals, including a $100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, Dr. Purks said.

After that the estimated cost of operation will be $200,000 a year, and the Commission on Radio and Television named by the governor during the 1953 Legislature has recommended that amount to the Advisory Budget Commission, he added.

It will be a Very High Frequency Station (VHF) which means that the programs can be received on television sets that people in this area already have, Provost Purks said.

The station is having a sort of informal opening this week at the State Fair where some telecasts are being made for this area through the cooperation of station WTVD in Durham.

The sophomore class will hold a class dance on Nov. 13, from 9 until 12 p. m. in Woollen Gym.

Plans are being made for the dance by the sophomore class officers and the Graham Memorial Activities Board Dance Committee. The Dance Committee is sharing half of the expenses of the dance.

The committees working on the dance and their chairmen are as follows: refreshments, Monica Justice, chairman; decorations, Jim Armstrong, chairman; publicity, Townsend Holt, chairman; tickets, Layton McCurdy, chairman, and sophomore hostesses, Anna Wyndley, chairman.

The sophomore class officers have urged that students who are interested in working on any of these committees contact the chairmen.

Class officers have been to Women's College and discussed plans for having girls over from the sophomore class there for the dance. They are expecting around 400 girls to arrive here at 8:30 on the night of the dance.

The tickets for the dance, which will be free, will be distributed by members of the sophomore class. Music will be provided by the Duke Ambassadors.

YMCA-YWCA Hold Meet

Student chaplains and ministers to students from North Carolina colleges gathered at Camp New Hope near here last week for the fall meeting of the North Carolina Association of Student Workers.

This group brings together the denominational and Student YMCA and YWCA staff from the state and private institutions of higher education in North Carolina. Officers of the association are the Rev. Ray Bost, Lutheran pastor to students at North Carolina State College, Raleigh; Miss Ann Hutchinson, Director of Religious Activies at the Women's College, Greensboro; and Rev. Harry E. Smith, Minister to Presbyterian Students, UNC.

Main speaker was Dr. J. Robert Nelson, Executive Secretary for the Commission on Faith and Order of the World Council of Churches, Geneva, Switzerland. A former director of the Wesley Foundation here, Dr. Nelson has also served as director of the Wesley Foundation at the University of Illinois and Study Secretary for the United Student Christian Council. He has been with the World Council of Churches for two years, guiding much of the preparation for the recent Evanston Assembly. Dr. Nelson received his B. D. degree from Yale University and his Ph. D. from Zurich, Switzerland.

The morning session of the conference was on the subject "The Scandal of the Church in the World and the University" and was led by Dr. Nelson. Following the luncheon and business meeting, the afternoon session concerned "Role of the Minister to Students." The opening worship was led by Mrs. Lester Milbreath, Executive Secretary of the YWCA here.

Lazy Literates

Tar Heel-Deacon Fight Is Termed Reflection On The ACC; Chancellor Comments

GREENSBORO (AP)—"I've been in football for nearly 40 years and never saw anything like it," observed Jim Weaver, Atlantic Coast Conference commissioner, yesterday in commenting on the free-for-all between Wake Forest and the University of North Carolina football players Saturday at Chapel Hill.

"It's just one of those things you can't anticipate," he said, adding, "It's a reflection on the entire conference, not merely the schools involved."

END WILL FRYE
...says he had no intention of injuring Consoles

Weaver, who saw the game, won by North Carolina, 14-7, said that any report of the four officials would have to come from the office of Wallace Wade, Southern Conference commissioner. The Southern's official booking office has been serving since the AAC's formation last year and will continue to do so through the coming basketball season. That was part of the agreement between the groups when they parted.

In Durham, Wade said that he had not received any report from the four officials or heard anything from either of the schools.

"All I know is what I've read in the papers," he declared. "However," he added, "officials make a routine report on each game to M. P. "Footsie" Knight, office secretary the week after a game. Knight and I often discuss these reports. As yet, none has been received. Of course, we are in a peculiar situation regarding the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Our office is concerned merely with the appointment and control of our officials in ACC games. If questions arise concerning players or representatives of ACC institutions that is a problem for the office of the ACC commissioners.

"From what I have read in appears that most of the trouble took place after the game when the officials no longer had control or responsibility."

George Barclay and T. P. "Chuck" Erickson, head football coach and athletic director, respectively, at the University of North Carolina, invited sports writers to Chapel Hill at any time to view movies of the game.

Simultaneously, Chancellor Robert B. House of the Chapel Hill institution asserted: "Athletic teams of the University of North Carolina have, we think, a national reputation for clean play and good sportsmanship. We have confidence that Coach Barclay and his staff adhere to these standards."

Weaver said he believed that as far as the players involved are concerned they will "forgive and forget, they don't carry such things. They probably could play again this week and have a fine game.

"North Carolina had done everything possible to prevent trouble. There were enough patrolmen and other help, it was unfortunate that the trouble flared up the very end of the game when many of the patrolmen had left the stadium to takeup their posts routing the traffic away from the game."

The conference may act to inflict stiff penalties through bylaw changes overing such outbreaks. Present regulations do not cover such a situation. The executive committee, meeting here yesterday, said it would propose such a regulation at the annual winter meeting here next month.

The meeting, originally scheduled Dec. 3, may be shifted to Dec. 10 to avoid conflict with the Dec. 4 South Carolina-Citadel football game.

The game Saturday had a wild finish, with North Carolina's end Will Frye and Wake Forest's Burt Harrison ejected. Wake Forest quarterback Nick Consoles lost three front teeth and suffered a bruised lip when elbowed by Frye. A free-for-all broke out as players went to the dresing rooms.

Dr. Harold W. Tribble, Wake Forest president, and Erickson saw athletic relationships between the schools endangered. North Carolina President Gordon Gray refined comment beyond, "I'm very sorry it happened."

Frye said he was carrying out a normal blocking assignment and had no intention of injuring Consoles.

Caldwell Monument Was Built For Man Devoted To Carolina

By BOB EBERLE

When the recent winds of Hurricane Hazel had finally subsided, and the students began to walk about observing the damage that particular storm had wrought, few paid any attention to the fact that a small marble monument in McCorkle Place had been knocked over by a falling tree.

To most of the students here this piece of stone has little meaning other than it is a monument to a man by the name of Joseph Caldwell, and that this man was the first president of the University, but behind the marble monument lies the story of a man who gave himself and his life to the establishment of this University back in the days when few cared whether this institution survived or not.

Joseph Caldwell was more than just the president of this University. He was an educator, mathematician, astronomer and above all a man with a great love for Carolina. Born in 1773, he came to the newly established University of North Carolina as a professor of mathematics in 1797, and because of his hard work and devotion to the University he became its first president in 1804. In 1812 he gave up the presidency but retained his seat as professor of mathematics, and continued to work toward the sound establishment of the University until in 1817 he again became UNC's president, and this position he kept until his death in 1835.

One of the most notable achievements while at Carolina was the erection of the first college observatory in America, and because of this and other noteworthy deeds he was offered a professorship at the University of South Carolina at a salary of $2,000 per year and the presidency in the near future. Though he was only earning $1,000 at the time he declined the offer and remained at this institution. In 1857 the marble monument was erected from funds collected by "The President of the United States, the Governor of North Carolina and other alumni." The monument erected "in grateful acknowledgement of their obligation to the first president of the University" now lies quietly on its side in McCorkle Place.

Coeds chosen for this, the highest women's honorary on campus are Marlyn Zager, Ruth Jones, Kendrick Townsend, Babbie Dilorio and Susan Fink.

The legend of the Valkyries has its origin in Norwegian mythology. In the court of the warrior Chief Odin, were nine select maidens, called Valkyries, who were daughters of the gods, and mortals as well. Their chief duty was to select the warriors to be slain on the field of battle, and carry them to the hall of fame, Valhalla.

The Valkyries, the women's equivalent to the Golden Fleece, was organized on the University of North Carolina campus in its present form in 1940 for the recognition of outstanding character, scholarship, leadership and service to the University.

Miss Zager, Greensboro, is a senior, majoring in sociology. She is president of the Independent Women's Council and President of Smith Dormitory. She served as a student adviser during Orientation Week, was May Day publicity chairman is a member of the Hillel Foundation.

Miss Jones, Charlotte, is a senior history major. She serves as chairman of the Women's Residence Council, and is a member of the student Legislature. She also served on the World University Service, and is a member of the YWCA.

SP Hears Cook & Nominates

By JACKIE GOODMAN

The Student Party in its meeting last night heard veteran SP leader Gene Cook and also closed its nominations for dorm men's districts, dorm women's district and freshmen class officers.

Gene Cook, past chairman of the Student Party, gave a short speech in which he referred indirectly to the columns of Louis Kraar, associate editor of The Daily Tar Heel, concerning a split in the Student Party. Cook said, "From what I have seen of the party, I have never seen it stronger than it is now. It is in the best position it has been in four years."

Cook also spoke about the bill of David Reid, SP vice chairman, to liberalize punishment in first offense cheating cases. A bill resembling Reid's bill was introduced by Cook last year. "This bill is not a license for free cheating. It is an incentive for the council to walk where they have crawled. It is a new approach to an old problem," said Cook.

"Joel Fleishman has done a wonderful job as chairman," said Cook about the present SP chairman.

The Supper Forum will start at 5:30 at Lenoir Hall, South Dining Room, and will end at 7 p.m.

4 Western Teachers' Colleges Refuse Students Debate Rights

"Resolved, that the United States should extend diplomatic recognition to the Communist government of China." This was the topic of the debate which four Nebraska State Teachers' Colleges on Saturday refused their college students the right to discuss.

The topic was set up by the Speech Association of America for its member collegiate teams. The fact that half the time spent by the team in debate would be spent in arguing in the affirmative set off divided reactions among educators.

The presidents of Wayne, Peru, Chadron and Kearney Teachers' Colleges have announced that their students would not be allowed to debate the question.

"I personally feel," said President Cushing of Kearney, "that back of it all is a bit of a desire on the part of somebody to indoctrinate a few thousand American college youths with what I consider to be a dangerous philosophy."

Manhattan College, a Roman Catholic school in New York, said it "has in the past always debated the national topic, but in this instance the topic is of such a nature that it is a cause for concern and it has been taken under advisement as to whether we'll use it."

President Mile Bail of the University of Omaha has recommended that his school drop the topic.

William Birenbaum, the director of student activities at the University of Chicago, declared, "I am sure that students taking the affirmative of the question are not furthering any Communist cause." The University of Chicago "encourages intelligent thinking on all issues" and there-

They Want Miss 'B'

Miss "B" in Belmont is missing from Old West.

The pretty majorette from Belmont High School, who bent many a male eye last year when she appeared in Kenan Stadium with a pair of black shorts and a black sweater with a "B" on it, was soon thereafter chosen mascot of Old West Dormitory.

When Miss "S" in Shelby High School's majorette corps drew a few whistles Saturday at the Wake Forest game, Managing Editor Fred Powledge remembered Miss "B" and made mentioned of the two girls' similarity in a story on the game.

Powledge said a picture of Miss "B" currently hung in Old West; and it did, for that matter, when he last visited the dormitory.

But yesterday, Old West President Raymond M. Taylor called The Daily Tar Heel and announced that the photograph—a semi-profile shot of Miss "B," in shorts, sweater, letter and all—was gone from Old West. Taylor said it disappeared sometime between the first of the semester and yesterday.

The boys at Old West want Miss "B" back very much.

Kenan Combat

Most of the hot words provoked by the fight during the Carolina-Wake Forest game Saturday are, we're convinced, ill-considered.

Everybody is sorry it happened, including the players of both sides who let a tough football game take over their emotions. And now, it would all be over, except for the heated remark of Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers ("Carolina played dirty football") and of the Wake Forest president, Dr. Harold Tribble:

Dr. Tribble, usually a very temperate man, exclaimed to the Associated Press, "This unfortunate occurence followed a similar incident at Carolina in basketball last year. The two things together would seem to indicate that the coaches either encourage or condone this sort of thing. . ." And Dr. Tribble made it clear where he thought all the fault lay: ". . . a Carolina Player slugged Consoles after a play had been completed. It was not part of the play."

At this writing, films of the ball game's last quarter are being digested; it is said they show some things the Wake Forest president didn't see, what with his seat being on the sunny side and all.

The proposed Atlantic Coast Conference rule that would bring punitive action for schools involved in future incidents is not a bad idea, since fighting on a football field is clearly wrong.

But in the meantime, a reason for the Carolina-Wake Forest scrap more valid than Dr. Tribble's might be found in the unguarded remark of Wake Forest Coach Rogers. "We had taken it all day," said Rogers, "and we couldn't take it any longer."

On Vixen! On Nixon! On Dixon & Yates!

We were interested to read, in our Sunday New York Times, that Leonard Hall, the Republican National Committee chairman, has reaffirmed his party's acceptance of the Fair Campaign Practices Code which puts the Republicans on record against "unfounded accusations which aim at creating or exploiting doubts. . ." as to an opponent's "loyalty and patriotism."

We were interested, because in the same newspaper there were stories reporting:

1. Mr. Hall's own statement that election of a Democratic Congress would "be apt to swing us back along the road to socialism."

2. A Republican charge that Senator Paul H. Douglas, a candidate for re-election in Illinois, is guilty of everything from "emotional instability" to "protecting Communists."

3. An attack by Pennsylvania Republican Attorney General Truscott on Democratic gubernational candidate George Leader: "Leader has been easy on the Reds!"

4. The circulation of 50,000 copies of a Republican pamphlet in Montana, where Senator James E. Murray is running for re-election. The pamphlets' title: "Senator Murray and the Red Network Over Congress."

5. A long harangue in Wyoming by Vice-President Nixon based on "an alliance between the Communist Party and left-wing Democrats to defeat Republican candidates." (And in which he made the remarkable statement: "It is really immaterial whether the Lattimore-Acheson policy was the result of disloyalty, ignorance, or both.")

6. A new attack on Averell Harriman in New York, where Senator Ives and Governor Dewey have blasted away at Harriman's character for six days running.

All this, we repeat, in one newspaper. By the time we got to the Times' editorial page, we were quite ready to accept Columnist James Reston's judgment: "Politicians are a peculiar breed. They have given the people very little in the campaign except Vixen, Nixon, Dixon and Yates . . . We have some news for them: The people are bored—unfortunately they are not angry—with two bit politicians and cheap debating tricks . . . They are not in a mood to be harangued by men repeating stale arguments and manufacturing false crises."

Student Debate Explains that Uneasy Feeling

Louis Kraar

AS I PEELED of the close brown wrapper, I felt a little strange. And for a second, I felt guilty.

I unfolded it carefully. I was glancing through the pages of the communist newspaper, The Daily Worker. It was an enlightening experience. On the front page, a smear at the Republicans. Inside, an editorial against the Democrats. And on the literary page, an out-of-context quote from Mark Twain. Everything — with the exception of the sports news —was slanted right down the party line.

Then I remembered that I had felt a little uneasy while opening the paper. I told a friend about it and was ashamed of his angry reply.

Wasn't the Senate finally being moved by its conscience to curb McCarthy? Hasn't the Red scare finally fizzled Out? Why should anyone be afraid to read anything his curiosity leads him to?

I thought all these things and couldn't answer them.

The next day a report from Lincoln, Nebraska partially explained my feeling.

College officials at four Nebraska State Teachers colleges refused to let their students debate recognition of Communist China. One of the college presidents, Herbert L. Cushing off Kearney College, said he is opposed to having debaters "spend half their time to argue the Communist side."

"I personally feel," the college president said, "that back of it all is a bit of a desire on the part of somebory to indoctrinate a few thousand American college youths with what I consider a dangerous philosophy."

Apparently, the cult of loyalty probers and witch hunters is still with us. And for those that have been stopped, the fear they spread seems to remain in men's minds and hearts — even college presidents.

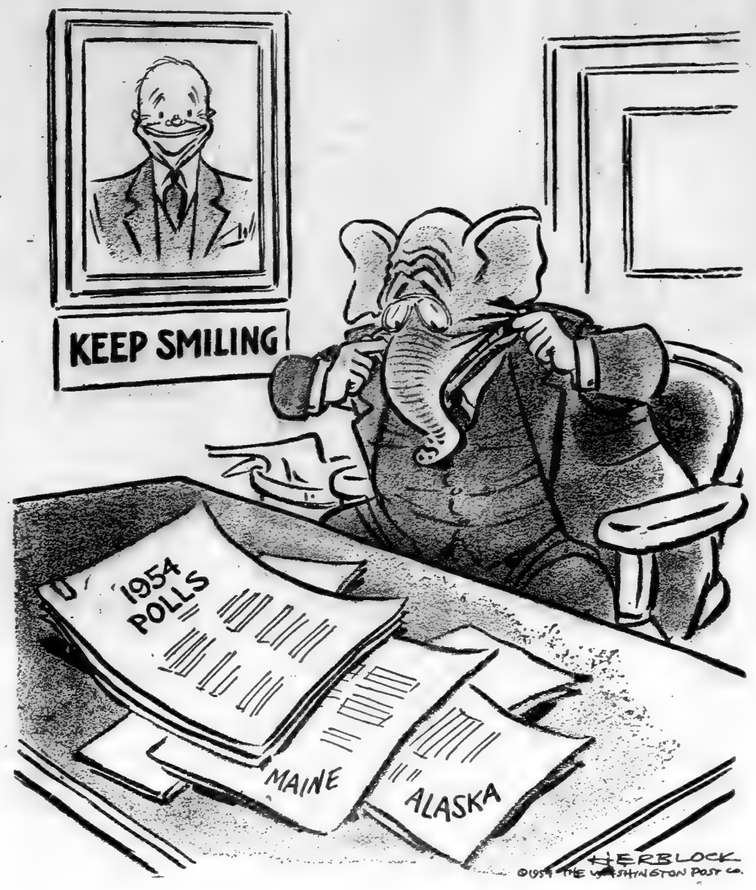
TAKING UP the communist side in a college debate will help students learn what they are up against. And in this particular debate on recognition of Red China, many loyal Americans by choice would take the "communist side" favoring recognition.

The alarmed college president assumes that if students argue for Red China's recognition that they are helping the communists. He is contending that a loyal American can only take one side in this debate.

True loyalty—the kind that Jefferson, Paine, Emerson and Thoreau wrote of—allows protest and disagreement. Those assume they can define loyalty in terms of what sides citizens take are assuming they can define what is a loyal American.

Is a college student loyal because he opposes recognition of Red China? Is a professor loyal because he signs the loyal oath he had to sign before he could teach?



No one—not even a college president—can define the loyal American any more than one can define an American. To some, it is the coast of North Carolina. To others it is the right to be a Democrat or a Republican. To still others it is something they live but can never describe, much less define in concrete terms.

A professor at Northwestern University, however, did disagree with the Nebraska college president who opposed the Red China debate.

"I believe that informed young people are a safer bet. The more kids learn about Communists, the more they will be against them," the professor said.

'Ha Ha Ha Ha — Ouch . . .'

GOP Faces Battle

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Here are some more quick looks at the red-hot election picture: in Pennsylvania, the GOP candidate for governor, Lloyd Wood, is a turkey farmer. The Democratic candidate, George Leader, is a chicken farmer . . . The low price of eggs is figuring heavily in the farm vote . . . For the first time in 20 years, a Democrat in Pennsylvania is given a real chance to win. Reasons are: unemployment, especially in the coal regions; plus graft in Gov. Fine's administration. Fifteen of his officials, including his personal secretary, Fred Hare, and one member of his cabinet, Artemas Leslie, have been indicted for macing (forcing political contributions) . . . On top of this, when Congress voted increased old-age pensions, the Fine Administration proceeded to reduce the state's share to oldsters by the amount of increase voted in Washington . . . Oldsters were really sore . . . Highly respected GOP Senator Big Jim Duff, an old enemy of Governor Fine's, has been trotted out to try to pull Republican factions together, but everyone knows his heart isn't in it . . . So Pennsylvania is certain to send more Democratic Congressmen to Washington.

The GOP in Michigan is hoisted on its own petard — in fact on two of them. No. 1 is the so-called "General Motors Administration" in Washington; No. 2 is the political strategy of Chevrolet Dealer Arthur Summerfield, now Postmaster General . . . GM gave Chrysler such stiff competition that Chrysler has closed down early to bring out new models. Other companies have followed suit. Summerfield begged the motor moguls not to retool until after elections, but General Motors competition was too tough. They disregarded his pleas. That's why Detroit faces one of its worst unemployment periods right now . . . It was Postmaster Summerfield who also maneuvered to put Pat McNamara, the Democratic candidate for the Senate, into the race . . . Summerfield, of course, worked behind the scenes, got the AF of L and teamsters to put up McNamara in the Democratic primary to offset the late Blair Moody and his powerful CIO backing. But since Moody's death, McNamara has united CIO-AFL backing. And judging by the loud alarms sounded by GOP Senator Homer Ferguson, McNamara may win.

Out in Oregon Senator Guy Cordon, Republican, ran paid ads in the American Legion newspaper attacking the military record of his opponent, Dick Neuberger. "During World War II," read the ad, "Cordon's opponent, through political connections, got himself a soft, safe job in the service where he could continue his profitable writing career." . . . The Cordon machine began spreading this story all over the state. They played up Cordon as a "real veteran" who had served as State Commander of the American Legion . . . A check of Cordon's military career, however, revealed that this "real veteran" was in no more position to brag than Congressman Stringfellow. He had been in World War I only two months and two weeks — from Sept. 2, 1918, to Nov. 26, 1918 . . . Neuberger, on the other hand, was in World War II thirteen times as long — from July 15, 1942, to Aug. 12, 1945 — a little over three years. He served much of that time in Alaska . . . this three-year service turned out to be longer than the total military careers of Cordon plus the other top GOP candidates in Oregon . . . Senator Cordon did not even give up his job as assessor of Douglas County during his brief 85-day training period in the Army.

Trucking War

It's been crowded out of the headlines, but 17 states are at each other's throats in a transportation battle that may drive small trucking firms out of business.

It's the kind of interstate war which the founding fathers sought to prevent when they set up a homogeneous United States and provided that no state could charge a tariff against another.

The State of Ohio began the battle when, because of heavy truck traffic across its centrally located borders, it slapped an extra "third stricture" tax on out-of-state trucks. New York immediately followed suit, also imposed a ton-mile levy aimed at squeezing as much in taxes as possible from transient trucks.

This set off a whole series of retaliatory measures. Other states fought back with their own taxes, some of them especially aimed at competing states, so that the founding fathers' whole concept of the interstate taxes or tariffs against another state has gone glimmering.

Though under the Constitution no state can tax or put a tariff on the products of another state, it can tax another state's trucks out of existence.

For instance, a big multi-axled truck from Indiana can travel through Kentucky and Georgia to Florida for $120 in taxes. But an Ohio truck going through the same states has to pay $360 — chiefly because of retaliatory taxes.

As a result, some 15 trucking companies had to move their headquarters out of Ohio last year. They couldn't afford the extra taxes slapped on by other states.

Note — Congressman Ayres of Akron, Ohio, has introduced a resolution, now before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, to investigate this cut-throat interstate battle.

Political-Go-Round

Secreary of Defense Charley Wilson has ordered all his subordinate Secretaries to take an active part in the election campaign — perhaps to make up for his "dogginess." But Secretary of State Dulles has suggested that his subordinates keep out of the campaign. (White House aides wish Wilson had kept out too.) . . . Republicans have about $50,000 for last-minute TV-radio ballyhoo to save Congressman Francis Dorn, Brooklyn's lone Republican. Dorn is opposed by popular ex-Congressman Don O'Toole . . . The Jenner Committee had considered bringing ex-Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau to Washington for cross-examination just before election. They finally decided not to — for it would alienate New York City voters and mean certain defeat for GOP candidate Irving Ives in the race for governor.

Rambling

Hurricanes, Atom Bombs, And Indians

Ron Levin

Property damage ran rampant over the hundred million mark. Over a hundredi ives were lost and scores of other people injured or maimed for life. As the days pass since Hazel left her calling card, I hear descriptive adjectives such as bad, terrible, vicious, and other similar terms applied to this storm. It is difficult to realize just what is being done here. A hurricane, a cyclone, a typhoon, or other act of nature can not be called bad. It is unfortunate that man has to be in the path of these occurrences: however, that is not the fault of the storm. A storm certainly has no power to decide between good and bad. It has no choice, no will of its own . . . It is not a moral agent. I am not cold to the lives lost nor homes destroyed. On the contrary, I am sorry for these people. Yet, I can not find it in my heart to condemn a hurricane.

However, an atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima some nine years ago, and over a hundred thousand lives were lost. These people were not fighting. They were under a militant rule that prevented their leaving. Yet, in one instant, such total havoc was wrought by man upon man. Here the power of nature was perverted to serve man as he thought best. It is only when the balance existent within nature is tampered with that such acts occur. Nature alone is neither good nor bad . . . but rather the impartial creation . . . she that watches with complete indifference while man becomes immeshed deeper and deeper in his own acts of violence.

So the next time you hear the news of a storm brewing, or a flash flood, or a tornado in the Midwest, be careful how you criticize nature, Remember, it is because of her that you are here.

While I was out in New Mexico this past summer, I had an occasion to talk to a member of the blood line of Apache chiefs. We were both staying in a cheap hotel. He lived there year round, and I was spending the week there till my check arrived on the west-bound stage. This is his story.

When only twelve years of age, he was taken away from his family by an attacking band of cavalry and carried back to the white settlement. Not long after this, he escaped and lived in the woods for quite some time. It was winter, and nature's food stores were not too plentiful. Soon after this he was found again and committed to the manager of the local bar for a guardian. He worked long hours cleaning up in the bar and washing dishes in the small eatery next door. Years passed, and my friend was about twenty years of age when some duke was shot by a fanatic in Europe. The war was on, and "Hard-rock," as he is called by his friends, enlisted in the Navy. He served approximately seven years and received an honorable discharge. Then he worked for a while as a border guard on the United States-Mexican border. After that, he became a police officer for the Albuquerque City Police. He remained on the force until sickness demanded a long rest. After his recovery, his health was never quite the same.

Here is an American in the true sense of the word. He fought for his country during wartime, and during peacetime worked to preserve internal order. He is a member of the American Legion and holds several decorations, among them the Navy Cross. He was born here, and his father, and his father. You can go as far back as you want. His parents didn't come over on the "Mayflower," They were hunting buffalo here when Shakespeare was the rage throughout London. He is looked down on, sneered and laughed at, and the butt of many a cruel joke. Is this right? I'll let you be the judge . . .

SOMETHING'S ROTTEN UNDER TEAPOT DOME

Yes, we have no bananas,
We have no bananas today . . .

dirtyrotten politics in Washington. I didn't know anything about it. of course none of us did. but it all came out in the papers the other day and I thought how we could at least have put it in the headlines in '22 when it was really happening. You see, there were these oil wells at Elks Hills and Buena Vista and Teapot Dome and they belonged to this commonwealth and Secretary Daniels had set them aside for the use of the Navy.

well, this fellow Fall who became Secretary of the Interior when Harding was sworn in actually had played games with them and he wanted to do something nice for his big oil friends. What happened was simple because we were in crucial discussions with Japan about oil depots in Pearl Harbor. there was danger of the oil running out from under the reserve oil fields and into private wells around so what does Fall do? secretly and without competitive bidding he leases Teapot Dome to Harry Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Company—this was in '22— and on December 11 that same year he went and gave the Elks Hills lands on lease to old Ed Doheny's Pan-American Company.

we none of us saw nothing wrong about the deal because the people who knew told us that military necessity was the reason why they kept it secret and didn't have competitive bidding. well, we took 'em at their words.

so what happens? we wake up one morning and there it is dancing in the newspaper headlines that big boy Sinclair gave Mr. Fall $260,000 in Liberty bonds for the deal and that big boy Doheny had "lent"—no interest, no security—$100,000 in cash to none other than Fall.

BIG FIGHT IN FRENCH PARLIAMENT OVER EDC

EISENHOWER DIRECTS A.E.C. TO NEGOTIATE DIXON-YATES CONTRACT

I know a dark secluded place —
A place where no one knows your face
A glass of wine, a fast embrace . . .

I read in a newspaper editorial the other day that this certain writer thought there might be some parallels between this Dixon-Yates deal (you know about this deal, it's been in the papers for weeks) and the Teapot Dome deal.

a majority of the A. E. C. told Ike not to do it but without any recognition of the lower bids it seems that Dixon-Yates (with headquarters in New York City and Connecticut for this Tennessee business) will get this contract for $107 million generating plant and Uncle Sam's big pockets are being scraped.

evidently, they didn't want the thing talked too much at first because when some democrats wanted to know more the administration in Washington clammed the files for four days (of fast juggling?) who knows?

maybe I'm just stupid or something but I don't really understand why the government couldn't have the plant anyway since it's going to build it. It looks like that by devious ways the tax money's going to build the plant after all;

but Ike smiled (teeth, teeth, teeth) and said everything's o. k.

Certain people — mostly Democrats — are still raising a skunk about the thing. Even old Langer one of the "sons of the wild jackass" as they call the Western legislators wants some light in the case and he said so and he's even a Republican.

it sounds pretty subterranean and suspicious and interesting to me: Corruption? you ask.

well, you never know about the dirtyrotten (elephantine) politics in Washington, like I always tell folks.

YOU Said It

Editor:

I was quite shocked to hear that so many people think so little of the United Nations. I was proud, however, to see that at least our editor will stand up for this wonderful organization.

For hope we need faith. Only in faith is there any hope of power. Without faith (call it confidence if you like) one can accomplish nothing. As in faith the United Nations was born, so in faith must the United Nations grow and reach that maturity which means lasting peace throughout the world.

The people of this world need to think of world affairs and problems in terms of internationalism. not nationalism. "A house divided against itself cannot stand." I am sure that if we were to think out our world's problems in terms of internationalism, understanding would soon take the place of so much bickering. hostility, and suspicion. We are more apt to do what is expected of us than we are to do the unexpected. If one fears a dog's bite, one is very apt to be bitten.

"Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another."—Romans 14:19.

Over The Hill

By
FRED BABSON

Newspapers all over the state have tried, condemned and executed Carolina for the brawl and fist fights that occurred during and after the Wake Forest game here Saturday. The trial was presided over by sport editors, some of whom are obviously predisposed toward Wake Forest, others who harbor prejudices against Carolina, and still others who, in their frenzy for a sensational story, neglected to investigate both sides of the issue. The jury, the public, was presented partial testimony consisting solely of heated statements and wild accusations of such witnesses as this: Wake Forest players, Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers, and Wake Forest College President Harold W. Tribble. We note with amusement the irony of Rogers' statements, and with shock the lack of temperance displayed by President Tribble.

Rogers had the audacity to state that, "I wouldn't have a dirty player on my team. I'd kick him off." He continually reiterated his boast that "I played at Duke under Wallace Wade, and he didn't teach us to play dirty." All this is very commendable and Mr. Rogers is to be extolled for it. However, it smacks of incongruity coming from a man who received his coaching degree under the guiding hand and praising eye of Peahead Walker, whose teams always managed to leave one with the after-taste of a Pier 6 brawl.

Rogers was an assistant coach at Wake Forest under Walker, who left Baptist Hollow to answer the call of the Gold Rush, i.e., the Canadian Football League.

The thing that makes Rogers' implication (that Carolina has dirty ball players while Wake Forest does not) so hard to swallow is that the Tar Heels did not start the brawl. After Frye was ejected for putting Consoles out of action, (and films show that Frye's play was legal) normal play was resumed. But Wake Forest, hopping-mad over having lost the ball and all chances for victory only seconds remaining in the game, lost all restraint. They were itching for a fight. Deacon Halfback Burt Harrison ignited the spark that set off the explosion. He intentionally roughed up Tar Heel Quarterback Len Bullock while Bullock was lying on the ground, having been stopped on a quarterback sneak. Bullock's ankle is still swollen and he still limps as a result of Harrison having twisted it in the pile-up. A Carolina player tried to persuade Harrison that he should not do things like that, as he pulled Harrison off Bullock. The Deacon resented this bit of advice and reacted belligerently. Harrison swung at the Tar Heel player who was trying to separate him from Bullock, and this seemed to be a signal to the Deacs. Every Wake Forest player just seemed to turn to the nearest Tar Heel and start swinging, as if it were the natural thing to do.

It is all a matter of history now, and should be forgotten. We are sure the Tar Heels are willing to forgive the Deacons for their brash action. It is not the first time a fight broke out on a football field; and players lose teeth everyday.

Tar Heels In Good Shape For Tennessee

Bullock And Starner Hurt

Vols Expected To Be One Of Year's Toughest Foes

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 25.—(AP).—North Carolina's Tar Heels opened preparations for Tennessee today with a lengthy practice session in full equipment.

Coach George Barclay sent his charges through the pass drills and dummy plays before devoting the last part of the session to setting up a defense for the Tennessee single wing.

Steve Belichick, Tar Heel assistant coach who scouted the Vols, helped supervise the defense work out and warned the team that they could expect one of their toughest tests of the season Saturday at Knoxville.

Only two players were in light equipment due to injuries sustained in Saturday's game with Wake Forest. Neither is expected to be out for more than a day or so.

Quarterback Len Bullock, one of the players in light equipment, participated in passing drills, although he was on the sidelines for the remainder of the practice. End Dick Starner was the other casualty in camp. Both are troubled with minor leg ailments.

Barclay Won't Speak Until Sees Game Film

By BERNIE WEISS

Carolina football coach George Barclay declined to comment yesterday afternoon on the state of affairs concerning the fisticuffs during and after the Tar Heels' 14-7 victory over Wake Forest Saturday.

Barclay said he had viewed about one and one-half reels of film taken at the game and thus far had found no evidence of dirty football as charged by Wake Forest coach Tom Rodgers and President of the College, Dr. Harold Tribble. That part of the film which Barclay saw did not carry as far as the fourth quarter when the battle took place.

Barclay stated that he would have to say today after reviewing films of the whole game.

"There was some rough football during the first three quarters," he said, but no more than you would find in the ordinary game."

Deacon mentor Rogers charged Carolina with "playing dirty football," and President Tribble said that there appeared to be a deliberate attempt to get quarterback Nick Consoles out of the game by foul means. He also said that a report had come to him that a Carolina coach or coaches engaged in the fight and slugged one of the Wake Forest players near the dressing room.

Tennessee Report

Barclay, however, was just as concerned over the up-coming Tennessee game this Saturday as he was over the fight.

Backfield coach Steve Belichick's scouting report on the Vols didn't look too encouraging. "They have a young team of sophs and juniors with a strong running attack," he said.

The Tennessee backfield, operating aout of a single-wing formation, has had lots of injury trouble to persons in the tailback post, the single-wing's key position. Ace tailback Jimmy Wade was hurt in the Vol's first game of the year and may return to action against Carolina. If he does get in the game, Tennessee could brew trouble.

Pat Olexiak and Tom Tracy are two other good backs who bear the burden of the running attack, upon which Tennessee primarily relies, Belichick reported.

Ground Defense Good

The Volunteers, who have a 3-2 record so far, have a good defense on the ground, Belichick continued, but their aerial defense is rather weak. The Tennessee opponents to date have used passing to loosen up the ground defense and then scored by rushing.

Another fine back whom Belichick is warning the Tar Heels about is John Majors. Majors is deadly on kickoff and punt returns.

Saddler TKO's Ray Famechon

PARIS, Oct. 25 —(AP)— World Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler scored a technical knockout over France's Ray Famechon when the bleeding Frenchman was unable to come out for the sixth round of a non-title match.

The fight was a bruising- close-in match. Both fighters suffered cuts. Famechon was cut beneath the right eye and on the chin in the second round and in the mouth in the fifth. His fae was a bloody pulp and his handlers would not let him come out for the sixth round although he appeared strong and wrestled with them.

Both fighters weighed 128½ pounds for this scheduled 10-rounder.

Coed Booters Open Season

The UNC Women's hockey team will open the 1954 season this afternoon when they come to grips against the Meredith College squad at Raleigh.

The Carolina coeds have been practicing for about three weeks and have displayed some fine talent during drills. The majority of the girls are experienced hockey players, having played on the varsity teams of various other colleges.

Veteran seniors Sara Cashwell, Charlotte Clement, Linda Clement, Dee Dee Davenport, Chappie Chapman and Jackie McCarthy will be playing their last season for Carolina. New coeds who will make the Raleigh trip and who may see action are Carol Taylor, Janie Clement, Amy Morse, Nancy Nussear, Joan Haley, Linda Garris, Charlotte Lilly, Robin Fuller, Anne Miser and Pat Carter.

Wake Forest Prepares For Clemson Battle With Nine Players On Practice Sidelines

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Oct. 25—(AP).—Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers counted nine injured players today as his squad began preparations for Saturday's game with Clemson at Charlotte.

Guard Tony Trentini, tackle Ernie Fitzgibbons and end Tommy Whims suffered knee injuries in the 14-7 loss to North Carolina. Tackle Rocky Littleton and end David Lee received ankle injuries. Quarterback Nick Consoles lost three teeth and sustained a bruised lip. Halbacks John Parham and Bob Frederick received leg injuries and end Jack Ladner a hand injury.

Fitzgibbons and Whim were not in uniform and are not likely to see service Saturday. The other injured players were on hand but did not take part in heavy work.

The varsity ran plays against the freshmen. Two players looked good. Backs Leo Ward and Bob Caesar.

Elbie Nickel Is Old Man Of Pittsburgh Steelers

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 25 —(AP)— End Elbie Nickel at 31 is the old man of the Pittsburgh Steelers football team but Walt Kiesling wishes he had 10 more like him.

"Why he's like another coach," Kiesling told the weekly Quarterback luncheon. "It was Elbie who outsmarted the Philadelphia Eagles Saturday night. He made two sensational catches and actually suggested the pass play that sewed up our 17-7 victory."

Duke Blue Devils Prep For Fracas With Tech

DURHAM, Oct. 25—(AP) .— Duke University's Blue Devils got right to work on the Duke Stadium practice field tonight for their 22nd consecutive meeting with Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets.

The Blue Devils got right to work mapping a defense for the visitors who boast another of their traditional big, mobile and tricky elevens. A means of stopping halfback Billy Teas is one of the main considerations in the Blue Devil's defensive preparations. Teas last year returned a punt 48 yards in the last quarter to defeat the Dukes in Atlanta, 13-10.

Scout Herschel Caldwell, who watched Kentucky upset the Yellow Jackets last Saturday, reported that the Rambling Wreck has another fine team, but that the Wildcats were just "up" for the Tech contest. Caldwell was especially impressed with the tricky Tech offense and the size and speed of the Tech squad.

Coach Bill Murray's Blue Devils came through the State contest in good physical condition except for the usual aches and bruises.

If you drive for the sheer zest of it you owe yourself this hour!

If your hands rejoice in the precise balance of a fine gun or the sweet response of a racing sloop . . . then you owe yourself an hour with the Chevrolet Corvette.

You'll find it is, quite literally, like no other car in the world—a heart-lifting blend of the true sports car with all that is best in American engineering.

There is the velvet smoothness of a Powerglide automatic transmission (but with the classic floor selector-lever).

The trouble-free durability of a Chevrolet "Blue-Flame" engine (but with three side draft carburetors to unleash its flashing 150 horsepower).

The ruggedness of an X-braced box girder frame (but with the astonishing impact resistance of a glass-fiber-and-plastic body).

Luxurious seating for driver and passenger in deep foam rubber (but cradled in the traditional security of bucket seats).

Generous luggage room, the panoramic sweep of a deeply curved windshield, the flair of tomorrow's styling (but within the polo-pony compactness of a real road car).

The Corvette blends all this and more. For it is a driver's car . . . a low-slung torpedo with a center of gravity only 18 inches above the concrete . . . with outrigger rear springs that make it hold to the road like a stripe of paint . . . with a 16 to 1 steering ratio that puts needle-threading accuracy at your finger tips.

Frankly, the Corvette is a "limited edition," made only in small numbers. It is intended only for the man or woman to whom driving is not just transportation but an exhilarating adventure, a sparkling challenge to skill and judgment. If you are one of these, then you owe yourself an hour with a Chevrolet Corvette.

Call us now and let us set up a demonstration run . . . for in a short 60 minutes you can discover that motoring has a whole new dimension of delight.

Hobbs Talks On Integration

"The differing densities of Negro popultaion and the intensity of racial feeling will weigh heavily on the time element involved in the abolishment of segregation," Acting Dean R. J. M. Hobbs of the School of Business Administration and member of the Orange County Board of Commissioners, said here recently.

Addressing a dinner session of the UNC chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity, on the implications of desegregation in our schools, Dr. Hobbs traced the history of the law applying to separate schools, analyzing the case of Brown vs. The Topeka Board of Education, which held that segregation in schools was illegal.

Charles F. Hyatt, Waynesville, professional chairman of the fraternity, introduced the speaker, and George Douglas, president, Charlotte, presided.

Negro population varies in North Carolina as it does in the nation, Dean Hobbs said, giving as examples Mecklenburg County with 25 per cent Negro population as compared with Graham County with 10 Negroes. He also mentioned North Dakota with 257 Negroes and Georgia with over a million and a half.

"The sudden integration of Negro and white students in the public schools would present numerous problems," the speaker asserted. "Such questions as, 'will white schools take Negro teachers and what will be the outcome of changing students from familiar schools to different schools?' have already arisen," he said.

Dean Hobbs paid tribute to North Carolina school authorities, who, acting under the belief that "Separate but Equal" school facilities meet the requirements and the law have built up within the last decade good facilities for both races. The proper use of these facilities now becomes an important question.

"Supreme Court decisions are the law of the land, and the 'equal protection of the laws' given in the Fourteenth Amendment has already proved binding where segregation in the schools is concerned," Dean Hobbs explained. Dean Hobbs cited the districting of townships and counties and grants to families as two possible methods of avoiding sudden integration.

"As for abolishing the public schools as a few Southern states have suggested, it would be a definite step backward," he warned.

Dean Hobbs emphasized the necessity of proceeding with due deliberation and consideration of the many angles of the problem in order to avoid extremes resulting in bitterness and litigation.

At Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., Glen Mills, associate professor of public speaking and director of forensics, said that it was a ridiculous assumption to feel that students would be hurt by examining the affirmative side of the question. Mills felt that Cushing had the right to see "alarm," in the situation, "but I do not see it that way."

"I believe that informed young people are a safer bet. The more kids learn about Communists, the more they will be against them," concluded Mills.

At least two UNC debating groups — the Dialectic Senate and the Carolina Political Union —have chosen the Red China topic for their debates.

MIAMI, Fla. —(AP)— Sam Hirsch who won bachelor and master's degrees at the University of North Carolina, has been indicted for perjury in testifying that he had never been a member of the Communist party or otherwise affiliated with it.

The indictment charged that "he had in fact" been a member of the Communist party at the university in Chapel Hill, N. C., from 1936 through 1938.

Hirsch, director of the Biltmore Playhouse, surrendered to State Atty. George A. Brautigam last Saturday and was released in bond of $10,000. At one time Hirsch was assistant professor in the Drama Department of the University of Miama.

Hirsch was indicted after testifying before a Dade County Miami grand jury.

Budget Commission Changes

Library's System

A recent ruling by the State Budget Commission in Raleigh has created a problem for the University Library.

The ruling by the commission broke down the allocations to the library from a yearly basis to a quarterly one. According to Andrew Horn, head librarian, the ruling is creating a serious problem to the library since it buys books on a yearly plan.

Horn said the library would not be able to buy the books it had planned to buy. Research and teaching by the faculty would be hindered, since students could not get the latest books on some subjects, he said.

"This is a serious problem, but University officials are doing what they can to correct the situation in Raleigh," Horn said.

Music Under Stars, Blankets In Courtyards, Courtesy IDC

"On Friday night, Nov. 5, 'Our Best to You' is the thing to do," says John Beshara, Interdormitory Council social chairman.

Twice before popular disc jockey Jimmy Capps has brought to UNC simulated programs of his well known "Our Best to You" show, which is broadcast by radio station WPTF in Raleigh. On November 5, from 10:30 until midnight, Capps is returning to the campus, sponsored by the Interdormitory Council, with the first remote radio broadcast of "Our Best to You" that has ever been made.

Unusual highlight of this premere performance, which will take place in the Lower and Upper Quad courtyards, will be music under the stars with the grassed quad courtyards reserved for blanket parties. Raleigh Road, between the quads will be blocked off for street dancing. Also, Capps will present a live floor show and play request numbers.

There will be a special pep rally led by the University Band and Jim Fountain and the UNC Cheerleaders.

IDC President Manning Muntzing urges students to send the titles of their request numbers to Jimmy Capps immediately in order to have them played on the program here. Readers may do this by mailing in the printed blank to "Our Best to You," Radio Station WPTF, Raleigh.

Capps, who was visiting the campus in preparation for the show yesterday, said, "This is probably the first time in the nation that a disk jockey program has been done live by remote broadcast as a campus activity."

CHEE-CHEE & TOM DAVIS, entertainers, will appear with popular disk jockey Jimmy Capps, along with others, when a remotely-broadcast performance of Capps' show, "Our Best To You," will be held in Upper and Lower Quad courtyards Nov. 5.

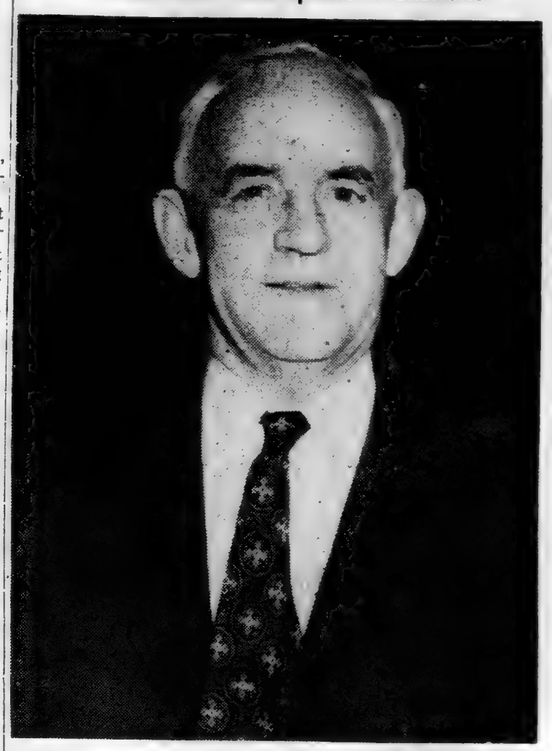
Film Shows Deacons Spoiling For Fight

By FRED BABSON
DTH Sports Editor

No one who has seen films of the Carolina-Wake Forest game can, without perjuring himself, lay blame on the Tar Heels for the disgraceful brawl that occurred during the last minute of the game.

The film reveals unprovoked, unnecessary roughness on the part of Wake Forest as early as the second-half kickoff. Bob Bartholomew, Deacon left tackle, went out of his way to pounce on Larry Parker, Carolina halfback, who had been blocked out of the kickoff play and was lying on the ground. Bartholomew assumed the position of a wrestler attempting to pin his opponent, with a little, fast elbow-action thrown in for good measure.

As the second-half progressed, and Wake Forest chances for victory grew slimmer, it was very noticeable that Deacon action grew more intense. They appeared to be desperate.



The sequence showing the much-publicized Will Frye block, thrown at Nick Consoles, Deacon quarterback, was viewed and reviewed several times. Consoles was playing defensive left halfback; Frye was at left end for Carolina. The play was run into the right side of the Carolina line, therefore Frye cut sharply downfield to his right as interference for his ball carrier. Consoles loafed on the play, drifting in slowly toward the line. Frye, running full speed, caught Consoles off-guard. The Tar Heel's hands were on his chest, with his elbows extended, the normal stance for a charging lineman. Frye's right forearm struck the Deacon in the face, but with not enough force to knock him off his feet.

Other interesting revelations were revealed by the films: When th game-climaxing melee started, Carolina Tackle Roland Perdue stood by, making no belligerent advances toward the menacing Deacons. Whereupon, Wake Forest's No. 12, Leo Ward, obviously infuriated over his game-losing fumble a few moments earlier, approached Perdue and struck him in the face with no provocation, whatsoever, on Perdue's part. Then six or eight Wake Forest players jumped Perdue, knocking him down. By this time, the entire Deacon team was off the bench, onto the field. Several Wake Forest band members joined in the Perdue massacre standing over the helpless Tar Heel, taking turns striking him.

By this time, the Carolina reserves were off their bench, approaching the scene of action. Halfback Larry Parker was clearly shown, by the film, standing at the edge of the battle with his hands on his hips, when Wake Forest No. 19, Bob Brincefield, slugged him. The film also showed that Parker proved himself worthy of the occasion. He tossed the fiery, young Deacon to the turf with a nifty, one-armed headlock, and proceeded to work him over with his free fist.

The game pictures failed to produce a single incident of a Carolina player launching the first blow. It was obvious that the Deacons were spoiling for a fight, hoping to salvage some satisfaction from an otherwise disastrous afternoon for them.

Former UNC Chief Speaks In Charlotte

Dr. Frank Talks On United Nations

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Dr. Frank Porter Graham, United Nations mediator who has helped to settle two international disputes, said here Monday night that there are three roads which the United States can take in the future: isolation, preventive war or the United Nations.

Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina and a former U.S. senator, spoke at the Covenant Presbyterian Church in commemoration of the ninth anniversary of the UN.

He called the first two courses as inevitable pitfalls for the entire world.

The third road, the UN, he described as a young and sometimes feeble organization, but the best present possibility for a peaceful and productive coexistence.

Dr. Graham noted that for more than 100 years the United States followed a policy of isolationists, "and for good reason." He said, "We were a new nation, with a new country to explore and new things to do.

"But the kind of world we are living in now is not the world of Washington and Jefferson, but were they here, they would be leaders today," he declared.

He said the industrial revolution and the new world that came with it eliminated forever the possibility of isolationism. But he noted that after the First World War our isolationist principle was still so strong that we would not go into the League of Nations.

"We thought we could keep out of the strong currents around the world and we got into the Second world War," he added.

A preventive war, in the atomic and hydrogen world, would in the word of scientists, he said, " 'wipe out our civilization.' "

The alternative he listed as finding a way to live together. "to exist together." And to escape Communist aggression and tyranny, he said, we must have dynamic national and international programs.

For a dynamic national program, he said we "must be strong ourselves, in military strength, fundamental research, freedom and equal opportunity for all people."

Salisbury - Carolina Cotillion Club's Getting Underway Here

It'll be party time in Salisbury for Carolina students come Christmas holidays.

The Salisbury-Carolina Cotillion Club, now in the process of organization, held a meeting in Gerrard Hall last night at seven o'clock for all Salisbury students, at which plans for the dance will be discussed.

The Salisbury boys haven't been idle in years past, however. The formation of the Cotillion Club is intended to put its annual Christmas dance on a more permanent basis of organization. There were about 1,500 persons present at last year's affair, according to T. Kepley, spokesman for the club. Kepley urged all Salisbury students to attend the meeting, or, if they are unable to do so, to contact him at the Kappa Alpha House or Bill Bibb in 341 Cobb. Twenty-six persons were present at the last meeting, and about 40 are expected tonight.

Gruesome — But True

RALEIGH (AP)—The North Carolina Industrial Commission believes it's cheaper to live than it is to die.

Here's the way the Commission figures it in its monthly safety bulletin:

"A shave while you are alive cost 50 cents. It costs $5 to shave you after you are dead. A woolen overcoat costs $50. A wooden one $500. A round trip taxi fare to a theater costs $1, but a one-way ride to a cemetery costs $10."

Library Has UNESCO Publications

William R. Pullen, Documents Librarian, said yesterday that documents from UNESCO are available to students of the University.

The University Library receives all official documents issued by the United Nations' Economic, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) in Paris, with the exception of those having restricted distribution, said Pullen.

The wide scope of UNESCO publications keeps the public informed on the educational, scientific, and cultural problems facing the world and of the remedies applied at the international level, according to Pullen. He said it also has the task of spreading the Universal Declaration of Human Rights throughout the world, and in doing so, explaining its vital nature. UNESCO distributes material for the press (UNESCO Features) and for the radio (UNESCO World Review); it publishes the UNESCO Courier, and it issues various publications intended for the general public or for experts.

In March, 1950, the Library was chosen, along with 11 other libraries throughout the United States, as a depository for UNESCO publications. The University receives free of charge all official documents from UNESCO headquarters in Paris.

Recent publications show the large range of interests covered. In the Arts there is the Artist in Modern Society and Japanese Woodcuts. For those interested in communication, there is a report on the facilities of mass communication in the press, film and radio.

Dr. John N. Fortin:

UNC Has Psychiatrist

By DICK CREED

Dr. John N. Fortin is a psychiatrist.

Not many students know about him, and not many more know that the University provides free psychiatric service and counseling for students who need it or think they need it.

Dr. Fortin, who came to Carolina this fall, occupies an office in the infirmary alongside those of Dr. Hedgepeth, Dr. Taylor, and the other physicians who are a part of the student health service. He considers himself "just another doctor" in the infirmary.

"I was astonished by the fact that many students are in complete ignorance of our existence," said Dr. Fortin last week.

"The idea of having a psychiatrist on campus," he said, "is a recognition by the administration that the ultimate goal is the care of the student as an indivdual and a respect for individual differences among students."

So far this year Dr. Fortin has seen "around 25 students with an average of 3 interviews each."

About two-thirds of his patients, he says, have emotional difficulties which are usually "personality disorders of a transient nature."

Examples

He gave as examples of these disorders rebellion against parental control, or against a set code of moral or behavior.

"There are also emotional disturbances precipitated by an event," he explained, "such as the loss of a girl friend, the termination of a love affair, or an inability to adjust to living away from home."

The other approximate one-third of the student patients, says Dr. Fortin, have more permanent and deep-set emotional illnesses. Among these he includes students who have had previous psychiatric treatment, those who are unable to pursue a certain course of study in preparation for a certain vocation because their emotional capacities were not up to it, and those who have gotten into legal troubles because of delinquency with an emotional or psychiatric cause.

"Most of these," he said, "can be remedied by the right form of psychiatric treatment."

"It is the feeling among college psychiatrists," he said, "that 80 per cent of the students who come to them need more than counseling. They need psychiatric treatment."

Simple Advice

He hastily pointed out, however, that not everybody with a problem on his mind should see a psychiatrist. "A number of problems can be remedied by simple advise," he said.

"But if it cannot, or if the student cannot accept and follow the advice given him, or if the problem can not be remedied, there is an emotional block that can be removed only by a psychiatrist," he added.

Students are often referred to Dr. Fortin by the office of the Dean of Student Affairs (by either Dean Fred Weaver or Assistant Director of Student Affairs Roy Holsten) or by any faculty member or administrative officials.

Students sometimes come to the sutdent affairs office or to Dr. Fortin of their own volition or on the advice of a friend or a dormitory counsellor.

"One of the most common problems which I am presented with," said Holsten, "is that of the student who is not doing well academically and decides he is just not suited for college."

Holsten says he handles all the problems he can, but that he often finds one which he thinks Dr. Fortin could handle more effectively. "The ultimate goal," he said, "is to alleviate whatever problem is bothering a student. If I can handle it, fine. If Dr. Fortin can handle it, fine. Or if both of us can handle it, fine."

"Every problem that comes in," said Holstein, "is serious in the minds of the person who brings it in. We treat them all as serious problems."

Di Stimulates Free Thinking

By BABBIE DIIORIO

A senator assumes the rostrum and begins his five minute address.

A comment is received by his colleagues with an enthusiastic "here, here." He makes his position clear on the question under debate.

The thud of a fist banging down on the rostrum is heard. Someone rises and asks for a point of order or personal privilege.

The sergeant-at-arms rings the time limit bell. The senator yields to questions, and assumes his seat.

Four or five senators jump to their feet. One is recognized. The debate continues.

This Is The Di

This is the Dialectic Senate, where one is confronted with the realization that these young senators, students of the University of North Carolina, are acquiring poise in debate and presentation of their opinions by taking advantage of this important segment of Carolina's extracurricula activities.

To each his own is the perogative which everyone enjoys in the Di Chambers. Needless to say, its fiery debators don't hesitate in speaking their piece.

There are some very entertaining moments of almost howling laughter as senators disagree with one another or get entangled up to their ears in Robert's Rules or Order.

But there are also tense moments, while the group listens attentively to the debate.

These men and women sit and ponder for hours over pertinent questions and it is notable that their interest in the Di Senate, its debates and purposes is sincere and vital.

Facts At Their Fingertips

They have facts at their fingertips and much preparation and research goes into their speeches.

The Di is a place where respect and admiration are the rewards for taking a stand on a question with dignity and force.

The members of the Senate are entrusted with the responsibility of preserving its traditions, which are numerous and steadfast.

In June, of 1795, five months after the founding of the University, the Debating Society had its first recorded meeting. That same year a division occurred from which the Dialectic Society emerged, along with the Philanthropic Society.

Catalysts

Both organizations served as catalysts for student government on campus, and this was one of the earliest successful expirements in that field of university life in America.

Membership in either the Di or the Phi was made compulsory in 1884.

So it is that the Di played an outstanding part in molding and regulating the moral standards of the student body and in the development of student government.

Although at present student government is a spearate facet of the University, the Di continues to aid in the development of leadership, free thinking and certainly cultivates a respect for the individual and his opinions.

President Joel Fleishman observed "I have seen young students come into the Di, struggle through their first speeches, stumble in their presentations, and then, by some remarkable process, emerge as powerful and confident debaters, polished and persuasive speakers, ready to leave the University and begin to make their way in our communities.

"It is a believer in the American dream about men who are free and strong, about men who are vocal and confident, and about men who are restless and discontented," said Fleishman.

That Gorgeous George Always Did Look A Little Suspicious

Chalk up another one for the Great Ammerican Midwest, home of McCarthy and Jenner and Dirksen, home of the lady who said Robin Hood was a Communist and should be stricken from our books, home of the harassment of great institutions like the University of Chicago and Ohio State by state loyalty commissions and of the attack on Girl Scouts by the big, bad American Legion.

Add to the list the fact that this week, the Indiana State Athletic Commission decided to require a non-Communist oath of all professional boxers and wrestlers on the grounds that "the state has no business sponsoring the public appearance of Reds."

A Word To Bearded Bob Ruark

Robert C. Ruark, an old Carolina grad and a clever writer who has parlayed his sour pen into a great deal of money, gives us a pain in the neck.

We follow his wordy adventures in The Charlotte News, which headlined his latest attack on the young this week, "The Kids Are Bores Today." Blustery Bob's premise, believe it or not, was that since the present college generation "talks learnedly of things in literature and art and politics and economics and world affairs" and doesn't stir its gin in bathtubs, there isn't much hope for the world.

"What I mean," he explains, "I can't tell you what I studied in the last quarter of my senior year at the University of North Carolina, but I remember that somebody dropped a cake of soap in the home-brew, vastly improving the flavor, and that a pretty girl with brown eyes sent my fraternity pin back."

Well, we've got news for Mr. Ruark. Things haven't changed so much in Chapel Hill. Brown-eyed girls still send back fraternity pins, and if we prefer ABC store bourbon to soapy home-brew, why, who can blame us?

But maybe we've learned a few things since Robert Ruark flunked his last quiz at the University; and maybe one of those things is that it's going to take more than a convertible and a liquor bottle to unravel the mess Mr. Ruark and his reckless generation made of the world. It's going to take literature and art and politics and economics among other things, and if we can't guzzle our alcohol at the Ruark rate, we'll just have to get along the best we can.

The Valkyries' Choice

The very nature of the task the Valkyries have undertaken—that of choosing the outstanding women students for membership each year—bespeaks the difficulties of the task. It is hard to single out one hard-working coed as having a more outstanding record of "character, scholarship, leadership and service" than another one. That is why we think the Valkyries should be commended for their choice night before last of five exceptionally noteworthy students: Babbie Di Ioro, Susan Fink, Ruth Jones, Kendrick Townsend and Marilyn Zager.

Campus Issues For Elections Seem Scarce

Louis Kraar

WITH CAMPUS elections just three weeks off, things are ominiously quiet. Here's why.

Issues for the upcoming election seem harder to find than lonely coeds. The biggest controversy so far this year in campus political circles is Student Party Vice President Dave Reid's leniency bill, but it is strictly not of a political nature. Neither party is unified in its stand on the Reid bill.

Otherwise, things are progressing rather quietly. The University Party is making an effort to sponsor bills in the Legislature, despite its impotency in that body. The Student Party, having settled the party spat, is planning for the fall election.

I asked several University Party leaders what the issues would be in the fall election. The only one who would answer said, "We haven't decided yet. We're going to meet soon and plan that."

Student Party leader Joel Fleishman had a terse, "No comment."

THE STUDENT party seems to have the most at stake in the fall election due to their gigantic majority in the Legislature. The SP controls three-fourths of the votes in the Legislature—enough to override any presidential veto.

The University Party is banking on regaining the seats in the town districts which it lost in the spring election to the SP. There are four such seats in the town district which the SP holds and the UP wants to win. The UP will probably get these 4 seats but that would still leave their rivals with a powerful majority.

Thus, the UP also is going to push hard for some dorm seats. This, however, will be more of a job than winning back the four town seats.

LEADERS IN the SP have decided to hold back on emphasizing the television sets which they were instrumental in obtaining for the dorms. SP opinion seems to be that the electorate will remember, but it would seem to this reporter that SP candidates won't hestitate to remind voters about the TV sets. And they probably won't when it comes to door-to-door campaigning.

SP campaigning on the washing machine grants to coed dorms wouldn't go too well anyway if this were a major theme. The washers haven't been operating because coin boxes weren't provided.

The coin boxes pay for the operation costs. And somewhere along the line, planners forgot to provide for their installation. Manning Muntzing, who is handling the dorm buying program, has said that the coin boxes are on the way. Meantime, the machines sit idle.

THIS REPORTER might suggest some issues at this point.

For once and for all, the parties should decide whether those whom they represent have a right to know what goes on in government meetings. If they do feel that the electorate has a right to know, then let the Legislature go on record as favoring open meetings of representative student government groups.

Both parties could do much toward making the student Legislature a forum for opinion on all leading campus issues—instead of a group that just discusses limited bills. Last Spring's drinking controversy, during which the Legislature never discussed the problem, is a prime example of how this group has neglected certain campus problems.

That's two issues. Wonder which ones the campus politicos will come up with?

SINCE THE Student Party has talked so much of unity lately, it would seem appropriate that they take a stand on the most vital issue on campus—the leniency bill.

Any free and great political group has to have disagreement and dissent. And so it has been on the leniency bill sponsored by the SP's Reid.

But to open up the party floor to debate on this bill would enlighten the campus at large. Since the sponsor is an SP man, an SP meeting would be a good sounding board.

'Something's Wrong. Last Time He Was Running Scared'

Dewey And Commies

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—The nation will soon get the answer to a highly interesting question of psychology. The question is: will the old political trick of bringing the Communist skeleton out of the Democratic closet work once again?

Ever since Vice President Nixon went out to Denver and warned the President and his party that they were way behind in the polls, the skeleton has been rattled until some of the bones are in danger of dropping off.

So it will be highly interesting to students of psychology, as well as historians, to say nothing of the American people, to see whether the strategy works once again. As of today, here is a play-by-play account of how the strategy is progressing:

In Montana, Sen. Jim Muarray, Democrat, a staunch Irish Catholic who is no more pro-Russian or pro-Communist than the church at which he worships, has suddenly found 160,000 pieces of literature in the post-office boxes of every Montana voter depicting him as a rabid rustler for the Soviet Union. The allegation is based upon the fact that during the war, when we were allies of Russia, Jims name appeared on a committee for Soviet-American Friendship, of which a good many other distinguished Americans at that time were also members.

GOP Asked Commie Aid

On top of this, young Mr. Nixon appeared in Butte last week to tell Montanans that the Democratic Party was in danger of being infiltrated with Communists. Waxing eloquent, he continued with this statement:

"As far as the Republican Party is concerned, it never has had the support of the Communist party. We welcome the opposition of the Communist Party in this campaign."

Mr. Nixon went on at some length, pounding this point home to the people of Montana.

Unfortunately, he did not know that just three days before, Earl Browder, onetime head of the Communist Party now banished from its ranks, had made a statement directly to the contrary. Writing in I. F. Stone's Weekly on Octtober 18, he told how such a stalwart as Gov. Tom Dewey had sought out Communist Party support.

"In 1937 an ambitious and able young Republican named Thomas E. Dewey," wrote Mr. Browder "made his first election campaign for the position of district attorney. His organization felt the need to gather votes wherever they were to be found and solicited Communist support.

"The issue came to me and I said, of course, support Dewey. This was done through a trade union committee headed by a well-known Communist named Louis Weinstock. When Dewey won the election, that committee gave him a victory banquet at which he was photographed arm-in-arm with the toastmaster, Weinstock.

"Of course," continued Browder, "Dewey was as innocent in this association as Oppenheimer was in his. It was a political marriage without love on either side.

'Caesar' Has No Stars

Carl Williams

The story of revolution and overthrow is as old as government itself. We need but look to the world around us for present day examples: the Bolsheviks in Russia, and the states of South America with the regular and methodical changeover in government of one group of gangsters for another group of gangsters. Always the cry is, "Peace, Freedom and Liberty."

"JULIUS CAESAR" is such a story. It is a modern story. Even in Elizabethan England, Roman robes and togas were laid aside for contemporary English dress. The story still stands. The calculated hate and evil of Communism is still to be defeated by the human family and those who would work and die for freedom. The story is perhaps more important now than ever before.

Next to the timeliness of its theme, and, with all due respect to the opinion of playwright, in M-G-M's magnificent production of Shakespeare's "JULIUS CAESAR," the Actor's the thing." From the first scene, when the brilliant cast is all assembled to the very last, when, of all the leads, only Marlon Brando as "Mark Anthony" remains alive; the acting is of such superior quality that few other movies that Hollywood has made can boast of a greater concentration of talent in one film.

In "JULIUS CAESAR" there are no stars. Each role is interpreted by a "star-name," but each actor seems to have sacrificed any attempt for personal recognition in favor of "ensemble playing," or an attitude of "all for one and one for all." Consequently, rather than having moments when an actor is built up out of proportion to the others for a flash of individual glory, "JULIUS CAESAR" has such universal excellence in the quality of its actor's performances that at times it's like watching a tennis match to follow the best one. Fortunately, there are other times when the camera concentrates on one actor, as in Antony's funeral oration and the death scenes of Brutus and Cassius, and, therefore, relieves the rich feast of talen from which to choose.

To Mark Antony, Marlon Brando brings virility and a lusty passion for life, and sans the mannerisms that many have grown to identify with him he gives a sincere and honest portrait of an opportunist caught up in the save events of his time.

His Mark Anthony is not a particularly noble person and is by no means sympathetic. Quick to recognize the potentials Caesar's death brings to him, Brando's Anthony turns the tidal wave of public sentiment to his advantage and uses it to the hilt.

Conversely, James Mason as Brutus presents a man whose goodness and nobility betray him and pitifully twist him into a vengeful, destructful force when they are mischanneled by the evil about him. This difficult and lengthy role is played with dignity and restraint, and the external features of the actor's face and body convey vividly the inner turmoil and agony of the character.

But it is Sir John Guilgud's Cassius that appears as the most "flesh and blood" character in the film. To me, he is the world's greatest living actor and in "JULIUS CAESAR" John Guilgud brings to life one of the most memorable screen performances you may ever have the opportunity to see. The richness of his voice, his fantastic body control, the unbelievable shadings and subtleties of his characterization, all merge into a personality that you will never forget. It took producer John Houseman nearly two years to persuade him to overcome his mistrust of the film medium, but this once done, it seems that John Guilgud set out to prove that he's the greatest no matter what the idiom of expression happens to be.

Another fine performance is given by Edmund O'Brian as Casca. Relevated before to playing only heavies in B-movies his characterization is sharp and definite and convincing. The least effective of the principle roles is Louis Calhern's Caesar. A really fine actor, he's just a little too artificial and posturing to be as effective as he might.

Reaction Piece

Gallup Poll, Vishinsky, And Sen. Ives

David Mundy

A person reading the headlines on the latest Gallup Poll would imagine the Republican Party to be on its last legs. Those who ventured to read the report would find otherwise. In the East, 2 per cent more people did say that they would vote Democrat. But in the East Central states the reverse was true. In the West Central states, the Republicans led by 12 per cent. (Clearly not all millionaires). In the Far Western states. Republicans led by 12 per cent.

The Democrats did lead by a wide margin in the South, 78 per cent to 22 per cent. But that 22 per cent of the people who planned to vote for Republican candidates this fall is up 2 per cent from 1952, when Ike was really on the ballot. And Democrats should remember that such a 2 per cent increase in North Carolina's Ninth Congressional District would insure the election of Bill Stevens, Republican candidate there.

Of course it must be remembered that these percentages were merely how people would have voted last week—if they had bothered to vote at all.

Still, the future isn't as black as headline writers would have Republicans believe.

As a person who generally gives more than a fleeting glance to the newspapers, I often wonder if the people who write the headlines read the articles

Last week, Senator Ives, campaigning for governor of New York, made a disclosure about his opponent, Averell Harriman. Harriman, said Ives, was chairman of the board of a company which payed a quarter of a million dollars as a bribe to Tammany Hall. (The public part of the scandal rid New York of another prominent Democrat, Mayor Jimmy Walker of Seabury fame.)

Harriman, as all good Democrats do under such circumstances, took to TV with the charge that Ives wasn't playing fairly. W. Kerr Scott, you may remember, used the same technique in his senatorial primary. Before Lennon had half a chance to put even one foot in his mouth, Scott & Forces, Inc. were yelling about "dirty politics."

Back to those headlines. Harriman didn't deny the charges, he just squawked about dirty politics. Yet a prominent Eastern North Carolina newspaper headlines the story:

BRIBERY CHARGES HURLED BY IVES

Denied by Harriman

Which story points up the double standard used by contemporary "liberal" Democrats. It is all right for Harriman to pay $250,000 bribe. But, they charge, there is a major Republican scandal when new Dealing Democrats are fired by the FHA. This isn't insinuating, however, that these Democrats aren't living up to their highest principles; those principles being those of election to office and staying there.

The Democrats, who so delightedly misconstrued a remark by Secretary Wilson, have muffed another chance. Perhaps they were afraid of offening some of their slightly more leftist comrades.

Andrei Vishinsky recently attended a birthday dinner for Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. One of his tablemates was what TIME calls a "self-confessed" Republican.

Said Soviet hatchet-man Andrei as he shook hands with the young man upon departure, "You are a very nice young man. If I were an American, I would be a Republican."

Which means, I imagine, that Vishinsky thinks very highly of himself.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

THE HORSE was in Kenan Stadium when I saw him, carefully combing through the battle-scuffed grass in the wake of the Wake wake.

"Can it be that Little Jack Horner, the notorious Dook, ugh, toady, is in error?" The Horse murmured. "From what I heard, this field should be fetlock deep in teeth."

Poor Little Jack Horner! Didn't The Horse know that said subject wars in error more oft than not? Besides, he was trying to take attention away from Dook Hoofball Club's failure to live up to Little Jack Horner's billings.

"And right there, Roger me bhoy," The Horse said, spurning five loose ears, two noses, and one complete fibula in his search for food-choppers, "Little Rollo Horner stuck into his mouth not one, but both, feet. Have I not read, of late, his frezied dfenses of Dook's offenses at West Lafayette, Indiana, which caused Hoosier writers to label Dook the*quote* dirtiest hoofball team ever seen unquote?"

Oh, well, that was Dook merely being spirited and aggressive!

"And didn't I read somewhere in Little Rollo Horner's Corner that one reason the Dooks didn't cop the duke against Army was, they quote didn't incur enough penalties unquote?" The Horse pursued his rhetorical questioning. "In short, the Dooks did not clip enough, slug enough or become unnecessarily rough enough?"

Yeah; but that was the Dooks.

"I kinda agree there," The Horse admitted ruefully. "Chapel Hill is so admittedly superior to other institutions of learning and culture in the environs, that even retaliatory belligerences are to be deplored. You observed that Little Rollo fairly and impartially mentioned several unfortunate incidents which occured during Tar Heel basketball games? The Vada incident; and the Lifson Incident? Nowhere did he mention that both Vayda and Lifson had reacted impetuously AFTER they had been fouled with deliberation and with evil intent by the opponents who were fouled by them after their original agression. This would have been objective reporting and writing, and this Little Rollo Horner can never be convicted of."

"The truth of the matter, Roger," The Horse stated, going on with his bicuspid inquiry, "is that Dook, State and Wake have for long come to regard the Tar Heels as a punching bag to work out their cretan muscles—State, so far as hoofball is concerned, being in this view somewhat myopic—and an understandable frenzy perhaps possesses the opponents' minions when they see what they thought was a sure victory slip from their impotent grasps."

Did The Horse believe that this immature rage should be displayed in the after-the-game utterances of Tom Rodgers and, what is infinitely worse, of Dr. Tribble himself?

"What gave me a huge horse-laugh," The Horse horse-laughed, "was Little Rollo Horners' statement that, had his son been in the game and injured as was Consoles, he quote would have been hard to hold unquote. If this be true, one can but hope that Little Rollo Horner is easier to hold than to read, and the evidence would favor this conclusion heavily. I do go along with Little Rollo Horner in this wise—that no dirty playing should be condoned.

"Also, no dirty reporting and, or, writing should be permitted by a newspaper which professes friendship for Chapel Hillian dollars spent in Durham. If an individual errs, is that reason why publishers and college presidents should follow suit?

For, as if to make sure that Little Rollo's snide attacks on our coaches were justified, the neighboring page published an heroic-sized photo of the Nick Consoles' injured face. Why not also show a pic of Dick Lackey's injuries, suffered at the fists of unawake Wake's beaten hoofballers—Lackey, a member of the coaching staff at Chapel Hill, a fine sportsman, and a gentleman sans peur et sans reproche? It would serve the embattled Baptist educator, Dr. Tribble, better were he to apologize to our coaching staff for the attack of his mercenaries upon them, than to ululate that quote someone told me the North Carolina coaches attacked (unawake) Wake players and fans, unquote." Horner's Corner was Dook-fed, and, like all toadies, Little Jack Horner fawned for his masters and acted the swaggering bullyboy toward his masters' opponents.

"I still can't see the proposition that the publishers should permit this sort of biased, deliberately slanted writing," The Horse said. "Especially when they claim to want Chapel Hill readership Certainly, the exciting Durham stores listen very closely when newspaper reps state what their Chapel Hill circulation is. But said circulation is not going to be at all friendly to the paper if, as is the case with this twaddle, innuendo and left-handed inference are made use of to condemn not only one individual, but to castigate coaching staffs and to drum-head an entire university."

Was not The Horse guilty of what he accused Little Jack Horner of, viz. and to wit, not being objective?

"I am strenuously objective," The Horse pointed out with a blunt hoof. "Heck, I have been objecting without pause from word one of this item! If you mean isn't this personal in some measure, I plead guilty. But he started it, and you know he approves of striking back."

Only for Dookers, Staters, and Wakers, he approved.

"If someone on our team was guilty of flagrant misconduct, George Barclay will not wait upon word from Dr. Gray, Dr. House and Dr. Erickson to take corrective and punitive steps," The Horse stated confidently. "I can promise you said gentlemen will investgate and act, pro or con; but they will not do so ere they have the facts, which is more than delays Little Brer Horner or suggests itself to Dr. Tribble.

How did The Horse think this would have been handled in Horner's Dook-Corner had a Dooker elbowed some Tar Heel molars and bicuspids out of his way?

"Heh-heh!" The Horse heh-hehhed, "Lil' Rollo Horner would have been demanding the Tar Heeler be censured for biting on Dook elbows! Chee whiz, Roger —! Looka here! Teeth, by gum! and not any of ours, by gum!"

How did The Horse know this?

"They are all canine teeth," The Horse said reasonably. "Oh, well, better luck against the Dooks —those noble and Galahad-like warriors of clean, spirited, aggressive and penalty-loaded hoofball!

Why, shure! We had imported some Purdue officials, drat 'em!

"Wump!" Mr. Wump, the Frog, whumped from his corner . . . .

Buckeyes Replace Sooners As No. 1 In AP Poll

Oklahoma Drops To Second; UCLA Third; Arkansas Fourth

Powerful Army Rises To Fifth, While Duke Drops To 16th; Terp-Beaters 10th

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ohio State's Buckeyes, a collection of football players with roses in their eyes and mayhem in their hearts, have replaced Oklahoma as the No. 1 college team in the opinion of the nation's sports writers and broadcasters.

They earned the honor crushing Wisconsin 31-14 last Saturday while Oklahoma was sliding listlessly through a 21-0 decision over Kansas State. Oklahoma had been on top of the Associated Press poll for three weeks.

Oklahoma collected 10 more first place votes than Ohio State—74-64—but the Bucks edged ahead on the second place ballots, of which 69 went to Ohio State and only 49 to the Sooners.

The final count, on the usual 10-9-8, etc., basis, gave Ohio State 1,858 points and Oklahoma 1,834. UCLA, with 45 firsts, was right behind with 1,800 points, and the surprising Arkansas team fourth with 1,351.

Ohio State was fourth last week while Wisconsin was second to Oklahoma.

UCLA, which walloped Oregon State 61-0, polled a much higher vote than it did a week ago in retaining third place.

Arkansas, a "team of destiny" which came from nowhere to take the Southwest Conference lead and then knocked Mississippi from the ranks of the unbeaten, jumped from seventh to fourth. Army rose from ninth to fifth and West Virginia from 10th to seventh.

The new order, after the first four, is Army, Notre Dame, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Purdue and Miami, Fla., conquerors of Maryland.

The leading teams:

1.	Ohio State—64	1858
2.	Oklahoma—74	1834
3.	UCLA—45	1800
4.	Arkansas—16	1351

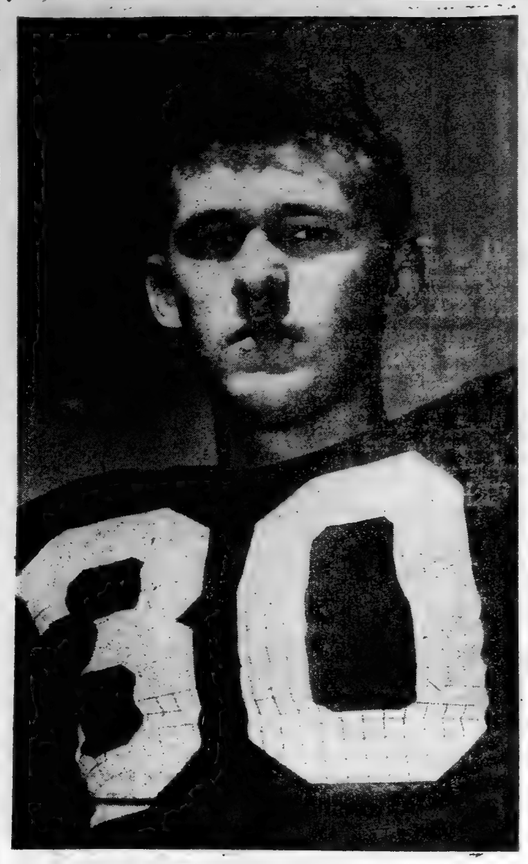
Chi Phi Shows Power; ZBT Wins Overtime



Zeta Beta Tau won a spectacular overtime game, defeating Pi Kappa Phi 1-0. The game was an even affair with both teams having sustained drives, but neither could get up the necessary scoring punch. After Pi Kap Phi held ZBT on a goal line stand in the closing minutes, the game ended in a scoreless tie. On the last play of the overtime, Irv Gottlib threw to Al Reisnick for the win.

Chi Phi unleashed a powerful running and passing attack, which along with some razzle-dazzle plays, gave them a 33-0 victory over Lambda Chi Alpha. Joe Cruciani was the big gun for Chi Phi as he scored twice. Roger Herbert, Al Moise, Bill Sanders, were all outstanding. Chi Phi, under the tutelage of Jack Little and Bob Merritt showed a fine piece of coaching work.

Halfback Ed Sutton Rates As "Athlete Of The Week"

By BERNIE WEISS

Sophomore halfback Ed Sutton, who scored two touchdowns Saturday to give Carolina an upset 14-7 victory over Wake Forest, has been selected "Athlete of the Week" by the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel.

Sutton was given a race for the honor by trackman Jim Beatty, who set a course record of 19:42 Saturday morning in a three-way meet with Wake Forest and Maryland.

The fleet scatback was named "Athlete of the Week" once before this year on the basis of his performance against Georgia.

Sutton's performance against the Deacons rivaled that of any other athletic feat put on by a Tar Heel this season. The pre-med student not only accounted for both touchdowns, but also scored a third on a 64-yard run which was nullified because Carolina was detected clipping on the play.

Ed played an outstanding defensive game. It was also believed that he had recovered a Wake Forest fumble deep in UNC territory with less than a minute left in the game, but subsequent showings of film revealed that it was Will Frye who pounced on the loose pigskin.

A freshman standout last season, Sutton has not seen too much action to date.

Has 16.25 Average

Sutton is Connie Gravitte's understudy, being a member of Coach George Barclay's second "first string." He has carried only 12 times all year and has a rushing average of 16.25. This mark would top the Atlantic Coast Conference leaders but Sutton does not get official No. 1 spot because he has not carried as often as others.

Saturday he ran four times to gain 127 yards, averaging 31.7 yards per carry. He also caught one pass for 11 yards.

His touchdown runs were jaunts of 21 and 77 yards.

Barclay said that he knew Sutton "had the stuff" all season, but that he (Barclay) was bringing the Morehead scholar along slowly. Barclay also hinted that Sutton would see much more action from now on.

Sutton is 19 years old, weighs 194 pounds and stands six feet, one inch tall.

Frosh Court Schedule Set

Carolina's freshman basketball team will play a 22-game schedule which opens on December 2 against the Pineland Edwards M. I., according to a statement released today by Coach Buck Freeman.

Freeman also announced that practice will open for the frosh next Monday at 3:30 in Woollen gym.

Varsity practice will get under way Monday night.

The freshman schedule:

Dec. 9—Atlantic Christian Jayvee, home.

Feb. 22—N. C. State frosh, home.
Feb. 25—Duke frosh, away.

Tar Heels In Long Workout For Vol Test

Offense and defense drew heavy attention today on Navy Field, with the Tar Heel freshmen, complete with Tennessee orange jerseys, furnishing the competition.

End Will Frye, Tackle Jack Maultsby and guard Ed Patterson stood out as the varsity tested its defense against Tennessee single wing plays.

Coach George Barclay termed the squad's defensive showing as "adequate," but said more work would have to be done in that department later this week.

Halfbacks Ed Sutton and Ken Keller, got off the longest runs of the day after the varsity turned its attention to offense. Sutton galloped for a touchdown on one play, and Keller followed with a neat 55 yard jaunt.

Larry Muschamp, suffering from a boil on his neck, joined end Dick Starner on the sidelines for practice. Starner is still limping from a slight leg injury sustained last Saturday. Quarterback Len Bullock returned to action.

Coach Barclay Remains Reserved In Comments

Carolina football coach George Barclay today had viewed films of the Wake Forest-Carolina game last Saturday, but still had little to say concerning the disputed ruckus during and after the Tar Heel's 14-7 victory.

Barclay stated there would be no love lost between teams in any case where a two-touchdown favorite was behind with less than a minute to play.

"Will Frye was punished, being suspended from the game, for his illegal block," he said. "The fight didn't start until two plays later."

Barclay also said that any material regarding athletic relations being strained between Wake Forest and Carolina would have to come from the higher echelons.

Carolina Soccer Squad Is Host To Duke Blue Devils

By DICK ARMSTRONG

Carolina's soccer squad is host today to Duke's Blue Devils on Fetzer field at 3 o'clock. The Tar Heels will be seeking their first win of the season as they play the second game against Atlantic Coast Conference competition.

Both Duke and Carolina have identical season records of no wins and three losses. The Blue Devils will be favored however, due to their recent fine play against Maryland. The Terrapins previously defeated the Tar Heels by a 4-1 score.

UNC coach Marvin Allen hopes for a vast improvement in the Carolina squad as he has switched several men to new positions and has two key performers back in action from the injured list. Allen commented that the Tar Heels haven't played up to par since their second practice tilt against Ft. Bragg.

Reserves Tommy Kirkland, Jim Skidmore, and Dick Dodson are expected to see a lot of action.

Once again, the No. 1 reason: Luckies taste better. They taste better because Lucky Strike is the cigarette of fine tobacco . . . and "It's Toasted" to taste better. Cobb's Got Its Paper

There are 250 Corn Cobbs distributed weekly to the residents of Cobb dormitory. The Corn Cobb, of course, is the dormitory newspaper.

The paper is delivered to each of the approximately 250 rooms in the building. The Corn Cobb is mimeographed on legal size paper. Even with the small circulation the cost of publishing is less than ½ cent per copy.

Funds come out of the IDC "endowment" to the dormitory.

Charlie Barrett, editor of the Corn Cobb, in answering a query of just what was the principal objective of the paper said:

"The Corn Cobb is a way of keeping the residents (of Cobb) informed on dormitory activities, and also serves as an outlet for humorous 'digs' and collegians in general."

An example of a "dig," which appeared in this years first publication, is: "This is Be Kind to Your Roommate Week—Let him spit on this first."

At biweekly dormitory meetings, complaints and announcements in the dorm are brought up. The dormitory manager and floor managers bring up things they would like the residents to know about and correct.

These meetings are the main news source of the Corn Cobb. The paper does not print news of the campus since the DTH "handles that quiet efficiently."

Corn Cobb was the only dormitory newspaper on the campus last year. Jim Dunn, last year's editor, is present editor of the Carolina Quarterly.

Currently, Stacy's Rebel Yell is the only other dorm publication on the campus.

Dave Merritt is Associate editor of the Corn Cobb. Doug Young handles the jokes and Earl Haynes gives advice to the loveless; Joe Eudy, Aviation; Bill Hayes, news.

TV's Got An Audience

People in Chapel Hill do watch television. This fact was proved Monday night about 8 o'clock when 11 students responded to a call flashed on TV screens in this area.

The students who responded to the call according to Watts A. Scott, assistant administrative clerk of the hospital, were: Wallace O'Neal, Job Belcher, Jake Phelps, Steve Phelps, Darel Hurley, Hartwell Conklin and Dennis Ream, all of Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity; Dorothy M. Upchurch of Route 1, Sue Fryer of Chi Omega Sorority, Harry House of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity and Bob Clay of Graham Dorm.

Monogram Club Is Active

By BOB EBERLE

This year, along with their other activities, the Monogram Club has decided to take on another activity, and this newest one consists of co-sponsoring, with Graham Memorial, the showing of films taken at the latest football game. The showing will be tomorrow night.

After the football season is over the club is hoping it will be able to show films of old football games such as those taken during the Justice era. "It all depends," Pawlick said, "On how they are received by the students."

This is not the first time that the Monogram Club has given some of its time to a campus project; all year long the club performs similar activities. Their other projects include cleaning up Battle Park, assisting in blood drives, acting as guides for visiting high school seniors each spring, and maintaining a reception service for visiting teams.

Of all the club's activities, the program for various state orphanages are among the most worthwhile. Groups of these children are invited to home football games and are feted at Easter and Christmas.

Probably the most well known campus activity sponsored by the Monogram Club is that of holding the Blue-White game every spring. The proceeds from this game, as well as most of the proceeds from other activities, go into the athletic scholarship fund.

Students show varying degrees of willingness to talk about their problem, said Holsten. "If a student is referred to us by a faculty member, he comes in with a chip on his shoulder. If a student has worried all night, he can't wait to get in. The student who comes on his own initiative is willing to talk freely."

Not Necessarily Serious

He pointed out that when he refers a student to Dr. Fortin, it does not mean that here is something seriously wrong. "It's just that he has training in this sort of thing," he said. He stressed the fact that he and Dr. Fortin work together.

Dr. Fortin pointed out that a self-referal to his office by anybody will be accepted at any time.

"We function as doctors," he said. "Students are assured of a privileged communication, except when the dean or person referring a student to us requires a report," he said.

He said that his files were "top secret," that nobody could look into them, and that they could not be subpoenaed.

Treatment can be given on a short- or a long-term basis, he said, depending on the circumstances.

Before coming here, Dr. Fortin was an instructor in the Colorado School of Medicine at Denver for the past year.

Born in Montreal, Canada, he received his A.B. degree from the University of Ottawa in 1942. He served in the Navy for two years, and after his discharge obtained his M.A. in Psychology from the University of Montreal in 1945 and his M.D. from there in 1950.

Before this year students were referred to the psychiatric department of the hospital and were counselled by Dr. George C. Ham.

According to Dr. Fortin, Carolina is one of 25 universities in the country which provide permanent psychiatric service for students.

Interdormitory Council Backs 'Brigadoons' For Dorm Men As Campus Dance Tradition

By RUTH DALTON

The Interdormitory Council last night approved a recommendation by John Beshara to organize the "Brigadoons," a dormitory men's German Club.

The group, proposed by the IDC social chairman, would be governed by a board of directors to be composed of 12 members elected from the various dorms.

The purpose of the "Brigadoons" would be to sponsor a dance to be played by a name band this year, and one such dance each semester starting with the 1955-56 academic year.

The approval of the IDC in no way obligates the dormitories who will each vote on the measure and report back to the IDC within one month.

IDC President Manning Muntzing had this to say about the recommendation. "This idea of the Brigadoons is not especially a new idea. It was mentioned last year and I'm sure even before that. I am happy though that the IDC has taken an interest in this project and is willing and anxious to see such a thing as the Brigadoons off to a flying success.

"It will take a lot of work, but I sincerely believe it will be worth every moment that we are able to put into the idea. It is something that I think we have needed for a long time. It's something that I think will be tremendously successful and a wonderful addition to our campus tradition."

John Beshara, author of the recommendation, said "I have in mind to create a new tradition. I have given this proposal a great deal of thought and I think there is a definite need for dormitories to sponsor such a program."

Another important matter brought up at the meeting was the telephone siuation on campus. Student body president Tom Creasy was present at the meeting and presented the following plan which was approved by the IDC to help solve the problem.

Maintenance of telephones in the dorms will be quite expensive. To cover this expense, Creasy has proposed that instead of painting the dorms every four years as is now done, that for one or two periods the dorms be painted every five years. This would cover the cost of installing and maintaining the phones.

In answer to a question, Creasy said that phones on the first floors in women's dorms might also be included in this measure. The approved recommendation will now be sent to the University's Building and Grounds Committee. If the Committee approves the measure, the telephones will probably be installed immediately.

Creasy also said "I think the IDC is going to have one of the best years that any IDC has ever had on campus."

The group also approved a recommendation for dormitories to help finance the housing for one year for an exchange student from Guertengin University.

Pulpit Players Production Is Slated Tonight

The second performance of the Pulpit Players' religious drama, "The Boy With the Cart," will be given tonight at 8 p. m. in the main auditorium of the Chapel Hill Baptist Church.

Earlier in the week, the Players gave their opening performance of Christopher Fry's drama before an audience that nearly filled the main auditorium of the church. All Players' performances are open to the public.

Mrs. Louise Lamont, Chapel Hill, directs the Players, a non-denominational group, with many experienced actors among the membership, who have been sponsored by the Baptist Church of Chapel Hill in reviving the drama within the church.

Three UP Bills To Come Up

Three UP-sponsored bills will come up before the student Legislature, meeting at 7:30 in Phi Hall, tonight. They are: A bill to establish a University Band Improvements Committee, a bill to abolish quizzes during the week of fraternity rushing and a bill to provide funds for the Student Audit Board.

The band improvement bill, introduced by Bev Webb (UP), sets up a committee to study the needs of the band, investigate the possibility of band scholarships and investigate the setting up of a permanent source of funds for the band.

The bill concerning quizes during rush week was introduced by Charles Ackerman (UP). It will seek, by working through the various department heads, to end quizzes during the week of fraternity rushing because of the lack of study time.

The bill to provide funds for the student audit board was introduced by Max Crohn (UP).

Juniors Must Take Test

The faculty has voted to require all rising juniors to take a general test in English.

This semester the test will be given to those who may be promoted to junior standing this year. The purpose of the test is to improve student's achievement in reading and composition. For those whose scores are creditable, it will be the final test. For those who appear to have a specific deficiency or general handicap, there will be required remedial work until a reasonable competence is attained.

The test will be given on Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4 and Nov. 8, 9 and 10, at 7 p. m. in 106 Hanes Hall.

If the test is taken on one of the five days mentioned above, no charge will be made. If, however, it is taken at a time other than the regularly scheduled period in the fall or spring semesters, a special fee of $2.00 will be charged.

Students must complete the test before promotion to an upper college.

Deneke Recital Scheduled

Miss Margaret Deneke, lecturer and pianist, will be presented in a lecture-recital by the UNC Department of Music next Tuesday at 8 p. m.

A specialist in interpreting the music of the Romantic Era, Miss Deneke will illustrate her lecture with piano compositions by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Chopin, Brahms, Loder-Walker and Tovey.

The English pianist has had a background of close association with Robert Schumann's daughter, Mendelssohn's grandson, and the medical missionary, Albert Schweitzer.

Educated by private tutors, among them Miss Schumann, Miss Deneke has an honorary M.A. from Oxford and is librarian for Oxford University Musical Club and Union. She owns one of the most extensive collections of Mendelssohn's manuscripts and letters in existence. This collection was a gift from the composer's grandson, a close friend of Miss Deneke.

Some of the works which Miss Deneke will play on the third program of the Tuesday Evening Series are: "Two Posthumous Pieces" and "Scherzo in F Minor," by Mendelssohn; "In Memory, November 4, 1847."

Who Rules The Roost In India?

Men Slaves To Their Women?

By ELLEN WINSLOW

Is this a man's world? Do Europeans think American men are slaves to their women? Who is the head of the house in the Far East?

The role of the fairer sex was the topic at the first YMCA-YWCA Supper Forum in South Dining Room of Lenoir Hall Monday evening. The forum was the first in a series to bring foreign and native students together.

The question of whether this is a Man's World quickly turned into a discussion of why American women dominate their husbands and the reason they have not taken over in other countries.

To defend the women were Bobbie Walker, Purabi Bose from India, Barbara Goldwen and Irmgard Roth of Germany.

The foreign gentlemen's opinions were given by Alfred Descloux from Switzerland, Cuglie Cimino Michel from France and Mike Furuhata from Japan. Wool Howell, ex-serviceman, was the American fatalist. Ram Desikan of India acted as moderator.

Europeans do think American men are slaves to women, Michel said. "In Europe it's like that . . . I don't know why," he added.

"Is it true that men are henpecked" the moderator asked Furuhata.

Not so in Japan, Furuhata said. The man is still dominant in his country. Women may vote, but they are for the most part advised by their husbands.

Only a few of the Japanese girls pass examinations to enter the universities, Furuhata said. "I don't mean the girls are inferior . . . they generally lack initiative. They are modest. Tell her to look to the right and she will follow instructions. They are like American men," Furuhata continued.

In Japan only the lowest class women smoke on the streets, he said. Desikan asked for the American point of view on whether women should smoke on the streets. Howell said it was the accepted thing. "I don't object to women smoking on the streets," he said.

Henpecked?

Decloux gave another insight into the attitude of the American women. "I think it is a question of independence. Today there are so many gadgets that she will be over with the daily work . . . the American woman has more freedom and independence." This Decloux attributed to economical reasons. The same situation would not be found during the depression, he said.

"Would a Europeans Husband do housework?"

"Somebody has to do the work and somebody has to earn the money," Descloux said. Frenchmen have a high regard for the wives, he later said. "I have seen my father sweeping floors."

Irmgard Roth did not think the difference between American and European husbands was an economical one. She said it should be the attitude of the husband to help share the job of raising a family and housework.

In summing up the situation, Howell said, "Seems to me the American man is looking to the East with envy and looking to the future with hope.

The problem in America is one of psychology," he said. "We were taught that we were going to dominate and wake up to find that this is shared by the woman."

Purabi Bose and her family have lived in the U. S. since she was fourteen. She said her father now takes a share of the housework and seems to enjoy it.

Man Has Upper Hand

The man in India probably has the upper hand, Desikan said.

Bobbie Walker said the U. S. had gone through a political and social growth and that gave the American women the opportunity to do what she wanted to do.

"It is not a question of independence," Howell said. "Americans are living in a luxury. This has brought about a new attitude. The woman does not dominate, but rather she is dominated by her culture."

In India the women are staying in the background because though they want jobs, they are not available, Purabi said. Women are ridiculed if not married. If they are in a profession, they do not have a good chance, for marriages are arranged when they are young, she said. "They have to think twice." Barbara Goldwyn pointed out that they might have more equal chances to study and go into a profession if they had equal education.

"There are not enough jobs for men and women," Descloux said. "We should give the father the opportunity to feed his kids . . . it is an economic situation."

Furuhata said "The girls in Japan work for two or three years; then they leave." He explained the importance of the training in School to Be a Bride, which all the better Japanese girls go through. They learn to cook, sew, clean, perform the tea ceremony and play a musical instrument well.

Definite distinction is between the work of the man and that of the women, Furuhata said.

'. . . Where You Can Blow Off Steam . . .'

'Organized Bull Session'--Phi

By BARBARA WILLARD

"It's an organized bull session where you can blow off steam, where student leaders can express themselves and at the same time, find out what students think."

According to Lewis Brumfield, current speaker of the Phi Assembly, this is the outstanding feature of the organization.

Thomas Jefferson once said that there were two factions in any group. It was because of a difference in opinion that the Assembly of the Philanthropic Literary Society was founded.

"Way back when," or in 1795, all students were required to belong to what was then termed "the Assembly." Even at that early time, the students had a certain degree of control over their own discipline. If a person was expelled from the Assembly, he was expelled from the University, since membership was compulsory.

In 1797, the trend of the University, as well as of the nation, was partisan, the two schools of thought being the Jeffersonian and the Hamiltonian. A split came in the Assembly that year, with the Phi pulling out to leave what became the Di, or the Dialectic Senate.

"Although both groups are liberal now," Brumfield said, "the Phi was, at that time, the liberal, Hamiltonian group."

Since 1797, the Phi has developed into an orderly legislative body. The weekly meetings are carried on according to parliamentary procedure.

The Phi has recently discussed and voted on the proposed campus leniency bill. They are, however, concerned not only with campus issues, but also with statewide, national and international problems. On Tuesday, a bill for the procedure of statewide integration of schools will be presented.

"The procedure," Speaker Brumfield remarked, "is the introduction of the bill by a member of the Ways and Means Committee, one of the eight standing committees. The bill is put before the Assembly, and if the motion is made and seconded that it be discussed, it goes back to the committee for a week. During the week, the committee smooths out the rough spots, and the bill is re-presented the following week for open discussion and a vote.

"The debate gets pretty hot at times, but it is always fun, and it is excellent training for speakers."

Gov. William B. Umstead was speaker of the Phi when he was a student here. Of the Phi members, approximately 50 per cent go into law or politics every year. Almost all student leaders come from the ranks of either the Phi or the Di.

Officers of the Phi this year, other than Speaker Brumfield, are Dick Iobst, speaker pro tem; Harry Whitelock, clerk; Frank Warren, sergeant-at-arms, and Lawrence Matthews, critic-parliamentarian.

There is a 35 member limit in the Phi, the limit being set last year. A slight improvement has been made over last year's membership, with 20 members this year. Although coeds are eligible for membership, as are all students, there are no girls in the Phi this year.

All students are welcome, either as members or visitors to come to Phi Hall in New East at 8 p.m., any Tuesday, to hear the issues discussed.

Brumfield called Carolina's way of life "a training ground, where students can make mistakes and learn not to make them again. By the personal satisfaction and excellent training the Phi offers, it would be a mistake that one might not have a chance to remedy after he leaves the University, if he did not take advantage of this opportunity to better himself in every way."

'Beat Dook' Parade Scheduled Nov. 23 Down The Main Drag

Plans for the annual "Beat Dook" Float Parade, sponsored by the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity were announced today by Claude Pope, float parade chairman.

The parade is scheduled for down-town Chapel Hill the afternoon of November 23, forming at Woolen Gym at 2 p. m. The procession will get underway at three.

Letters have been mailed to all dorms, sororities, fraternities and other oganizations on the campus, inviting them to participate in the parade and competition for parade queen. All organizations entering floats in the parade will be eligible to enter a candidate for the queen. The queen will be selected at the PiKA house November 18, when she and her escort will be the dinner guests of the fraternity.

All entry blanks, for both the float and queen competition must be turned in at the PiKA house before six p. m. on the 16th.

The float entries must be one moving float from each organization, and no limitation has been placed upon the cost of the float. The floats will be judged on beauty, originality and effectiveness of the theme. The theme must pertain to beating Duke in the annual battle in Kenan Stadium Nov. 27.

The name of the queen will be announced on the day of the parade and she will ride on the special queen's float in the parade. The winning float will be announced at the "Beat Dook" pep rally.

Seen The Baptists' Recorder?

The Baptists are missing their tape recorder.

A spokesman for the Baptist Student Union here said yesterday his organization's machine, a Knight recorder, green and white, was missing from the student chaplin's office along with several spools of tape. It's been missing for more than four weeks, he said.

Local Baptists say they need the machine for their annual convention, to be held this year in Salisbury the weekend of Nov. 5.

Hazel's Unkindest Cut Still Showing

If old Joe Caldwell were alive today we're sure he could figure out a way to get his fallen monument back to its pedestal. For old Joe was quite a mathematician.

We read in our paper that workmen, in their own good time, are going to mosey over to McCorkle Place and re-ensconce the obelisk to its rightful place. It can't happen too soon to suit us.

It piques us deep inside to see a monument to one of this University's greatest men—her first president and one of her sharpest engineers—lying ignominiously on its flank on the lawn. It looks like we lack engineering skill or savoir faire or something. There's something incongruous here, especially in an age of science.

Every day as we look out our window our sentiment grows stronger. Some of our campus engineers had better fulfill their function pronto. Else we, poor putterers with words (not with guy-wires and cranes) that we are, will set old Joe's monument right by sheer will power.

Brewing Hell's Asphalt On Capitol Hill

Congress, according to an Associated Press report, will probably take steps when it reconvenes to tone down the blood and thunder children's television programs. There is talk of a censorship "czar" or possible extension of the functions of the Federal Communications Commission to include the "policing" of such programs.

A laudable idea, but just the sort of good intention, it seems to us, that paves the road to Hell. We doubt that Congress has the constitutional right to set up censorship over television communications. If it does, does it not also have the right to set up a news "czar" or an FCC "policing" of television commentators?

The television industry's own organization, the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, has shown itself to be concerned with the problem of little kids learning mugging and murder techniques from the TV screen. Let the broadcasters clean their own house, we say. The idea of congressional censorship, however subtle, causes a shudder along our spine.

Er, Ike, How About New Eagle?

President Eisenhower, Secretary of Commerce Weeks and Labor Secretary Mitchell are falling all over themselves to convince the voters that unemployment is a myth. We doubt that they will convince the Monongahela Iron and Metal Company at New Eagle, Pennsylvania. Monongahela placed a tiny want ad this week advertising for 50 laborers to work three months at digging up old trolley tracks; the ad was answered by more than 2,000 men who blocked traffic for two hours in the scramble to be first in line.

This while Ike insists we're in "the most prosperous peacetime year in history," Mitchell echoes, "all over the country, the picture is bright," and Weeks parrots, "things are looking good!"

Students, Hark The Sound Of Voices Dying

Louis Kraar

I HEARD the University yesterday.

The sound drifted down from the windows of Murphy and Saunders as I walked down the campus, and it struck me then. I realized that I was listening to the University. It was voices, the voices of professors.

Somewhere between the glamorous promotion films of coeds walking down the Carolina campus and story book tradition, it seems that the men in the classroom have been forgotten. Perhaps, not forgotten entirely, but just taken for granted.

The film that they show before you come to the University shows the activities, the dances, coeds sitting under the trees, football, and—for an instant—the classroom. The movie, I'm sure, was made to show people what Carolina is like. And, to the extent that it neglected the classroom, it was typical.

But because we don't honor the voices of the great men—the professors—doesn't mean we're lost. There is still time.

In Raleigh at state meetings money is the big thing. And to many of the legislators, saving it is a bigger thing.

And here at the Hill, the great mass of extra curriculars on the part of students, committee work on the part of faculty, and worrying about money on the part of the administration takes our ears and minds away from the voices of the great men.

SOMEHOW IN our student zeal for being well-rounded, we've forgotten to leave any room for learning. Success at Carolina too often means a social success, political victories, or simply belonging to a number of things.

"Nothing is more fallacious than the notion that prominence in extra curricular affairs is a substitute for scholastic attainment or the notion that you can have a great or even a good University in which study is not the predominant factor," Dean Fred Weaver told students last spring.

Weaver, who more than once has spoken of tradition, pointed out the lack of tradition for study.

I think that whatever shortcoming the University has in its study traditions is because we don't have time to listen to the professors.

AND WHAT of the professors' side?

A professor is rated on the basis of his research reputation and degrees. His paymaster never really knows how good a classroom man he is.

This is regrettable because some teachers are strictly classroom men. They spend their time meeting their students, talking with them, and planning vigorous lectures. Little time is left for them to do research. They are the classroom men, but no one ever knows it—except their students.

At meetings and other such functions there is from time to time talk about what the great men are trying to do.

However, even in our administration there is disdain for the professors. One Carolina administator even refered to the faculty as "academaniacs." It must discourage the faculty. It disgusts me.

Nathan M. Pusey, president of Harvard, seemed to put his finger on what the professor's job is recently when he said:

"The teacher's proper job is not to endanger familiarity with the commonplaces of life, but to quicken awareness of its finer reaches and possibilities . . . Perhaps in the end what I am trying to say is only that poetry with its reach and with its concentration is as relevant in educational discussion as is psychology."

That's what the professor is trying to do. Maybe some day we will have time for it. I hope so.

Mundt's Cocktail Party

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—South Dakota hasn't gone Democratic since most people around the Republican National Committee can remember, but today there's a certain amount of uneasiness regarding the future of the genial gentleman who tried—rather unsuccessfully—to keep order in the Army-McCarthy hearings—Sen. Karl Mundt.

The biggest problem bothering Karl—the Eisenhower Farm Program—isn't his fault. Two other problem could've been avoided. They are: 1, a cocktail party to have been held in the Senate; and 2, Karl's friendship with Joe McCarthy and Texas pals.

It so happens that candidate Eisenhower chose South Dakota to make his strongest promise to farmers in 1952. In South Dakota Ike went even further than he did at Kasson, Minn., and gave himself not one loophole in promising catergorically and firmly 90 per cent price supports to farmers. So, with eggs now selling for eight to ten cents a dozen, farmers remember all to vividly Ike's categoric and eloquent promises.

PROBLEM NO. 2 involves a cocktail party to which Karl invited all memebrs of the Army-McCarthy hearings just after their windup. It was to be held in the Senate caucus hearing room where it's against the rules to serve liquor. Karl, however, invited all Army-McCarthy participants anyway.

Then, when he heard the Democrats would boycott the party, he called it off.

However, the story got back to South Dakota and didn't sit too well with voters. So Karl did rather a foolish thing. He denied it.

Whereupon the Democrats trotted out a copy of the cocktail invitation. At the bottom were these giveaway words: "viands and vintages."

PROBLEM NO. 3 is Mundt's association with McCarthy and Texas friends, which quite a few people in South Dakota don't seem to like. Mrs. Mundt, of course, has long been a friend of the McCarthys, and Karl himself once bought 200 shares of Texas Gulf Sulphur stock on a McCarthy tip that his Texas friend, Clint Murchison, planned to buy up all the company's stock.

At any rate, when Mundt was speaking at Aberdeen, S. D., he climaxed one rhetorical passage with: "as long as I represent the good people of South Dakota. . ."

"You mean Texas, don't you, Karl,?" interrupted a man in the audience

The crowd, judging by this reaction, knew exactly what the heckler was talking about.

Immigrant Boy

A guy who really loved America died the other day. He wasn't born here which may have been why he could compare the country he chose to live in to the country he left. Anywhere, when Charley Skouras, a 19-year-old immigrant, came here from Greece, the United States gave him opportunities, and he made the most of them, rising from a busboy in a hash house to the biggest theater owner in the nation.

But, though he rose to fame and fortune, Charley Skouras never forgot his fellow men or the obligation he owed the country of opportunity. Most of his money—and he made a lot of it—went back into taxes or to charity. He helped build the $200,000 Variety Boys Club in Los Angeles, promoted Brotherhood Week, built the Cathedral of St. Sophia in Los Angeles.

This writer got to know Charley Skouras when we were organizing the Friendship Train in 1947. Charley had called in his theatre publicity men, told them to go all out to promote the Friendship Train from the theatres along the route.

"But boss," spoke up one of them, "we're just opening with 'Forever Amber.' It's a million-dollar picture. We can't plug that and this train at the same time."

"Which is more important," shot back the onetime immigrant boy from Greece. "Forever Amber' or your Country?"

Circus Fire Helped Congress

Though the House of Representatives is frequently referred to as a circus, not many people know that one of the top circus men of America is a member.

He is Jim Haley, a tall, quiet, slab-sided sort of man who came to Sarasota, Fla., from Alabama 30 years ago without a nickel in his pocket and worked his way up to the top of Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey, the greatest show on earth.

Then having become General Manager and Vice President, disaster struck the circus—disaster in the form of a fire at Hartford, Conn., in which a stampeding, fear-maddened crowd killed women and children.

For months afterward, Jim Haley went around the lot with a haunted look, remembering that day. He lost 20 pounds, looked as if he were dying by inches. But after he had launched the circus for the 1945 season and began to pay back the several million dollars in damages fixed by a Connecticut court, Jim went up to Hartford to serve the jail sentence which the court had also given him.

The people down in Florida, however, knew Jim Haley better than this. They knew he was not responsible for that fire. He was the financial manager at the time, only happened to be in Hartford by accident. So they figured he took the rap. They also knew all the fine things he had done for their community. And when western Florida, which has shot ahead population-wise, was given a new Congressional district, they sent Jim Haley to Congress.

Politico-Go-Round

The GOP campaign is really getting into high gear. The Republican National Committee in Washington spent a day last week on the long distance phone, called 300 people in New York, asked them for $1,000 apiece. Quite a few came through . . . It looks as if ex-Sen. Ernest McFarland, former Senate Democratic leader, would stage a comeback as Governor of Arizona. McFarland was the great champion of Arizona water rights. His Arizona successor in Washington, Barry Goldwater, spends a good part of his time at La Jolla Beach in Southern California. California is Arizona's bitterest rival for water rights.

In Idaho, ex-Sen. Glen Taylor, who looks as if he is going to stage a comeback, is being smeared as the result of a secret Senate hearing held in Washington, D.C. which neither he, nor the press, nor the public knew anything about until last week.

Senator Welker, the "junior Senator McCarthy," held the secret hearing in mid-October, then hushed up the contents until he was ready to use it in the Idaho Senate Race. In the hearing he brought forth from witnesses testimony that the Communists had infiltrated Henry Wallace's old Progressive Party on which Taylor ran for Vice President.

All of which is true and all of which was reported by this columnist and many others at the time. The interesting thing, however, is Senator Welker's use of a Senate committee to warm up eight-year-old news for political purposes and whether the voters of Idaho will swallow this last-minute bone-rattling.

Raleigh Street Show And Troubled Drivers

Ed Yoder

One of the best post-football shows of a Saturday afternoon takes place over on Raleigh Street—that pathway through the no-man's country of dorm row.

Come the end of the game, and hardly before the chimes have struck up their after-game serenade, mobs of gay students take up their noisy posts on the walls, sidewalks, and even in the middle of the street. The activity was especially high-toned after the Wake Forest game Saturday. In the flush of victory and under the spell of a bright October day, spirit was high and even mischievous. (Though in a friendly way.)

Some two or three hundred students had just drifted on the scene Saturday when the long, funereal lines of Wake Forest cars moved slowly up the street. Lips were poked out, chins hung sullenly on bent elbows, and the Deacon spirits were down and out in general.

As the cortage of defeated Wake Forest students and supporters moved by a chorus of undetermined taunts rose around them.

Some of the Wake Forest countenances brightened at the humor of the situation (for that was its most overpowering aspect) but others frowned. The psychology of the show was interesting. As long as the cars were closely packed and before courage on the part of bystanders reached its later pitch, no one dared to move into the street.

Then it happened. A car stopped. For the light at the end of the street, hourglass like, could only let the stream flow at a marked rate. A long black car, filled with particularly sour faces, halted, and some of the more daring celebrants moved into the street and began to rock the car. Soon it was bobbing like a dinghy on high seas, but the occupants failed to find any thing funny about the oscillation they were undergoing. Finally the irate driver threw the door open and vaulted out. A wave of the taunters fled for the crowd. Some, in doggish persistence, remained.

The enraged driver picked out one of the persisters and the chase was on. Across the street and up onto the wall they ran. Finally they confronted each other in the center of a ring of students who urged them to get on with whatever they were going to do. The driver swung blindly and knocked the student to the ground. With a smug look on his face he turned and marched back to his car. By that time the light had changed and horns were sreaming and whining all the way down the block. He glared in the direction of the noisy horns and climbed back into the cockpit. The engine roared menacingly as he gunned the motor and the car moved off with a jerk.

Most enthusiastically received along the gauntlet were members of the football team and Coach Marvin Bass, who rode through an atmosphere of loud cheers and cries of "let him pass!"

More students were arriving by the moment and now Raleigh Street swarmed with them. Waves of them, shouting football yells formed roadblocks in the way of buses but moved off quickly if the drivers smiled and seemed to enjoy the spectacle.

Soon another incident occurred. A disgruntled fan, obviously trying to push his gray coupe toward home as fast as possible, found himself encompassed by the shouting throng. The car came to a halt and he waited, hunched over the wheel, expressionless. Then the car began to bounce and roll from side to side. The driver's lips moved rapidly and he shook his fist behind the windshield.

"Get out!" he was urged.

"Yeah, get out!" the crowd roared their confident assent. The driver gritted his teeth and pushed the door ajar. He stepped to the pavement and stretched to his full six feet eight inches. The noise died instantaneously as the taunters observed his size. Then a loud roar of derision broke out. But he had proved his metal; he climbed back in side and his car drew away down the street. A barrage of paper flew after him.

By this time, drivers were beginning to catch on and attempted, if possible, to circumnavigate the road block. A red convertible full of worried coeds failed to succeed. The convertible started down the street from the stoplight. When the pretty brunette driver saw what was going on she threw the buggy in reverse and hurried back the other way. But she had committed the tragic flaw.

The fleeing car had been spotted and scores of people from the road-block surged down the street after it. "Catch 'em," yelled a dirty-white shod enthusiast. In the twinkling of an eye, boys were pouring over the sides of the car like pirates onto a loot ship. Several seated themselves comfortably on the inside of the car and the others pressed around. The pretty brunette in the driver's seat only glared silently.

"Speech!" the cry went up. "Speech! Say some thing!"

The brunette just glared.

The noise went on for several tense minutes. The red-faced brunette decided at length that tolerance was at its limit and jammed her tiny foot against the accelerator. The fire-engine red car lept from the mob like an unroped bull; with several boys still sitting inside it sped away down the street.

The police, after several cautious by-passes, finally decided that festivities had lasted long enough. The crowds dispersed unwillingly back to the sidewalk, thinking after all, that there would be other games, maybe other victories even, other coeds, and other fire-engine red convertibles that would try to get away.

Why Don't Germans Have Jazz Concerts?

Editor:

I have just attended the first half of the fall concert presented by the German Club. While the 400 or 500 other patrons of Mr. Elliot Lawrence's music are still sitting and suffering in Memorial Hall through the last half of the so-called concert, I am getting the bad taste out of my mouth at home, listening to good old Satchmo, Muggsy Spanier, and ginny-voiced Bessie Smith.

Being at present in my senior year at Carolina, I have run the gamut of musical talent thrown at me by the German Club over the past three years. I realize sincerely that this austere organization cannot hope to satisfy everyone at all times. However, I don't think my musical tastes are so off when I can truthfully say I have enjoyed only two concerts that they have put on since I have had the good fortune to buy a bid with regular clockwork three times a year.

No doubt there are many who have enjoyed hearing Charlie Spivak twice, Ray Anthony three times, Elliot Lawrence, and others too nondescript to mention, but I for one feel that its high time the German Club realized that there are many people in their organization (13 fraternities, totaling some 600 to 650 members) who would like to have their concerts just plain down to earth jazz.

I doubt very seriously if anyone who was lucky enough to hear Mr. Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong and his small aggregation of music playing madmen did not enjoy thoroughly the vast amount of music heard both afternoon and evening when he graced this campus with his presence last spring Germans. If they didn't you certainly wouldn't have known it by the size of the crowd which filled Memorial Hall and showed their appreciation with great vehemence. The German Club showed their worth in this selection.

My "gripe" is not with the German Club as an important campus organization, but rather with its refusal to recognize that the majority of its patrons would prefer to listen to jazz than to sentimental ballads.

Errors On 'Caesar' And the Di Senate

Editor:

As one of your loyal fans I often find myself defending you against attacks when oldsters tell me not to "waste time" wading through your typographical errors. Typographical errors are understandable and forgiveable but ignorance is not. This morning I, your loyal fan, was downright irritated when I read that approving Di members cry out "Here, here," and that you spell John Gielgud's name "Guilgud" three times although his name was before you in the Carolina Theater advertisement of Julius Caesar.

Really, you can't blame the poor typographer for things like that!

On Andrei Vishinsky And The Republicans

Editor:

Re Vice President Nixon's statement of all Democrats (up for election) being left-winged and the Democrats' toleration of Communists.

Please note the following small article of Time Magazine; Oct. 25, 1954; page 36:

"At a Manhattan powwow sponsored by United Nations boosters to celebrate Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's 70th birthday, Andrei Vishinsky, Russia's chief delegate to the U. N., dropped in as a surprise guest. When the festivities ended, Vishinsky warmly shook hands with one of his tablemates, a self-confessed Republican. 'You are a very nice young man,' glowed Communist Vishinsky. 'If I were an American, I would be a Republican.' "

ACC All-America Board Mentions Three Tar Heel Players

Over The Hill

By
FRED BABSON

It is about time we all forgot the unfortunate Wake Forest incident and turned our attention to more pressing matters, namely Tennessee. In connection with this, however, the dignity of office maintained by all the Carolina officials involved deserves our admiration and praise.

Beginning with the boss: President Gordon Gray did the University proud with his humble statement, "I'm very sorry it happened." Mr. Gray wasted no words; he gave no personal opinions of the fracas; and he did not lower himself to making wild accusations. The dignity of his conduct is even more striking when contrasted to the action of his Wake Forest counterpart.

Coach George Barclay's refusal to become involved in the muck and mire of the mud-slinging is even more astounding. Barclay, not by his own choosing, was actually involved in part of the melee behind the stands. Yet the calm Tar Heel mentor refused to lower himself to answering the nasty accusations leveled against himself and his staff. He made no counter-accusations, and he actually went to Deacon Coach Rogers' defense in saying that Rogers' statements were heated ones made under stress. Barclay's manifestation of superior sportsmanlike conduct commands the respect of us all. He is an example that his players will do well to model themselves after.

Meanwhile, down at Navy Field yesterday the Tar Heels were banging heads in preparation for always tough Tennessee. A large crowd of spectators were on hand to see the varsity push the frosh squad around at will. The boys in Blue and White are still in high spirits over their upset victory last Saturday. Barclay continued to alternate his two "first strings," and the freshmen made little headway in running Tennessee's single-wing plays against them. While one varsity eleven was scrimmaging the frosh, the other eleven ran through signal drills against dummies. Guard Ed Patterson stood out in the defensive work.

Barclay also sent the squad through a lengthy workout on punt protection and closed out the practice with a brief offensive scrimmage between varsity forces. Marshall Newman, converted quarterback passing from the "Newman Shift," uncorked a 60-yard touchdown heave.

It appears that Tennessee will have to start Saturday minus its first three tailbacks, key men in the Vols' single wing attack. Junior Pat Oleksiak, who started his first game last week at tailback after playing at full in earlier games, is out with a shoulder injury suffered last week against Dayton.

Senior Jimmy Wade, No. 1 tailback, and Sophomore John Drum Majors, the No. 2 man, worked out in sweat clothes yesterday. The Vol trainer, Mickey O'Brien, said they are unlikely to see action against Carolina. Wade, a thorn in the Tar Heels' sides last year, has been sidelined with a knee injury since the Mississippi State opener. Majors suffered a knee injury in practice last week. Coach Harvey Robinson indicated that Bobby Brengle will get the starting nod if the others are not ready.

Now that the repercussions from Saturday's brawl are fading, sports writers are singing the praises of Ed Sutton, the Cullowhee (N.C.) speed-merchant who left fans gasping with his spectacular TD jaunts against Wake Forest.

The modest sophomore came close to breaking the single-game rushing record of 163 yards set by Charlie Justice against Miami in 1946. Sutton picked up 127 yards in four tries against the Deacs. However, if his 64-yard trip had not been cut down to 24 yards by a clipping penalty, he would have exceeded Choo Choo's mark by four yards. Nevertheless, 127 yards in four carries is nothing to sneeze at. Besides, Ed has two years atfer this one to break records.

Undefeated DKE's Beat SAE; Winston-2, Old East, Victorious

A clash between two powerful, undefeated teams highlighted intramural activities yesterday. SAE and DKE were the two teams and a large crowd was on hand to watch the expected battle. But the battle never materialized as DKE had too much polish for the boys of SAE. DKE won 22-0, and continues on its winning ways.

Scoring: DKE—TD's, Osborne Lee, David Ward, Pat Patrick PAT, Tommy Shores, 2. Safety, George Raines.

Old West and Grimes fought on even terms throughout their game, but Old West's Elvette McIver ran 70 yards for the winning touchdown.

Scoring: Old West—Elvette McIver.

While Old West was winning, her sister dorm, Old East, was losing to Winston-2 by the score of 6-28. Purcell Jones and Horace Cowell were the standouts for Winston. Old East scored on a pass from Theo Pitt to Bill Harper.

Winston-2	9	19	28
Old East	0	6	6

Scoring: Winston—TD's, Jack Temple, 2, Ray Samuels, Blaire Norris PAT, Ted Richardson, C. B. Parker. Old East—Bill Harper.

Eleven Sophs Mentioned As Mid-Season Standouts

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 27.—(AP)—An abundance of guards and a shortage of top notch fullbacks mark the initial report of the Associated Press All-America Football Board for the Atlantic Coast Conference area.

The five-man board of news men and sportscasters serving in the ACC territory, in reviewing results and performances to date at mid-season, came up with a list of 43 outstanding players from the 8 member schools.

Twenty-seven are linemen, 10 of them guards, 6 each from the tackle and end posts and 5 selected for center play. The board tabbed 16 backs, 10 halfbacks, five quarterbacks and only one fullback, Maryland's Dick Bielski.

Eleven of the 43 are sophomores, eight serving in the backfield. The board will continue to scan the field for the remaining weeks of the season, coming up with its second annual All-Conference team late next month. It's possible that in the weeks to come several additional names will be added to this first check list.

Last year, a similar board named an All-ACC team that showed nine seniors and two juniors. Both juniors, center Leon Cunningham and guard Frank Mencovich, South Carolina teammates, are now seasoned seniors leading the race for recognition.

Six of last year's second team choices are in the running for a promotion this season. They are backs Don King, Clemson, and Carl Brazell, South Carolina; tackle Bob Bartholomew, Wake Forest; center John Irvine and guard John Bowersox, both of Maryland, and Bill Walker, Maryland end.

Duke won 13 of the 43 places, 9 in the line, with Maryland, South Carolina and Clemson each placing 6 men. Wake Forest and North Carolina State each placed 4, North Carolina, 3, and Virginia 1.

Most exciting newcomer is Mackie Prickett, the sophomore quarterback of South Carolina, who has twice been selected Associated Press ACC sophomore of the week for his play in victories over Army and Clemson.

The complete rundown:

Ends: Ed Stowers, Wake Forest; Bill Walker, Maryland; Harry Lodge, N. C. State; Sonny Sorrell, Jerry Kocourek and Bob Benson, all of Duke.

Tackles: Bob Bartholomew, of Wake Forest; Roland Perdue, North Carolina; Gene Kopec, South Carolina: Doug Knotts, Dan Cox and Sid Deloatch, all of Duke.

Guards: Frank Mincovich and Dick Covington, South Carolina; Mike Nardone and Al D'Angelo, N. C. State; Jesse Birchfield and Jim Nelson, Duke; Bob Pelligrini and John Bowersox, Maryland; Gerald Hutch, Wake Forest; Dick DiSimone, Clemson.

Centers: John Irvine, Maryland; Johnny Palmer, Duke; Wingo Avery, Clemson; Leon Cunningham, South Carolina; Joe Dupree, Wake Forest.

Quarterbacks: Mackie Prickett, South Carolina; Sonny Jurgensen and Jerry Barger, Duke; Charlie Bussey, and Don King, Clemson.

Halfbacks: Carl Brazzell, South Carolina; Henry Strempek, Virginia; Ronnie Waller, Maryland; Connie Gravitte, and Ed Sutton, North Carolina; Bob Pascal and Bernie Blaney, Duke; George Marinkov, N. C. State; Jim Coleman and Joel Wells, Clemson.

Fullback: Dick Bielski, Maryland.

Pulpit Players

The Pulpit Players will present the religious drama, "The Boy With A Cart," tonight at 8 p.m. in the Chapel Hill Baptist Church. There will be no admission charge.

MBA Wives Club

There will be a meeting tonight at 209 West Franklin Street, Apartment 3, for the purpose of organizing an MBA wives club. All wives of Masters in Business Administration are invited to attend.

Veteran Jake Wade Sings Praises Of Sophomore Sensation Ed Sutton

By JAKE WADE

CHAPEL HILL, N. C.—It's always an occasion to rejoice when a star is born, and that was what happened last week when Carolina's unheralded Ed Sutton ran the Wake Forest Demon Deacons dizzy as the key man in the 14-7 Tar Heel victory.

The curly-headed sophomore from Cullowhee was not entirely unheralded, at that. All of the pre-season prospectus pieces mentioned him as highly promising. He had been a fine player on the freshman team. Before last Saturday he had carried the ball eight times for 68 yards, no losses on a single play, which figures up to be a right gaudy average of 8.5 yards per carry.

His extraordinary performance against Wake Forest when he streaked for touchdown on runs of 77 and 21 yards, went across for another on a 64-yard journey that didn't count, and collected a total of 127 legitimate yards in four carries, has pushed his year's running average to 16.2 per carry. Also Ed took in one pass for 11 yards and recovered a Deacon fumble which conceivably saved the game he had won. It was Ed's day, all right. His day, that is, until the battle royal on the field, which, in the press, understandably overshadowed the youngster's breath-taking exhibition.

WATCHED IT ALL

Incidentally, Ed showed wisdom and poise, along with his skill, when he was a lone ranger in staying out of the extra-curricula business at the end of the game. No chicken, understand, because he can take care of himslf, but he stayed on the bench. Too bad all the players and sappy spectators didn't do likewise.

Ed is a Morehead Scholar, which means he came to Carolina on a fine scholarship awarded competitively, and after the most careful screening, on the basis of scholarship, leadership and all-round qualities. "Coach Bob" Fetzer, who is the Executive Secretary of the Morehead Foundation, was a mighty proud man over the great play of his protege. And Vice-President Billy Carmichael Jr., of the Consolidated University, sent a telegram to Mr. John Motley Morehead, who organized the Foundation and donates the scholarships, telling him about Ed's work.

Ed is a member of Carolina's "second" unit, except it really isn't a second team, in Coach George Barclay's books. "We have two teams and we alternate them, and sometimes one team is better than the other," he says. "It is my present plan to continue operating the same way. With Sutton running like he does, and Don Lear blocking well, I will keep that combination intact." So Ed won't start against the Tennessee Vols Saturday, but he likely will play half the game, maybe more. He's doing all right for a mountain lad who had played very little football before he came to college, went out on his own, also plays basketball. And in the classroom and on the campus maintains the high standards set for holders of Morehead Scholarships.

IT'S HISTORY

Chancellor Robert B. House spoke for the institution when he issued his sincere, forthright and dignified statement about the unpleasant phases of last week's game. Carolina's traditional reputation for clean play and good sportsmanship will stand up against any irresponsible, reckless charges and implications which have amazed those of us who know how football is taught and played at Carolina.

One thing is certain. Surely everyone regrets what happened and if players or spectators lost their heads—which definitely they did—and that goes for both sides.

Carolina Booters Down Duke, 2-1; Lane Hurt

By DICK ARMSTRONG

Carolina's soccer squad fashioned their first win of the season yesterday with a close 2-1 triumph over Duke's Blue Devils. The victory gives the Tar Heels a 1-1 record in Atlantic Coast Conference play.

Calvin Lane, hustling center forward for the Tar Heels, was injured in the third quarter and was carried from the field on a stretcher. Lane had a collision with a Duke player and turned a flip in the air. Latest reports say that he suffered a broken ankle.

Bryant scored Carolina's goals in the first and second quarters. Leon Ponte scored the Blue Devil's lone goal in the second quarter. The last half was strictly a defensive battle, with UNC goalie Don Gladstone making several fine saves.

The Tar Heels played their best all-round game of the season. Along with Bryant and Russell, Pete Cothran and Noel Sullivan played well on offense. Cothran's short passes were very effective in setting up potential scoring plays. Lane, Bob Boerner, Grover Brown, and Joe Mavretic led the defense as the UNC eleven held their opponents to their lowest score of the year.

The next varsity tilt will be against N. C. State on November 2. Carolina will be the home team and will be rated on even terms with the Wolfpack. State defeated Duke several weeks ago by an identical 2-1 score.

The Tar Heel freshmen will journey to State Friday for their second game of the season. The UNC yearlings, coached by Harry Pawlick, will be seeking their initial victory of the year. The only game played thus far was a 4-1 loss to Duke last week.

UNC Coeds, Meredith Girls Play To Stalemate

The hockey game between the UNC coeds and the Meredith College girls on Tuesday at Raleigh ended in a stalemate. It was a fast-moving contest for both squads and the Carolina girls and the Meredith team displayed a powerful defense.

In the opening half, the UNC coeds had several fine opportunities to score, but just could not manage to get the ball across the goal line. The Carolina defense prevented the Meredith lassies from even getting near the goal in the first half. In the second half neither team could muster enough steam to score, although Chappie Chapman barely missed scoring from her left wing position late in the game.

WHAT EVERY YOUNG COED SHOULD WEAR

Gather round, girls. Snap open a pack of Philip Morris, light up, relax and enjoy that mild fragrant vintage tobacco while Old Dad tells you about the latest campus fashions.

The key word this year is casual. Be casual. Be slapdash. Be rakish. Improvise. Invent your own ensembles—like ski pants with a peek-a-boo blouse, like pajama bottoms with an ermine stole, like a hocky sweater with a dirndl.

(Dirndl, incidentally, is one of the truly fascinating words in the English language. Etymologists have quarreled over its origin for years. Some hold with Professor Manley Ek that Dirndl is a corruption of Dardanelle and is so named because it resembles the skirts worn by the women of that region. This theory is at first glance plausible, but begins to fall apart when you consider that there are no women in the Dardanelle region because of the loathesome local custom of female infanticide.)

(Another theory is advanced by Dr. Clyde Feh. Dirndl, says he, is a contraction of "dairy in the dell" and refers to the milkmaidish appearance of the skirt. But again close examination causes one to abandon a plausible hypothesis. As every child knows, it is not "dairy in the dell" but "farmer in the dell", in which case the skirt should be called not dirndl but firndl.

(There are some who contend we will never know the true origins of dirndl. To those faint hearted Cassandras I say, remember how everyone laughed at Edison and Franklin and Fulton and Marconi and Sigafoos. [Sigafoos, in case you have forgotten, invented the nostril, without which breathing, as we know it today, would not be possible.] The origins of dirndl will be found, say I, and anyone who believes the contrary is a lily-livered churl and if he'll step outside for a minute, I'll give him a thrashing he won't soon forget.)

But I digress. We were smoking a Philip Morris and talking about the latest campus styles. Casual, we agree, is the key word. But casual need not mean drab. Liven up your outfits with a touch of glamor. Even the lowly dungaree and man-shirt combination can be made exciting if you'll adorn it with a simple necklace of 120 matched diamonds. With Bermuda shorts, wear gold knee-cymbals. Be guided by the famous poet Cosmo Sigafoos (whose brother Sam it was who invented the nostril) who wrote:

Sparkle, my beauty,
Shimmer and shine,
The night is young,
The air's like wine,
Cling to a leaf,
Hang on a vine,
Crawl on your belly,
It's time to dine.

(Mr. Sigafoos, it should be explained, was writing about a glow-worm. Insects, as everyone knows, are among Mr. Sigafoos' favorite subjects for poems. Who can ever forget his immortal Ode to a Boll Weevil? Or his Tumbling Along With the Tumbling Tumblebug? Or his Fly Gently, Sweet Aphid? Mr. Sigafoos has been inactive since the invention of DDT.)

But I digress. We were smoking a Philip Morris and discussing fashions. Let us turn now to headwear. The motif in hats this year will be familiar American scenes. There will be models to fit every head—for example, the "Empire State Building" for tall thin heads; the "Jefferson Memorial" for squatty ones; "Niagara Falls" for dry scalps. Feature of the collection is the "Statue of Liberty," complete with a torch that actually burns. This is very handy for lighting your Philip Morrises, which is very important because no matter how good Philip Morrises are, they're nowhere unless you light them.

We come now to the highlight of this year's fashion parade—a mad fad that's sweeping the chic set at high tone campuses all over the country. All the gals who are in the van, in the swim, and in the know are doing it. Doing what, you ask? Getting tattooed, of course! You just don't rate these days unless you've got at least an anchor on your biceps. If you really want to be the envy of the campus, get yourself a four masted schooner, or a heart with FATHER printed inside of it, or a—

I interrupt this column to bring you a special announcement. A runner has just handed me the following bulletin:

"The origin of the word dirndl has at long last been discovered. On June 27, 1846, Dusty Schwartz, the famous scout and Indian fighter, went into the Golden Nugget Saloon in Cheyenne, Wyoming. The Golden Nugget had just imported a new entertainer from the East. She came out and did her dance in pink tights. Dusty Schwartz had never seen anything like that in his life, and he was much impressed. He watched with keen interest as she did her numbers, and he thought about her all the way home. When he got home, his wife Feldspar was waiting to show him a new skirt she had made for herself. 'How do you like my new skirt, Dusty?' said Feldspar. He looked at the large voluminous garment, then thought of the pink tights on the dancing girl. 'Your skirt is darn dull,' said Dusty. 'Darn dull' was later shortened to 'dirndl' which is how dirndls got their name."

VICTORY VILLAGE NEWS

By DAN WALLACE

THE MANY COMPLAINTS and comments on the new pay telephone in the center of the Village—now the only public phone available—and on the free public phones which have been taken out of their booths delt with the ten-cent telephone toll which many deemed excessive and the inconvenience entailed by the removal of the other phones.

IN ANSWER to these complaints, J. S. Bennett, director of operations at the University, said yesterday that the free public phones were put in the Village at a time when there were almost no private phones there. He said that at least half the people in the Village now have phones and, for this reason, the free public phones were taken out since there seemed to be no need for them now. In regard to the pay phone, he said that wherever one lives one has to pay for use of the telephone, so it doesn't seem unreasonable for the Villagers to have to pay for their calls. Bennett said that if enough people wish to have pay phones put in the other booths, that the University would be glad to do so. He suggested that those people make their wishes known to the Victory Village board of directors.

ED BEST, chairman of the Village board of directors, announced that the board will meet tomorrow night at 7:30 in the recreation center. The Villagers are cordially invited to attend and enter into discussions and raise suggestions. Among the topics to be discussed will be the hours that the recreation center will be available to Villagers.

BEST REPORTED that the baby sitting service during the last two home football games were "roaring successes." He said that this service has been well organized and has been running very smoothly. The two new caretakers for the recreation center have been doing very good jobs, and Best suggested that more people should take advantage of the center's services.

POPULATION IS CONSTANTLY growing in the Village. During this semester several babies were born to Villagers. To the Tom Reids of 200A Jackson Circle, a boy; to the Sam Newells of 200 Jackson Circle, a boy; and to the Charles Wiggs of 202 Jackson, a boy. Births and other events of interest to the community can be announced by contacting this columnist at 8-0345.

A HALLOWEEN PARTY, sponsored by the Victory Village Day Care Center, will be given for all the nursery children tomorrow afternoon.

VILLAGERS WHO DRIVE CARS have been requested to please watch their speed in the Village by a number of mothers. Needless tragedies could be avoided in this way. Mr. Burch, manager of the Village, commenting on this problem, said that most of the Villagers drive carefully but that two or three fast drivers create the impression that the majority drive too fast in the Village.

BRIDGE LESSONS at the recreation center will soon be available. The class will be taught by John Beshara, former bridge director at Graham Memorial, and will be limited to 16 people. There will be a charge of 50 cents per lesson. Eight people have signed up to date. Those who wish to join this class may do so by contacting Mrs. Ruth Sluder at 114 Daniels road.

Medical Wives Social

A Medical wives social will be held tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Interns' quarters. There will be bridge and canasta. Mrs. Harris Evans, president, will preside.

Johns Hopkins Prof Talks Here Tonight

Henry T. Rowell, professor of classics at Johns Hopkins University and president of the Archaeological Institute of America, will deliver an illustrated lecture entitled "Rome of the Flavians" tonight at 8 o'clock in Carroll Hall.

J. P. Harland, professor of archaeology here, announced that the talk is being presented by The North Carolina Society of the Archaeological Institute of America. Harland is president of that organization.

In his illustrated lecture, Dr. Rowell will discuss the Roman era from 69 to 96 A.D., during the reigns of Vespasian and his two sons Titus and Domitian. Vespasian was the first of the Flavian emperors whose regimes started with the fall of the last Julian Caesar, Nero. Rowell will emphasize with illustrations many of the buildings, including the famous Roman colosseum that were erected during the Flavians' reign, and the changes that were brought about in architecture because of Nero's fire in 64 A.D.

To quote Harland, "Nero's fire was only popular with Nero; the people didn't especially like being emaciated. And, hence, much building went on during the reign of the Flavians in order to rebuild what Nero had burned, and to tear down and build again some of Nero's buildings so as to erase his memory from the eyes of the people."

We were there ...and won!

The names of America's Olympic greats are easily remembered. Because the men and women we have sent to past Olympic Games have always given us something to remember them by. Jesse Owen's four gold medals at Berlin . . . Bob Mathias' decathalon record at Helsinki . . . Andrea Mead Lawrence's historic "double" in women's skiing. In recalling past triumphs we can all be reminded of a simple fact about any U. S. Olympic victory; we won because we were there, and . . .

We must be there . . . To Win!

In 1956 America will again take the field in Melbourne, Australia against the world's best. Some of these nations will be very tough to beat. For in an effort to insure victory, many countries, especially those behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains, have entered "government-subsidized" teams. Whether these nations are defeated depends in large part upon you—and every American who would rather see the Stars and Stripes hoisted above the victor's stand. You can count on the men and women we send to Melbourne to perform brilliantly—if they are there. But it takes money to get them there. Which is why LIFE is joining with the Olympic Committee to urge you to . . .

Support Your Olympic Team Fund!

Congress has authorized President Eisenhower to declare October 16th to be National Olympic Day. Bob Hope in his October 12th nation-wide telecast is giving his far reaching and effective support. Throughout the country, local civic groups, spearheaded by the Junior Chambers of Commerce—have actively begun to raise funds. Many are helping. But everybody can help. And you can do your share by mailing a contribution, large or small, to the Fund's Chicago headquarters, today.

Baptists' 'Boy With A Cart' Shows Kin Of Drama, Religion

By R. B. SHARPE

A large audience at the Chapel Hill Baptist Church was tensely held and deeply stirred by the drama, The Boy with a Cart last night. The English poet - playwright Christopher Fry, best-known as author of The Lady's Not For Burning, has written other plays on religious subjects: Thor, With Angels, The First Born (on Moses in Egypt), and A Sleep of Prisoners, the last especially for production in churches.

The Boy with a Cart was effectively directed by Louise Lamont, costumed by Nancy Riley, lighted by Harvey Whetstone, and played by an accomplished cast, including John Clayton as narrator (with Earl Wynn as an off-stage voice), shepherd boy who becomes church David Pelton as Cuthman, the builder and saint, Josephine Sharkey as his mother, whom he draws to her new home in a cart, Gloria Di Costanzo, Harold Fraser, Clinton Lindley, and Constance Carbaugh as village boys and girls, several of whom also dance a scene as Cornish Mowers, and Walter Spearman, Patricia Liston, Peter O'Sullivan, Dwight Hunsucker and others as villagers of Steyning where Cuthman builds his church. Opposing his enterprise, Harold Fraser, Clinton Lindley, and Louise Lamont as the oafish Fipps boys and their shrew of a mother provided some good comedy.

Wilton Mason's special music was just right for the play, and Mrs. Lamont's direction kept it flowing as well as the diffficulty of entrances and exits in the church permitted.

Pastor Habel and his undenominational congregation seemed to agree that drama, religion, and poetry proved themselves closely akin. Fry's flexible, natural, unforced verses gave a lightness to the mood of religious simplicity; so that miraculous whirlwinds (with a very timely reference to hurricanes!) were accepted as naturally by last night's audience as they came to the early hearers of the Legend of Saint Cuthman.

The Pulpit Players are offering the production to churches of all denominations throughout the state on Sunday evenings through May, 1955. Information can be obtained from John W. Parker.

Alleged Red Was Active At Carolina

Samuel Hirsch, who won his bachelor and master's degrees at the University of North Carolina, has been indicted for perjury in Miami in testifying that he had never been a member of the Communist Party or otherwise affiliated with it.

The indictment charged that he had been a member of the Communist Party at the University from 1936 through 1938.

Hirsch received his B. A. in Dramatic Arts in 1947 and his M. A. in 1949. After graduation, he became a professor in the Dramatics Department of the University of Miami, then he became director and producer of the Biltmore Playhouse, in Miami.

Hirsch first came to the University in 1936 on a scholarship given to him by people in his home town community of Trenton, N. J., Dr. Samuel Selden, head of the Dramatics Department, said yesterday.

The Alumni Office records show that Hirsch left the University in 1938 to join the armed services. He now holds the Purple Heart for wounds he received in France in 1944. He was a first lieutenant in the infantry during World War II.

Hirsch acted in the "Lost Colony." He took the part of the foppish master of ceremonies then changed character to become the tough Spanish pilot, Simon.

Public Schools Are Discussed

Last Wednesday evening, in the front room of Lenoir Hall, Phi Delta Kappa educational fraternity presented a panel discussion on the subject: "Analysis of the Mounting Criticisms of the Public School System."

Members of the panel were all of the faculty of UNC: Dr. E. M. Adams, Department of Philosophy; Dr. Richmond Bond, Department of English; Dr. Carl Brown, School of Education, and Dr. J. Minor Gwynn, School of Education. Dr. W. Carson Ryan, School of Education, was panel moderator.

Dr. Adams pointed out that our national culture has a set of values not in sympathy with intellectual development, and that the schools, elementary and secondary, are very much controlled by the public and its culture. "We of an intellectual environment at the University are judging the public school from a value system foreign to the average community."

Dr. Bond expressed the opinion that public school teachers are neither paid nor equipped to teach the whole child. The home and the church still have their educative purposes.

Dr. Brown mentioned the need for all educators to agree and to understand what they are trying to do; to decide what is really an educated man.

Dr. Gwynn stated that the college faculty has not "spelled out" what it expects intellectually from the public school.

Dr. Adams' remark that college freshmen are lacking more in character than in ability, that they experience an inability to learn when learning is not the most pleasant behavior available at the moment, brought mention of the eight year study to the discussion. This report cited development of character and of optimum ability, with the mother tongue as two most important educational outcomes indispensible to the pursuit of higher learning.

Freshman Proofs

All freshmen who have not selected their Yackety Yack proofs are requested to come by Graham Memorial basement between 1 and 7 p. m. today. There are a number of unidentified pictures which must be identified, editors said.

Most Students Called Want 'Brigadoon'

A quick telephone poll yesterday showed that students were generally in favor of the establishment of a "Brigadoon Club" for dorm men.

Bill Blue, president of Lewis Dorm, said, "I've talked to many boys in the dorm and they think it is a good idea if the price can be low enough for the men to afford."

Frank Watkins, president of Old East, said, "I think it is an excellent idea, but how can it be put across in the right method?" He went on to say that every dorm will probably have to take responsibility for selling tickets to 25 per cent of its residents. He thought this might prove a big financial responsibility on the dorms, but thought it could be ironed out.

"Everyone seems very favorable to it," said a student in Everett.

Raymond Taylor, president of Old West, said, "My first impression is that the plan sounds good. I'll have to hear and study more about it to make my final decision on it. I have not discussed it with more than two or three. Their feelings seem to be the same as mine."

"The recommendation seems to have excellent potentialities. However, I favor the provision that each dorm be entitled to vote on the measure before final approvement is announced. Interdorm social activity has been much needed. Now, an important solution has been found," said Neil Bass, vice

Smith Dorm Slates Party

Smith Dormitory will have its first social function of the year in the form of a Halloween party tonight at 8 o'clock.

The girls will entertain for approximately 75 residents of Old East, Old West, Battle, Vance and Pettigrew.

Decorations will carry out the holiday theme. There will be dancing, and refreshments will be served.

Insurance On Way

By next semester, students should be able to get either accident insurance or accident-sickness insurance under a student government-sponsored plan, according to Student Body President Tom Creasy.

The insurance would cover either accidents or accidents and sickness, which will be decided later, with a a death clause included in both.

Cost for the policy will run about $7.50 or less per year, said Creasy.

President Creasy said "I think that it will be one of the finest additions to the University, because if it can help at least on estudent remain in school after an accident, it will be worthwhile."

The plan is a student government project which has been worked on over the entire past summer. The administration and faculty have both given their full cooperation, said Creasy.

A joint faculty-student committee will interview insurance agents and study respective bids, starting about Dec. 1.

Invitations for bids have been sent to about 20 different insurance companies and replies are gradually coming in. It is hoped that all 20 will submit bids, said Creasy.

The faculty-student committee is composed of Dr. E. Hedgpeth, University physician; Creasy; Rueben Leonard, chairman of the University Party; J. A. Williams, assistant to the business manager; Fred Weaver, dean of students, and Frank Schwentker, professor in the insurance department.

According to Creasy, "it worked very successfully in other schools, such as Duke and State."

Demos Set Barbecue Tonight

Carrboro High School tonight will be the scene of big doings as the campus Young Democrats Club plays host to the sixth district with an old-fashioned barbecue and brunswick stew supper, to be followed by prominent party speakers and a square dance.

A motor calvacade of girls from Greensboro College is expected and mention has been made of girls from WC, St. Mary's and Meredith attending.

Supper will begin at 6 o'clock and anyone who has not purchased his ticket beforehand may do so at the door. Price is $1.

The event, which will in part celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Republican Black Friday, will have "Stag" Ballentine, N. C. Agriculture Secretary, as the main speaker.

State Rep. Carl Durham and John Jordan, state YDC president, will also attend and speak.

County candidates from the sixth district, which is made up of Guilford, Orange, Alamance and Durham Counties, will also attend the rally.

Campus YDC president and sixth district chairman Bob Windsor has said, "A quarter century ago, what was good for General Motors darn near wrecked this country, but tonight, we want you all to come down here and listen to Carl Durham, Stag Ballentine and other state leaders prove that what's good for the people is what's good for our nation, and that the Democratic party fights for what's good for the people."

Nurses' Carnival

Nursing students will sponsor a carnival tonight from 8 till 11 in the nurses' dorm recreation room.

Proceeds from the carnival will help send delegates from here to the annual convention of student nurses in St. Louis, Mo.

Barbara Hedberg, social chairman of the nurses' dorm, said there would be bingo, dancing, darts, fortune telling and cake walks.

"I urge everyone to come. You will have a wonderful time," she said.

Admission to the carnival is free.

Hemingway Wins Nobel Prize

Hemingway Wins Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden-UP-Ernest Hemingway, who brought clipped clarity to a generation of American letters with savage tales of bulls, bitterness and bravery, yesterday won the 1954 Nobel Prize for Literature with his gentle story of a noble old man and a fish.

His short, quiet tale titled "The Old Man and the Sea," convinced the Swedish Academy of Literature Hemingway merited the coveted award for the "idealistic tendencies" of his new work, where for years it had by-passed his powerful stories.

Contacted in Havana, Cuba, Hemingway said he wrote his prize-winning novel because "I was broke."

The 18 judges of the Swedish academy announced that the 56-year-old he-man novelist had become the fifth American winner in the half century since the Nobel Prize for Literature was created.

Americans who won the prize before him were Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill, Pearl Buck and William Faulkner.

But probably none of the earlier winners influenced modern American literature with the power of Hemingway.

Up to this year he had, however, been a perennial loser in the Nobel search for an "ideal" with his epics of virile pride and passion in the face of futility, contained in such widely-acclaimed works as "The Sun Also Rises," "A Farewell to Arms," and "For Whom The Bells Tolls."

Only four years ago critics jeered his first novel in a decade—"Across the River and Into the Trees—" as the work of a has-been.

Hemingway's answer came in 1952. "The Old Man and the Sea," won immediate acclaim from public and critics.

Today that novel was generally accepted as the clincher that won him the Nobel Prize. The lone three-day fight of an old and luck-

Frat Quiz Bill Sent Back For Revision

Student Legislature Establishes Group To Study University Band Improvements

By LLOYD SHAW

The student Legislature last night recommitted the bill to abolish quizzes during the week of fraternity rushing, passed a bill to establish a University Band Improvements Committee and passed a bill to provide funds for the Student Audit Board.

Twelve bills and resolutions were introduced in all.

The resolution abolishing quizzes during the week of fraternity and sorority rushing was recommitted. The Ways and Means Committee is to prepare a new bill, combining the original bill and a substitute resolution introduced by Manning Muntzing (SP). The bill was originally introduced by Charles Ackerman (UP).

"The proposed bill is not a bill aimed at dictating the administration of the University," Ackerman said.

The band bill, introduced by Bev Webb (UP), and the bill providing funds for the Student Audit Board passed unanimously.

Only twenty-nine legislators were present for last ginht's session.

New Bills

New bills and resolutions introduced were: A resolution concerning the Judicial Problems Study Commission (David Reid, SP); a bill to establish the Legislative Complaint Board (Jim Turner, SP); resolution to place a traffic light at the intersection of Raleigh Street and Raleigh Road (Bobbie Walker, UP); a resolution concerning the proposed tuition raise (Elsie Peterson, SP); a bill to establish legislative contact with Victory Village Board of Directors (Charles May, SP); abill to establish a Veterans Affairs Commission (Manning Muntzing, SP); a bill amending the by-laws of the student Legislature (Jim Armstrong, SP); a resolution concerning the campus social program (Joel Fleishman, SP); a resolution concerning the Legislature-Executive Problems Study Commission (Norwood Bryan, SP); a bill to set up a Student Leadership Commission (Tom Lambeth, SP); and a bill concerning the Student Welfare Board (Charlie Dean, SP).

The bill concerning the Student Audit Board, introduced by Max Crohn (UP), provides the board with $50. This board examines the books of all organizations receiving student funds every year and submits a biannual report to the Legislature.

Details of bills will be given tomorrow.

PARADE

Sixth District Young Democrats will have a Charles Wilson "hound dog" parade here this afternoon.

The parade, scheduled to start at 3 o'clock this afternoon, will begin in Big Fraternity Court.

GM Starting Stock Group

The dance committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board is sponsoring a stock company.

The organization, which is called Sound and Fury, although not a part ofthe Playmakers, is not opposing them.

The company will give two shows, one each semester, under the direction of Miss Bo Bernardin. The shows will be take-offs on campus life of the musical type. The first show will be given on Dec. 15.

Tryouts for the first show will start Monday. They will be held at 7:30 p. m., in Memorial Hall. Carol Webster and Lew Sherman, co-chairmen of the dance committee, have urged that anyone who can sing or dance or is interested in the show, regardless of talent, come to the tryouts.

The group is not professional. It has been organized for students who enjoy amateur theatrical work.

Cobb Will Entertain Carr, McIver Tonight

Cobb Dorm will roll out the welcome mat for coeds from McIver and Carr tonight at 8 o'clock in the dorm's east basement.

Girls in the two dorms may contact Kitty Harvison and Joy Carter, social chairman of McIver and Carr, respectively, if they wish to attend.

UNC Chess Club Ranks High

By NEIL BASS

Quartered in a tiny room on fourth floor Grimes there lives a man who with the slightest motion of his hand can change the position of castles, control the fates of kings and the destinys of queens.

Yet there is no strange phenomenon involved; merely Kit Crittenton's abilities as captain of the UNC chess team.

Mutual Interest

The team evolved out of a mutual interest in the ancient sport shared by Crittenton, Doug Kahn and Robert Hubbard. The threee possessed such an avid fascination for the game that i n1951 they originated a chess club which provided a means whereby enthusiasts of the game could get together.

From this beginning in the autumn of '51 to the present time, the group has gone down in defeat on only two occasions, once to Duke and once in a practice session to Columbia University, holders of the national championship.

Operating without financial aid from the University, the team has manipulated its chessmen into positions which have led to the Southern Intercollegiate championship for the past three consecutive years, and they currently boast a 20-match winning tsreak.

The team is composed of Crittenfor the game that in 1951 they ern Intercollegiate champ; Doug Kahn, runner-up in the North and South Carolina tournament, who plays in the number two slot; Pete Henderson, Lynchburg, Va., city champ, the number three competitor; Jack Godfrey, runner-up in the Virginia State championships, and Robert Hubbard, of Washington, D. C.

"The chief factor limiting the progress of the team," says Crittenton, "is the problem of finances." He explained that "team members are compelled to pay their own expenses to the various matches."

Most successful and least heralded competition group on the campus, the team has as its primary ambition this year to enter the national meet in New York during the Christmas holidays.

No definite schedule has been planned for this year, but the team has met two opponents victoriously already and are slated to meet Duke this Sunday.

Meetings of the Chess Club whose president is Pete Henderson, are held every Tuesday night in Graham Mmorial.

Crittenton extends an invitation for you to enter your knights in the joust and join the select ranks of the chess "men of note."

Interdormitory Chess Meet Starts Soon

First round competition in the Interdormitory Chess Tournament gets underway early next week.

Play begins at 8 p. m., in the social room of each of the 19 men's dorms.

John Beshara, social chairman of the Interdormitory Council, pointed out that the play opens in the upper and lower quads on Monday night; in B-V-P, Old East, Old West and Steele on Tuesday; in Cobb and Whitehead on Wednesday night; and in Joyner, Winston, Connor and Alexander on Thursday.

Competition will be held on a round robin basis in the dormitories and will be officiated by the University Chess Club. The winner of the eliminations will receive an individual dormitory champion's trophy and will be qualified to participate in the All-Campus Championships later this year.

Points will be awarded by the Intramural Activities Department to both individuals and dorms entering the tourney. Dorm points will be awarded on a basis of 10 points for entrance, 20 points for matches won, with five points for first place and 3 points for runner up in the campus tournament standings. Players will receive individual points upon entrance and with each victory.

Interested players are urged to contact their dorm Intramural manager before Monday. No person who has won an intercollegiate match will be permitted to enter the play.

A Little Lost Squirrel Finds Its Home In Lambda Chi House

By BOB EBERLE

Last February, between Murphy and Saunders Halls, a freshman by the name of Lawrence Conder, from Charlotte, found a baby squirrel bleeding at the mouth because it had fallen out of one of the trees. Picking the injured animal up, the student carried the squirrel back to his fraternity house where he nourished it back to health by feeding it warm milk through an eye-dropper.

At the same time the squirrel was found, it was estimated that the animal was just a little over a month old, and since Conder felt that the squirrel could not survive if left to wander about, he decided to keep the squirrel until it was old enough to shift for itself. The squirrel's first home, then, became a trash basket with a wire screen over the top, and the problem of what to name it arose.

Since the correct gender of the animal could not be determined, it was decided that some name should be given that was appropriate and yet neuter. Out of this reasoning came the name "Goop," and from this name comes the story of an unusual mascot.

Except for this summer, the Lambda Chi House has been "Goop's" only home, where its favorite food, next to lettuce, has been the house-boy's finger. During the day "Goop" is kept in a cage, and during the evening it is let loose to run wildly through the house. It is during these freedom runs that "Goop" manages to get into mischief such as ripping open a couch and crawling in to go to sleep, or taking a bite out of a dollar bill that was lying loose on a dresser top.

"Goop" is not always so playful! Every once in a while it gets a desire to do some serious studying, and if it is free it will climb up someone's desk, where someone is studying, and nibble at the eraser of the pencil in use. Other times he will perch upon Conder's shoulder and quietly observe the textbook in use.

Like any other student, "Goop" wants to relax every so often, and if some beer is handy it will take a small nip. "Goop" probably would take more," said Conder, "But that is about all he can take without passing out." As yet Conder is unable to say whether "Goop" has a hang-over the next morning.

Next spring Conder plans to let "Goop" go, and by then it is hoped that the squirrel will be old enough to take care of itself. "Goop" is such a fighter that its keeper does not think that it will have much trouble in surviving, but since the animal is so tame it is feared that it might decide to light upon some poor coed's shoulder, as it so often does now, and therein might lie his ruination.

The Big Dormitory

The Interdormitory Council, if it follows through with the establishment of the "Brigadoons," can make a permanent contribution to men's dormitory life on the campus. Carolina has needed a dorm counterpart to fraternity Germans for a long time—a name band, big weekend for the lower quad—and the Brigadoons could fill the bill.

This is the latest step in a movement toward emancipating dormitory men from the prosaic existence theirs can be, and as was the case with social rooms, dormitory TV and visiting privileges, the Brigadoons idea originated with dorm dwellers themselves; they did not wait for a dance to be handed to them, but agitated for it.

If the 3500 dormitory men of Carolina want to, they can make dorm life highly civilized. We see just around the corner an era in which a UNC senior sidles up to a freshman and breaks dorm rushing silence just long enough to tell him, "Be smart—come on and join Ruffin. We've got lots of boys from your town," the best TV set in the quad, and the president of Brigadoons besides."

Invaluable 'Egg Head' Emancipation

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

During the last few years, while partisan feelings ran high, some right-wing politicians almost succeeded in making intellectual, and particularly academic, competence into a term of reproach. Their phrase was "egg head," and they gauged the merits of a party, a policy, or an administrattion by its egg-head content—or rather its lack of same.

That galaxy of business, financial, and industrial luminaries which is the board of directors of the Council for Financial Aid to Education, Inc., doesn't subscribe to that bit of folklore. And, as the title of the organization suggests, it proposes to do something about the matter.

"The teacher," says a recent report of this council, "is literally the keystone of any organized society."

His product, always hard to visualize, is the disciplined intelligence which fills the ranks of the professions and of business and industrial management . . . In no capacity have "best minds" made a more valuable contribution to American life and progress than on college and university faculties.

Yet, warns the report, there is a steady drift of these "best minds" from the campus to commerce. Why?

Ask almost anyone who teaches or has taught successfully, and he will tell you that the profession has intellectual and spiritual compensations which can cancel great madequacies in financial rewards, but how great?

The CFAE cites some figures. While earnings in industry rose 140 per cent, and in medical practice 127, those of college teachers rose but 42. In one large city the cost of living jumped 90 per cent, while faculty salaries at its famous university went up by only half that rate.

"The fact is," the council warns solemnly,

Many of the nation's colleges are today being financed at least in part out of the personal privations of devoted teachers and their families.

The last two words, perhaps, epitomize the personal and social tragedy that is with us. For the dedicated teacher his intangible rewards might suffice. But do those rewards clothe his family, warm his home, and educate his children? It is society's loss when he answers, "No," and joins the "drift."

Honor System Not Effective, Writes Friend

Louis Kraar

ED MCCURRY sighed and leaned back against the wall outside his rivals' political party meeting the other night. Then he answered the question that they're all asking him.

"I'm not running," he said. He was talking about the spring election and the talk that he was going to be the University Party's candidate for President. Even the now-silent Ram wrote that McCurry was running.

"Tentatively, I'm planning on going to Law School next year," Ed told me.

McCurry said he thought the UP had a number of good possibilities for presidential candidates.

Inside the rival SP meeting, former Chairman Gene Cook had just said he saw sixty possible candidates in the room.

If Cook and McCurry are right, the parties had better start nominating now—if they're going to make a final selection by spring.

COBB DORM, which last year created a much-needed fraternity called String (for those with "no money and few brains") has done it again.

This time the dorm newspaper, "The Corn Cobb," features a take-off on fraternity rushing by a guy who calls himself "Q.Q. Quibble."

Does Cobb hold a grudge against fraternity row? Or is this just part of the dorm's sense of humor?

Aside from the unfunny fraternity piece, the paper is as interesting a peek into dorm life as you'll find. It's got everything from an appeal against brushing teeth at water fountains to sports news. Other dorms might take up the idea and publish their own papers.

A FRIEND who used to spend a lot of time around the Hill writes from Ohio State University on the Carolina Honor System:

"You must admit . . . that the Honor System at Carolina is a farce," she writes. The friend goes on to say that if students here can't be trusted, "then the only alternative to to abolish the system and treat those college students in the manner in which they've proved they deserve."

And she adds, "The only way to keep those kids from cheating (that's such an ugly word, but it's true) is to have the professor stand over them while they're taking a test.

"Frankly, I think it's disgusting that college students have to be treated like children."

This reporter finds it hard to agree with any of the above words.

I have never seen any cheating here. The Honor System as an educational aid is inherent to all the things for which the University seems to stand.

The alternative for cheaters is not to abolish the Honor System, but to correct the cheaters—by probation, when possible, and by suspension, when necessary.

When the day comes that we have to post our profesors over students, we may as well close the doors and books of the University and call it quits.

Meantime, I guess we'd better do a little public relations on the Ohio State front.

Dr. Condon's Clearance

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—The inside story of how Dr. Edward Condon, the scientist now with the Corning Glass, was cleared for security on Tuesday, October 19, but uncleared on Thursday, October 21, is one of the most amazing in Washington.

It was pure politics, plus the long-distance intervention of Vice President Nixon and a phone call by Attorney General Brownell that did it.

Here is a play-by-play account of why the eminent scientist, who, according to Dr. Edward Teller, shortened development of the H-bomb by one year, found himself ok'd one day and out on his ear the next.

As part of the campaign to smear Averell Harriman, now running for governor of New York, the Eisenhower administration has been digging into the files of the Commerce Department to see what security cases he handled while Secretary of Commerce. And they were all set to spring three or four cases where Harriman might have been lenient with security risks. One of the cases was that of Dr. Edward Condon, director of the Bureau of Standards under Harriman and who was pilloried by the House Committee on Un-American Activities when Vice President Nixon was a member.

There was never any charge that Condon was a Communist but that his wife was indiscreet and that some of his friends were left of center.

Harriman, when Secretary of Commerce, refused to fire Condon, felt that he was unfairly treated, and flew here from Sun Valley, Idaho, to defend him.

Eventually, nowever, Condon got tired of being hammered over the head by Congressional Committees and resigned to take a job with private industry. Since scientists of his calibre are hard to find, he was snapped up by Corning Glass, a stanch Republican outfit, whose former president, Alanson B. Houghton, was appointed ambassador to the Court of St. James by Calvin Coolidge.

The father-in-law of Congressman Sterling Cole of New York, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission is also the chairman of Corning Glass and has defended Condon even more than Averell Harriman.

Condon Is Cleared

However, Republican National Committee strategy of making a big issue of the Condon case was seriously set back when it became known last week that the Defense Department's Eastern Regional Security Board cleared Dr. Condon. The Security Board, of course, did not realize they were pin-pricking one of the carefully inflated balloons in the GOP campaign. In fact, they acted last summer though the news leaked out only last week.

Vice President Nixon was given this bad news while campaigning in the far West and immediately hit the ceiling. He demanded that Condon security clearance be reversed.

Simultaneously, Attorney General Brownell telephoned Secretary of the Navy Charles Thomas. He gave instructions that the security cloud over Dr. Condon's head must be put back where it was.

At that time, believe it or not, Secretary of the Navy Thomas didn't even know Dr. Condon had been cleared. In fact, he knew nothing at all about the matter. He didn't know, among other things, that the Corning Glass Company had asked that Dr. Condon have access to classified material; nor did he know that this was put up to the Army-Navy-Air Force Security Board, which turned down the request on Feb. 10, 1953. Condon then appealed.

Meanwhile, the security system had been changed, and three special boards were set up, according to geographic regions, to handle security matters concerning industrial plants. Thus Condon's appeal reached the Eastern Regional Security Board in July, 1953, which took one full year—until July, 1954, to act. The board made a most thorough investigation, and in the end Dr. Condon was cleared.

Reaction Piece

Mundy Speaks On Harriman, Adlai & Voting

David Mundy

The last Reaction Piece carried subtle proof of the powers possessed by copyreaders and printers. I, too, have been "rammed." One of the complaints was about the manner in which a Democrat newspaper headlined a story. The first line was "Denied by Harriman," and below came, "Bribery Charges Hurled by Ives." The DTH managed to reverse my copy. The headline was used to illustrate the prejudice employed in writing an inoffensive-appearing headline: inserting a denial for Democrat Harriman even before the charges. The news story following, incidentally, carried no denial.

Adlai, I notice, endorses Harriman and FDR, Jr. as men "whose talents as well as inheritance command our respect."

Inheritance?

Harriman inherited millions, and FDR his father's name.

Talents?

Harriman was talented enough to be the chairman of a company that paid a $250,000 bribe. (A lot of money for a "common man," all Democrats being self-asserted "common men.")

His talents also brough him million-dollar profits at the expense of investors in a Polish mining deal.

And Junior is just talented enough to mimic the more demogogic and everything-to-everybody characteristics of his father. Unfortunate for both, the public's sense of discrimination in politics has become a bit finer.

Meanwhile Adlai endorses both, ignores Harriman's shady record, accuses the Republicans of using "communism, character assassination, slurs, and slanders," and predicts victory for the Democrats. Adlai's highly imaginative statements are indeed well turned, but the public has been too intelligent to swallow them in the past.

North Carolina Democrats, falling in with the Democrat charge of "Republican corruption," have not been successful.

Secretary of State Eure began the show by being "shocked" by "vote-buying" in one county. Now the number has increased. He is, of course, careful to intimate that it was all due to thosecarpetbagger Republicans. It is an unusual case of political "shock," especially since there hasn't been one arrest in weeks and reams of charges.

Randolph county Democrats even planned a surprise play. County Chairman Moser, Atty. General Harry McMullen, and the SBI started investigation of "ballot irregularities" there. It was alleged that a deputy sheriff had witnessed an absentee ballot for a non-existent person.

It really happened that someone had been sent a ballot with the wrong name on it (the nonexistent person). It was immediately returned and a new one with the correct name requested. Democrats Moser and McMullen knew this all along, says the Republican county chairman, as he requests an apology for their unjustified and distorted charges.

Now who, pray tell, is engagin' in Adlai's "slurs and slanders."

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

THE HORSE was taking his daily calisthenics — Pointing With Pride, and Viewing With Alarm—when I saw his in Woollen Gym. Also, he was applying to the de-lovelies at the ticket-office window — for glasses he had dropped at The Wake Forest Boxing Club's recent clambake in Kenan Stewdium. Glasses, yet? Since when?

"The kind of glasses called spectacles, not the ones you have recourse to ere you make a spectacle of yourself, Roger, me bhoy," The Horse elaborated elaborately. Lorgnon; paire de lunettes; klemmer; ochki: cheaters; blinkers; specs."

Oh! Glasses! What was The Horse Pointing To With Pride, to-day?

"I am no end set up by the sterling example of dignity, judicial calm and Christian forebearance demonstrated by Doctor Gray, Doctor House, Doctor Erickson, Doctor George Barlay and Doctor William Frye, in the face of the unfounded charges of dirty hoofball hurled by the unawake Wakes, last Saturday," The Horse said proudly. "Let others have their pop-off prexies, their crying coaches, their wailing warriors, and their limpets drawing pay as alleged sports-columnists."

Well, good! And what did The Horse View With Alarm?

"I'm having trouble viewing anything, without my glasses," The Horse said ruefully. "I hereby call on my buddies of The Horse's Obstacle Course to search, pry and ask among themselves of The Obstacle Course anent said glasses. They are bi-focals, they were in a red leather slipcase marked City Optical Company, and they are sorely needed my me."

Did The Horse say, The Obstacle Course?

"The frat house which I do not pass en route homeward from Kenan Stewdium, alternate Saturdays," The Horse explained. "The good, if sometimes caustic, Dottie O'Mare has christened West Cameron from the Deke House on past Ehle's Acre, 'The Horse's Obstacle Course. Isn't it odd she refuses to regard my stops along the Obstacle Course as being in the interests of getting information?"

Maybe she thought it was odd that The Horse spent his time along The Obstacle Course in reading labels?

"I find them informative," The Horse said. "That way, instead of wondering the next day what hit me, I can accurately describe what hit me down to the fractional per centum of Proof. Too, it provides me with material of an educational nature so that it cannot be said I wasted my time. If Doctor Allen, of Classics, asks me did I do any reading over the week-end, I can say in the affirmative, and sign a pledge."

I thought The Horse should sign a pledge! Tsk-tsk, losing glasses! Where did he think they might be?

"The Deke House, or with the Phi Kappa Sigs, or with the Phi Gamma Delts," The Horse said. "A reward of one beer, cold, tax paid and potable, if not premium, is guaranteed, and with a little argument, I might make it two beers. Just in case the restorer of my ochki, as we say in Rooshia, wants to join me in consuming the reward."

Oh, then the one beer would be imbibed by The Horse?

"As a sop to my age, the lads usually give me first sop," The Horse said fondly. "Ay, great lads, these! Sportsmen and gentlemen. Not a crying Deacon in a houseload. Wurra-wurra! Up, Tar Heels! Down, Tennessee! But, never with a crybaby tear!"

Rambling

Ron Levin

So tell me . . . what is happiness? I have asked a hundred different people and gotten a hundred different answers. The peculiar thing is that the people who give me the clearest answer and know just how to tell me what happiness is, don't have it.

One fellow told me it was peace of mind. So then I asked him what peace of mind was. Then he told me peace of mind was an inner contentment. I asked him what he meant by that. I asked him to put it in plain, down to earth, dime-store words, just what happiness was. He stuttered and coughed a few times. Finally he admitted he didn't know.

I spoke to one coed after my eleven o'clock class as we were walking up toward the "Y". She said happiness was doing what you really wanted to do more than anything else. I asked her was she happy? She replied with a most affirmative nod. I then asked her what was she doing. She hung her head sadly and said . . . nothing . . . just nothing . . . ain't it miserable.

Then I went up town to speak to one of the bourgeosie economic materialists . . . a business man. He seems to think happiness is having all you need and not wanting anything else. I asked him if he was referring to money. He shook his head with a most vigorous no. He meant a nice home, a family . . . and here I interrupted him. You mean to tell me that it doesn't take money to get and keep a home and family. Why yes, but that's not just the way I meant it. I left him clawing at the Chapel Hill air for an answer.

Then I met a very special feminine friend of mine, and we sat on the lawn in frontof Smith dorm Friday morning. I thought I might spring the question on her just for kicks. For kicks, did I say? I got an answer that would have satisfied anyone from the year one. She told me this, and I pass it on to you.

Happiness is understanding. It is only when a person fully understands what he is, and why he is that way that he can begin to approach the limits. Without understanding . . . without a person really knowing himself, (as much as any man can), there exists only a dream and happiness within this dream is not real . . . it is a dream itself and like all other dreams, must come to an end.

When a person can look into a mirror and not be dismayed by what he sees, then he is on the right road. How far he can travel on this road is up to him.

Certainly material possession, the family, recognition, and other factors are part of the answer; but it is only when these are all put together in the right proportion that any degree of "real" happiness can be attained. Finding the formula, then, is the problem. I haven't . . . have you?

Tar Heels Leave For Tilt With Vols

Over the Hill

By

FRED BABSON

As Carolina's Blue and White grid warriors wing they way toward Knoxville this afternoon, the hopes and anxieties of their followers will go with them. Unfortunately, as always, much rests on the outcome of the Tennessee game tomorrow.

Tar Heel fans assumed a pessimistic attitude after a mediocre showing in the season's opener against N. C. State. The succeeding Saturdays saw supporter spirit careen to a low ebb, as Tulane was allowed a tie, and Georgia and Maryland completely outclassed the locals. In the midst of their doubts and grumbles, the fans heard intermittent reports of Carolina's formidable potential. After the Maryland massacre, even the die-hard rooters began to harbor qualms.

Then the Tar Heels jogged onto the field against Wake Forest, a team that held Maryland to a tie and came within a hair's breadth of beating a Terp team that was then still regarded as almost invulnerable. Carolina jumped into an early 7-0 lead, but pessimism still hung low over the shady side of Kenan Stadium. In the third quarter, Carolina took a commanding 14-0 advantage; but the fans remained in their lethargy, notwithstanding a spine-tingling 77-yard touchdown gallop. Carolina spirit was still conspicuous by its absence. Cheer leaders frantically tried to solicit a response from the multitudes, but to no avail.

As the seconds ticked away in the last quarter, restless anticipation stirred the Carolina section. The scent of victory was detected. An upset was in the making. The south side of Kenan came alive. Tar Heel rooters felt themselves sized by that indescribable tingling sensation that comes from pride—pride, not in themselves, but pride in their team.

Down the field, 11 guys in blue jerseys, their faces dirty and scratched, had their backs to the wall. The goal line was two yards away. The linemen dropped to their hands and knees, grim determination written on their dirt-smeared faces. The backs crouched close behind them. Three times the enemy smashed into that line, legs churning, knees pumping, elbows flying, in their desperate assault. Three times the Tar Heels gritted their teeth, raised their chins, and met the onslaught head-on, smashing it down without yielding an inch. And Carolinians were proud of them. To the 24,000 fans in Kenan Stadium those 11 guys with the fighting hearts were Carolina and they did the name proud.

Out of the victory over Wake Forest came new hope. Those ominous rumblings of Carolina potential finally materialized into two, efficient football teams. It is difficult to say which is the better. Coach George Barclay alternated his two teams expertly, adroitly circumventing the one-platoon system. The No. 1 line may be slightly superior to the No. 2 line, but the backfields are rather evenly matched. Gravitte, Parker, Newman, and Bullock comprise the starting backfield. Sutton, Keller, Lear, and Long are their substitutes All of these backs have proved themselves worthy under fire. But on one of them may hinge the Tar Heels' hopes for two years to come.

Whether he likes it or not, Ed Sutton is the Golden Boy on whom the fans are placing their hopes. It may be pre-mature to wish such great things of the sophomore flash, but his rampages, almost at will, up and down Kenan Field last Saturday left a deep impression, to say the least, on everyone.

Not since Charlie Justice have the Tar Heels had a real threat like Sutton was last week—someone who is subject to go all the way every time he gets his hands on the ball. His 16.2-yard average for 12 carries is phenomenal Tennessee will probably be more concerned with stopping Sutton than anyone else tomorrow. The Carolina line will be concerned with shaking him loose into the secondary. Once in the clear, his speed can carry him all the way.

The Vols are 13-point favorites on parlay sheets, but the Tar Heels don't share that sentiment. Two upsets in a row is asking a lot, though.

Unbeaten Jim Beatty Paces ACC Runners

GREENSBORO, Oct. 28 —(AP)— Undefeated Jim Beatty, the sensational sophomore runner for North Carolina, continued his dominance of individual honors in Atlantic Coast Conference cross country, but he had close competition from Barr Grimm of Maryland, David Miller of N. C. State and George Rogers of Duke.

Both team and individual championships are determined in the conference meet at College Park, Md., Nov. 15, but seasonal honors are building toward a close battle in the finale. Among the teams, according to records of the ACC Service Bureau, N. C. State is undefeated while Maryland has only one loss, that to the Wolfpack.

Beatty has finished first in four meets, including a record-breaking run Saturday against Maryland and Wake Forest. Grimm has two firsts and a second—to Beatty. Miller has a first and two seconds—to Beatty and Grimm. Rogers last week won Duke's first meet.

Virginia and VMI ran yesterday, while Saturday's schedule has Maryland at Duke, Virginia and Wake Forest at N. C. State in a triangular meet.

Duke Luck Is Holding; Teas Cut From Tech

ATLANTA, Oct. 29—(AP)—Halfback Billy Teas, Georgia Tech's top ground gainer, and three other players were suspended today for the remainder of the season.

Coach Bobby Dodd said the four were cut from the squad for violation of training rules. He did not elaborate.

For Teas, a senior from Andrews, N. C., the suspension meant the end of his collegiate football career and it came at a time when he needed only three more yards gained to set a new career record at Tech.

Also suspended were senior halfback Larry Ruffin of West Point, Ga.; sophomore guard Harvey Brown of Augusta, Ga.; and freshman tackle John Lasch of Clairton, Pa.

Dodd always has made a practice of giving his players considerable leeway with regard to training rules, but has dealt harshly with violations.

To Enplane Today At 2:30; Barclay Thinks 'Our Boys Are Ready'

Carolina's Tar Heels enplane at 2:30 today from Raleigh-Durham Airport, bound for Knoxville, where they meet Tennessee's 13-point favorite Volunteers tomorrow in an inter-conference rivalry that dates back to 1893.

Coach George Barclay tapered his charges off from heavy contact work, putting them through light pass offense and defense drills yesterday. A defense for the Vol single wing attack was also taken up.

Barclay indicated that he plans to continue alternating his two "first teams" a strategy that proved successful against Wake Forest last week. The starting team will find George Stavnitski at center, Jimmy Neville and Ed Patterson at guards, Roland Perdue and Jack Maultsby at tackles, Will Frye and Norman Lane at ends, Len Bullock at quarterback, Connie Gravitte at right half, Larry Parker at left half, and Marshall Newman at fullback.

The second team has Bill Kirkman at center, George Foti and Bill Koman at guards, John Bilich and John Jones at tackles, Larry Muschamp and Darden Livesay at ends, Albert Long at quarterback, Ed Sutton and Ken Keller at the halves, and Don Lear at full. This eleven has six sophomores, two juniors and three seniors on it.

Only two of the entire Tar Heel squad will definitely remain out of action tomorrow. They are End Dick Starner, nursing a knee injury, and Doug Malone, with an injured arm nerve.

George Wallin, reserve fullback who saw considerable action last year, returned to the squad yesterday for the first time since preseason practice. Wallin received a shoulder injury during the first week of practice and had been out ever since.

"I think our boys are ready for this one," Barclay said. "All of our workouts this week have been very spirited, and I think the boys really want to win this one."

The Tar Heel mentor commented that the injuries to Tennessee's first three tailbacks will weaken the Vols. Senior Bobby Brengle is slated to assume the key duties in the Vol single-wing attack. Although Coach Harvey Robinson's fourth choice for the tailback slot, Brengle is no rookie, having seen considerable action last year

In the first Carolina-Tennessee meeting in 1893, the Tar Heels romped to a 60-0 win, continuing to win for two more meetings until the Vols finally turned the trick 12-0, in 1908. All told, Tennessee leads North Carolina in the ancient series, having won 14, lost eight, with one tilt ending in a tie.

Chi Phi Defeats SAE, 2-0; Sigma Chi Beats Lambda Chi

Chi Phi proved to everyone that they had a good ball club when they beat SAE in yesterday's intermural games. SAE, which suffered its first loss to DKE 22-0 yesterday, played an excellent game, but Chi Phi took advantage of their opportunity to win. The opportunity came when SAE took over the ball on their own goal line. Then Bob Coleman came in to tag Billy Armfield in the end zone to give the game to Chi Phi, 2-0.

Scoring: Chi Phi, safety, Bob Coleman.

In the only other game, Sigma Chi defeated Lambda Chi Alpha, 8-0. Cal Mitchell scored a safety to put Sigma Chi ahead 2-0. On the second half kickoff, Sigma Chi moved down to the Lambda Chi goal line. Bob Bell then scored to make the final score 8-0.

Sigma Chi	2	6	8

Scoring: Sigma Chi, TD's, Bob Bell; safety, Cal Mitchell.

Wake Forest Lineup Juggled As Deacons Prepare for Tigers

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Oct. 28—(AP)— Coach Tom Rogers made several shifts in starting lineups today as the Wake Forest College football squad tapered off heavy work in preparation for Saturday's game with the Clemson Tigers.

The Deacons will leave by bus for Charlotte tomorrow and hold a final workout there before the contest.

There was little contact work in this afternoon's session. The Deacons concentrated mainly on kickoffs and punt returns.

Ending An Era

Bayard Wootten Sells Studio To T. C. Moore, Returns To Home

BAYARD WOOTTEN

An era in North Carolina's photographic history ended here recently with the retirement of Mrs. Bayard Wootten from her long standing business here, Wootten-Moulton Studios.

One of the most colorful persons to ever snap a lens shutter in the Tar Heel state, Bayard Wootten photographed tens of thousands of persons and as many scenes from the outer banks to the mountains in her half-century career as a camera artist. She has sold her business here completely to T. C. Moore, manager of her studio for many years and an associate since 1921, and has returned to live in her native New Bern.

Still active in her "late 70's," (as she described her age), she plans to continue to assist her half brother, George Moulton, in the Wootten-Moulton Studio in New Bern, although she retired from working behind a camera in 1948 following an eye hemhorrage.

The shelves of the local studio have held more than 600,000 negatives by Bayard Wootten since she set up offices here in 1919, coming to Chapel Hill at the request of Drama Department head Frederick Koch, who had seen some of her work and liked it. For many years she was official photographer for the Carolina Playmakers.

Taught Art

Born in the sturdy ante-bellum house in New Bern to which she recently returned, Bayard Wootten attended public school there and studied art at Greensboro College. She later taught art in the Arkansas and Georgia Schools for the Deaf and in Georgia she met and married Charlie Wootten, a young attorney. The couple had two children, Charles Thomas and Rufus Morgan, and were divorced in 1904. Mrs. Wootten recalls with some bitterness that her husband evidently surmised she was from a wealthy family upon seeing the old family home in New Bern, and left her after discovering that they had no money.

She returned to New Bern and for several years painted flowers on calendars, fans, menus, and anything she could find to paint flowers on.—One day when she needed a picture of a cotton field for a calendar illustration the town photographer lent her his 8x10 contraption to make the necessary photo. "That gave me my start," she recalled. "People saw me going down the street with the camera and orders for pictures came in fast."

Her business dwindled in the summer so she got started at nearby Camp Glenn, where the national guard was encamped. Guardsmen only were permitted to operate businesses on the grounds so the staff made her an ing her the first and only female official member of the guard, giv- member of the N. C. National Guard. The commanding general one day exchanged her gold and black lieutenant's hat cord for his own and proclaimed her an adjutant general. "I kept that rank for 16 years and I suppose I'm still a member of the guard," she said. "I never received my discharge papers."

In Chapel Hill she has been active as a member of the Altrusa Club and the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Her successor, Mr. Moore, is also a native of Craven County. He attended school in Durham and came to Chapel Hill in 1920 to work in Foisters Camera Store and Studio. Mr. Moore said he planned to continue to operate the studio as he has in the past. Henry Edwards, head of the studio darkroom and an employee for the past 16 years, will also remain with the organziation.

Homes To Be Open

Eighteen modern homes in and around Chapel Hill will be open to the public tomorrow afternoon, in a project sponsored by the Chapel Hill School Art Guild.

Called The Contemporary Homes Tour, it is not a formally organized tour. Anyone going on the tour may see any or all of the homes; stay in them as little or as long as they wish; provide their own transportation or go with friends, and find their way around by the means of a map showing the location of the homes on exhibition. The maps come with the tickets, which are priced at $1. The hours for the tour are from 1 to 5 p. m.

The tour is designed to attract people interested in new trends in architecture, building materials and interior decoration. The proceeds from the tour will help support the art program in the Chapel Hill Elementary Schools and High School.

Homes belonging to the following Chapel Hill residents will be visited. John Allcott, Billy Arthur K. C. Beeston, Misses Mary and Tiphany Burgess, Henry Clark, Alex Davis, David Davis, Lambert Davis, Norman Eliason, William Friday, Jacques Hardre, Roger Howell, J. A. McMahon, Joseph Morrison, Miss Ruth Price, Isaac Taylor, C. D. Van Cleave and Earl Wynn.

Tickets are available at Pace's in Glen Lennox and at Ledbetter-Pickards. Tomorrow they will also be sold in the main lobby of the Carolina Inn after 12:30.

Republican Blasts Editorial

Porter Griggs, chairman of the Young Republicans Club, recently blasted Charles Kuralt, editor of The Daily Tar Heel, for editorials which he asserts have been a "propaganda sheet for the Democratic Party."

Griggs further stated that "He, Kuralt, commented in an Oct. 26 editorial that people 'were bored with two bit politicians.' I wonder if Editor Kuralt includes himself in this group. In his editor's capacity he has criticized: Ike, Nixon, McCarthy, Jenner, Secretary of Labor Steve Mitchell, Weeks and Wilson in terms of experienced two bit politicians. I think the students are people and they too are bored with politicians of the Kuralt caliber. Kuralt should stay with editorials such as 'Gracious Living,' and let other people decide of the 'boot' is what Charlie Wilson, Kuralt's future boss, really needs."

Kuralt's reply was "If Chairman Griggs and the Young Republicans want to defend Nixon, McCarthy, Jenner et al in logical fashion, the pages of The Daily Tar Heel are always open to them. The logic of this particular outburst escapes me."

Tar Heels Leave Today

Given new heart by a much improved showing in their 14-7 victory over favored Wake Forest last week, North Carolina's Tar Heels will be in high spirits when they invade Knoxville for a game with Tennessee tomorrow.

The squad will depart by chartered plane from the Raleigh-Durham airport at 2:30 p.m. today. They will leave from Chapel Hill a little before this and travel to the airport by busses. A workout in Shield-Watkins stadium is scheduled at 4:30 p.m.

The workout in Knoxville will be a brief tune-up in light equipment. The Tar Heels put in their rough work earlier this week when they had intensive drills against Tennessee's single wing attack and tested thoroughly their own offense. These scrimmages, against the freshmen, were considered satisfactory by Coach George Barclay and his staff.

Quarterbacks Len Bullock and Albert Long will be co-captains for the day and will head a player-traveling squad of 36. Bullock will quarterback the starting team, as he did last week, but as much is expected of Long's replacement troops, which are considered on a par with the starters.

In fact, the alternating team has been more effective offensively in the past two games than the starters. Last week Ed Sutton, speedy sophomore right halfback on this unit, scored both of Carolina's touchdowns on long runs and had another touchdown gallop called back. He will be a marked man at Knoxville, with his sensational season's running average of 16.2. He has not been thrown for a loss of any of his 12 carries as he collected 195 yards.

The Tar Heels will be seeking to win their first game over Tennessee since 1948. The Vols have always been tough for Carolina and even when the Tar Heels had their finest teams, sparked by Charlie Justice, they had trouble with Tennessee. They lost in 1946 and 1949, when the immortal Choo Choo was around, winning the other two numbers in that era.

less Cuban fisherman to land an enormous fish towing his boat still was a tale of futility, for in the end sharks consumed the great fish.

But the Nobel judges found the distilled and matured purpose in Hemingway's absorption with futility in the old man's ability to accept and philosophize over the loss of his prize catch.

The Nobel award means that the hard-living American, whose wife calls him "Poppa" and who likes the title "Champ" will be invited to travel from his ranch in Cuba to Stockholm on Dec. 10 to receive the 181,646.58 crowns ($35,066) award from Sweden's King Gustaf Adolf.

But the honor and the critical vindication outweigh the money for the barrel-chested adventurer who has lived many of his legends.

Hemingway, like Sinclair Lewis, was the son of a doctor. He was born July 21, 1898 in Oak Park, Ill., and set out young to rough it through life by hunting in the north Michigan woods and reporting for a Kansas City paper.

He educated himself well in "the damn sad science of war" by joining up as an ambulance driver in World War I in France and switching to Italy's Piave front with the Aediti shock troops where he achieved a shell-shattered knee and two Italian decorations.

He settled in Paris in the "disillusioned 20's" with his metal kneecap and a band of expatriates including Ezra Pound and Gertrude Stein. There he cast his style of clean craftsmanship, opposed to the old, ornate use of English.

Court

Three students faced traffic violations last Tuesday in the Court of Chapel Hill. Charles D. Bowning, Durham, was fined $5.00 and costs for improper passing. Charles Fowler, Pilot Mountain, was fined court costs for parking in front of a fire hydrant. Phillip J. Baugh. Jr., Charlotte, was fined $5.00 and costs for speeding.

By ELEANOR SAUNDERS

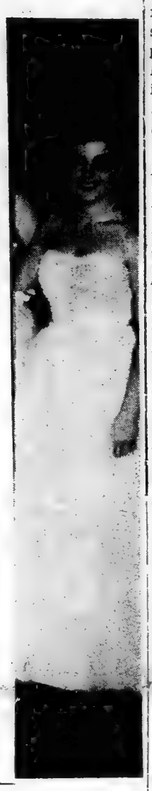
Amid nervous cries of "Has anybody got a dark lipstick?" and "Someone please check my seams to see if they are straight," 75 of Carolina's loveliest coeds tugged and primped themselves into their finest form for Thursday night's Yackety-Yack beauty contest.

The presentation before the wildly enthusiastic audience which jammed into Memorial Hall was the first for many of the contestants, and old stuff for those coeds of more advanced standing. But pre-debut panic did not discriminate between the old and the new, for it seized each and every one of the hopeful beauty queens. Cigarette manufacturers would have been delighted to see the large number of weeds that were consumed to relieve those last minute jitters.

Backstage, before the first appearance of the contestants, was an obstacle course of hoop skirts and flowing net, a fusion of cigarette smoke and the sweeter smell of choice perfumes. Photographers and reporters added to the melee with their pleas: "All right now, all Charlotte girls pose over here!" and "Please, someone say something classic!" Jack Markham, co-beauty editor of the Yack, was in a momentary panic when he was unable to assemble the 75 frantic females to deliver last minute instructions.

The audience, meanwhile, was in a similar state of anticipation. Egotists grabbed at the chance to become television stars, for they waved or yelled vigorously as the WUNC-TV camera swung slowly around Memorial Hall. Their delight increased when their own smiling faces were reproduced on the screens at either side of the stage. One remark was overheard: "Why look, it's me! Who says all the beauties are backstage?"

But quiet was assured, both backstage and in the audience, when Jimmy Capps, WPTF disc jockey and announcer for the contest, appeared on stage. He expressed his pleasure at the number of students who had "left their studies" to watch the parade of campus lovelies.



Then, one by one, the aspiring contestants floated onto the stage, paused to smile at the audience and most especially at the judges, and glided back into the dark recesses behind the curtains to await the evaluation of their first appearance.

One contestant, number 40½, aroused the spectators' wholehearted support. Gina Lollapoluza, of Wake Forest, sponsored by the Carolina football team, received enthusiastic cheers and wolf-calls when she gracefully galloped across the stage. But Gina was disappointed, for the judges did not see fit to bring her back for a second appearance.

During the first intermission, Bill Collins provided musical entertainment at the piano, while the three judges eliminated, with difficulty, 35 of the contestants. And the television camera continued to make its rounds and bring out the showmanship in members of the audience.

And backstage, the earlier confusion was replaced by a more subtle nervousness as the contestants awaited the decision of the judges. Rivals became cooperative and courteous, and they helped one another make necessary repairs and adjustments. Questions of "Did I smile enough?" were answered with "Did I walk slow enough?" Enterprising sponsors sneaked behind the scenes to give their representatives encouragement and criticism in order to insure benefits from the $5 entrance fee.

After the second phase of the event and another narrowing down of the number of entrants, the semi-finals began. Returning favorites were greeted with spirited cheers, and groans arose when "sure bets" failed to appear.

Cold Weather Greets Team In Knoxville

By FRED BABSON

Knoxville, Tenn., Oct. 29—North Carolina's Tar Heels stepped from the Capital Airlines DC-4 this afternoon onto a rain-washed Knoxville airport. A cold, steel-gray sky hung low over the runway, as the gridders filed onto buses waiting to take them into Knoxville.

The Tar Heels had departed from Raleigh-Durham airport at 3 p.m. An uneventful, routine flight brought them in for a smooth landing at Knoxville airport at 4:30 p.m. Coach George Barclay's outfit appeared to be in the pink upon arrival. None of the 36 players were bothered by air-sickness.

The sudden change of weather, from Chapel Hill's mildness to the sharp, wet coldness that prevails here, may effect the Tar Heels. One of the coaches commented that rain or a wet field tomorrow would definitely favor Tennessee since their single-wing offense relies less on deception and speed and more on straight power than the Carolina split-T.

Here in Knoxville, the Vols are rated 10-point favorites. Tennessee has scouted four of the Tar Heels games this season, and the scouts reported that Carolina looked 90 per cent better against Wake Forest than at any time previously.

Hometown papers are citing Tennessee as the "crippled Vols," referring to the fact that Coach Harvey Robinson's first three tailbacks are on the injured list. Robinson has announced that he will go along with his earlier plan of starting Bobby Brengle at that key spot in his single-wing plans.

Weather predictions warn the local fans to "wear their warmest" for the game, as the mercury is not expected to rise above 44 degrees tomorrow. A crowd of 25,000 is expected. Tenessee has won three games this season, while losing only two. Vol supporters claim Tennessee has not played up to par since their fine performance against Duke, which ended in a 7-6 Duke victory. Len Bullock and Al Long were named Tar Heel Co-captains.

Chancellor Receives Citation From Nurses

CHANCELLOR ROBERT B. HOUSE is shown here receiving a citation of appreciation from the North Carolina State Nurses' Association at its meeting which ended yesterday in Durham. Presentation was made by Miss Josephine Kerr, Charlotte, president of the association. Mrs. Flora Wakefield, Raleigh, who represented the nursing profession on the original Medical Care Commission, reviewed "the many contributions which Chancellor House has made to the nursing profession in this state," with particular emphasis on his "leading role in having the School of Nursing included on the same basis as other schools in the new Division of Health Affairs" here.

Student Legislature Heard 12 Bills In Last Meeting

By LLOYD SHAW

Twelve bills and resolutions were introduced to a poorly attended student Legislature Thursday night, two less than all the bills that had been introduced since the first session in September.

Among these were resolutions concerning the tuition raise and judicial problems and bills establishing a Veteran's Affairs Commission and a Legislature Complaint Board.

Elsie Peterson (SP) introduced a resolution, which would put the student Legislature on record as being "absolutely and resolutely opposed to any rise in tuition at the University." Under her resolution, the student Legislature would take "any and all action necessary" to discourage a tuition rise.

A bill establishing "a Veterans Affairs Commission" to look into the problems of the approximately 1200 veterans on campus was introduced by Manning Muntzing (SP).

Because "there has been a great deal of discussion recently concerning the Honor System and the effects upon it of various recent proposals," and "whereas, the student Legislature has never fulfilled its mandate from the

Brat, Strange Cult, Is Back

By BILL WATT

Co-Creator, Brat

In the Y Court this week appeared an announcement, bracketed between large adjurations to 'THINK,' to the effect that the public would soon be able to purchase the 'Encyclopaedia BRATannica.' And Seen on Campus was a coed who, while purchasing this inspiring placard, was heard to wonder, "But what woes it mean? It's spelled wrong." Occurrences this closely related are not coincidental.

Any student of last year could have told the puzzled coed—could have told her ecstatically and wtihout fear of reprisal—that the placard in question advertised the triumphal return of the dramatic art movement known as BRAT, which made its first appearance on campus last January.

The coed could have discovered, had she questioned anyone present, in body or in spirit, at the eight stupendous BRAT exhibits, that, art being dead, BRAT had risen from the ashes to render for all time that necessary Tug at the Heartstrings. And she might have had quoted to her parts of the "Famous BRAT February Manifesto," which included such telling points as 'BRAT uses its materials instead of taking advantage of them;' 'BRAT is trauma recollected in tranquility;' and 'BRAT takes the hyphen out of Toulouse-Lautrec.'

Also, if she were lucky, she might have learned of the contents—painting, sculpture, and that BRAT specialty, the nodal object—of the eight stupendous exhibits: such as a burnt piece of paper atop a wooden column, entitled "They martyred Savanarola: Snap Crackle Pop;" and other heart-warming pieces.

But, fortunately perhaps, the inquiring coed could not have discovered, by mere inquiry, what BRAT's dramatic return entailed. Only BRAT knew; and BRAT revealed exclusively to the Daily Tar Heel the full and awful purport of this feverish renaissance. The DTH reporter took it all down; there was not a dry eye in the house.

THIS IS BRAT

. . . unicorn threatened by maiden being saved in the nick of time by angel, says Artist Tom Brame.

As explained by BRAT, the movement's return was planned to coincide with the mysterious workings of the Zodiac. The BRAT leaders, who recently returned from Egypt, where one spent his time excavating ancient tombs; the other, being excavated, plan to inaugurate the new season by celebrating, in full pomp and panoply, the Feast of St. Maxwell. This occasion, BRAT explained, commemorates the canonization, last year, of Maxwell Bodenheim.

BRAT went on to say that the Feast was to be marked chiefly by a giant exhibit—BRAT's 17th, counting those held over the summer in foreign countries and Ohio opening shortly at BRAT's retreat, Chateau Pablo, and later, if space can be found, somewhere in town or on campus.

To this informative event everyone is invited, as also to the BRAT Picnic, to be held this weekend, at which BRAT will stage the first international unicorn race.

BRAT added that the Grand 17th Exhibit ("Le Salon St. Maxwell") will be astoundingly different from all previous BRAT exhibits, in that BRAT has imparted to this latest event a decided moral flavor. In proof of this BRAT dramatically produced several oil paintings and a large mural. These bore such moral titles as "Little Did I Reck," "Can't Say You Weren't Told," "Into Each Life," "Saving for the Day," and "I Live for the Morrow."

The Grand 17th Exhibit, which will be staged sometime next week, will be open to all; any BRAT, and probably any presumptous passerby, will be glad to give the address.

Kunstmann To Speak

Professor John Kunstmann, visiting professor of German language and literature here, will address the University Philological Club Tuesday night at 7:30.

The meeting will be held in the Faculty Lounge of the Morehead Planetarium.

Recreation Club Sets Slate

The UNC Recreation, an affiliate of the American Recreation Society and the North Carolina Recreation Society, will meet on alternate Thursdays at 7:30 in room 407 of the Alumni Building. All students interested in recreation work as a profession have been urged by the officers to attend the scheduled meetings at which discussions will be held on helping the IDC plan social activities and work shops.

Officers for this year are the following: Baxter McIntyre, president; Miss Betty Covington, vice president; and Miss Katherine Harbison, secretary-treasurer.

Air ROTC Men Feted

A reception was held by the Air Force ROTC in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial for all the Commissioned Officers of the Cadet Corps Thursday afternoon.

The reception was headed by Miss Judy Jackson, Honorary Colonel of the Sponsor Corps, and Miss Cathy Widman, Assistant Colonel.

The main idea of the reception was to give the ROTC Officers an opportunity to meet the girls who will sponsor the squadrons.

The refreshments were served by a committee headed by Miss Mary Lou O'Mara, and the decorations were done by Misses Ji Ji Rainwater and Judy Jackson.

Planetarium Workmen Busy

While the public views "The Heavens Tonight," a presentation featuring constellations visible during the fall season, behind the scenes Planetarium technicians are busily preparing for the annual spiritually inspiring Christmas offering.

Although the Christmas story does not open until Nov. 23, upon the close of the current demonstration, new spectacular lighting effects are already being planned and sets built.

One of the features for the 1954 Christmas story will be an tirely new panorama of the Judean hills in color, drawn by Robert L. Blake, well-known artist associated with the Duke University School of Medicine as illustrator.

His drawings of the Judean hills were made following extensive consultation with Dr. William F. Stringfellow, professor of the Old Testament in the Duke Divinity School.

Baptists Hear Rev. Williams

Rev. Preston H. Williams, student chaplain at North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham, told some 65 Baptist students recently that the church must change its attitude toward Negroes if it is to remain a Christian instituiton.

The Negro minister told the students that the main question facing the church in the matter of racial tension is "What are we going to do to eradicate segregation in our churches?"

Mrs. G. A. Harrer, Of South Building:

She's Always There

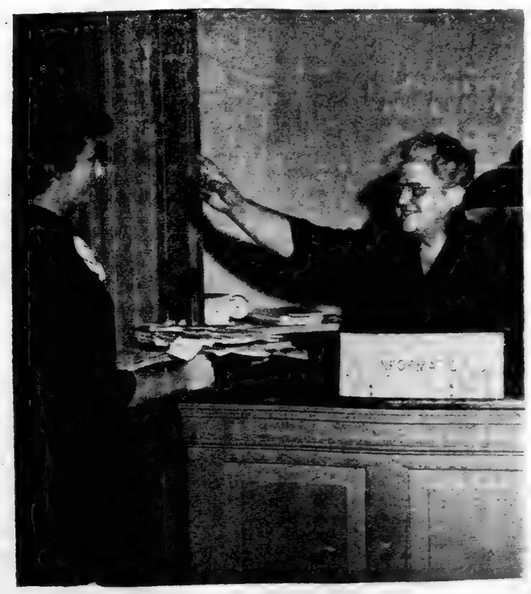
Almost every Carolina student, at some time during his or her stay on the campus, will meet Mrs. G. A. Harrer.

Mrs. Harrer is the sweet-looking white-haired lady with the grandmotherly twinkle in her eye who has been sitting behind the information desk in South Building for the past 10 years. Sometimes she sees students only once or twice, when they pause to ask the location of an office or building. Others, she explained, stop by every two or three days, just to chat.

She admits that people remember her name better than she does their's. Veterans and others returning to the University after a few years absence often wander into South Building looking rather bewildered, then glance toward the information desk and with a rather relieved, "Well, thank goodness — at least you're still here!" Mrs. Harrrer also recalls the time when, while she was traveling in another city with her daughter, a car full of boys and girls pulled up beside them and yelled at the tops of their lungs, "Information Desk, South Building, UNC!"

Sorting Mail

Mrs. Harrer's most time consuming duty is sorting all the mail for offices in the building, as well as opening all correspondence addressed simply to "UNC," and deciding who should handle it. Many of these letters are quite amusing; for example, school boy, deep in the throes of his first research paper, for "all that you know about Paul Green." All such requests are sent to the Library.



Next in order of importance comes answering questions, both in person and over the phone. These range from students hunting offices which no longer exist to strangers who have come to Chapel Hill to visit a professor, only to learn that Woman's College and State are also considered UNC, and their friend has never set foot on this campus. But no matter how ridiculous the query, Mrs. Harrer always manages to keep a straight face as she patiently explains.

A year-round employee, she considers summer her busiest time, what with the large numbers of school teachers and other newcomers on campus. During summer school registration, students who have misplaced their advisors even ask her to help them through maze of figuring out the catalogue. The fall orientation period, of course, runs this season a close second.

Mrs. Harrer, a native of Princeton, N. J., moved to Chapel Hill in 1915, when her husband became head of the Classics Department at Carolina. Her two sons and two daughters, one of whom is now working with the Placement Service, were raised here, and she says she has never considered moving back to Princeton. Although both are essentially college towns, she explained, the whole atmosphere of Chapel Hill is different—more friendly, and more informal.

Some people might become bored with sitting in the same little enclosure day-in and day-out, but not Mrs. Harrer. "I like people, especially young people," she says, "And when you get to my age, you don't even mind sitting still all the time." During slack hours she keeps busy reading, knitting and writing to her absent children and three grandchildren.

A lot of people, she commented, remind her that the closet at the back of her "office" was originally intended for an elevator shaft, and try to tell her that she is the only reason this elevator hasn't been installed. This doesn't bother her, though. The people who work in South Building have been climbing the stairs for a long time, and it won't hurt them to keep it up a while longer, she feels.

Norman Thomas, Conservative

Norman Thomas, American Socialist and next-scheduled Carolina Forum speaker, has had his day at the center of the fires of controversy. Now, however, he is somewhat like a Zeus with his thunderbolt taken away.

Mr. Thomas will undoubtedly take his place in the chambers of American history as one of her great economic heretics. And it will be a sterile and empty day in the United States when we surrender our last pride in heretics. But the truth is that we rarely hear now of Norman Thomas except, perhaps, when he tosses off a felicitous observation on the current scene. Why is this?

The answer, we think, is evident and rather simple. Those advocacies which bellowed flames up around Norman Thomas back in the Twenties and Thirties—advocacies like social security and ultra-graduated taxes—have become accepted parts of our economy. During the Red Scares of the Twenties, demogogues attempted to stigmatize ideas that now find acceptance in the American mind.

This shift of ideas over the years from heresy to general recognition bespeaks a lesson for the future as well as for the past. If the facts of intellectual history tell us nothing else, they preach the absolute necessity for toleration of what may seem in our day intellectual aberrations.

Often, at the time when we believe them to be subverting and undermining the balance of society, heretics, dissenters — the whole range of "abberational" thinkers—are preparing for society's future equilibrium.

The Old Man & The Big Fish

Some people said Ernest Hemingway's novel, The Old Man and the Sea, was an allegory—Ernest (the old man) was trying to land his art (the fish) with the critics (the sharks) taking huge chunks out of his work at every hand.

We don't know if Papa Hemingway had any such thing in mind when he wrote the book, but like thousands of other Americans, we got a boot out of the story of the old man's struggles and out of the struggles of the skillfully pictured Hemingway characters in all his other books and stories.

So we were glad when Ernest Hemingway reeled in his reward. The biggest fish of all, the Nobel Prize, couldn't have gone to a more deserving angler.

Segregation's Myriad Usages

The Interdormitory Council is to be commended for its approval of a measure to finance the cost of a room for an exchange student from Goettingen University in Germany.

They did this after being informed that the University would not foot the bill, that there would be no allocation of state funds for the purpose.

We couldn't help thinking, upon hearing of the extra expense the IDC is going to, that one of those empty rooms on third floor Steele would provide excellent housing for the German youth and would cost our students nothing.

And the exchange student, being from Europe, probably wouldn't realize he was being segregated at all.

The Daily Tar Heel

The Bell Tolls For A Course In Hemingway

Louis Kraar

AUTHOR ERNEST Hemingway accepted news that he had won the Nobel Prize this week with words as terse as his writing.

"I am very proud and happy to receive the Nobel Prize for literature. If I had been on the board I would have voted for Carl Sandburg. He is a very dedicated writer," he said.

The statement, like Hemingway's great work, was simple in structure with a great deal implied.

Perhaps now that Hemingway has won the world's greatest prize for writing, the scholarly heads of Carolina's English Department will spend more time on teaching his works.

Dr. H. K. Russell and Dr. C. H. Holman both have courses on the undergraduate level in which Hemington's works are taught. But on the graduate level, there is only a single seminar in current American literature—and it has been taught in the summer.

To suggest that professors "teach" Hemingway somehow sounds wrong. But in a seminar, where intensive reading by each student and a vigorous exchange of ideas are the order of the day, authors like Hemingway can be examined and enjoyed.

Many have said that our English Department dwells too much on the historical approach to literature, that the Bingham Hall scholars live too much in the past.

To fully understand the present —and the future—in literature, it would seem that a through knowledge of the past is necessary. But I fear our English Department tends to stop there. It is sometimes guilty of living too much in the past and not recognizing the present.

When a young writer called Thomas Wolfe graduated from the University and later had a novel published, no one from the English Department invited him back to speak. It was left to Phillips Russell of the Journalism Department to invite the young writer. Thus Thomas Wolfe came back to Chapel Hill and spoke to Professor Russell's writing class —not the English Department.

Now that Hemingway has won the Nobel Prize, even the most pedantic in the English Department probably will raise an academic eyebrow. And will some student urging, perhaps a Hemingway seminar will follow.

APPARENTLY, the University's service plant needs some intelligence men for Graham Memorial.

In several places throughout the newly-renovated student union leaks are causing the plaster to look like tear-stained pancake makeup. Everytime it rains, the plaster peels.

The plant has sent workmen over to Graham Memorial several times. But each time the men inspect and announce that they can't find the source of the leaks until it rains.

Then the workmen go away, it rains, the plaster peels, and the routine starts all over again.

I hope the service plant will do something in the way of intelligence before more plaster peels. Perhaps a visit to the University Physics Department would aid the water sleuths. Or if they wait a bit longer—the workmen might try the Archeology Department.

AN OLD WEST source told me that dorm President Raymond Taylor was doing a little high-class telephoning the other day.

The boys at Old West had a problem. They needed a car to parade their coed representative around in the Beat Dook festival. President Taylor took the situation in hand, calling to borrow an appropiately impressive auto.

Taylor call Gordon Gray, who was out of town, then Governor Umstead.

Is Religious Faith A Test For Democratic Loyalty

(The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States now includes the words, "under God," by action of Congress earlier this year. In this article, which we reprint from New Republic, an educator personally committed to a religious way of life discusses the current identification of loyalty with affirmations of piety.—Editor.)

By HOXIE N. FAIRCHILD

There are religious as well as constitutional grounds for objecting to the increasingly popular habit of regarding religious conformity as a touchstone of loyalty to democratic institutions. It is a sign of the times that I lack the courage to support this statement without first asserting that I have never been, am not now, and feel completely certain that I never shall be a Communist or fellow-traveler. What a "pink" may be I know no more than does Senator McCarthy, but I doubt whether the term is applicable to me. I do not approve of abolishing the Fifth Amendment, but I see no likelihood that I shall ever need its protection. Politically I am a liberal Democrat—somewhat divided, like most eggheads, between a passion for individual freedom and a recognition of the need for suprapersonal social controls. Although interested in such problems I have a considerable gift for minding my own business, which is that of a professor of English literature. I am a maimed and beribboned veteran of World War I. In the Second, I did no more than a uselessly loyal citizen might be expected to do—bought bonds, gave blood, served as a Civil Defense warden, tried to keep my own little segment of free civilization alive and clean.

To cap the climax of this little tale of innocence, I am a faithful and fairly active Episcopalian layman ,a trustee of my Anglo-Catholic parish. Reviewers of my scholarly writings have sometimes objected to their uncompromisingly Christian temper. Recently I have busied myself in the movement to enhance the status of religion in higher education. I detest Communism not so much because I believe in properly controlled free enterprise as because I believe in the sacredness of man as the child of God.

Any American who has reached the age of 60 must have observed a considerable upsurge of religion in this country during the past 30-odd years. Whether the movement is a retreat from reason or a rediscovery of that which alone makes reason possible is a debatable question. In either case the fact remains that more and more of us have felt the need of God and have affirmed their conviction that historic Christianity tells the truth about God and His relations with man. The Catholic Church has made immense gains in the number of communicants and, in its spiritual influence. Protestantism, which in my boyhood seemed to be spiritually hood seemed to be spiritually and intellectually bnakrupt, has been moving away from sentimental humanism in the direction of Christian theology. All the principal sects have flourished. More and more people appear to know that religion does not mean persuading the less attractive young people of the community to dance with one another in drearily wholesome surroundings, but that it means the quest for union with supernatural realities.

Even unbelievers are acquiring a clearer notion of what it is they do not believe; they are more interested in religion and less contemptuous of its claims to provide a valid interpretation of human experience. To a member of the academic profession the shrinking of the chasm between intellectual and spiritual life is especially striking. Religion flourishes as an independent cultural discipline in our colleges and universities, and its relevance for almost all fields of secular learning is recognized for more generously than of old. Similar changes have occurred in non-academic intellectual circles.

Up to a few years ago, even an unsympathetic observer would have granted that all this had had taken place spontaneously and in an atmosphere of mental and bodily freedom. But more recently the hitherto gradual trend toward religious affirmation has been immensely accelerated and popularized by the Communist peril. There is a widespread campaign to convince the public that since all Communists are atheists by definition, all thoroughly patriotic Americans should believe in God. This whopping non sequitur is promulgated more or less explicitly by official and unofficial spokesmen of religious denominations and by some proponents of the religious education movement. It adds unction to many political speeches and commencement addresses. It is a persistent theme in the programs of veterans' organizations, patriotic societies, service clubs, and so on. God's public relations have never been more expertly handled.

The attempt to establish a 100 per cent correlation between loyalty and religiosity is naturally offensive to patriotic unbelievers I wish it were equally offensive to patriotic believers. But for practical minded American Christians this new way of pushing their neighbors into the fold is almost irresistibly workable. "Say your prayers and smash the Commies!" The slogan "has everything"—red blooded pugnacity, patriotism, pragmatic idealism, good old fashioned piety.

To express distaste for this device of spiritual salesmanship is not to deny that the purely religious aspects of the present crisis may quite legitimately be exploited by the Christian propagandist. Assuredly these are days when every Christian should gather up all the faith he possesses, use it with all his might in his own life, and try by precept and example to recommend it the secularist. Throughout the as yet free world the Christian Church is the strongest bulwark against Communism both on the national level and in the lives of most individuals. The persecution of the church in Soviet Russia and her satellites shows no less clearly an absolute antithesis between Communism and Christianity, hence the agnostic who desires a basis both rational and inspiring for his sense of the dignity and worth of the human spirit may hopefully be invited to reconsider Christianity as a philosophy and a way of living.

But the fact that Communists hate both democracy and Christianity does not prove that Christianity is true nor that all Americnas should be Christians. It merely suggests that Christianity deserves to be thought about. Having thought about it, the inquirer should be perfectly free to decide that an enlightend secular humanism provides a surer way of defending himself against one oppression without subjecting himself to another. The Christian may present a good deal of historical evidence to show that humanism does not stay enlightened very long without the aid of supernaturalistic religion, but if this argument is rejected there is nothing further to be said. The slightest hint of coercive pressure in the supposed best interest of society would offend not only the spirit of the Constitution but the spirit of true religion. During the nineteenth century, the unwillingness of most Christians to let other people think and act as they pleased did far more than "science" to alienate intelligent and courageous men from organized religion.

In a period of crisis, the temptation to strengthen religion by applying non-religious pressures is one of the Devil's most ingenious and complicated snares. He used it with immense success after the French Revolution, when he deviatlized a potentially whole some reaction against deism and atheism by scaring the European nation into thinking of Christianity primarily as a socio-political obligation rather than as a religion. He is now reviving the trick in circumstances which make it especially hard to remember that the only respectable reason for professing religion is the conviction that it is true—not expedient or even beneficial, but true. You can persuade a man to come to church on clear Sundays because it "pays off." It is good for his morale, good for his business and social contacts, good for his reputation as an adherent of the "American way of life"—good for all sorts of things that have nothing to do with the need of union with Almighty God. You do not thereby make him either a good Christian or a good American. Good Americans are perfectly free to stay at home or go to church. If they happen also to be good Christians or good Jews, they go to church or synagogue solely to worship the God in whom they believe.

Doubtless non-spiritual factors have been present throughout the religious revival of the past few decades. The danger is that the present crisis will so greatly enhance the potency of those factors that the genuinely religious motivation which has also been at work in the movement will be drowned in a flood of pious McCarthyism. Of course there is no evidence whatever that the passion for human liberty burns more ardently among Christians than among secularists. The honest Christian must admit, indeed, that there is an embarrassingly large amount of evidence to the contrary. Probably we need not fear that failure to be "religious" will ever be accepted in this country as sufficient proof of a citizen's disloyalty, but I have met persons recently who use "atheist" and "Communist" as interchangeable terms. And although such mental defectives are exceptional, many sane people already regard the churchgoer as at least a better security risk than the non-churchgoer.

This profoundly un-American principle is subject to further refinements. Our patriotic pietists often apply the term "religion" to a vaguely sentimental humanitarianism, but sooner or later it becomes apparent that they identify this spiritually impotent but socially powerful nostrum with Christianity. Now, if Christianity however, hazily conceived, is the most American sort of religion, it follows that Christians are better Americans than Jews. More precise thinkers along these lines would gladly undertake to show not only that one sort of Christianity is more patriotic than another.

It is only quite recently that conservative politicians, business executives, and patriotic organizations have fully appreciated the usefulness of religion as a means of upholding their somewhat restricted conception of the "American way of life" against Communism. To qualify as allies in this cause, Christian clergymen must abandon their old subversive habit of condemning the inequities of capitalistic society. That the need for investigating their pinkness has greatly diminished is indicated by the story on the Evanston conference in the New York Times for August 29, 1954:

The World Council of Churches gave a clean bill of health here today to the "responsible" free enterprise system. It also called on its member bodies in 48 countries to take a "fresh" look at the "importance of relative freedom n enterprise" and a "relatively free-price system. Its announcement today was in sharp contrast to one it made six years ago at its founding assembly in Amsterdam. It then condemned both Communism and what it then described as "laissez-faire" capitalism.

Much can happen in six years. I have no doubt that the conscious motives of the men who drafted this statement were religious, and that the words "responsible" and "relative" mean something important both for Christianity and for democracy. What chiefly impresses me, however, is the almost uncanny convenience of this change of front. Just when those who oppose Communism almost wholly on economic grounds begin to feel the need of a little religious flavoring, those who oppose Communism on religious grounds discover that after all there is much to be said for free enterprise. In the light of such a rapprochement, what hard heart can resist the conclusion that Providence has been at work in Evanston? What loyal American can any longer refuse to be a Christian?

But the subject is too serious for sarcasm. Far from injuring the Reds, the pious McCarthyism of the "say your prayers and smash the Commies" campaign will benefit them by diminishing the authentically spiritual element in the twentieth century religious revival. Its coercive taint will make it more difficult than ever for intelligent freedom loving secularists to work their way back into the church.

Genuine Christians have genuinely Christian reasons for detesting Communism, but they have no right to insist that their feelings should be shared by the American people as a whole. We are not officially a Christian nation. A few vestigial remains of late eighteenth century rhetoric lend faint color to the theory that the United States is officially committed to some sort of theism. But belief in God is neither so ardent nor so widespread among us as to constitute a common basis for thought and action, and it cannot be made so by a publicity drive. God calls men to Him one by one. He cannot be hurried by any crisis; He is not to be made the tool of even the worthiest cause. If actual hostilities should break out, which God forbid, we Americans would be in a position to fight a humanly decent war, but certainly not a holy one. We are not holy enough for that.

It is of the very essence of the "American way of life" that no man must believev in God, that no man had better go to church or else. Denial of this freedom is not yet explicit in our society, but I fear that it may be implicit in the present trend of factitiously patriotic religiosity. The truly American objection to the state of religion behind the Iron curtain is not that Christians are persecuted there, but that Communism does not grant men the right to choose freely between belief and unbelief. On that issue all loyal Americans, believers and unbelievers, may indignantly unite; but they cannot do so without hypocrisy unless they maintain more jealously than ever their traditions of religious liberty and the separation of church and state. Those traditions are good for democracy, and they are better for religion than some Christians at present appear to realize.

Reaction Piece

On Mountains, Trees & People In The Autumn

David Mundy

So far this year nobody in this sheet has told the students they ought to get out in the Chapel Hill woods and glory in the autumn colors.

This and other collegiate newspapers almost invariably come out with a yellow-leaf editorial in the fall and a green-grass one in the spring.

And between seasons they print pieces about birds, mud, blossoms, squirrels, dogs, and if they have a Y-court without DDTed trash cans, bees.

I'm not going to tell anybody to go out into the woods and drink in the wonders of the phenomena of nature, because students in the past were more often offended than advised when somebody reminded them they should do so. I don't blame them.

Nevertheless, I will say that the woods are pretty. The scattered trees on campus are individually pretty, but I like the ones the wooded area in the triangle bounded by Woollen gym, the zoology building, and the infirmary.

I took the short cut through the woods to the infirmary the other day. On the way I met two med students in their white frocks, a student nurse, what looked like a grad student reading a book as he walked, and a nondescript student with the toe cout out of his shoe and a bandage showing through. I can figure them all but the grad student.

It's too bad we don't have any mountains around here. In the mountains you get more of a 3-D effect when you look at the scenery. The mountains in the Blue Ridge up in my northwest corner of the state aren't much when compared with those in West Virginia and with the Rockies.

But they're mountains and I like the trees there better than those here. Up there everything is built or plowed to fit the woods. Down here everything is plotted, charted, planned, and constructed. The weeds are cropped, shaped, fashioned, and decked with sundials, rock walls, bell towers and edifices representative of just about all of man's architectural inspiration.

Here the woods are made to fit us.

Up there if you see a squirrel, you stop and motion for everybody to be quiet. And everybody stands pointing at him until he sees you and runs away terrified to the top of a tall tree.

I've been squirrel hunting up there a couple of times, but I have yet to bag one. Usually you're lucky to see one to shoot at.

The best way is to go early on a cool October morning, walk quietly to a good spot in the woods, and wait for one to come along.

Tom Spain

It's not very often that Mel Powell comes back to the jazz world, and the occasions, though few, are always memorable. His reputation for being universally talented and highly imaginative has never been disputed, and his compositions, be they of the serious vein, or of the MISSION TO MOSCOW trend, never fail to do his creative ability justice. His brilliance was first noticed when he filled the enormous gap left by Teddy Wilson in the Goodman band in 1941. Then, though only in his teens, he proved himself more than adequate, composing, arranging, and providing outstanding solo ability, in addition to acting as a stabilizer for the big band. But education lured him from the already changing scene in modern swing, and he found himself studying music theory and composition at Yale. And finally, in his late twenties, he took a job teaching at a Long Island high school. Personal appearances and occasional one-niters make up his entire popular career, and it is with joy that we see his Carnegie Hall concert records being distributed by Columbia.

Carnegie Hall concerts seem to have a dynamic nature which is all their own. Performance seems to reach new highs there, perhaps because of the enthusiasm of the audience. The fervor and quick response of jazz-loving mobs have a definite inspirational effect on musicians who know their efforts are appreciated. There can be no better performance than that of great talent before a few thousand jazz-hungry fans.

The fans left Carnegie Hall in high spirits last April when Powell led a fine group through its paces for the benefit of the N.Y. Association for the Blind. One of those 'cast of thousands" jazz extravanganzas, the concert included Buck Clayton, Gene Krupa, Urbie Green, Vernon Brown, Jo Jones, only to name a few. Those present, though not recorded with the Powell group, included Billy Holiday, Errol Garner, and Gerry Mulligan.

I FOUND A NEW BABY is the opener, and the traditional Chicago favorite is tossed around happily in a 16-minute session that allows all involved to show their wares. Clayton leads the intro in his chiding, stacatto fashion and quickly turns it over to Powell for the first of the 31 solo choruses. Powell's foot-loose speed and off-color chords lend an air of gaity and controlled recklessnes for three choruses, before Ruby Braff takes a fast ride in front of an ensemble riff. Urbie Green's amazing trombone ability is touched with a breath of old Chicago, while Vernon Brown provides contrast with the progressive style in a more mellow mood. This contrast is something of a complete switch, as Green is famous for his modern work with Woody Herman and Count Basie, while Brown is definitely downtown dixieland favorite. The rendition of I FOUND A NEW BABY is highlighted by a Powell and rhythm section run on three choruses towards the final wind-up by the entire ensemble.

LIGHTHOUSE BLUES, written for the Blind Association by Powell, is another one of those classic sessions. Entirely improvised, the group follows Powell off on a jump jaunt in the twelve-bar blues number. Thorough and solid rhythm, provided by Jones, Milton Hinton on bass, and Steve Jordan, guitar, is the backbone of LIGHTHOUSE BLUES. Built around the gentle, yet solid rock of such a fine section, any blues number could approach immortality. Powell's composition here contains some 41 choruses, many of which are backed up by quiet riffs, and the pensive solos give an air of mutual understanding and cooperation among the members of the group. The methodical beat allows for an occasional racy tilt, which forms a pleasant contrast within. Noteable solos are those of Green and Powell, with Clayton and Lem Davis adding first class blues tones.

The Gene Krupa Trio sits in on the final rendition. And what could be better for Powell and Krupa than AFTER YOU'VE GONE? Like old friends meeting in a gin mill, they open up together with wonderful exhuberance remeniscent of the Goodman Sextet. A humorous twist can be heard as Krupa shouts to Powell to "Come on with it." Tony Scott follows Powell's three choruses with a clarinet solo that is directly imitative of the Goodman style, yet lacking the drive and leadership of the man who made AFTER YOU'VE GONE. The ensemble hops along with the double drumming of Jones and Krupa, and finally, as the end is in sight, a thunderous duet emerges, whipping the wild crowd into a well-earned frenzy. AFTER YOU'VE GONE includes several styles and types, but the beauty of the piece is found in the happy, honest jam session attitude of the musicians.

JAM SESSION AT CARNEGIE HALL, the collection's title, is just what it says. An honest session is something to rave about especially under these circumstances.

Quote, Uuquote

Robert Hutchins, who was president of the University of Chicago in 1939 when it dropped football, made some rather pertinent comments on college football in Sports Illustrated recently.

It is his opinion that students, educators, and alumni have no real idea of what a university is. They are only able to grasp the figures on a scoreboard.

Once this confusion has hold of the alumni then it snowballs. Colleges playing big-time schedules must have money to obtain winning teams. This money, of necessity, must come from wealthy alumni and state legislatures.

These persons then demand winning football teams. To get winning teams, according to Hutchins, "colleges must violate the rules they themselves have made."

The only real hope lies in the progress of professional football. Eventually the fans will not pay enough money to keep big-time football going. At this point, students will be allowed to play just for the sport of the game.

And in time, the alumni will realize that this is the natural American thing to do.

Then, and only then, will higher education be disentangled from sport—so speaks Robert Hutchins.

College Gridiron Season Enters Period Of Traditional Tilts

Duke Renews Old Rivalry In Clash With Tech Today

June is the month of roses and by the same token the final four weeks of the college football season is the period of traditional games.

After six weeks of warmups of varying degrees, the collegians now turn to their "relatives" or long-time enemies. One of the family brawls will occupy your TV screen Saturday afternoon with winless Pennsylvania host to Penn State in a rivalry that started a half-century ago.

Ohio State, voted the country's best, has a venerable opponent in Northwestern and a sixth straight victory for the Buckeyes would keep them Rose Bowl bound. It is the same with Michigan, another team seeking the Big 10 bowl designation. The Wolverines meet Indiana on their Ann Arbor playgrounds.

The Pacific Coast candidates for the Jan. 1 War of the Roses also will be occupied with conference contests. Southern California needs Oregon State's scalp to stay in the running. UCLA, ineligible to return to the Pasadena bowl this year, turns loose its scoring machine against California. In their last two games, both conference affairs, the Uclans piled up 133 points to none.

Flu Means Trouble

There's no lengthy tradition in the meeting between Oklahoma and Colorado but the young series has been a bruiser. The Sooners, who won in 43 consecutive Big Seven games, were tied by the Buffaloes two years ago and won last year by only a touchdown. A two man flu epidemic, involving quarterback Jim Harris and end Carl Allison, is plaguing the Sooners.

The Texas tradition of knocking off the favorite gets a chance for a good workout in the Lone Star State with all-winning Arkansas the guest of Texas A & M, Texas' disciplined squad to Southern Methodist and Baylor at Texas Christian. Nine players on the Texas Longhorn squad were moved from the athletic dormitory this week for misconduct.

Alabama - Georgia

There will be a lost of magnolia-draped tradition on display, too. Alabama, still shuddering from the 12-7 setback it suffered a week ago from Mississippi State, has a once-beaten Georgia team as its guest. Tulane is at Auburn and Mississippi at Louisana State in other Southeastern Conference games.

The Southern Conference offers William and Mary at Virginia Tech and a rugged non-conference struggle in which unbeaten West Virginia tries to increase its national recognition at the expense of a thrice-beaten Pittsburgh team.

Maryland, owner of a winning tradition until this season, goes against South Carolina with a possible Orange Bowl appearance at stake. Duke, another member of the Atlantic Coast Conference and also an Orange Bowl candidate, is busy with Georgia Tech. Tech Coach Bobby Dodd on Thursday suspended star halfback Billy Teas and four others for breaking the team curfew.

There's tradition in the East as well. Cornell visits battered Columbia. Dick Carr, only player on a major team to play every second of every game last year, gets back into the Lion lineup in the quarterback clot. Yale and Dartmouth, who have put on some scoring blizzards in the past, go at it again in the New Haven bowl and at Baltimore the Navy followers are hoping that the tradition of Notre Dame victories over the Midshipmen has come to an end.

SAE And DKE Win Grid Tilts

SAE got back into the winning column yesterday by defeating Tau Epsilon Phi, 20-0. SAE has lost only one game this season and that was a 22-0 loss to DKE Wednesday. SAE was out to finish the season with a win and TEP couldn't stop them.

Scoring: SAE—TD's, Sammie Reeves, Ned Tompkins, Ned Hardison.

PAT, John Burress, Pete Williams.

The DKE's maintained their unblemished record with a 19-0 win over Phi Kappa Sigma. The game was expected to be much closer but DKE, showing a fine piece of coaching work, was too much for the Phi Kaps.

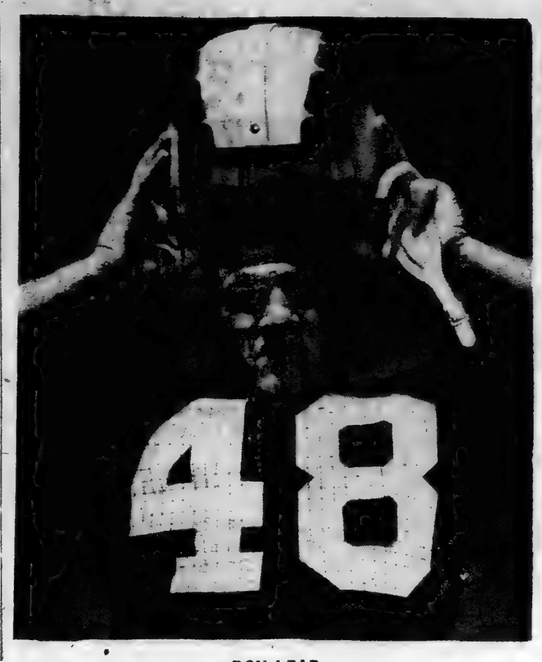
Scoring: DKE—TD's, Raugh, 2, Rand. PAT, Shores.



Beta Theta Pi played the best game of the day with Kappa Sigma. The winner was to go into the playoffs and it was a hard fought game with both teams going all out. Each side repeatedly drove down to scoring position and then the other side would hold tight. The Betas managed to score twice in the second half to give them the game by the score of 13-7.

Kappa Sigma	0	7	7
Beta Theta Pi	0	13	13

Scoring: Beta Theta Pi: Touchdowns, Charles Froelich, Tommy Walker.

PAT's Thorne Walker. Kappa Sigma: Cunningham, PAT, Zachary.

The playoffs will begin sometime next week.

DON LEAR

NO. 2 FULLBACK—Don Lear won't be in the Tar Heels' starting line-up today in Knoxville when Carolina meets Tennessee, but the big sophomore is a cinch to see plenty of action. He's a member of Coach George Barclay's second "first team" at fullback, and this is the team which scored both touchdowns against Wake Forest, thanks to Ed Sutton. Game time today is 2 o'clock.

Tar Heel Distance Men To Encounter Tennessee Today

Carolina's cross-country sprinters invade Tennessee today for a meet with the Volunteer runners. The meet is a morning affair, preceding the Tar Heel-Vol football encounter.

The Tar Heels are hopeful of gaining their third win of the 1954 season, rising above the .500 percentage mark. Carolina has defeated Virginia and Richmond, while losing meets to N. C. State, last year's ACC champions, and Maryland.

Tar Heel hopes are placed in star performers Jim Beatty and Bob Barden. Beatty, who set a new Carolina record for the four-mile distance in last Saturday's three-way meet with Maryland and Wake Forest, is expected to continue his winning ways against the Volunteers. Jim has yet to lose a meet as a varsity runner.

Barden, whose record of 20:05 against these same Volunteers last year was eclipsed by Beatty's 19:42 performance, is also counted upon to finish in the top five. Expected to be in the top ten are co-captains Tony Houghton and Don Wright.

Grantland Rice Award Presented By Scribes

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (AP)—An annual award to sports writers in memory of Grantland Rice, following the lines of the Pulitzer prizes, has been set up by the sportsmanship brotherhood.

The award will go to the active sports writer who each year in his writing most nearly approaches the Rice tradition. It will be given on Nov. 1, the anniversary of Rice's birth.

Duke And Tech At 2 O'Clock

Durham, N. C., Oct. 29 (AP)—Duke's 16th ranked football Blue Devils meet a Georgia Tech team that has been riddled by dismissals and injuries here tomorrow.

Coach Bobby Dodd of Tech dropped five players from the squad yesterday for what he termed violation of curfew rules. Heading the list of players cut were halfback Billy Teas, the team's rushing leader, and Jake Shoemaker, a guard-tackle. Both played prominent roles in Tech's 13-10 victory over Duke last year. Teas raced 48 yards with a punt in the closing minutes for the winning touchdown. Shoemaker was outstanding on defense.

In addition, Larry Morris, Tech's All-America center last year, is out with a knee injury received in last week's loss to Kentucky.

Jimmy Thompson, a 5-6, 154 pounder who has been Teas' No. 1 reliever this season, probably will start at right halfback. Thomson, in 17 carries, is averaging 13.8 yards. Teas had averaged 7.9 for 45 attempts.

Georgia Tech has a 4-2 record against Duke's 3-1-1 Duke leads, 12-8, with one tie in the series which has produced some of the most exciting contests in Blue Devli football history.

A crowd of about 30,000 is expected for the 2 p. m. EST kickoff.

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 29 (AP)—Evenly matched Clemson and Wake Forest meet here tomorrow in a football game that promises more excitement than their lowly rank in the Atlantic Coast Conference indicates.

Their series has produced some spectacular offensive displays in the past. Clemson holds an 11-8 lead, having won the last three games.

Clemson lost to South Carolina, 13-8, last week in its only conference start. Wake Forest is 1-1-1 in the circuit and 2-2-1 overall against Clemson's 2-3.

Clemson, one of the nation's leaders on total and rushing defense, is seventh in the eight-member conference in pass defense. Wake Forest will try to exploit this weakness by using the arm of quarterback Nick Consoles, No. 2 passer in the conference. Joe White, a Charlottean who last year reached his peak with a brilliant passing display here as Wake Forest upset South Carolina, is also around for some strategic maneuvers if Coach Tom Rogers so desires. On the receiving end will be Captain Ed Stowers, Conference pass catching leader.

Quarterback Don King of Clemson, who marks his 21st birthday tomorrow, is the No. 3 passer in the conference and the spark that makes the Tigers go.

Kickoff time is 2 p. m. EST.

We were there ...and won!

The names of America's Olympic greats are easily remembered. Because the men and women we have sent to past Olympic Games have always given us something to remember them by. Jesse Owen's four gold medals at Berlin . . . Bob Mathias' decathalon record at Helsinki . . . Andrea Mead Lawrence's historic "double" in women's skiing. In recalling past triumphs we can all be reminded of a simple fact about any U. S. Olympic victory; we won because we were there, and . . .

Jesse Owens

We must be there . . . To Win!

In 1956 America will again take the field in Melbourne, Australia against the world's best. Some of these nations will be very tough to beat. For in an effort to insure victory, many countries, especially those behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains, have entered "government-subsidized" teams. Whether these nations are defeated depends in large part upon you—and every American who would rather see the Stars and Stripes hoisted above the victor's stand. You can count on the men and women we send to Melbourne to perform brilliantly—if they are there. But it takes money to get them there. Which is why LIFE is joining with the Olympic Committee to urge you to . . .

A bill establishing a Legislature Complaint Board was introduced by Jim Turner (SP) for the purpose of hearing and reporting to the Legislature the opinions and complaints of the campus.

"Resolutions of the student Legislature, where matters beyond its jurisdiction have been involved, have on repeated occasions failed to meet fruition," states Charlie Dean (SP) in his bill establishing a Student Welfare Board to negotiate with the Administration, when such action is advisable.

Bobbie Walker (UP) introduced a resolution "to place a traffic light at the intersection of Raleigh St. and Raleigh Road. Vehicles used this intersection during one hour this week.

A resolution commending the Interdormitory Council and suggesting that the student Legislature work with the IDC to solve the lack of social and recreational facilities on compus, by a Social Activities Commission, was introduced by Student Party chairman, Joel Fleishman.

Norwood Bryon (SP) introduced a resolution instructing the Legislative-Executive Problems Study Commission to initiate a major study of the Legislative and Executive branches of student government. The reasoning for the bill said that "there has been concern of late regarding the accuracy of the Student Constitution after having been amended many times since 1947; and there exists no accurate master Student Constitution which is brought up to date after each amendment is passed." The resolution says the only way order can be restored is through this commission.

Rowell Talks On Flavians

By J. D. McRORIE

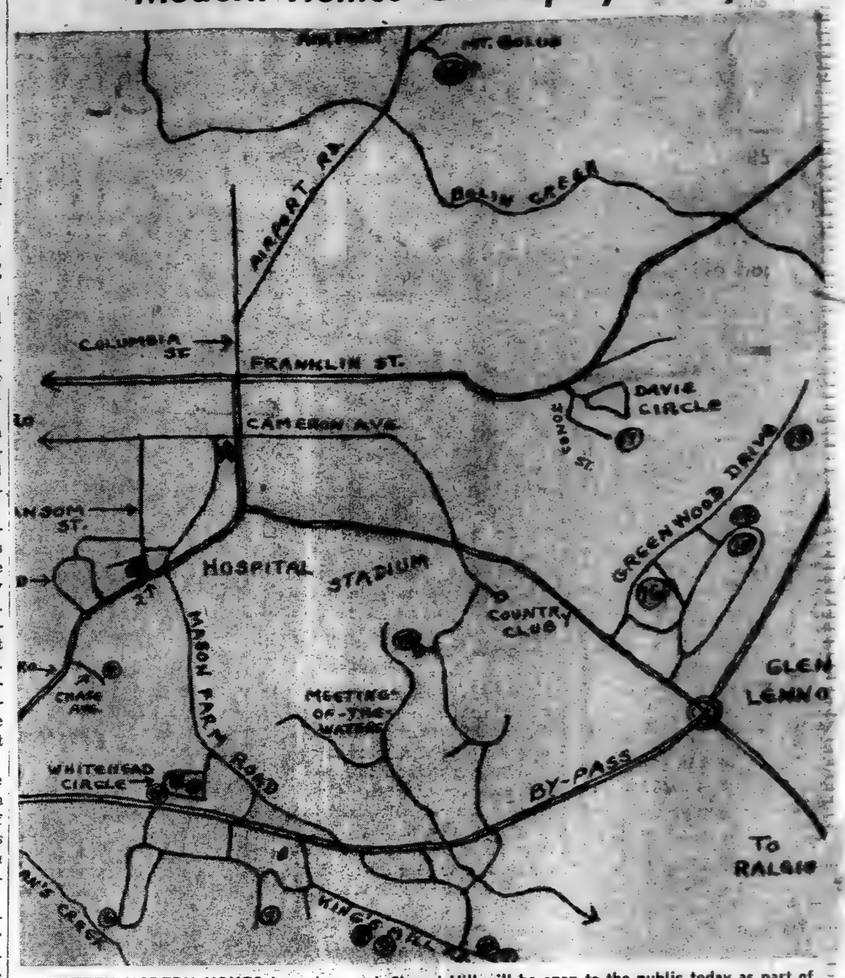
Henry T. Rowell, professor of classics at Johns Hopkins University and president of the Archaeological Institute of America, delivered an illustrated lecture, entitled "Rome of the Flavians," last night in Carroll Hall.

The lecture chiefly centered around the buildings, sculpture and paintings that were created in ancient Rome under the Flavian emperors between 70 and 96 A.D.

The Flavia regime began when Roman troops proclaimed Vespasian emperor when he moved against Italy then held by Betellaus.

There are sufficient remains today of the engineering projects that were once the glory of Rome to tell a nearly complete story of Roman culture and mythology.

The slides included picture diagrams of the Imperial Fora. It was clearly pointed out by Dr. Rowell the use of each of the sections of the Fora. After the diagram of the Fora the audience was shown the remains of it as it is today.



Other slides gave the audience views of tombstones that were in use in the Flavian period of Rome. One of the two slides shown on tombstones was of a Greek poet that had won runner-up prize in a poetry contest.

The tomb inscription in colloquial Flavian, interpreted for the audience by Dr. Rowell, lamented the early death of the boy. He had died when he was 11 years old. The stone was etched with a picture of the person.

The other slide showing a tombstone of one of less wealth was of a shoemaker. It also included a carved picture of the deceased. There was a shoe last to indicate his trade.

In World War II, Dr. Rowell entered Rome on the first day with the Rome Area Command. He was with the Chief Education Allied Control Commission and his main job was the rehabilitation and restoration of educational institutions.

26 Freshmen Taking Part In Advanced Class Program

By FRED POWLEDGE
Daily Tar Heel Managing Editor

Twenty-six University freshmen are enrolled in a new "college within a college" here—a special program designed for stimulating "high scholarship" in the first-year group.

Announcement came yesterday through M. A. Hill Jr., associate dean of the General College.

Hill said four University instructors were teaching the freshmen courses in mathematics, philosophy, social science and English. He named Professors E. A. Cameron of the Mathematics Dept., Everett Hall of the Philosophy Dept., James E. King Jr. of the Social Science Dept. and William S. Wells of the English Dept. as the instructors.

Selected in Summer

The 26 freshmen were selected from approximately 50 during the summer. Their names were picked from applications to the University, with attention being paid to high school officials' comments and their grades. They came to Chapel Hill in the summer months and were given aptitude tests. The 50 were cut to 26, and the 26 placed in special classes.

Special Classes

The 26 started their classes this semester. According to Assistant Dean Hill, the freshmen's four instructors visit each other's classes often.

Chancellor Robert B. House, commenting on the program, termed it a "college within a college."

Hill said the special course originated when the four instructors got together and decided "that if they could get a selected group of boys together and keep them together for four courses they might stimulate high scholarship among the group." He said the four professors, who were picked for their interest in freshmen, were "very wel pleased" with the program so far.

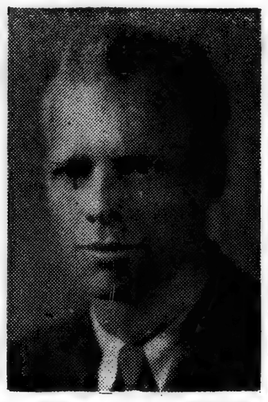
Hill added that "In this office (the General College) we are always trying to see how we can help the student go forward academically."

Professor's Opinion

Prof. Wells, from Bingham hall, depicted his special course as being similar to regular English 2 "inasmuch as each of the students has a theme a week to do," but he added, "we have our own program," including study of essays, short stories and modern poetry. He said his class of freshmen has "more reading in literature than we do in English 2."

Prof. Wells described his class as a "fine bunch of boys. I consider myself lucky to have the class," he said.

The special program, he said, "is as much a help to us who are teaching as it is to the boys."



The Freshmen

The freshmen who are enrolled in the special course, according to a list released yesterday from the Admissions Office, are as follows:

Charles Hall Ashford Jr., New Bern; William Stuart Bost Jr., Greenville; Robert Carl Britt, Lum-

IDC & WRC Schedule List Of Dorm Parties

The Interdormitory Council and the Women's Residence Council have cooperated in setting up a schedule of parties to be held by the men's dorms and sponsored by the IDC for different girls' dorms and sororities on campus, according to spokesmen for the groups.

Ram's Back & Alexander's Got Him

The Ram is back again, this time in the form of a weekly newspaper, put out by the students of Alexander Dorm.

"The Ram" is printed on a standard-size mimeographed sheet on both sides with a Gothic-lettered title on the top of the front page, printed in dark blue characters. The rest of the paper, however, is printed in regular black ink.

Editor of the paper is Richard Thiele, also Daily Tar Heel newswriter. The Ram's staff includes Joe Wimberley, George North, Charles Cook and Steve Leiper. Bill Farrell is the artist and cartoonist for the paper, which comes out weekly, on Friday.

The party will nominate for Town Men's Legislative Districts 1, 11, 111, Town Women's Legislative District, the officers of the junior class and the secretary of the freshman class.

In its meeting last Monday night, the SP heard a short speech by Gene Cook, past chairman, and veteran party leader, and also closed nominations for dorm men's districts and dorm women's districts.

Vols Down UNC 26-20 In Wild, Free-Scoring Game

'The Bomb' Breaks Tar Heel Line With Touchdown Sprints

By FRED BABSON
DTH Sports Editor

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 30—Vol Fullback Tom Tracy struck twice like lightning here today with sudden touchdown scampers of 43 and 71 yards, the last of which provided the margin of victory as revived Tennessee outscored an otherwise superior North Carolina team, 26-20. Only 14,500 fans paid to see the thrilling contest, highlighted by scoring in all periods, as Carolina doggedly refused to be routed, despite the devastating suddenness of the Tennessee scoring strikes.

Tailback Bobby Brengle conformed to the Vol scoring pattern with an 80-yard paydirt sprint in the second quarter. The other tally by the victors was in the form of a 16-yard pass from Tailback Cloar to Halfback Sweeney.

In the face of defeat, Tar Heel Halfback Ken Keller and Quarterback Albert Long played brilliantly. Keller, hampered all year by injuries, operated under a full head of steam for the first time this season. The shifty Pennsylvanian made an amazing catch of Long's 32-yard aerial in the second quarter for Carolina's first touchdown. Two Tennessee defenders were left grabbing air, as Keller, on the dead run, went up between them and snatched the oval from their grasps. Keller scored North Carolina's second touchdown with a nine-yard scamper around right end, culminating an 83-yard drive which he initiated with a pass interception.

Long, second-string signal-caller, came into his own, establishing himself as a definite passing threat with two perfect paydirt pitches. The slender Durhamite threaded the needle on both occasions, his first being for 32 yards to Keller, and the second for 20 yards to end Larry Muschamp, who was well-covered on the play and made a spectacular catch before going out of bounds just as he crossed the goal line

Carolina's second team stole the spotlight from the starting team. All of the Tennessee scores were made against Coach George Barclay's No. 1 eleven, while all the Tar Heels' tallies were executed by the No. 2 aggregation.

Keller carried ten times for 64 yards to pace Carolina. Tracy carried 14 times for a phenomenal 192 yards to pace Tennessee. Halfback Connie Gravitte picked up 47 yards in nine tries, and his understudy, sophomore Ed Sutton, made 38 yards in eight trips. Sutton played an outstanding defensive game, along with guards George Foti and Bill Koman. Marshall Newman, fullback, received a serious knee injury and may be out for awhile. Don Lear, Newman's substitute, shone brightly on defense. He carried the ball once, picking up six yards in the Tar Heels' last touchdown drive.

Student Spirit In Knoxville Was 'Credit'

By BOB EBERLE

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 30—Along with the rain and cold, the first wave of Carolina students arrived in Knoxville Friday night.

To all outward appearances the infiltration of Carolina students was unnoticable but as game time approached the Tar Heel spirit gained momentum. Though the number of students interested enough to make the journey was small, their spirit was a credit to the University.

During the pre-game activities the Tennessee band, along with the eight shapely majorettes, aided in the presentation of the Air Force ROTC sponsors with the formation of the letters, R—O—T—C.

At half time the Tennessee band staged its initial costume performance of the season. The program was a "Western Revue" with the band dressed in western outfits. The band marched on the field playing, "I'm an Old Cowhand," followed by the forming of a boot and the playing of "Spurs that Jingle, Jangle, Jingle." Next, the band formed a covered wagon and played "Wagon Wheels," followed by the formation of a rocking horse that rocked to the tune of the "Theme from the William Tell Overture."

Not all of the students who went to the game had an easy time of it. One UNC student, George Johnson, ran into ice on Newfound Gap and had to take a detour that brought him into Knoxville 11 hours after he left Chapel Hill. Other students were slowed to a walk as rain made mountain travel slow and hazardous.

After the game, students made their way to various parties as rain dampened the streets but not the spirits. This morning the Tar Heel students started the long trek home.

AF Officials Will Visit Campus Soon

Officials from Headquarters AFROTC in Montgomery, Alabama, will visit the UNC air science unit this week, it was announced by Colonel George J. Smith, Professor of Air Science, yesterday.

Brigadier General M. K. Deichelman, Headquarters Commandent, will inspect the AF unit Friday and Saturday, Nov. 5 and 6.

New Deadline

The Daily Tar Heel will have a new news deadline starting tomorrow.

Deadline for non-staff contributions will be 3:30 on week day afternoons, and 11 o'clock on Saturday mornings.

Managing Editor Fred Powledge, in announcing the change, noted that it would facilitate publication and help toward an earlier newspaper for the students each morning.

Job Hunting? See Library

By MAY DAVIS HILL
General College Librarian

If you're hoping to hold down a good job when you leave college, the literature about jobs in the General College Library is something you ought to see.

Found there, on the shelves right under the magazines and The New York Times, are books and pamphlets on various types of jobs (if you're still at the selecting stage) together with others on how to land a job and how to get along with your boss and fellow workers.

The information in the books varies from statements like "Every office is a hotbed of romance . . .," in Maule's "Men Wanted," to the list of duties of a die designer in "New Careers in Industry" by Amiss and Sherman.

MRS. MAY DAVIS HILL, who wrote a story on job selection for today's Daily Tar Heel, is shown above advising UNC sophomore Jim Harrison on books he can read for occupational guidance.

If you've decided on a specific career, there is material with tips on preparing for the particular job you have in mind. Over 200 Career Pamphlets published by the Chicago Institute for Research give you information on how to prepare for that many different jobs. Besides descriptions of the usual types of professional and industrial careers, there are separate works on careers in private business, such as radio music store operation as a career or the used car business as a career. Careers with the armed forces, in government work and the Secret Service are described. Number 66, for instance, tells about an interesting job: Commercial and Trade Association Secretaryship as a career.

Investigate Leeming's "Jobs That Take You Places," too. You will find chapters on overseas educational and welfare work, on jobs with oil companies, diplomatic work abroad, jobs for scientists, jobs in aviation and the Merchant Marine and special jobs abroad for girls. If working in the tropics is your dish, there is a chapter on that, too.

The Library maintains its collection of occupational literature in connection with the program of the University's Placement Service. When you're ready to start job hunting, the Placement Service is the place to go. Joe Galloway, its director, recommends that seniors and graduate students register there at the beginning of their final year. There is a roomful of ideal material and

New Directions For The University

When a University such as ours stands at one stage in its progress, it obviously must do one of three things: Go up, remain inert and stationary, or go down.

Certainly, if we aim for progress at all, there is but one of these paths to take. The others lead respectively to stagnation and mediocrity. It is with this upward aim in mind that we look with such keen favor on one of our school's lately-announced experimental projects. Chancellor House has announced a galvanized program for the favor of "brilliance" on our campus.

Four distinguished teachers at the University are teaching a group of 26 superior freshmen in sections of English, math, social science and philosophy.

Since we are venturing to take this long-needed step, we should soon know how valid are the words of those critics who say our schools are geared too much to the pace of the average and mediocre student. We have never set too much store, ourselves, by the theory that excellence is badly stymied by the average school pace. For excellence carries with it that inner drive and motivvation, that willingness to shed perspiration, that is an essential part of genius. In spite of what obstacles lie in its path, inborn or acquired talent has been able to move more or less at its own clip. To use a tired but applicable phrase, where there's a will, there's a way.

But certainly, the primary aim of a school is excellence and we tend to lose sight of that fact. Now, through this welcome program for the catalization of brilliance, we shall see accelleration accellerated.

We are glad for the chosen 26, whoever they may be. They are doubly sure to learn something, and perhaps there is a lesson in the experiment for our waiting (and, we hope, watching) educational philosophy.

BRAT's Back

The history of BRAT on this campus, like the history of any avant-garde movement has been full of turbulence and discord. The unitiated laughed, the Puritanical sneered, the anti-Nodal protested when BRAT made its appearance last year. An outsider, who invaded the ranks of BRAT, so subverted the movement's original intent that an anti-art BRAT display was removed by the police from the window of one of the town's cafes with threats of dire handling if the cafe owner didn't stick with more down-to-earth forms for his future window displays.

Such, as we say, has been the case with all cults of any importance from the dawn of time. Finally, last spring, BRAT cancelled its exhibitions, removed its posters from their places of prominence on the campus, and retreated to the Caldwell Hall roof (much as the early Christians retreated to the Roman catacombs), there to carry on the movement in dignified aloofness. Fol all intents and purposes, BRAT had disappeared from Carolina.

But now, Bill Watt, co-creator of BRAT, announces: "Art being dead, BRAT has risen from the ashes to render for all time that necessary Tug at the Heartstrings." No one who saw the BRAT exhibition in Graham Memorial last year (titles: "What really happened on Errol Flynn's yacht," "Mighty, Mighty White," "They Martyred Savanarola: Snap Crackle Pop") can fail to appreciate the mighty significance of that announcement.

What's more, we understand there's a moral tone to the new BRAT. There are oil paintings and a mural titled, "Little Did I Reck," "Can't Say You Weren't Told," and "Saving For The Day."

The renaissance, in short, is upon us. It will give the campus moral sustenance and food for thought and, as always, be good for laughs.

We can but welcome BRAT back.

Hemingway Notions About Honor, Mercy

Louis Kraar

HE WRITES of death, lust, and fighting. But always there is honor. And it is important to him.

As news of Ernest Hemingway's Nobel Prize came in, I turned to some of his things that I have read. And they all spoke of honor, perhaps the same kind of honor that student leaders at Carolina think about when they talk about an "honor system."

Critic Robert Penn Warren says of the Hemingway theme, "The typical character faces defeat or death. But out of defeat or death the character usually manages to salvage something. And here we discover Hemingway's special interest in such situations and such characters. His heros are not defeated except on their own terms. . . . When they confront defeat they realize that the stance they take, the stoic endurance, the stiff upper lip mean a kind of victory."

Warren concludes, "They (Hemingway characters) represent some notion of a code, some notion of honor, that makes a man a man, and that distinguishes him from people who merely follow their random impulses and who are, by consequence, 'messy.'"

STUDENT LEADERS concern themselves these days with the problem of those "who merely follow their random impulses," and they talk about honor, the need for it and the lack of it.

One student, David Reid, thinks that honor involves an element of mercy. And if one becomes "messy" and forgets or losses his honor by copying a quiz or stealing, he should be given a second chance.

Hemingway characters usually don't have second chances, and their creator seems to bemoan that fact in depicting them. Hemingway seems to say that a second chance would be a just thing, but life just doesn't allow it.

But isn't college life sort of an incubator stage of life?

It would seem that in this world of ivy-covered buildings, idealism, and learning to play the game well that the second chance is necessary. At least there's room for it.

In "A Farewell To Arms," Frederick leaves the Italian army and the World War to make a seperate peace with himself by living with and loving Catherine, a nurse.

For a time Frederick finds peace. Then Catherine has a child and it dies. Frederick thinks to himself:

"Now Catherine would die. That was what you did. You died. You did not know what it was about. You never had time to learn. They threw you in and told you the rules and the first time they caught you off base they killed you.... You could count on that. Stay around and they would kill you."

PERHAPS WE'RE throwing students into the game, telling them the rules and "killing" them the first time they step off base.

It has become almost an axiom that if you cheat, you'll be kicked out of school. This is sure academic death for many in a life that—on this level—has room for second chances.

A student standing before the courts of honor on this campus today is much like a Hemingway character. He knows his fate. He knows he stepped off base. It's just a matter of accepting his fate like a man.

He can have little hope for a second chance if he admits his mistake. The student must pack his things, leave Carolina. Later he may return, but he may not. Meantime the draft board, harrassed parents and all the other shames of adolescent life are upon him.

In short, it's hell.

Why? Because we've forgotten the second chance.

By Nancy Hale in The New Yorker

The Readville Stars

(A newcomer to the Daily Tar Heel's literary page, Nancy Hale, now a transplanted resident of North Carolina, living in a town tucked away in the Blue Ridge, is an established short-story writer and novelist. The grand-daughter of Edward Everett Hale, of "Man Without A Country" fame, she was born in Boston. She is the author of "Never Any More" and "Prodigal Women" and had short-stories in Harper's Bazaar, The New Yorker, and several anthologies. In the following sketch, she has found the "Readville Stars"—even in North Carolina.—Editor)

Of the house where we lived until I was four I can remember only certain effects of light, but I can remember it very well in terms of where the light came in. It is as if those infant years were lived in a dark box with holes cut in it; the holes, the arrangement of the holes, what I saw outside the holes are all that remains.

For example, I can remember my grandfather, who died when I was not quite 3, as an immense shape filling the oblong of the front door. I am part way down a flight of stairs; my mother stands at the bottom opening the door, but we are shadowy and I feel rather than see us. What I am looking at is that huge silhouette—he was six feet four—against the outdoor sunshine of the porch, the path, the garden.

It is the same with my nursery. I lie in my crib in the left-hand rear corner of the dark cube; there are two windows, rectangles of light that fades and is brought up again. One window is on the left-hand wall and the other is straight ahead of me. Somebody comes and picks me up in his arms and carries me to the left-hand window. Is it my father?

My father was a witty man, with his own own sense of humor. Years later, at the end of the First World War, we watched the victory march of the Yankee Division from the windows of an apartment at the corner of Beacon Street and Charles, where the parade was to start. A good many people were invited to sit by these windows, and I think I was the only child. As the parade began, the thrilling moment when General Edwards' horse stepped proudly forward across the line in front of the orderly ranks of the troops, a young mother who was one of our company began to berate herself for not having brought her six-months-old baby, so that she could hold him up to the unforgettable sight.

"He's too young to remember it," someone consoled her.

"But I could have told him later, 'You saw was most gratifying. So that today, far from being depressed, I feel just fine, in the swim, definitely set up. Almost, I might say, excited. the parade of the returning Yankee Division,'" she insisted.

"Never mind," my father said. "You can tell him he saw it anyway."

My father used to pick me up from my crib in that dim, forgotten room and carry me to the left-hand window. It is dark outside, but not the darkness of indoors—a luminous dark. Far away across the fields shine hundreds of lights, white and twinkling and incandescent. "Look," my father says. "See the stars."

Only in point of fact, they were not the stars. I am sure that he must have sometimes shown me the real stars in the sky, but it was a family joke as I grew up that, held in my father's arms at the window looking east, I had pointed to the lights of Readville, a nearby slummy mill town, and said, in baby talk, "Stars." He had preferred not to contradict me, and had continued to call my attention on other nights to these other stars. "The Readville Stars"—it was a family by-word. (When I was sixteen and went to stay at a New York hotel with my mother, she walked over to the window the night we arrived and stood looking down the length of Park Avenue. "What are you looking at?" I asked as I unpacked my bag at the back of the room. "The Readville stars," she said. It means anything shining, exciting, glamorous.)

Then I was four, and we moved to another house. I remember the first night there. I am eating my supper at the child-size table, in my new nursery; there is a piece of clean white oilcloth tacked over the black tabletop, making it quite new. My new wallpaper is blue, with little white lozenges in a patter. Beside me in the wall is something I have never seen before—a black iron grillwork through which comes heat. It is a register. It is as though in that move from one house to another, in one day, the focus had shifted entirely. I am looking at the inside of my room for the first time. It is as if the lights had gone on, inside the house.

I grew up and left home and went to work. In my early twenties, I went to Italy for a time. It was the era of Mussolini. His stencilled silhouette, that jowly profil perdu, was on every hoarding, every stucco wall. But of politics I knew nothing and cared less, and I had been given a black silk shirt by a commendatore beau, and gone dancing in Florence with a Fascist Milanese of exalted lineage, and walked along the Lung'Arno by moonlight with an admirer who, as he passed acquaintances, exchanged the straight-armed Roman salute. Giovanezza! I was full of giovanezza and excitement as I was driven in a hired Fiat from Siena to Rome. We passed rosy hill towns out of medieval woodcuts as we sped along, and white oxen with horns six feet from tip to tip. To one side, across the romantic countryside, a ruined castle would appear suddenly. My driver spoke no English, and I only the most rudimentary Italian, so we drove in silence. I was busy being in love with Italy. What a place! I planned how I would have a cap made of black felt, with a black silk tassel falling over one eye, to wear with my trophy black shirt. They would look very smart with a gray tailored suit.

The twilight deepened as we drove, and night fell, and then as we rounded a curve or mounted a rise, I saw stretched before us a million faraway lights, shining in the dusk.

Stars, I thought in my intoxication, the blaze of stars.

My driver turned his head slightly and spoke out of the corner of his mouth.

"E Roma," he said.

Now it is years later, and I live in a house that has no view at all, since our North Carolina town is set in a cup in the mountains, and all the stars that can be seen are the real stars directly overhead. However, the inside of my house is charming to look at—dark-green walls downstairs, with white woodwork, and upstairs, lighter colors. In one bedroom I have a blue paper that reminds me of the paper in my old nursery, in that second house—the first room I ever really looked at.

But it made me sad the other day when, as I was remembering those things, I recognized that youthful blindness that could be so dazzled by a black shirt, so light-struck by Rome at dusk. I was, in fact, depressed; it gave me an uneasy feeling that I might still, at my age, be thrilliing to some spectacle that was, really, only Readville stars. I must confess that I worried about it; I searched myself—oh, for several days.

But as one grows older, one learns not to allow oneself to become depressed. Activity is the cure. I invited several people to lunch, several people to dinner. The table looked lovely. I was quite overwhelmed by compliments on the food. Mrs. Harbridge asked me to head a committee to investigate local fiscal policies; Mr. Jamison asked me to be his assistant in the Blood Bank work. I had no idea people thought so highly of me . . .

Literary Lantern

A Book On 'The Terrible Miss Dove'

Walter Spearman

(Professor Walter Spearman's "Literary Lantern" appears in papers throughout the state each Sunday. A graduate of the University and former Daily Tar Heel editor, Prof. Spearman now teaches in the Journalism Department.—Editor.)

The townspeople of Liberty Hill could have set their watches by the regular appearance of "the terrible Miss Dove" on her way to school to teach geography. Most of them had also set their character on her rigid classroom standards through the year. On the day that Miss Dove had to be taken from her classroom to the hospital, all of Liberty Hill quivered in uncertainty. The members of one bridge club dissolved into tears and reminiscences. The Rotary Club drank a toast, took up a collection—and sat up straight in their chairs, as Miss Dove had taught them to do.

In her first novel, "Good Morning, Miss Dove," Frances Gray Patton has made her central character, an old maid school teacher, not only a brilliantly drawn individual but also an institution as firm as the Rock of Gibraltar, as universal as the colored chalk, the geography maps and the ruler in her classroom. (Dood, Mead and Co. 218 pp. $2.75).

FRANCES GRAY PATTON

During recent years Mrs. Patton's short stories in the New Yorker and other magazines and the collection called "The Finer Things of Life" have attracted many readers to this skillful and perceptive Durham author. Her present novel, which expands an earlier story in the Ladies Home Journal, has already been selected by two book clubs and sold to the movies. It is sure to enjoy an immediaate popularity with readers, who will recognize their own school days and be delighted with this stunning portrait of a very special school teacher.

Miss Dove "had a gift for molding the clay of children's minds laying upon them a hard protective glaze of discipline." She had no use for progressive education. When her children drew pictures of robins, they looked like robins—not like individual "impressions" of robins. They memorized the states of the Union. When they were thirsty they remembered that Miss Dove admired the camel's ability to go for days without water—and they did not ask to go to the water fountain. If they put pencils or a lock of hair in their mouths, they had to wash out the mouth with yellow laundry soap. If notebook pages were untidy, they had to copy them over. But they always knew what to expect. The children left Miss Dove's room "refreshed and restored, ready for fray or frolic. For within its walls they enjoyed what was allowed them nowhere else—a complete suspension of will."

As Miss Dove is carried to the hospital and as she lies waiting for a tumor operation, her whole past life is unfolded and the influence she has had on one student after another. Thomas Baker was her doctor, Thomas Baker who was shot down in the Pacific during the war and who, when he ran out of water on his raft, remembered Miss Dove and the fishy stare she used to give him when he got up for water in her geography class. Alexander Burnham was her preacher and came to say a prayer for her. She remembered when he had broken a window at school with his baseball, had lied about it—and became sick over the lie. Her nurse was Billie Jean McVay, "whose expression when she'd looked at a little boy had been that of the gourmand surveying the cherry on top on a butterscotch sundae."

The policeman of the school corner and the preacher in the pulpit offer blood transfusions. A famous playwright and a refugee from the county roads meet in her hospital room. They were all Miss Dove's students and they were concerned. Miss Dove herself was concerned too although "she took a rather cool view of Heaven. Golden streets were ostentatious. Rivers that flowed with milk and honey would attract flies. And the place held no room for improvement! Its institutions and inhabitants were perfect. How dull it would be for a teacher!"

'Good Morning, Miss Dove" is incredibly real. It is witty and entertaining and quotable. It has sentiment, emotion, grace and wisdom. It is the nicest red apple that any pupil could bring to a teacher!

Julius Caesar: Of Mice, Men And Gods

Ed Yoder

I left the Carolina Theater the other night after a showing of the magnificent Julius Caesar that has come on film out of Hollywood with one regret. That regret is not new. It is not unique with me. It occurs, I suppose, sooner or later to all admirers of the historical figure, Julius Caesar.

My regret is that Shakespeare chose to render Caesar's character as he did. "Confusion worse confounded"—that's what Louis Calhern's interpretation of Shakespeare's interpretation (if you please) brought to me.

In the new Hollywood celluloid-graph, Calhern's Caesar becomes a spent, doddering, deaf, vain, almost cowardly creature. Now I don't mean to maintain that Caesar was a god. Are there any gods, any all-white persons in history? No—and that applies to Napoleon and Cromwell and Alexander the Great and all of the other military and political luminaries to whom Julius Caesar often is compared.

Men like Julius and Bonaparte and Cromwell may linger in our imaginations as great, imponderable and august statues, pale, cold, hard, drawn off beyond our mortal calculation. But they were human. They all had their foibles and weaknesses, their glories, and above all their nobility.

My point is that no writer—not even Shakespeare—and no actor—especially not Louis Calhern—has license to take a man of Caesar's magnitude and depict him as a pusillanimous little man. If Julius Caesar is to be condemned at all, and this is probably the Shakespearian play's indictment against him, it is for his ambition. But without the component of ambition many greats of history, ancient and modern, would never have gotten out of the wings. Where would Napoleon have gotten? Or Cromwell? Or Roosevelt? Ambition becomes criminal only when it breaks the limit of abuse. That is the issue with Caesar. Was his ambition unjustified? Well, I don't know enough history to answer that question and I doubt that anyone else does.

But back to Julius Caesar's personality and character. Shakespeare has done perhaps the only major work of literature or history that registers Caesar as a man remiss in nobility. William Faulkner, in a passing comment, did reflect the minority opinion. In his Faith or Fear speech Faulkner who can't always be omniscient, called Caesar one of the "ruthless avatars" of history. I don't think this is true.

Among the ancients, Plutarch and Suetonius undeniably admired him. Among the more modern, Shaw, Wilder, John Bucchan, among others, have written fictional and historical pieces not lacking in his praise. Bucenan, in a craftsmanlike political biography, Caesar, does not conceal his deep wonder at what the Roman accomplished.

Shaw's comedy, Caesar and Cleopatra, and Wilder's novel, The Ides of March, draw for the reader a picture of a warm, friendly, human, and by no means villainous man. I read most of these works on Caesar while I was in Dr. Albert Suskin's Latin II course. I approached them as one who had had aroused a superficial admiration for the Roman out of cursory contacts with him in history books and in his own writings. The accounts did not disappoint me. They, in fact, vindicated my admiration resoundingly.

Caesar may have been a tyrant at heart. But it is by what men do that judgments have to be made. An educated, talented, and sensitive man is the Caesar of Wilder's novel. The Ides of March shows Caesar attending cultural symposiums with his friends of the patrician Rome and even admiring and discussing Catullus' poetry. Caesar himself wrote The Gallic Wars and The Civil War (containing some of the world's classic prose) and was a daring, congent, and eloquent orator. As a young man, he joined the party organized by his Uncle Marius—The Populares, or people's party. As he rose to his later power, he continuedto exhibit interest in the welfare of the Roman people. He had many democratic leanings.

"He administered justice," writes Suetonius, "with the utmost conscientiousness and strictness . . . In particular, for the beautification and convenience of the city . . . he formed more projects . . . everyday: first of all, to rear a temple to Mars, greater than any in existence, filling up and leveling the poor in which he had exhibited the sea fight, and to build a theater of vast size, sloping down from Tarpian rock; to reduce the civil code to fixed limits . . . to open to the public the greatest possible libraries . . . to drain the Pomptine marshes . . . to make a highway from the Adriatic across the summit of the Appenines as far as the Tiber . . ." This was not all. But space and interest wane after a paragraph so full of glories.

So, it is not that I love Shakespeare's play the less but that I love Caesar more. It's the privilege of all to draw their own conclusions about Caesar. Those who wish may ignore Plutarch, Wilder, Shaw, Bucchan and company and form in their mind's eye the image of a pompous, trembling, petty man, fearing to venture to the Senate on the Ides of March.

As for me, the old picture—you may call it an idolatrous one—will suffice. I think of Caesar as a brilliant, witty, animated, ambitious (in the good sense) noble, gabbing with Cleopatra at night under the Egyptian sphinx or writing enduring prose in his note books under Gallic stars.

As Shaw's play opens, old Julius is described by the hawk-nosed prologuist as a sort of fair-haired boy of the gods. What men found faulty in him delighted the gods. Well, Caesar always said he was descended from Venus through his Aunt Julia. And who knows?

Over the Hill

By

FRED BABSON

(In the absence of Fred Babson, Assistant Sports Editor Bernie Weiss writes today's column. Babson journeyed to Knoxville with the football team this weekend and will return with his regular feature Tuesday.)

If there was ever a sports figure created for the general benefit of sports writers, that person would have to be Carolina's personable basketball coach, Frank McGuire.

Here is a guy who's always willing to sit down with the inquiring reporter, discuss various problems and situations, outline his methods of operation, talk about players and contemporaries or just plain bat the breeze in a very informal manner.

I was fortunate enough to capture a few minutes of McGuire's time Friday afternoon. The following paragraphs stem from that discussion:

McGuire began by making the statement that Carolina will have a basketball team that the University would be proud of this season. "We'll be a spirited and aggressive bunch of gentleman," he said. "I'm not able tosay that we'll be a fighting team. That's a dangerous word around here."

The squad, which opens practices tomorrow night in the gym, will have three returning starter's from last season's crew—Al Llfson, Jerry Vayda and Paul Likens. The height of the gang, not to mention its potentialities, will be boosted by the addition of Lennie Rosenbluth, who hung up an outstanding record as a freshman. The frosh, incidentally, will get their drills under way tomorrow afternoon.

All of the pra ices, explained McGuire, will be closed to the public out of sheer necessity. It's impossible to teach basketball in the correct manner in front of a howling student section. The main objection is that the players are unable to hear their coaches, and it's also bad psychology to have the students looking on when a coach feels he must discipline the players. We only have about an hour and a half a day; thus there is no time to be wasted on interfering lookers-on."

The Tar Heels open their 1954-55 campaign December 1 against the McCrary Eagles, but the month which passes between now and then will be a fast one. Most of the players are already in shape, having worked out daily on their own time, and are ready to begin formal drills learning the finer points of the game.

B e their opener, the squad will conduct three "clinics" at Charlotte and Lexington. They are sponsored by the Daily News with the cooperation of eight Carolina schools ding the "Big Four." Their purpose," said McGuire, "is to and build interest in basketball throughout the state." He is of the opinion that they will be a great aid to basketball, and gave as an example some of the clinics in which he took part at New York's Madison Square Garden while coaching at St. John's Those clinics were actually basketball workshops and were very popular.

As for a brief preview of the season's activity, McGuire said that the Tar Heels would be much improved over last year's five, but his team is still not ready to compete with Wake Forest, Duke and Sate. "They've been in business longer than we have and they have the jump on us.

"I'll be satisfied to break even, or just win all our home games. I'm not taking a pessimistic attitude," he continued, "but merely being realistic. Wake Forest still has (Dickie) Hemric; State's loaded with men like (Ronnie) Shavlik and (Vic) Molodet; Duke has (Ronnie) Mayer and (Joe) Belmont." This is only a portion of the ACC's talent.

"But I'm not conceding anything. We'll be very good and on any given night may be able to knock off Wake, State or Duke."

McGuire rates the Atlantic Coast Conference as one of the toughest collegiate cage loops in the nation, this because the teams must play their games on so many different courts that the players can't get used to any but their home layout. As any fan will point out, no two basketball courts are the same to the player. Then there are the partisan crowds, which are not always found in other ...gues to the degree which we have them here. "A pro-UNC ... was the only thing which gave us victory over Wake Forest ...son," McGuire added. The cagers play above their heads ...nks to the psychological lift given by a favorable crowd, and ... situation is exaggerated when the contest is played indoors as ...ared to the spaciousness of a football stadium.

Rambling from subject to subject, McGuire next touched upon the facilities for basketball at Carolina. "They could be much better," he said, "and I hope they will be as soon as we build a team to rank with others in the area."

Looking to the future, McGuire already is brushing the dust off ideas in the back of his head for a new physical plant devoted solely to basketball. He's picked a site—where the Tin Can now sits rusting.

That Carolina needs an indoor stadium similar to Duke's or State's is no secret.

The physical education department here is second to none in the country, but it was not constructed for the needs of basketball. Temporary stands for the games will seat less than 6,000 on benches, and "people don't like splinters in their hind-parts," McGuire quipped with a smile.

Last-Minute Duke Score Downs Tech, 21-20

Jim Nelson's Toe Is Margin

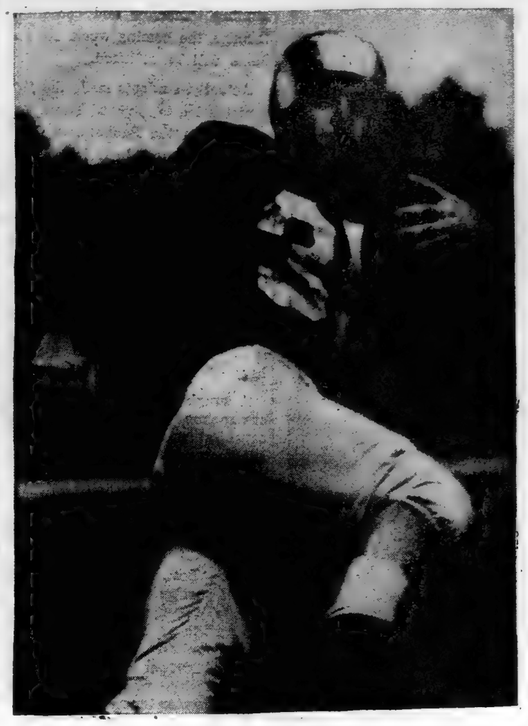
Kacourek, Aldridge Post Get Devil TD's

By REESE HART

DURHAM, N. C., Oct. 30—(AP)—Duke, behind 19 points in the third period, climaxed a whirlwind rally by scoring in the last 40 seconds to defeat Georgia Tech, 21-20, today before a cheering crowd of 33,000.

Guard Jimmy Nelson's three perfect placements proved the difference.

The Blue Devils, on the defensive most of the first half, saw Georgia Tech score twice in the second period after the Yellow Jackets had twice been stopped inches short of the Duke goal.



Georgia Tech scored with four minutes remaining in the second period when reserve quarterback Bill Brigman passed 43 yards to halfback Paul Rotenberry.

In the last minute of the second period Georgia Tech scored again when Dickie Mattison went over from the one. An 18 yard pass play from quarterback Wade Mitchell to end Bill Sennett accounted for the last Tech touchdown in the third quarter.

Duke roared to life by taking the next kickoff and rolled 66 yards with quarterback Jerry Barger passing to Jerry Kocourek from the 11 for the tally.

Mitchell fumbled a few minutes later and Duke reserve fullback Sam Ebert recovered on the Tech 35. Aided by 15 yard penalty for roughing the kicker, Duke rolled to the Tech three from where fullback Bryant Aldridge crashed over.

In the closing minutes Duke launched another drive from its own 13 to the Tech 4 from where halfback Ed Post whirled around left end to score. Nelson calmly kicked the winning point.

Vol Fullback Tracy Leads 26-20 Win Over Tar Heels

Summary

Tennessee won the toss, but elected to kick off, choosing the north goal to defend, with the wind to their backs.

Larry Parker gathered in the kick-off on his five, and returned it to the 27 yard line. The Tar Heels then proceeded to roll 65 yards on the ground, with Parker and Gravitte, and Bullock tearing off steady chunks of yardage, three and four yards a clip. The Carolina machine stalled on the Tennessee eight, however, when Gravitte was hit hard on a line buck and fumbled, Tennessee recovering.

The Vols, apparently impressed by the display of Carolina power, played cautiously, running two plays then punting. Brengle's punt was good for 66 yards to the Carolina 22.

Carolina could make no headway this time. And Parker punted to the Carolina 37, where Brengle received it and was stopped dead in his tracks. A clipping penalty put the ball back on the 43.

On the first play from scrimmage, Tracy sped over left tackle, veered to the sideline, and raced 43 yards untouched, with the aid of some timely blocking by blocking back Jim Beutel, for Tennessee's first score. Tracy converted, making the score 7-0, at 8:55 of the first quarter.

The Tar Heels took the kick-off, managed to garner one first down, then, Long punted to the Tennessee 16 yard line. The Vols also found the going rough, and were forced to punt. Carolina took over on their 31. The first quarter ended, as Long picked up five yards around right end.

Again the Tar Heels were forced to punt, after making one first down. Parker's kick was received by Brengle on the Tennessee 20 yard line. Brengle took a couple of steps forward and was hit by Maultsby and Neville. But the slippery Vol tailback twisted out of their grasps, cut to the right sidelines, and sprinted 80 yards untouched for Tennessee's second tally. The attempted conversion was wide and the Vols led, 13-0.

The Tar Heels received a scare, when after punting to the Vols on their 18, Tracy, on the first play from Scrimmage, burst over left guard, and streaked 82 yards into the end zone. Gravitte gave chase and cornered Tracy at the Carolina 20, but the tricky Vol stopped dead turned completely around and reversed his feild, trotting the remaining 20 yards alone. But a holding penalty against Tennessee nullified the play, giving the Tar Heels a reprieve. Penalized back their two yard line, the Vols' Brengle punted to Long on the Tennessee 39. On the first play from scrimmage, Long threaded the needle with a 32 yard aerial to Ken Keller, who took the pass over his shoulder without breaking stride on the seven yard line, despite the efforts of two defenders, and streaked the remaining distance. Keller also converted, making the count Tennessee 13, Carolina 7, with the second quarter six minutes and 45 seconds old.

An exchange of punts ensued, following the kick-off and once again Tennessee threatened with a thrilling 36 yard scamper by Tracy to the Carolina 37. But the Vols stalled, and the visitors took over on their 30. After three downs and no appreciable headway having been made, Long got off a 38 yard punt to the Tennessee 29.

On the succeeding play, Tracy exploded up htmdd lie exploded up the middle, was pawed at by a half dozen Tar Heels, but fought his way clear, finally winding up in the Carolina end zone 71 yards away. Tracy converted, throwing the Vols out front 26-13, with seven minutes and 30 seconds left in the ball game.

The Tar Heels took the kick-off and marched back up the field, sparked by Long's passes to Muschamp and Sutton, and the grinding out of yardage by Keller, Lear, and Sutton. With the ball well into Vol territory, Sutton rammed up the middle for 17 yards, before being dragged down on the Tennessee six. A personal foul against Bill Koman, causing his ejection from the game, set Carolina back on the 21. On the next play, Long faded back to his 35, looked around for a moment, then fired a strike to Muschamp, who made a beautiful running catch over his shoulder, so close to being out of bounds that he knocked over the red flag situated in the corner formed by the goal line and the sideline. Keller converted. Tennessee led, 26-20. Two minutes and 34 seconds were left in the game, and Tennessee ran the clock out with ground plays.

Lucky Irish Victorious Over Muddy Navy, 6-0

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30—(AP)—Penalty-plagued Notre Dame cashed in on a perfect pass play and the traditional luck of the Irish to bury determined Navy 6-0 in the mud of Baltimore Stadium today.

The payoff pass, a 46-yard toss from Ralph Guglielmi to speedster Jim Morse came after five minutes of play in the second quarter. The luck, which had been going against Notre Dame's Irish, turned in their favor at a crucial moment in the third period and prevented a Navy score.

The Midshipmen, refusing to waver although they took somewhat of a manhandling in the first half, came back with a brilliant passing attack with George Welsh throwing the muddy ball. Eventually, after a series of mishaps and fumbles, Navy gained a first down on the Notre Dame one.

On the second play Bob Craig pounded across the goal line but he fumbled as a horde of Notre Dame tacklers hit him and Guglielmi came up with the ball for a touchback. Navy never got another real chance.

Although Notre Dame had been favored, the victory didn't do much to enhance the prestige of the Irish, voted the sixth-ranking team in the nation in this week's Associated Press poll. They suffered horribly from fumbles and penalties while underdog Navy fought them almost to a standstill in the line.

Middies Go

A crowd of 60,000 which filled the big double decked Baltimore Stadium to capacity, saw the Midshipmen take charge at the start of the second half. It until midway through the final period that Notre Dame's superior power pushed Navy down into the mud again to clinch the victory.

Notre Dame, checked by penalties in a first period drive, had just incurred its fourth offside penalty when Guglielmi called the payoff pass and executed it perfectly for 46 yards and the game's only touchdown.

It was an obvious pass situation after the penalty had nullified an 11-yard gain by Schafer. Guglielmi faded back while the Notre Dame line held and uncorked a long, floating pass. Jim Morse, racing down the right side, turned at the 20 and caught it. He took long enough getting started to allow Bob Craig and Dick Guest to get shots at him as he crossed the 10, but he twisted free and went on to score.

Schafer's place kick was wide to the right and Notre Dame led 6-0.

Prior to that, the Irish waded 51 yards through the mud in a first period drive that carried from their own 30 to the Navy 19. Two offsides slowed the march and it petered out when the Navy line held Reynolds on the 19 and Earl Smith broke up a fourth down pass.

After the Notre Dame score, three fumbles slowed the teams, while keeping excitement at a high pitch, and the half ended with the score still 6-0.

Army's Cadets Edge Virginia

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 30—(AP)—Army's reputation as a national power suffered a rude shock today when the Cadets had to fight for their very lives in a come-from-behind 21-20 victory over an inspired Virginia team that wasn't supposed to come close.

Virginia rocked Army back on its heels with Herbie Hartwell, a workhorse back, leading the surge, but the gallant Southerners didn't have quite enough to win. As the game ended Lefty Whitey Clarke's 25-yard pass fell in the end zone in a tingling last gasp effort.

It was a close, hard-fought struggle all the way, with a missed conversion try by Stan Knowles after the first Virginia touchdown in the second period proving to be the margin of defeat. Ralph Chesnauskas' three perfect conversions saved the day for the Cadets who had been fifth-ranked in the nation in last week's Associated Press poll.

Army took the lead in the first period as Pat Uebel stormed over from the eight after a series of Pete Vann-to-Don Holleder passes.

The rest of the scoring was packed into a hair-raising third period in which Hartwell smashed home for Virginia from the three after a 3-yard run by Strempek. Knowles made the point this time and Virginia led 13-7.

Aroused by this sudden turn, Army quickly drove for two scores, Tommy Bell stiff-arming his way 29 yards for the first and Uebel bursting over from the four for the second. Just when the game seemed to have broken open, Clarke hit Bob Pogue with a 32-yard scoring pass to put Virginia back in the running.

Two Army fumbles recovered by the ball-hawking Virginia team and an interception of a Vann pass by John Polzer blunted Army threats in the fourth period. At the end, Virginia had recovered Cygler's fumble on the Army 40, had moved to the 25 on two passes by Clarke and had time for just the one long throw that fell in the end zone.

Virginia	0	6	14	0	—20
Army	7	0	14	0	—21

Virginia scoring: Touchdowns, Strempek, Hartwell, Pogue. Conversions, S. Knowles, Clarke.

Army scoring: Touchdowns, Uebel 2, Bell. Conversions, Chesnauskas 3.

Tigers Bounce Deacons, 32-20

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 30—(AP)—Clemson poured across three last period touchdowns, one on a 78 yard punt return by senior halfback Ken Moore, to come from behind and trim Wake Forest, 32-20, today in an Atlantic Coast Conference football battle of high-geared offenses.

After a scoreless first period, Wake Forest ran up a 14-0 lead in the second quarter and led 14-7 at the half. The Deacons held on at 20-14 going into the fourth quarter but were swept off their feet by the aroused Tigers. Battling back, Wake Forest was a yard from Clemson's goal when the game ended.

Mountaineers Deflated as Pitt Takes Upset, 13-10

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 30—(AP)—Two arrow-straight passes by sophomore Corny Salvaterra in the final half punctured West Virginia's perfect season and Bowl hopes today as resurging Pittsburgh scored a 13-10 upset victory at Mountaineer Field.

The 190-pound, sharpshooter hit his sophomore battery mate, Ambrose Bagamery, from nine yards out late in the third period and then connected with towering end Fred Glatz on a four-yard bullet pass into the end zone to clinch the game with two minutes and 22 seconds to play.

Tamburello Leads Maryland's 26-0 Win Over South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 30—(AP)—Maryland strengthened its chance for a second consecutive Orange Bowl bid here today by trouncing South Carolina, 20-0, before 24,000 in clear, chilly weather.

Maryland, capitalizing on a formidable line, powered 64 yards in the second period and 82 and 49 in the fourth for touchdowns, driving each time on ground plays. It was the first time in 42 games that its Atlantic Coast Conference opponent had been blanked.

FLA. STATE OVER VMI

LYNCHBURG, Va., Oct. 30—(AP)—Freshman Vic Prinzi, a fifth-stringer when the season started, took a long stride toward nailing down the first-string quarterback job for Florida State here today when he threw three long touchdown passes and scored once himself to lead the Seminoles to a 33-19 victory over Virginia Military Institute.

The score was deadlocked at 13-13 when Prinzi, a skinny little fellow from Waverly, N. Y., gave the 7,000 spectators a treat with his dazzling aerial display.

INDIANA 13 — MICHIGAN 9

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 30—(AP)—Indiana, zooming from the Big Ten cellar with quarterback Florian Helenski's flying circus today, handed favored Michigan its first conference loss, 13-9.

Helenski, playing brilliantly, also set a new Big Ten record by passing 118 times without an interception, 20 of them coming in today's game. The Hoosiers scored after a Michigan fumble and after an interception.

More Bills Legislature Got Recently

Charles May (SP) introduced a bill placing a legislator on the Victory Village Board of Directors to have the duties of representing the village and preparing legislation concerning the village.

A bill setting up a Student Leadership Commission to conduct a training program for all persons elected in the fall and spring elections was introduced by Tom Lambeth (SP).

Amy Cooke (SP) introduced a resolution establishing the Legislative Housing Commission to "study the problems presented by the lack of University housing."

A resolution introduced by Charles Ackerman (UP) went back to the Ways and Means Committee for possible combination with a substitute resolution introduced by Manning Muntznig (SP). Muntzing's resolution would have the Interfraternity Council sending letters to the professors and departments asking that no quizzes be held during the week of fraternity rushing. Ackerman's bill, changed in committee to include sororities, had the student Legislature encouraging the University faculty to schedule no quizzes during Rush Week. The bill said that "these quizzes are both a mental and a physical hardship on those involved."

The Legislature will meet at 7 p. m. instead of 7:30 next week.

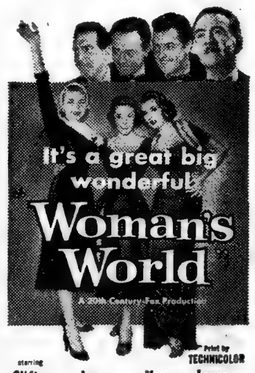
Chapel Hill's Community Chest Drive Will Not Solicit Students

The Chapel Hill Community Chest drive, which officially begins in town today, will gather momentum with a campus-wide canvass of faculty and staff personnel beginning tomorrow and continuing through the coming week. No students will be solicited.



Actually, students made the first contribution to the 1955 Chest. Proceeds from the Panhellenic Council fashion show held last spring have been turned over to the Chest in the form of a $200 check.

"We wish to express our appreciation to the Panhellenic Council for their generous contribution," Chest Director Philip Green said yesterday. "It is especially welcome in view of the fact that we are not soliciting students for the drive, since they are only transient members of the community."

A number of University people are in key positions in the Chest organization. Roy Holsten, assistant dean of student affairs, is the chairman of the Community Council, which sponsors the Chest drive. Green, the Chest director, is an assistant director of the Institute of Government.

J. A. Branch, University director of purchases and stores, is associate director of the drive for the white community. Division heads for the campus drive are Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver for white personnel, and Emerson Atwater for Negro personnel. The special gifts division is headed by Oliver K. Cornwell, director of physical education.

Campus personnel working under Dean Weaver include Joe Gerrity, Miss Porter Cowles, O. V. Cook, Frank West, George Prillaman, Nelson Callahan, J. E. Tickets Ready Thursday For Hunter's Play

"Darkening Shore," the story of two men, one a Polish patriot and the other a military mercenary, caught in Communist Poland in an attempt to free a composer whose work is the symbol of freedom, will be the next production of The Carolina Playmakers.

The play, to be presented at the Playmakers Theatre Nov. 10 thru 14, is by Kermit Hunter, member of the UNC English department.

Hunter is the author of the North Carolina outdoor dramas "Unto These Hills," at Cherokee and "Horn In The West," at Boone as well as "Forever This Land," given at Petersburg, Illinois. Because of his efforts in furthering the outdoor drama, Hunter has achieved nation-wide prominence. During the past summer, he replaced Brooks Atkinson by writing the lead story on the drama page of The New York Times.

"Darkening Shore" is Hunter's first attempt at a full length indoor play, although he has previously had one-act plays produced by the Playmakers. Because of this change to a more intimate medium, Hunter has had to vary many of his techniques of playwriting.

The play will be directed by Samuel Selden, chairman of the department of dramatic art. Mr. Selden last year directed the hit show, "Kiss Me, Kate." He has previously worked with Hunter as advisor to "Unto These Hills," and 'Horn In The West," and as director of "Forever This Land."

Works Of Six Artists To Be On Display

A brief survey of the work and the formative ideas of six artist teachers in America will be shown at Person Hall Art Gallery from November 9 through N v. 30.

Represented in this exhibition are Mololy Nagy, Albers, Hofman, Ozenfant, Hayter and Zerbe, whose work and teachings have exercised far-reaching influence in present-day American art.

Characteristic examples have been chosen from each master's work, and the paintings, drawings and prints included are accompanied by statements and commentaries provided by the artist himself or selected from published sources.

Independent Deadline Set For Friday Night

The Elections Board announced yesterday that midnight Friday has been set as the deadline which independents must meet to file for candidacy in the fall elections.

Candidacy for office is open to any student, but the candidate must submit a petition signed by him or her and 25 qualified voters. Along with the petition, grade qualifications as certified by the office of the Dean of Students must be turned in. Graham Rights, Election Board chairman, will receive petitions at 28 Steele or at the Student Government office.

Those offices which will be filled in the fall election are the freshman and junior class officers, Women's Council, (four junior seats), Student Council (three men's seats), Men's Council (two junior seats, one sophomore and one freshman seat) and Head Cheerleader.

Also to be elected are those who will fill the seats for each district in Student Legislature.

Ruffin Entertains

Ruffin dormitory will entertain the girls from Smith with a coffee break from 9 to 10:30 tonight.

The boys will go to the Smith championship volley ball game at Woollen Gym at 8 p. m., and cheer for the girls. After the game, they will escort the girls to Ruffin where a big party is planned.

Chairman of the social committee at Ruffin is Frank Plott. Other members of the committee are John Curtis, Ben Alexander and Dick Jones.

Friday Wins State Honor

WILLIAM FRIDAY, above, assistant to the president of the Consolidated University, was elected president of the North Carolina Division, American Cancer Society at sessions held Sunday in Raleigh. Friday served as vice-president of the organization during the past year.

State Goes To Polls Today; Elections Party Set Tonight

Daily Tar Heel And GM Slate Election Party

Carolina students, faculty and townspeople, male and female, will be guests of Graham Memorial and The Daily Tar Heel tonight at an election party.

The party will start at 8 p. m. in the Rendezvous Room, and will feature election returns from the state and the nation, along with free hot dogs, soft drinks, coffee, sandwiches and coeds.

The Daily Tar Heel will post state election returns, gathered from its North Carolina Associated Press wires. National returns will come in via radio in the Rendezvous Room.

Gordon Forester, chairman of the Graham Memorial Activities Board, promised to have coeds on hand for the party, and urged students to bring their dates to the affair.

Forester said hot dogs would be ready for roasting in the Rendezvous Room's fireplace, and the drinks and food would be on the house.

A large blackboard will be used for posting returns as soon as they are received at various Associated Press points throughout the state.

Student Wives

There will be a meeting of the Student Wives tonight at 8 o'clock at the Victory Village Nursery.

Sam Didn't Want Corruption

Prof Gordon Cleveland told his political science class this one the other day:

It seems there was a campus janitor, an old Negro who was undecided about a general election a few years ago.

After the election, the janitor (call him Sam) was passing the time of day with a professor, when the professor asked Sam how he voted.

"Well," said Sam, "I was walking down the street before the election when this Republican comes up to me and says, 'I'll give you $3 if you'll vote for my man.'

"Well," continued Sam, "I took the man's money and went on down the street. And I met this Democrat and he said I'll give you $5 if you'll vote for my man.'"

Sam stopped talking, as if he'd finished his story.

"Well," asked the professor, "You voted Democratic, didn't you?"

"No, suh," replied Sam. 'I voted for the Republican man."

"Why?" the professor wanted to know.

"Well, you see, suh," said Sam, "The Democrat he gave me $5. So I figured he was more corrupt than the Republican, and I didn't vote for him."

YDC Census Shows Demos Lead In Cobb

One hundred students responded to a political preference poll conducted in Cobb Dormitory last Friday. The poll, distributed by the UNC Young Democrats Club, showed that 51 preferred the Democrat Party while 26 preferred the Republican Party.

Of these students 15 were undecided as to party choice. There were 3 who detested political parties altogether and 5 who preferred a party outside the big two.

In order to strengthen their forces in Cobb dorm, the YDC members are staging a rally Thursday night at 10 o'clock. Bob Windsor, president of the UNC chapter and 6th District chairman, will be the speaker.

Republicans Challenging N. C. Voters

TAYLORSVILLE, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Republicans today were on record as challenging thousands of voters in the 9th Congressional District—more than the 3 per cent who swung the election in 1952.

And after investigating Republican charges of campaign irregularities in the district, a congressional committee ordered the impounding of all absentee ballots and records cast in tomorrow's election. The special House Campaign Investigation Committee acted in Washington after one of its aides, Sam H. Still, made an on-the-spot investigation over the weekend.

Republicans had announced they planned to challenge between 10,000 and 14,000 prospective voters last Saturday, challenge day.

Ray Jennings, of Taylorsville, state Republican chairman, said today he did not know how many challenges were honored by registrars, who were asked to call hearings. However, Jennings said "We are on record with the challenges," on the grounds that persons on the books had died, moved out of the precinct, or didn't own property there."

Voters Look To West & GOPS's Threat

RALEIGH, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Political campaign thunder died away tonight on the eve of a general election to pick a North Carolina congressional delegation and to fill numerous state and local offices.

The western front, stronghold of Tar Heel Republicans, held the center of interest. For most of the remainder of the State, the real races were decided in last spring's Democratic primary.

The battle in the west generated heat which might last past election day. Charges of election abuses, particularly the use of the civilian absentee ballot, flew thick and SBI agents were dispatched in force to investigate.

The fight was hottest in the 9th and 10th Congressional Districts. In the 10th, Rep. Charles R. Jonas, the state's only Republican congressman, faced Democrat J. C. Sedberry of Charlotte in his bid for a second term. In the 9th, William E. Stevens, Jr., carried the GOP banner in an effort to unseat Rep. Hugh Q. Alexander, Democratic incumbent.

Both Democratic and Republican leaders predicted victory in the two hotly contested districts.

The charges of voting irregularities brought a special investigator for a House Campaign Investigating Committee into the 9th District. S. P. Kimmell, head counsel for the committee, ordered election boards of counties in the district to impound all absentee ballots and records relating to them.

James Powell, head of the SBI, ordered all 17 of the bureau's field agents into western counties to probe voting complaints. The agents went to Graham, Clay, Alexander, Ashe and Randolph Counties. The complaints involved both Democrats and Republicans.

Polling places at the state's 2,024 precincts will be open tomorrow from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m. Estimates of the total vote range between 650,000 and 700,000.

Former Gov. W. Kerr Scott is opposed by Republican Paul C. West of Raleigh for a 6-year U. S. Senate term. Democratic Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., running for the remaining four years on the term of the late Sen. Clyde R. Hoey, is unopposed.

Reps. L. H. Fountain in the 2nd District and Harold D. Cooley, in the 4th have no Republican opposition. In the remaining 10 districts, with the exception of the 9th and 10th, Democratic incumbents are expected to win handily over Republican foes.

Three state offices filled by Gov. Umstead are at stake. Treasurer Edwin Gill is opposed by Republican Rex Morton, of West Jefferson; Labor Commissioner Frank Crane has no GOP foe and Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold faces Republican Fred Frick, of Hickory.

Chief Justice M. V. Barnhill is opposed by Republican Buford T. Henderson, of Winston-Salem. Associate Justices William J. Bobbitt, J. Wallace Winborne and Carlisle Higgins are unopposed.

In addition to these races, several Superior Court Judgeships, solicitors, state legislators and a host of local offices are at stake. Five constitutional amendments also are on the ballot. The most controversial of these would prohibit any one county from having more than one State Senator. Gov. Umstead has spoken strongly against the amendment.

Frat-Dorm Shism Studied

Two students—one of them a University Party member, the other a Student Party worker—have inaugurated a study of the "distinct line of division between fraternities and dormitories."

The two, Charles Ackerman, UP member from Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, and Robert Newton, SP from Aycock Dormitory, said yesterday they had talked with Chancellor Robert B. House and Assistant to the Dean of Student Affairs Ray Jeffries. The South Building officials, according to Ackerman, were greatly interested in the proposal.

Said Ackerman: "I feel there is a distinct line of division between fraternities and dorms . . . the fear is (the campus is) breaking down into two factions instead of one large body."

Ackerman said the committee of two, with another, nonpolitical member to be added in the near future, will investigate the "general thought" that the University Party is dominated by fraternity men.

Provost Purks Assails Lack Of Accuracy, Contemplation

The general level of education of the people of this nation has unquestionably been raised significantly, but in the process "we have, I fear, so diluted the content, and so ignored correction, that precision and accuracy and contemplation and intellectual discipline are not generally accepted as essential ingredients," Provost J. H. Purks, of the Consolidated University said here yesterday.

Addresing the North Carolina chapter of the American Asociation of Teachers of French and the American Asociation of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese, Professor Purks said:

"Perhaps more of us can now speak glibly and write voluminously. But sometimes it seems that what is happening is that more of us are speaking and writing poorly about things of which we know little, and that we are confusing the freedom to do so with education itself which is in fact a discipline.

"There have been many changes in the high schools and colleges of our nation since 1920. It is not certain that all of the changes in our schools and colleges during the past three decades have resulted in improvements. Some have unquestionably been better."

Provost Purks said that "we certainly shall not improve the situation by growling, or by wringing our hands, or by shouting that all is lost.

"As teachers of language you hold honored positions. If you, and all of us of like mind, can accept those improvements which have accompanied the changes of the past few decades and can recast our academic format without yielding on substance we can move forward confidently in service to our nation and to the world."

Jean-Jacques Demorest of the Duke University faculty said in another address that "the genius of Mendes-France, the French Premier, is shown in his ability to maneuver a static political situation into a dynamic form of gov-

Clemson College Will Become Coeducational On January 31

CLEMSON, S. C., Nov. 1.—(AP)—The sight and sound of females will be commonplace on Clemson's campus after January 31.

That's the date, the beginning of the second semester, the state's A. and M. land grant college will go co-educational.

Though a limited number of women have been admitted to the college before as graduate and special students, this will be the first time they will be able to attend as regular undergraduate students.

A semi-military institution with a reserve officers training program, Clemson now has 2,600 enrollment.

In approving admission of undergraduate women, the college trustees pointed that "with the rapid industrialization of this region, there is an increasing demand for technically trained women.

"For this reason," they explained, "college officials did not feel justified in denying women the opportunity for college training in textiles, architecture, engineering, chemistry, agriculture and the many other scientific courses of the college."

Indian Sets Talk Today

"Problems of the Student in India" will be the subject of a talk by Virendra Agawala this afternoon in the Cabinet Room of the Y Building, at 3 o'clock.

Agarwala is visiting a number of college campuses in the South. His visit to the University will be the last in the South, before he leaves for the meetings in Europe. Persons interested in talking with Agarwala are invited to attend the meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon, or to call the YMCA information office for an appointment.

Marge & Gower:

Champions Coming

A nationally known theatrical group, headed by Marge and Gower Champion, Harry Belafonte and the Voices of Walter Schumann, will appear here on December 9-10, in "Three For Tonight," sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers.

This presentation will head the Playmakers' late fall and early winter schedule along with their own "Darkening Shore," a new drama by Kermit Hunter, to be presented Nov. 10-14.

"Three for Tonight" will be presented in Memorial Hall, while the Playmakers' "Darkening Shore" will be staged in the Playmakers Theater.

Tickets for both events will be available to the public for the first time Thursday, according to Playmaker Business Manager John W. Parker.

Classified as a diversified production combining music, dance and drama by a company of 40, "Three For Tonight" is produced by Paul Gregory with Charles Laughton. Staging and choreography are by Gower Champion, and special material by Robert Wells.

Gregory's past productions have included "Don Juan in Hell," "That Fabulous Redhead," "John Brown's Body," "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial" and a current motion picture, "Night of the Hunter," directed by Charles Laughton.

Kermit Hunter's drama, which will be directed by Samuel Selden, Playmakers' director, is a serious drama of modern post-war Europe, telling the story of Polish patriots' attempts to smuggle a Polish composer out from behind the Iron Curtain.

Tonight's Hill Hall Recitalist Worked With Dr. Schweitzer

Miss Margaret Deneke, British pianist who will give a lecture-recital tonight in Hill Hall, is a former co-worker of Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

Miss Deneke worked in French Equatorial Africa as a nurse in Dr. Schweitzer's hospital, and later served as his secretary on concert tours.

Schweitzer is a French Protestant clergyman, philosopher, physician and music scholar and became a missionary physician in French Equatorial Africa in 1913.

Miss Deneke will give an interpretation of music of the Romantic Era tonight in Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

She will illustrate her discussion of Romantic music with piano compositions by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Chopin, Brahms, Loder-Walker, Ernest Walker and Donald F. Tovey.

Her program will be the third in a concert series sponsored throughout the year by the UNC Department of Music.

Miss Deneke's recitals have taken her throughout Great Britian and the United States. She recently performed in Washington, D. C., sponsored by the local chapter of American Guild of Organists.

Miss Deneke, whose background is considered unique for a concert musician, worked as a nurse and secretary before devoting her full time to music.

Educated by private tutors, one of them a daughter of Robert Schumann, she holds an honorary M. A. from Oxford University, where she is librarian of the Musical Club and Union.

One of her close friends is Mendelssohn's grandson, who presented her with one of the most extensive collections of the composer's manuscripts and letters in existence.

'Lection Day!'

We were tempted, after a judicious perusal of the welter of political predictions in this week's crop of news magazines, to try a forecast of our own on the outcome of this election day. We have seccessfully fought off the temptation. Unlike Time, Newsweek, and Walter Winchell, we confess not to know which way the votes are going to gravitate.

There are a few things we have figured out, however. Take this "phone your neighbor" plan of President Eisenhower's, a scheme of ominous possibilities. If the ten people Ike called the other night in turn called 10 others. 100 people were reached. If these 100 called 10 others, as they were requested to do, that multiplies out to 1,000. But here the plot thickens; for if carried on, and the President urged that it be, there would be 1,000,000,000,000,000,000 phones ringing (whatever number that is) after only three more rounds of calls—several more phones than the Bell System had installed last time we looked.

Another, and possibly more important thing that has struck us about the election today is the high caliber of many of the candidates on both sides. Examples: Richard L. Neuberger, a responsible newspaperman who is running as a Democrat for senator in Oregon; John Sherman Cooper, an internationalist Republican running against the well-loved (and favored) Alben Barkley in Kentucky; the New Jersey race, where the voters can't lose with either Republican Case or Democrat Howell.

Some Republicans like those mentioned above, have managed to live down the excesses of Richard Nixon and his GOP hatchet boys. If they are elected, they will be good legislators.

Even so, we can't find any good wishes for the Republicans in our heart this morning. The reason we can not lies in the fact that 1954 is a time for action and we are convinced that any action a GOP Congress can muster is likely to be a hesitant step backward. Gerald Johnson, the dean of North Carolina bred newsmen, said it for us the other day:

". . . the Democrat Party is by its very nature the party that does something. Sometimes it does a fool thing, but it always does something, and in moments of desperation it is better to do anything than to sit like a bump on a log waiting for destruction to overwhelm us . . .

"The fundamental attitude of the Democratic party in any crisis is that we have much to gain; that of the Republican Party that we have much to lose. Neither can pierce the future, but the Democrat is persuaded that there is a pot of gold just around the next corner, while the Republican expects to find a bear . . .

". . . I am glad a benignant destiny has made it possible for me to be a Democrat, for I think that the Democrat is a happier man. Serene in his faith that a pot of gold is just around the corner, he can contemplate even such an appalling apparition as McCarthy without despair . . . From time to time we have these fits of backward-looking and the sons of Belial, flown with insolence and wine, their wander forth, but never for very long. In due time the common sense of the common people reasserts itself, we elect a Democrat and go seeking the next pot of gold.

"Those who can't believe it are by nature Republicans. It is sad and I am sorry for them, but there isn't a thing in the world that can be done about it."

Having thus let you in on our observations and inclinations (and bared our breast once more to the Young Republicans Club's darts and arrows), we'll retire now to the AP machine in the hall to watch for the early returns and see how the common sense of the common people is holding up this year.

Reflections On The Shouting & Its Results

Louis Kraar

EVERYONE IN the long Carrboro School auditorium stood up for the prayer, and one of the Young Democrats prayed for a victory.

A few minutes later Chapel Hill Mayor Ed Lanier, sitting on a mule's back, led a parade around the auditorium. And the Democrats who had just bowed their heads in prayer hollered their heads off at a parade of "Wislon hound dogs" and placards that said, "Don't blame me, I voted Democratic."

Congressman Carl Durham got up and told the crowd how the Republicans were ruining things in Washington with their "negative" attitude. And state Agriculture Commissioner Stag Ballentine rolled off economic statistics that, he said, spelled out dire things for farmers—because of the GOP.

The Young Democrats yelled more, and then it was all over.

What went on at the Young Democrats' really in Carrboro last Friday night is essentially what has been happening in school houses, whistle stops, and meeting places all over the country these last few weeks. It's politics during an election.

And although I'm a Democrat, the campaigning on both sides of the political fence during this off-year election has been distasteful.

I RECALL that spring night in Raleigh when Kerr Scott, having whipped Lennon in the primary, went upstairs to his hotel room to retire.

And Lennon, smiling in defeat, came over to Scott headquarters. The Haw River squire came back down to meet Lennon. The Scott crowd, having been gay all evening, hit a new peak as the two candidates shook hands.

Television cameras begin to grind away. Flash bulbs flickered. And bright movie lights illuminated the two hand-shaking figures.

As the bright lights were trained on the two men Lennon asked jokingly, "What is this, an investigation?"

And a Scott supporter in the room shouted, "No, Senator, just a point of order."

The crowd broke up laughing about the quip. It was all over. Everyone—even the Lennon forces who quietly left the headquarters of their man one by one—felt better.

But the Scott-Lennon race was a State Democratic primary. The fight between Democrats and Republicans was yet to come.

ACTUALLY, THE Republicans have used one issue in the campaign which closes today—that of communism in government. It is the same issue which McCarthy rode to fame (and censure); but instead of using the Wisconsin Senator to propogate the issue, the GOP has used Nixon, then Eisenhower.

On the other hand, Democrats have shouted about the most valid Dixon-Yates issue (although few understand it) and about a slip of Wilson's tongue (a hound-dog statement which still fewer understood or tried to understand).

Since the Eisenhower program has recived most of its support from Democrats in Congress, it would seem that a political deadlock will not occur if the Democrats gain control.

A FAR MORE experience hand at watching politics than I seems to have summed the whole thing up. The observer, Scotty Reston of The New York Times, put it this way:

"Despite all the noise on both sides, neither the economy nor the foreign policy nor the efficient conduct of the government is likely to be changed a great deal. Fortunately, the candidates don't believe their own charges; don't have faith in their own predictions; don't have the courage of their prejudices; and will probably be saved from the consequences of their duplicity by their lack of sincerity."

I'm not bitter today. But I do agree with Reston's conclusion that:

"Politicians in office are not as bad as politicians trying to get into office, and fortunately the country is strong enough to overcome its politicians."

'Y'Mean The Talk Of Unemployment Wasn't Just Talk?'

Will Nixon's Campaign Work?

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — No matter what the outcome of today's balloting, it will probably decide three important and intriguing political questions. They are:

1. Will President Eisenhower run for a second term?

2. Will young Dick Nixon, 41 years old, who has managed to worm himself into a position of power and influence despite that $18,000 private expense fund which two years ago almost threw him off the ticket, be the man to succeed him?

3. Will the Republican Party be able to continue using McCarthy's type of politics without using McCarthy? Particularly, will the Republicans be able to swing the large block of Catholic voters, normally Democratic, over to the GOP, without using the now benched Senator who accomplished that swing in 1952.

The three questions cannot be considered separately. They are pretty much woven together.

In the first place, the President started his 1952 "draft" with the idea that he would be only a one-term President. He told this to various friends, including this correspondent.

All presidents have a right to change their minds, however, and frequently do. But in this case, Eisenhower has given the contrary impression. All his remarks, plus those of this wife, indicate that he is itching for the day when, at the age off 66 (which will be in 1956), he can retire to his farm in Gettysburg. Certainly if the election goes against him today, it will require a political bulldozer to pull him into the race again.

Mastermind Nixon

The success of today's balloting, paradoxically, is going to depend in large part on the tactics of the young man who would like to succeed Ike. For, more than any other man in the Republican Party, young Mr. Nixon has been drafting the strategy and calling the shots of the current campaign.

It is Nixon even more than Chairman Len Hall who has been on the long-distance telephone to state leaders, who has thrown extra speakers into key states, and who almost tearfully demanded that Ike get out and campaign. For Nixon knows more than anyone else that if the Republicans are defeated today he will be smothered; his future has gone glimmering.

It was Nixon who made the crucial decision to use McCarthy's tactics in this campaign. He sold the idea at the Denver Conference, where he bluntly informed the Presndent that the public was not interested in his legislative program and needed a gripping, hair-raising, headline-making issue.

Eisenhower earlier in the year had repeatedly stated that the election should not be decided on the issue of Communism, but rather on the accomplishments of his administration. Nixon persuaded him, however, that this was not getting across with the people.

Thus was dusted off the ancient, sure-fire campaign scare of "Reds-In-Government"—used so effectively by Joe McCarthy.

Nixon Was First

To be fair to Nixon, it should be noted that he did not steal this from McCarthy. He had used it himself to get elected to Congress from California. At that time, 1946, he faced the problem of defeating a liberal young Democrat, Congressman Jerry Voorhis, who was anything but a Communist, though he had a pro-labor voting record. To beat Voorhis, Nixon organized a battery of telephone women—many of them Liberty Belles—who did nothing but call voters anonymously. "Did you know Congressman Voorhis was a Communist?" was the whisper that reverberated all over Voorhis' district.

RICHARD NIXON
McCarthy's techniques

It did the trick. Nixon, only 33 years old and completely unknown in California, won.

During the same year, 1946, Joe McCarthy was elected to the Senate in Wisconsin—not by opposing Communism but with the public support of the Communists. His 5,393-vote margin over Bob La Follette, against whom the Communists campaigned bitterly, just about represented the strength of the Communist Party in Wisconsin. And Joe, when askmunist support, remarked: "Communist support, remarked: Communists have the same right to vote as anyone else, don't they?"

Real fact is that Joe McCarthy didn't latch on to the "Red-In-Government" technique until four years later; and until after Nixon had successfully used it as a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee and to hoist himself into the Senate in 1950 by calling Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas a Red.

The campaign against Mrs. Douglas was one of the most unfair in California history. She had voted for aid to Korea just before the Korean War, when Nixon didn't. However, he had a million-dollar campaign kitty, plus a battery of public relations and advertising experts, while she had little money. Nixon won.

Nixon Vicillates

Since then and during the Eisenhower Administration, Nixon has vacillated between a personal policy of defending Joe McCarthy and putting him on the sidelines.

When McCarthy first got put in his place by Harold Stassen over Greek ships just after Ike took office, it was Mr. Nixon who arranged that McCarthy lunch with Secretary Dulles and who bulldozed Stassen into issuing a statement humbly eating crow.

On the other hand, it was Nixon who turned against McCarthy last year and, at a Christmans conference in Miami, tried to persuade Joe to turn the Communist flag-waving over to Senator Jenner and the Justice Department.

Heavy Catholic Vote

The important political question behind all this is whether young Mr. Nixon, a Protestant, can use McCarthy's tactics to deliver the Catholic vote to the Republicans as McCarthy delivered it in 1952. He's using the same words. He's using the same gestures. He's getting the same headlines. But can he deliver it? That is the big question.

Historically, and especially under Roosevelt, the Catholic Vote has been heavily Democratic. That is why about half the Democratic Senate candidates in the West today are Catholic—Murray of Montana, O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, Caroll of Colorado, Pat McNamara of Michigan, Burke of Ohio. They came up through the ranks of the Democratic Party.

Yet they are now being smeared by Nixon as pro-Red, pro-Russian, and soft toward Communism.

Meanwhile the man who went into strong Catholic areas—like Boston, Hartford, Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Jersey City—and swung Catholic Democrats over to the Republicans before is now awaiting censure by the Senate.

That's why some McCarthy rooters are sore; some may go back to their traditional Democratic fold; some won't vote at all.

And the big question is: Can the energentic Mr. Nixon use the warmed-over Red smear to deliver the big mass of votes which McCarthy delivered to the GOP in the past? A lot of observers believe he can't. But today will tell the story.

Writer Says DTH Backing Left-Wing Democrats

Eidtor:

Campus Republicans and conservative Democrats have noted with distate the use of the Daily Tar Heel as a propaganda organ of the left-wing Democrats who control the local YDC and other organizatins.

This is clearly a manipulation of government for the promotion of political interests of a very partisan sort. The Daily Tar Heel has previously dodged this issue by the contention that it is not supported by state funds, but by student fees. They are neglecting the fact that these student fees are collected and enforced by an agency of the state and that these contributions are not voluntary on the part of the individual student.

Note on the Democratic "Party of the Common Man:" Millionaire Democratic nominee Harriman says that when he swore he had been a resident of Washington for a year, this did not mean that he was not also a resident of New York that same year. It seems that he wanted to vote in a Washington primary and now finds that New York has residence requirements for gubernatorial candidates.

Further note on same: Aside from politicians, how many people have you ever known who claimed to be "common?"

Why are the Democrats going around complaining about the unemployment situation when they lauded prosperity under the two preceding Democratic administrations each of which had worse employment than the present except when they got us into war.

Why is it "in the public interest" for a Democratic president to attempt to illegally seize private property (e.g. steel mills), but it is "dictatorial" for a Republican president to order his subordinates to perform a lawful act?

It's a funny thing, the way the Democratic propaganda mill can't keep its party line straight.

Take the hullabaloo about the Dixon-Yates contract for example. It seems that the trouble is that we have a system of franchises and regulation by public agencies. This is contrary to free enterprise and therefore the utilities are enjoying the iniquitous "privilege" of doing business under public regulation. If you read the Democratic press of this state it also appears that the trouble is that we have too much private enterprise and that the cure is extension of the government monopolies such as the TVA.

While we are on the subject of the TVA and its alleged cheap power, let us note that this organization is producing this power only by not paying taxes as do the privately owned companies and every year since it was organized it has had an operating deficit which had to be made up out of taxes.

Anyway they are claiming that this is an invasion of TVA territory. The TVA is an agency set up for the development of natural resources in the Tennessee River Valley. Just how the construction of a steam plant at a point on the Mississippi a hundred miles from the Tennessee qualifies under this is not quite clear. As a matter of fact it is downright obscure—I guess that that is really the point; the muddier the water gets, the less the poor fish can see.

The campus YDC decided to stage a parade attempting to ridicule Secretary Wilson. This same YDC, which has been making fun of the Young Republicans Club for their small numbers, managed to turn out fewer members for their grand campaign effort than the YRC has at its ordinary meetings.

History's Ten Great Minds, The Revised Yoder Edition

Ed Yoder

Will Durant, who ought to be able to guess as well as anybody, chooses this list of history's 10 greatest minds:

Confucius.
Plato.
Aristotle.
St. Thomas Acquinas.
Copernicus.
Francis Bacon.
Isaac Newton.
Voltaire.
Immanuel Kant.
Charles Darwin.

Now, I may as well admit at the start that I have no real quarrel with Mr. Durant's selection. My quarrel, perhaps one which begs the question, I must submit more or less obliquely.

The Greensboro Daily News, resorting to a paragraph crammed with athletic metaphors, comes up with several substitutions in Mr. Durant's "line-up."

"We'd substitute Shakespeare for Bacon,' perhaps," the writer begins. (Well, I'd substitute Shakespeare for any one or maybe even any two of these minds with the possible exception of Aristotle's.) "Dostoyevsky," he continues, "might run Voltaire a close race." (Certainly!) "Leonardo da Vinci ought to be in the line-up, if only as a utility man. Jefferson, Franklin and Spinoza are varsity material. Arnold J. Toynbee may be a rookie but he has a fine batting average and looks like a coming star." Where, one might ask, is Albert Einstein?

My ideas coincide up to this sentence in the Daily News editorial: "The great religious leaders may be left out by common consent." I would make that read religious and ethical. Then I would say that they can't be left out of any selection of "great" minds—by common consent or otherwise.

What makes a mind "great?" Is it pure intellectual structure alone? Do other "X" quantities enter the picture? We can't afford, by any means, to scoff at thinkers like Kant, who lived in austere detachment from their fellow men and created systems of philosophy or physics or theology or satire. It took Newton and Copernicus to give us new and expansive ideas of our physical world. It took Thomas Acquinas to lay the foundations of contemporary theology. It took Voltaire to show us when society deserved ridicule.

But there is another side from which we may look at the matter of what constitutes a great mind. Soren Kierkegaard, the Danish pre-existentialist and a major figure in 19th century religious thought, once wrote that many philosophers have a central fault. The fault, he said, was that they built magnificent palaces of thought and then lived beside them in dog-houses.

That's my jumping-off place. I think Mr. Durant could well have included some of the great ethical and religious thinkers, Socrates, Jesus, Buddha. Their philosophic systems might lack the elegance of Kant's or the intricacy of Spinoza's but the important fact is that they lived within their systems, they were their systems; and they encouraged other men to live a doctrine rather than simply embrace it.

Socrates, as a philosophic midwife, questioning his hearers and urging them to know themselves; Jesus, advising his hearers to act toward their fellows as they would like to be acted toward; Buddha, stressing right views, speech, conduct, mindfulness, etc., were giving edicts that man could live within. And a truth like theirs, going immediately to the depth of experience, is in a sense greater and more profound than a subtle truth whose meaning at first escapes us. These towering figures of ethical philosophy certainly didn't live in dog-houses beside the palaces their thought built.

More important than metaphysics, or physics, or the study of what generally is "really real" is ethics, the science of human relationships.

Should an honor system be tempered with mercy? What place do big-time athletics have in a University? Has this school experienced a backslide from its liberal tradition and why? We find these ethical questions on this campus. They are serious and important.

Most of the great issues here, in America, in the world, are reducible to the age-old ethical question of the relationship between means and ends. May we employ evil devices to rach what we hold to be good ends? Do ends justify means? Or are means to be treated as ends in themselves?

These are questions to occupy our thoughts And, all told, the drastic importance of ethics will not let me omit the great ethical and religious thinkers from a list of "great minds." What do you think?

Southern Writers: New Phase

The flowering of literature in the new South (some of it pretty "bitter fruit," at least for Southerners, but relished by Europeans) is a phenomenon of reaction.

The South's genteel tradition in literature cut Southern writers off from realism for so long that when they got free of it they went the whole hog; witness Caldwell, Faulkner and Lillian Smith. Southrn literature was like the preacher's son who couldn't even say "Dern!" at home. When he got away from home he erupted a spate of four-letter words that made him the envy of his fellows.

So Southern literature, having been confined for generations to old marsters and Annabelle Lees, broke loose in a welter of murder, arson, lynching, rape, incest, perversion and so on.

Some of this was literature: most of it was the bunk; and all of it taken together gave a picture of the South about as true to life as that modernist artist's painting of "A Nude Descending A Staircase." The South's portrait looked more like a Picasso than an Eakins.

But each reaction causes another reaction, and there are signs that Southern literature is moving from inferno to purgatory and cooling off a bit. what signs? Well, there is Ovid W. Pierce's The Plantation, and there is Frances Gray Patton's Good Morning, Miss Dove. Both contain a lot of truth and a good bit of art. These scraps of paper may show which way the wind is blowing.

UNC Chosen As Host For National Tennis Tourney

Over The Hill

By

FRED BABSON

The Tar Heels had their chance for a winning season blown asunder last Saturday, and not necessarily by the icy North wind that blew through Knoxville's Sheilds-Watkins Stadium. They were counting heavily on a win over Tennessee, which would have given them a record of three wins, two losses, and a tie. With South Carolina, Notre Dame, Virginia, and Duke coming up in that order, the locals based their hopes for a succes-sful campaign on beating Virginia and upsetting any one of the other juggernauts.

As it stands now the count is 2-3-1 for the locals. Virginia gave Army the battle of its life last Saturday, before succumbing 20 to 21, eliminating the Cavaliers as a soft touch. South Carolina was humiliated by Maryland 26-0, as insult was added to injury on Homecoming Day south of the border. As if that were not enough to rustle their feathers, the Gamecocks saw their Orange Bowl aspirations fly the coop. In short: The Palmetto State mob, early-season victors over vaunted Army, stand to be mean and raunchy in their quest for vengeance this coming Saturday. They are always hungry for Tar Heel meat, anyhow (having won only six out of 29 contests with UNC); and when they find out it's Homecoming Day in Chapel Hill, they may be ready to carve Rameses up for dessert.

That leaves Notre Dame and Duke to be considered. Anybody who plans to whip the Irish in South Bend either has the "fix" on, or his players are carrying concealed weapons. As for Duke: The Blue Devils have a pretty fair country ball team, and they have all their games in the country.

With four such formidable opponents facing the Tar Heels, their chances of compiling a winning record for the season are slim. They must beat South Carolina, Virginia, (both in the realm of possibility) and either Notre Dame or Duke. We prefer to hope for the best in the first three encounters and pray fervently in the last.

Ken Keller played a whale of a game at halfback against Tennessee. Said Keller, "I felt right for the first time this year." Hampered for the first month of the season by a severe ankle sprain incurred in a pre-season practice game, the scrappy 5'10" 185-pound halfback was well on the way to recovery when he received a shoulder separation on the last play of the Maryland fracas.

The Raleigh and Durham papers slipped up on their reports of the Vol-Tar Heel tilt, crediting Connie Gravitte as the leading Carolina ground gainer with 47 yards in nine tries. Actually, Keller, with 64 yards in 10 efforts, was the pace setter for the Blue and White.

Speaking of Blue and White: A Knoxville sports writer commented on the new shade of Carolina blue, wanting to know what happened to the baby blue of old days. A couple of alumni, Law School graduates of last year now making their bread in Raleigh, observed that the new Carolina blue is just a shade shy of Duke blue.

Charlotte Observer sports writer Dick Pierce, covering the U NC-Vol tilt, wrote: "As for blocking, the boys in baby blue wouldn't have made much of a stir at an old ladies tea." Describing Tennessee Tailback Bobby Brengle's 80-yard punt return, Pierce wrote: "Behind that patented Tennessee blocking, he was clear on the 35 and went the rest of the way waving to friends in the stands."

Pierce makes it sound like a picnic.

Mat Contests Limit Cagers Opening Drills

By BERNIE WEISS

Carolina's basketball drills got off to a slow start last night in the Woollen Gym.

Coach Frank McGuire, who had expressed a desire for closed practices, could do nothing more than stand by and put his charges thru a brief ball-handling drill because of intramural wrestling activities which were also taking place on the main floor.

Practice sessions, which will be held nightly, were to be closed to outsiders.

McGuire said he wold get down to serious business as soon as the wretling tourney is over.

Despite the accasional bedlam, however, the Tar Heels were able to get in about half an hour of limbering up motions, followed by some i"ntricate weaving" patterns designed to develop ball-handling.

The drill was preceded by a brief organizational meeting.

About 15 players turned out for the initial practice.

Beatty Sparks Pacers In Win

Jim Beatty, Carolina's amazing sophomore distance runner, continued his all-winning ways in leading the Tar Heels to a 22 to 38 cross-country victory over the University of Tennessee trotters in Knoxville, Saturday.

Beatty broke the tape at 20:38.5, turning in the third fastest time ever recorded on the Vol course, despite the sudden cold wave blown into Knoxville by an icy north wind.

Dependable Bob Barden, always finishing in the money, wound up a close third, finishing 20 seconds behind Tennessee's George Ogles, who captured second place with a 21:19 mark.

It was a nip-and-tuck affair between Beatty, Ogles and Barden for the first two miles; but Beatty the only undefeated runner in the Atlantic Coast Conference, forged ahead at the halfway mark and maintained his supremacy for the remaining two miles.

Volunteer Ed Murphy finished fourth at 21:41, but Tar Heels Glenn Nanney (21:44), Tony Houghton (22:38), Don Wright (22:-42) and Boyd Newman (22:58) captured the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth spots, respectively. The only other Carolinian finishing was Scotty Hester, taking eleventh place at 23:20.

71st Collegiate Net Meet Set For June 20-25 Here

Southland — Site For National Championships — First Since '42

The seventy-first National Collegiate Tennis Championships will be played here at the University next June 20-25, Tar Heel tennis coach John Kenfield announced today.

Kenfield a member of the NCAA tennis committee, yesterday received word from Chairman Paul Bennett of Northwestern University that North Carolina's invitation to hold the nationals has been accepted. Other members of the committee, which awarded the championships, are William Ackerman, UCLA; Norman B. Bramall, Haverford College; Dr. D. A. Penick, University of Texas; and Harry J. Schmidt, Iowa State College

Last year's championships were held at the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash. Hamilton Richardson of Tulane won the singles title for the second year in a row, with Ron Livingston and Bob Perry of UCLA taking the doubles.

The National Collegiate Tennis Meet has not been held in the South since 1942, when Tulane University of New Orleans was host.

The University of North Carolina is a tennis-conscious school, and, with Kenfield as coach, has turned out many great teams and individual stars. It has never produced a national college champion, although Wilmer Hines of the Tar Heels was singles runner-up in 1933 and Vic Seixas was runner-up in both 1947 and 1948. Seixas, a former Wimbledon champion, is currently a member of the Davis Cup team.

UCLANS Surge To No. 1 Spot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Power UCLA, which has averaged nearly a point a minute in sweeping through seven straight games, shot into No. 1 place today and became the third leader in three weeks in the Associated Press football poll.

Red Sanders' single-wing Plcans, who have rolled up 292 points for a 41.7 average, replaced Ohio State which had wrested top place from Oklahoma the week before.

Still unbeaten and untied but unimpressive in last Saturday's victories, Ohio State fell to second place and Oklahoma to third as UCLA climbed up from the No. 3 rung in the closest balloting of the campaign.

CHESS TEAM TRIUMPHS

The UNC chess team extended its undefeated string to 24 this past weekend by defeating Raleigh, 5½-2½, and Duke, 5-1. The Tar Heel team consisted of: Kit Crittenden, Doug Kahn, Pete Henderson, Robert Hubbard, Mioslav Vaskill, Jack McQueen, Dr. John Wilson and Dr. Bowers; Bowers and Wilson did not play against Duke. The most notable event in the matches was Tar Heel captain Kit Crittenden's victory over Dan Burdick of Duke. Burdick is the state champion of West Virginia.

Tar Heel Soccer Squad Host To State Wolfpack In AC Conference Match

Carolina's soccer team will seek to even its record in Atlantic Coast Conference play this afternoon when it takes on the N. C. State Wolfpack at Fetzer Field.

The match is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

The Tar Heels have a 1-2 record in Conference play. In their last outing the team edged Duke, 2-1.

State has also downed Duke by the same score.

Gridders Take Light Workout

The Tar Heels, returning home to Navy Field after last Saturday's disheartening loss to Tennessee, went through a light practice session yesterday afternoon.

Carolina ran through dummy scrimmage, squeezed in pass offense and defense, and closed out the afternoon with a review tackling fundamentals and wind sprints.

Trainer Doc White, reporting the damages suffered in the Tennessee encounter, announced that starting fullback Marshall Newman would definitely be out of action for next week's homecoming game with the Gamecocks of South Carolina. White explained that pictures of the knee injury Newman received have not been seen and the extent of the injury has not yet been determined.

Also on the disabled list are quarterback Len Bullock and guard George Foti, nursing pulled leg muscles.

ernment, something which has not existed in France during the past eight years.

"Paradoxically enough," he said, "t is the defeat at Dien Bien Phu which has allowed this resurrection of activity."

Tracing the evolution of the French political situation since the ascent to power of Mendes-France, Demorest asserted that the new premier "has stiffened the French position in Europe, compensating for the abandonment of French sovereignity in North Viet Nam, and for the granting of important concessions to Tunisian Nationalists."

He attributed France's refusal to ratify the Brussels Agreement as a revolt against a situation "already poisoned by previous governments — namely the belief that EDC was a cover-up for German re-armament."

The new Paris agreements already reached — because of British guarantees and Mendes-France's quick maneuverings—are an open admission of what the Brussels Agreement tried to hide, he asserted.

"Whatever the direction taken by the new French government, it is obvious that the opening of the new parliamentary session will be marked by the renewal of activity both diplomatic and economic," he concluded.

'UNC's Lanza' Will Sing

BARITONE DAVID PHIPPS
. . . will sing 'Bless Your Beautiful Hide'

Blanket Party's Taking On Bigger Proportions

Friday night's blanket party in Upper and Lower Quads, featuring Maestro Jimmy Capps and his radio show, "Our Best To You," should be one of the biggest events of the year, say members of the Inter-dormitory Council, sponsor of the party.

Touching off this homecoming weekend, the IDC is furnishing music, entertainment, dancing and refreshments after the pep rally in Upper and Lower Quads.

Capps, in an interview last night, said, "I knew in the beginning that there must be some reason why a show like this has never been attempted before, but I know now what the reasons were.

"It has ben an enlightening period and rather a pleasure tackling each problem as it came up. I hope that doing the program will be as much as it has been planning it."

Among the entertainers to be presented Friday night by Capps on "Our Best To You" will be David Phipps, baritone.

Phipps, who has sung at Grail dances and studied under Joel Carter and Walter Golde, is no stranger to Chapel Hill. He has been called by critics the "Mario Lanza of Carolina" and is "definitely of metropolitan calibre."

On Friday night's show, he will sing "Bless Your Beautiful Hide" from the recent motion picture, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," the old favorite, "So In Love," from the Broadway musical "Kiss Me, Kate," and the song Mario Lanza sang in "The Student Prince," "Serenade." He will also present the Eddie Fisher hit, "My Friend."

Phipps will be accompanied by Ronald Andrews, a senior here from Burlington.

Phipps has done extensive concert work throughout North Carolina and was vocal soloist with the U. S. Air Force Band. Recently he appeared on WTVD, in Durham. Next year, he plans to continue his studies at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. At the present, he is a laboratory technician for Liggett-Myers Tobacco Co., in Durham.

Other entertainers on the show will be Becky Lee, Miss Dunn of 1954, who will do pantomines.

Chee-Chee and Tom Davis, from Nashville, a brother and sister dance team, who will do interpretations of popular instrumentals.

A trio from Peace College which will be composed of Betsy Ann Newsome, Raleigh; Caroline Hackney, Sanford, Fla., and Ruth Sidon, Lawrence, Mass., will sing. The girls have appeared before in Capp's show.

The University Band will also be present in full dress uniform under the direction of Earl Slocum and Jim Fountain and the cheerleaders

University Law Students Will Hold Festivities Next Saturday

"Law Day at the University of North Carolina will be held on Saturday, and I'm sure that everyone that attended the big day last year is looking forward to the happy occasion again," Bob Byrd, third year law student from Morganton and president of the Law School Association said today.

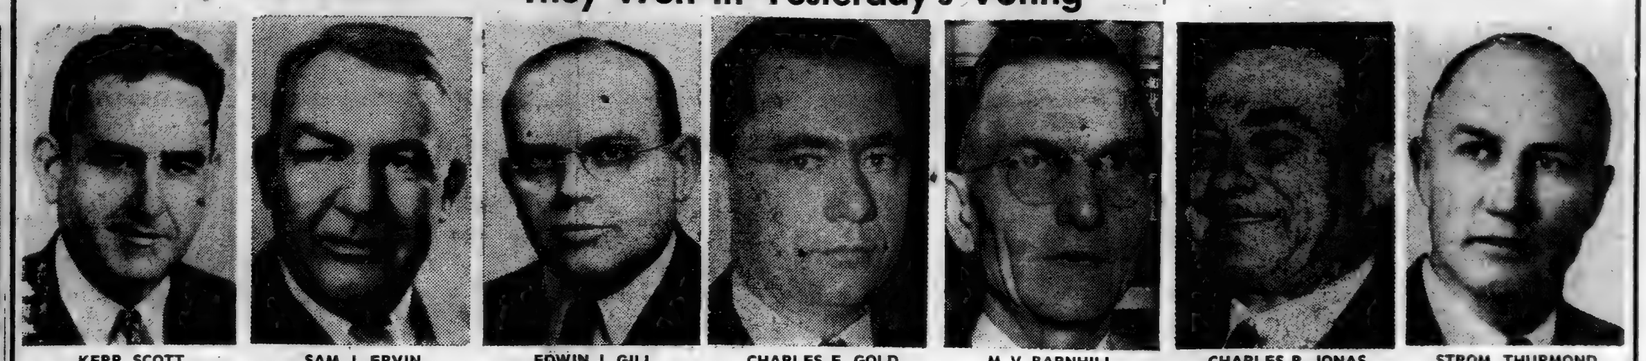
Principally a student enterprise, the observance will be a time of celebration and participation in legal discussion and activities by members of the Law School Association and the Law Alumni Association, Byrd explained.

"The homecoming program is centered around the big game with our friends from south of the border, the University of South Carolina, followed by a reception in Manning Hall," Byrd said.

On Friday, at 7:30 p.m., the North Carolina Law Review Committee of the Law Alumni Association will hold a Law Review Editors' dinner with Paul A. Johnston, staff member of the UNC Institute of Government presiding. Some 500 alumni have been invited.

The third annual meeting of the Law Alumni Association will be held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the courtroom of Manning Hall, with T. A. Uzzell presiding.

A special section in Kenan Stadium has been reserved for alumni and Law Association members at the Saturday game. Association members will be identified by their special attire which will include different colored carnations. The student card section will salute the group during halftime.



Following the game a reception will be held in the main library of Manning Hall for the law affiliates and the Barrister's Ball for the same group will be held in the Washington Duke in Durham that night.

The Law School Association comprises the entire student body of the Law School. Its activities are carried on through a legislature composed of elected representatives, various committees appointed and an elected Law School Honor Court.

In addition to President Byrd, other officers of the Law School Association are Louis Bledsoe, chief justice of the Honor Council; J. Albert House, vice-president; Robert G. Windsor, secretary, and Jule A. Rousseau, treasurer.

Officers of the Alumni Association are T. A. Uzzell, president; Isaac D. Thorp; first vice-president; Luther T. Hartsell, second vice-president, and William B. Aycock, secretary-treasurer.

Thomas Arrives Tomorrow

Plans have been completed for the address here tomorrow night by Norman Thomas, Socialist Party leader, who will speak in Hill Hall at 8 o'clock.

The meeting is open to the public.

The speaker's subject is "America's Political Poverty." He has announced that he will discuss "the lack of basic thinking in politics and our instrumental poverty in the light of the election results."

Thomas is being sponsored by the Carolina Forum, non-partisan student organization, headed this year by Joel Fleishman, Fayetteville, which brings to the campus from time to time nationally known speakers representing varying shades of political and economic opinion.

The last speaker sponsored by the Forum was Governor Robert B. Meyner, who was here last month.

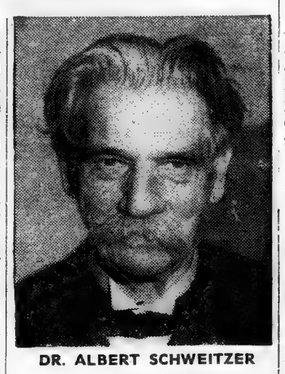
He will arrive tomorrow afternoon at 2:10 at Raleigh-Durham Airport where he will be met by a UNC delegation, including representatives of the Forum, student government and Division of Student Affairs.

At 4 o'clock Mr. Thomas will meet with the faculty and graduate students of the History Department for an informal discussion in Morehead Faculty Lounge.

The speaker will be honored at a private dinner given by the Carolina Forum preceding his address, and at a reception afterward in Graham Memorial.

Thomas, who is national chairman of the Post-War World Council, has campaigned for the presidency of the United States six times on the Socialist ticket.

He has been the party's nominee for other offices, including mayor of New York City and governor of New York State.



Thomas is president of the Call Association, which publishes the Socialist Journal, "The Call," and has written numerous books and pamphlets on American's political condition of the present and future.

Pianist Margaret Deneke:

She Was Jack-Of-All-Trades For Missionary Schweitzer

By ARCHER NEAL

Miss Margaret Deneke, who presented a lecture-recital in Hill Hall last evening, is a charming English lady whose experiences have been quite varied and interesting. She has worked for the famed medical missionary, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, in his hospitaly in French Equatorial Africa, has studied with the youngest daughter of Robert Schumann, the composer, and is a close friend of Felix Mendelssohn's grandson.

DR. ALBERT SCHWEITZER
. . . she was his foreman

Miss Deneke, on her sixth tour of the United States, presented a program of piano works by Mendelssohn, Schumann, Chopin, Tovey and Brahms in UNC's Hill Hall. Other engagements in the state call for recitals at Queens College and Davidson College, near Charlotte, both Presbyterian institutions.

For several months in 1932, the English musician worked as a nurse in Albert Schweitzer's hospital in Africa. The famed missionary asked her to come to Africa to help in building his new hospital on a 180-acre plot. She said she was sort of a jack-of-all-trades while there. In addition to her nursing duties, she was foreman of a 30-man working crew of natives. They built gardens, cleared the church yard of elephant grass and built streets. She obtained the permission of Dr. Schweitzer to put up a sign proclaiming one of the streets as Oxford Street, in honor of her English home, the famous university town. She has heard in recent years that the sign is still there.

Miss Deneke had no opportunity to study music with Schweitzer, for he had very little free time, and it was quite precious to him. She used to listen to him in the evenings as he played on his Gaveau

Prof Cites 'Challenge'

"Accomplishment of an orderly transition from segregation to integration in our public schools is a job calling for our best knew-how in human engineering and presents a great challenge to educational statesmanship at both state and local levels."

This view was stressed by Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the Institute For Research in Social Science here, who addressed the Virginia Education Association in Richmond, last week.

Dr. Blackwell took the position that it is no longer a question of whether there shall be integration in the public schools of the South, but rather when and how it can best come about.

As relative in the situation, he pointed to the greatly expanding educational load to be faced by Southern States within the next decade and the extreme economic burden which it will place upon the region. "A bi-racial culture providing two social worlds, one for whites and one for Negroes," he said, "is another hard fact related to the situation."

KD's Have Guest

Mrs. Julia Fuqua Ober, of Norfolk, Va., national president of Kappa Delta Sorority, is presently visiting the Carolina chapter.

Mrs. Ober, a widely-traveled speaker and member of the board of directors of the National Federation of Music Clubs, became a member of KD while tending Hollins College.

She is a former vice-president of the National Music Council, composed of all national music organizations in the United States, and she is listed in "Who's Who in American Women," "Who's Who in Music" and the "International Encyclopedia of Music and Musicians."

Town Rules On Segregated Grave Plots

By WILLIAM BROCKMANN

Negro residents of Chapel Hill were assured last week that the rule of segregation would continue with them even to the grave. At a meeting of the board of aldermen recently the proposal to provide a non-segregated section in the new Chapel Hill Cemetery was defeated. The 24-acre cemetery now being being built on the Durham road will be divided into segregated sections.

The proposal was originally recommended by the Chapel Hill Ministerial Association in the form of a petition. The petition was referred to the Mayor's Citizen's Advisory Committee, which in turn also recommended the proposal.

At the meeting Monday night, the first motion, proposed by Alderman O. K. Cornwall, was to postpone the vote on the proposal until the matter could be discussed further with the committee members. The vote on this motion ended in a 3-3 tie. Mayor Edwin S. Lanier added his vote to break the tie and kill the motion.

The proposal itself was defeated by a 3-2 vote.

Aldermen P. L. Burch, Ovie Davis and Kenneth Putnam voted against the proposal. Paul Wager and Hubert Robinson voted for it. Alderman O. K. Cornwall, who made the first motion, declined to vote.

Mayor Lanier said yesterday he considers the matter closed and that there will probably be no further consideration of the proposal by the board of Aldermen.

Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor of the Community Church, said the Ministerial Association, of which he is a member, has done what was in its power to do by submitting the petition. The Ministerial Association, he thinks, will probably let the matter rest in peace.

Scott Overwhelms GOP Opponent To Take U. S. Senate Seat; State Races Not Close

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Former Gov. W. Kerr Scott capped his 34 years of public service by winning an overwhelming victory over Republican challenger Paul C. West yesterday in his first bid for a U. S. Senate seat.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., of Morganton, also a Democrat, was elected without opposition for the remaining two years of the term of the late Sen. Clyde R. Hoey.

Ten of the state's 12 representatives were re-elected, two without opposition. Races in only two districts were close.

Rep. Charles R. Jonas, of Lincolnton, the state's only Republican in Congress, was making a strong bid for re-election in the 10th District. With returns in from nearly a third of the district's precincts, Jonas was leading Democrat J. C. Sedberry, of Charlotte, by 1,726 votes.

In the 9th, Democratic Rep. Hugh Q. Alexander was leading his Republican challenger, William E. Stevens, Jr., of Lenoir.

State Treasurer Edwin Gill, Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold and Supreme Court Chief Justice M. V. Barnhill were swept back into office.

Labor Commissioner Frank Crane was elected without any Republican opposition as were three Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and 14 Superior Court judges.

With 560 of the 2,024 precincts reported, Gill led Republican Rex Morton of West Jefferson 73,322 to 19,573.

Gold was ahead of Hickory Republican Fred G. Frick, 71,053 to 19,801 with 564 of 2,024 precincts reported.

Justice Barnhill led Republican challenger Buford Henderson of Winston-Salem, 71,657 to 19,431 with 593 of 2,024 precincts reported.

University Service Visitor Describes India's Problems

By J. D. McRORIE

Some of the students that go to the universities and colleges in India have to sleep on the streets for lack of housing. They go to class without text books for lack of financial assistance.

Tackling these and similar problems of the student in India was discussed by Virenda Agawala, executive of University Service in India, yesterday afternoon in the Cabinet Room of the Y Building.

Agawala came to the U. S. to attend the International University Meeting of the World University Service which recently adjourned in Oxford. Agawala came from Oxford to UNC to see the student welfare movement and to tell members here about the needs and problems of Asia.

In India only one per cent of the total population (355 millions) has the opportunity to get a university education. Three to four hundred thousand students there attend 30 universities and 1,000 colleges.

"We have a very limited number of technical institutions (agriculture and engineering for instance)" Agawala said, "In this way most of the students come from either arts, law or the social science schools.

"This small percentage of the population is going to be leaders of tomorrow and the destiny of India is in their hands; therefore, it becomes a responsibility to have such a dynamic program which will meet the economical needs of the students of India," Agawala continued.

The program of the World University Service (WUS) is divided under two heads: The long term and the short term.

Harriman Wins

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Democrat Averell Harriman was elected tonight to succeed Republican Thomas E. Dewey as governor of New York. He defeated Sen. Irving Ives, R-NY.

Strom Wins

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 2.—(AP)—Former Gov. and 1948 States' Rights Democratic Presidential Candidate Strom Thurmond was elected to the U. S. Senate today by write-in vote.

He won decisively over State Sen. Edgar A. Brown, the Democratic nominee.

Summer Storm, Light Snow Hit Chapel Hill

Weather around the Hill took a crazy twist yesterday, treating Carolina students and townspeople to (1) a summer thunderstorm, complete with lightning and rains; (2) a gentle flurry of snowflakes.

The thunder and lightning started late in the afternoon, but soon gave way to a blanket of chilly, dry air until approximately 10:15 last night, when a light snow started to fall.

Bridging The Gap

The proposal made yesterday to study the "distinct line of division between fraternities and dormitories" is not exactly the newest idea on the campus, but it has merit.

They tell the freshmen at orientation that dorm-fraternity relations at Carolina are excellent, that no enmity exists between the two factions. It is true, because no connections between the two exist. Most dormitory men never see the inside of a fraternity house unless they join a fraternity; and if they do, their break with dorm life is usually final and unqualified.

So what we have are two men's campuses. Politically, the University Party has come to represent the fraternities (despite their loud assurances to the contrary,) and the Student Party (despite their similar assurances) has evolved into the champion of the dorm men. Whatever enmity there is between factions, it takes the form of political disagreements rather than undiluted dorm-frat hassles.

The bipartisan committee that will study this division will run into apathy on both sides. Fraternity men are inclined to see dorm dwellers as out of the social swim and as thus meriting little attention or time. Those who live in dormitories too often see the fraternities as exclusive clubs whose members are sliding down a greased rope to hell.

Neither view is factual, but both are deep-bred. If the study committee can let in a little light on both sides and help close the fraternity-dormitory gap, it will have done a valuable and long overdue job for Carolina.

The Hiss Story's New Chapter

Two days after Thanksgiving, the bleak iron gates of Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary in Pennsylvania will swing open and Alger Hiss will walk out, a free man.

That is, he will be free in a sense. But trying qualifications are glued to this nominal freedom: He can't vote in New York State, his legal residence. He can't re-enter the employment of the government. His name is stigmatized. His finances stand at low ebb. Employment is a grave problem.

ALGER HISS

. . . down the steps to freedom this month

It was an "ordeal by slander"—with the most vengeful witness a man whose political and psychological stability has been questionable—that sent Hiss to "durance vile." In his freedom, Hiss will face perhaps a greater ordeal.

His lawyer says Hiss doesn't plan a personal memoir to recount the fiery trials that condemned him. But many who have not lost their respect for an innocence that has never been darkened by real evidence hope he can vindicate himself. He said all along he was innocent.

Hiss' adversaries have pointed to Lucifer and Brutus and said that the good and wise sometimes fall precipitously. But a government whose judicial system boasts that it is one "of laws and not of men" can never justify itself by this type of reasoning. A man's action, backed by conclusive evidence, must underlie our judgments. Hiss, protege of Oliver Wendell Holmes, a man whom FDR chose to go to Yalta, and the secretary of the San Francisco Conference that framed the United Nations, seems to us yet too large for a traitor's cloak.

As Alger Hiss sallies forth toward the immense task (and one that may turn American faces red) of "proving" his innocence, we hope our opinion will be proved right.

Dorm Papers Hotly Debate Blazer Issue

Louis Kraar

DORMITORIES, apparently abounding in journalistic talent, talent, have launched a newspaper publishing spree.

Three of the current products crossed my desk this week, all different and all interesting.

Alexander Dorm got out the first issue of its paper, "The Ram," which—according to the paper—"will pride itself on being a liberal paper." Breaking into its first editorial, "The Ram" declared that the eggs in Lenoir Hall range from "a yellowish green hue to a gun-metal grey shade."

"The Ram" concludes that as far as eggs in the cafeteria are concerned: "A boycott is in order."

Meantime over at Stacy, the third issue of the "Rebel Yell" appeared complete with a column called, "The Goat Sees." Stacy's paper said that "UNC blazers may be a part of the Carolina scene in the near future."

Blazers are those uniform-looking jackets like Woman's College girls wear. Survey sheets are circulating in the dorms to determine whether Carolina should have them.

Cobb Dorm's "Corn Cobb" said that Carolina students were "distinctive enough" without blazers. "If the glad-rag deal goes through the next thing will be for everyone to get a picture of South Building tattooed on his chest, with UNC spelled out in roses across the front of the structure," concludes the "Corn Cobb."

And how do you feel about a blazer?

MARYLAND'S PAPER, "The Diamondback," took issue with this reporter's comment that the Carolina party in Washington's Hotel Shoreham overshadowed Hurricane Hazel.

Says the paper: "Apparently this columnist completely forgot the 33-0 trouncing the Terps gave his team. Then, on the following day Choo-Choo Justice, ex-Tar Heel, and company were shellacked on the gridiron. Yeah, what a party! What was the celebration for?"

I showed the piece to Jerry Reece, this paper's party correspondent, and he said, "Who needs an excuse?"

SURVEYING THE coed situation this week, I spied one young lady with a pair of high (almost to the knees, she said) argyle socks. They were similar to the ones worn with Burmuda shorts.

Said the coed: "They keep your legs warm."

MAX CROHN breezed in the other day waving a $25 check.

"Sonny," who is University Party floor leader in the student Legislature, won the money in the Lucky Strike Droodle contest.

He wouldn't reveal his droodle, but he said it was the third one he had submitted.

LETTERS I never finish reading:

"Western Alliance is tottering in Europe.

"Democrats confident they'll soon control Congress.

"Business starts to pick up, but slowly . . . stubbornly. You take it from there . . ."

No thanks.

STUDENT PARTY people threw quite a fund-raising banquet at The Pines last Friday night.

Always a party of orators, the SP charged a fee to all those who spoke.

The Man Behind Ives

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — ELECTION-GO ROUND—Don't blame the secret service for the beating given the San Mateo heckler who asked Nixon: "Tell us a dog story, Dick." The secret service keeps out of such brawls. Nixon has carried his own goon squad with him for some time . . . Governor Dewey ghost-wrote most of Senator Ives' speches. At first Ives wanted to keep Dewey on the side lines, in the end hardly made a move without calling Tom . . . Labor leaders claim Ike got his re-employment figure of 400,000 from the fact that students have now gone back to college . . . Bay State politicos say there was much more knifing of Foster Furcolo by fellow-Democrat Sen. Jack Kennedy and family than met the eye. They attributed the barrage against Furcolo by the New Bedford Standard-Times to the young Senator's father, ex-Ambassador Joe Kennedy. The newspaper, in an effort to discourge the Italian vote, claimed Furcolo was not born of immigrant parents.

Probe Business Mergers

Here the inside story behind the Federal Trade Commission's sudden move to investigate busigate business mergers and combines.

Actually, Chairman "Wild Bill" Langer of the Senate Judiciary Committee is responsibe. He wrote a sharp letter to Attorney General Brownell threatening to investigate mergers. Alarmed over the way mergers always seemed to come just before a depression, Langer pointed out that in 1920 the number of mergers jumped from 411 to 749—just before the depression following World War I. Again, in 1928 and 1929, the number of mergers shot up to the highest in history—more than a thousand each year. The big depression followed.

In recent years, mergers jumped from 200 in 1950 to 822 in 1952. Last year was another rich year with 793 mergers.

So, when Langer asked Brownell the reason why so many mergers were being permitted, the Attorney General got worried. He decided that if Langer was going to probe mergers he had better cut the ground out from under Langer by getting the Trade Commission to start an investigation first.

Washington Pipeline

Stanley Barnes, the Justice Department's antitrust chief, has flatly refused to waive the antitrust laws so manufacturers can exchange information on how to make guided missiles. This has made Secretary of Defense Wilson so mad he has threatened to take it up in cabinet meeting . . . The big aircraft companies are rushing to get special tax write-offs for building their new plants in labor surplus areas. Curtiss-Wright, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Rohr Aircraft and Aviation have already applied for big tax write-offs . . . A drastic speed-up has been ordered to produce an atomic-powered bombing plane. Five companies have been assigned to push the bomber—General Electric, Consolidated Vultee, Boeing, Lockheed, and Pratt & Whitney. Meanwhile, Russia has gone all out to put the first atomic-powered plan in the sky.

Stringfellow Hoax

Harold G. Stagg, the Army Times editor who exposed the war-record hoax of GOP Congressman Douglas Stringfellow of Utah, is in hot water with both political parties since breaking his big scoop.

The Republicans are furious at Stagg for breaking the Stringfellow story before the elections. Democrats also are irked that he didn't hold his expose a week longer, when the political impact would have been greater.

However, Stagg was so anxious to be fair and nonpolitical that he neglected to mention one important item in his story. This is the interesting fact that White House aides knew about the Stringfellow hoax six months before the Army Times publication, but failed to do anything about it.

Whether these White House

not an immigrant

aides advisedthe President is not known. But they themselves were content to keep the American public in the dark about Stringfellow's hoax until after the election.

Mery-Go-Round

Columnist Joe Alsop, a bachelor, passes out the best "treats," acording to Halloween youngsters . . . . Speaking of Halloween, Ambassadress Clare Boothe Luce swears she saw a flying saucer over Rome . . . Not phantom, but a dream come true, is the new uranium strike by the Penn-Texas Corporation in Arizona. Biggest so far in that state. . . Congratulation to George Delacorte for publishing the largest number of comics in the U.S. and keeping them all out of the horror class . . . Judge Charles E. Murphy, the new comic-book czar, looks like he treally means business. Senators probing juvenile delinquency are impressed . . . Also congratulations to the nonsked airlines for carrying supplies to Hurricane -stricken Haiti so efficiently. They got 122,000 pounds of Rice, 21,300 pounds of dried milk, 2,000 pounds of paper bags, (to distribute the food in) to Haiti in no time . . . National citizens for educational television are now doing a real job. After a slow start they have seven TV stations on the air aid five more scheduled to open this year . . . Tax Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews was so excited over his television debut tht he sent a directive to internal revenue employees to watch the show.

The Diplomatic Pouch

Secretary of Defense Wilson has ordered a complete blackout on all news stories about joint American-Canadian defense plans. Reason for this is not so much security as politics. (Too many Canadians think we are interfering too much with their sovereignty.) . . . Maj. Gen. Herb Powell, who commanded the only American outfit that fought its way up to the Manchurian border in Korea, will be sent to Hawaii to take over the 25th Infantry. Powell's private orders are to make this a "Fire Brigade" division, ready to be rushed anywhere in the Pacific at the first sign of trouble . . . Carlos Romulos, the chief Philipine Delegate to the U.N., is pulling down an average of $500 for lectures. He's in big demand. Other diplomats are not happy about it . . . Senator Jenner of Indiana has demanded the full files from the State Department on Americans stil living in China . . . Communists are leaving Red agents behind to stir up revolution as their Armies withdraw from the tiny Indo-China Kingdom of Laos.

Dorm Man Wants Quiet to Remain

Editor:

What'sall this talking about improving the lot of dorm men with all these socials, open houses, parties, dances, assessments, etc.

I've lived in a dorm for four years now. And do you know why? Because it was QUIET. A guy did not have to worry about how he was dressed, what he said, when he dated and when he didn't.

Now it seems like Messrs. Muntzing, Beshara, and cohorts are determined to instill us dorm dwellers with the social graces and make us like it.

I'm at the University for one purpose: to get an education. If I had wanted all this social life I would have pledged a fraternity which, to my understanding, are social institutions.

The Democrats & Their Tactics In The Election

David Mundy

Yesterday's elections grant the Democrats at least one title, that of "Master Propagandists." Never before has such a good and successful administration of office been so challenged by such base and ignoble calumnies.

No advantage could be realized in attacking the President directly, so attacks were concentrated on his less popular advisers. Democrats even imagined a hopelessly divided and bickering Republican Party." Those are indeed strange words, especially when coming from the party of Lehman and Talmadge, Humphrey and Byrd, to say nothing of FDR Junior and A. Wingfield.

Democrats, search as they carefully could, found nothing particularly wrong with foreign policy. Left only with the alternative of "me tooism," they rent the air with such gobblydegook as "three secretaries of state," hopelessly muddled politics," and this "corrupt China lobby."

Never once in the campaign have the Democrats agreed on a single constructive proposal.

National prosperity has an all-time peacetime high. But the Democrat strategists set another and quite meaningless note: "Government is in the hands of big business. They are responsible for this mass unemployment and depression." Some of the less imaginative Democrats in the South even accused the Republicans of causing the drought and hurricane.

But the title of Master Propagandists is due in large part to the facility with which they threw political mud. Even HST, master of the practitioner art, wasn't called out of reserve. The Democrats, in typical fashion, led off with a code of ethics in campaigning. At the same time they began groundless accusations of "dirty politics," "smear and slander," etc. That, indeed, is the best cover imaginable for dirty business.

The Republicans, running a defensive play for the first time in years, missed the campaign note completely. Things were so good that there weren't any issues; so party leaders began quarreling over which defunct 1952 issues could be used successfully. The note should have been that Republican policies had:

1. Brought unparalleled peace time prosperity, and

2. Provided extraordinary successes in foreign policies, exceedingly great ones in comparison with the Roosevelt-Truman-Acheson policies that allowed a dozen or so countries to be ensnared by the Soviets.

It was only in the late, late, days of the campaign that Republican orators got around to sounding this note. Maybe some lessons will be learned before 1956. There will be plenty of homework, too.

One lesson of the campaign is on how to recognize political charlatans. The election is over—excepting recriminations among the losers—but you should be able to employ one or two rules in the next two years:

First. When someone alludes to Wilson's "bird dog" remark, with the inference that the administration thinks that working men are dogs, you may mark that someone down as a dishonest, intellectually bastard, knavish someone seeking some political advantage.

Second: All the other unfavorable adjective groupings, including that of plain "Liar," go to consistent "misquoters."

Ire is especially directed at newspaper editors and Young Democrats. Secretary Wilson, these political perverters of fact to the contrary, never said "What is good for General Motors is good for the country." The original quote was a summation of his business philosophy before he took public office, "What is good for the country is good for General Motors; what is good for General Motors is good for the country." What, pray tell, is wrong with that? The heighth of political dishonesty comes in attributing only the last part of the quote to him, with no mention of the complete quote. And such dishonesty pays, say the election returns. Vox populi, vox deii, anyone?

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

THE HORSE was clopping along near Woollen Gym, when I saw him, muttering maledictions but grinning benevolently. I was curious about the unanalogousness twixt his vocal splenetics and his facial mimetics?

"The North Ca'lina Hoofball Club done real good against the Tennessee Hoofball Club," The Horse explained. "Real good! In fact, we wuz beat by the presence of three extra men on the Volunteers squad. Eleven men against fo'teen, 'twas. I'm right well pleased."

What! Was The Horse going to ululate a typical Little Jack Horner complaints of we-wuz-robbed, a-la Purdue-Poor Dook game?

"Nothing so anile," The Horse reasured me. "Brer Horner struck a low and savage blow again at us in his loaded, pop-off, subjective and half-baked accusations anent the Tar Heel-Crying Deacons boxing carnival of recent notoriety, nevertheless. In fact, Horner's Dook-Corner suppurations in the Durham Herald of October 25 qualified him to enter the game with his other two fellow howlers, at Knoxville."

Actually, the officials at Knoxville had permitted Horner and two others to enter the game against the Tar Heels? This was hot news!

"Nope, it was rather a cold war—one of psychology—that the firm of Tribble, Quibble & Dribble waged when they howled to the unimpressed heavens over the Crying Deacons' loss to our lads," The Horse pointed out. "Our stalwarts entered the Tennesee game with the false labels of dirty players etched as large as their identifying numerals, on their sweaters. Rumor has it that Tom-Tom Bomb Tracy scored two of his sensational runs because of this."

Now, now, Horse ol' hoss!

"Of course, I can't swear to Pegasus it is true," The Horse shrugged, "but the story is, Tracy rudely did not respond to the efforts of our boys to make appointments to tackle him; and of course, after all the mewing, stewing and hallooing of Tribble Quibble & Dribble, Incorporated but not Limited, they experienced a reluctance to do anything so rough as to tackle an enemy hoofballer without observing every unusual amenity."

Did The Horse really believe some intemperate remarks by far from disinterested parties, had hindered our warriors?

"Naturally," The Horse nodded agreement with himself. "The firm of Tribble, Quibble & Dribble had done their howling so long and so lustily that our men were searched for weapons as they entered the game."

Tsk, Tsk, Tsk! And their brass-knucks, blackjacks, automatics, shivs and rasps had been taken from them? But . . . what was that deal toward the end of the game, when Foeman Koman was elected to The Chair by the officials?

'Now, I don't believe it," The Horse stated firmly, "but I heard he had stuck hus tongue out at the Tennessee pivotman! Now, you know Big Bill Koman wouldn't be that rude! True, he might have sniffed disdainfully in the direction of the Vol line; but, in the heat of battle—well, bhoys will be bhoys. But it won't happen again! Dr. Geo. Barclay is equipping our foine broths of bhoys with hankies, on the recommendations of Tribble, Quibble & Dribble, so that even disdainful sniffs can be controlled."

I want clarification: I knew who Tribble was, but—the other two?

"Little Jack Horner dribbles drivel, doesn't he?" The Horse asked. "And Tom Rogers, Coach of The Crying Deacons, quibbles over the outcome of games, doesn't he? Thus: Tribble, Quibble & Dribble."

And Quibble—excoose please, Tom Rogers—had learned his clean, aggressive, Galahadian hoofball under Wallace Wade? Well, fancy that! Quibbling over games, though—where had he learned that?

"The Crying Deacon mentor did not say what he learned under ol' Peahead Walker," The Horse murmured, speculatively. "But I do respectfully direct your attention to the fact that Brer Walker's nickname was and is, *Pea*head—not *Sore*head. I'd suggest the gentleman apply some consideration to this. Being the fair, impartial, reserved and considerate gentleman he is, I am sure he will not alone do so, but may even express to our team his heartfelt regrets over his lamentable slip in pillorying our lads. I am sure of this."

"Wump?" Mr. Wump whumped in . . . could it be . . . agreement?"

YOU Said It

On Hemingway, Kraar, Honor & Second Chances

Editor:

In Sunday morning's paper Mr. Louis Kraar wrote a fine article in which he stated that Ernest Hemingway believed in second chances and bemoaned the fact that life doesn't offer them. He went on to say that we were "killing" students the first time they stepped off base.

I don't believe in "killing" someone the first time he steps off base. But let's consider this problem more carefully. Suppose a student is caught cheating. Can we assume that this is the first time the student has stepped off base? Maybe, in one case out of a thousand it is. But generally, it's the person, who, all his life, has been doing little dishonest things and been either getting away with it or been only slightly reprimanded. Mr. Kraar says that even this student deserves another chance. I firmly agree with him. But by "excusing" him would we be really giving him a second chance—a fair chance? Wouldn't it be better to punish him now, while he's still got a chance—while he's still in this "incubator stage of life" than to let him wait until later when he will get a much more drastic punishment?

Mr. Hemingway bemoans the fact that society doesn't offer second chances—we all do, particularly when it's something that hits home. But maybe it's a credit to mankind that he values honor so highly that any infringement of it is severely punished. A semester of school isn't much to pay in comparison to the loss of honor.

So let's not say that we "kill" a person by depriving him of a semester of school and thereby showing him the full meaning of honor. No, we have not "killed" him. We have only "killed" him if we excuse him. "For when honor dies, the man is dead."

Tennessee's Tom 'The Bomb' Tracy Is Back Of The Week

Ed Sutton Twists Ankle May Miss Saturday Tilt

Coach George Barclay added a new name yesterday to the Tar Heel injury list. Halfback Ed Sutton, hero of the Wake Forest game and bright sophomore star of the Tar Heels, sustained a twisted ankle in the practice session Monday. Sutton spent yesterday in the University Infirmary, but the extent of the injury had not yet been determined yesterday afternoon.

Sutton's injury is the third backfield injury sustained since the Tennessee encounter. Fullback Marshal Newman is definitely out of action for the South Carolina tilt, but Barclay is hopeful that he will be ready for the Notre Dame contest. Quarterback Len Bullock's leg injury is not expected to keep him from the game Saturday.

The Tar Heels worked out for a brief period yesterday afternoon under leaden November skies, before a heavy rain forced them inside. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in a locker room session, where they received a lecture and watched movies of previous games.

Coach Ralph Floyd's Tar Babies sharpened up their blocking for the clash with the Maryland frosh Friday afternoon, but rain called a halt to their outside activities also.

Wise Boots Goal As Carolina Tops State In Overtime, 1-0

By DICK ARMSTRONG

With 30 seconds left in the second overtime period, Doyce Wise scored for Carolina to give the Tar Heel soccer squad a hard-fought, 1-0 win over N. C. State yesterday on Fetzer Field. The game, which was played despite a downpour of rain and a freezing wind, gave the UNC squad their second straight Atlantic Coast Conference victory.

The regulation game, which found Carolina outplaying the Wolfpack for three periods, ended in a scoreless tie. Since the contest ended in this manner, two overtime periods of five minutes were played. Neither team could score in the first period, State missing its opportunity when they missed a penalty kick.

With four minutes of the second overtime period gone, the Tar Heels gained possession of the ball and headed goalward. Tommy Kirkland, playing his best game of the season, placed a kick directly in front of the goal from twenty yards out. Wise, who turned out to be the hero of the weather-riddled affair, leaped high into the air and headed the ball into the goal.

That was the ball game and it gave the inspired Tar Heels a much deserved win. Coch Marvin Allen was well pleased with the play of the entire squad, especially on defense. He cited the improved play of several players. Doyce Wise, who was playing the place of Capt. Jerry Russell, exhibited his finest form. Russell left the game in the second quarter with an injured knee.

Along with Wise and Kirkland, Pete Cothran, Harry Brown, Pat McCormick, and Grover Brown played well for Carolina. Cothran continued to shine on offense and Harry Brown's hustling led the play of the Tar Heels on defense.

Carolina's next game will be with Virginia on November 9th. The much-improved Tar Heels now have a 2 won, 3 lost season record, and a 2-1 record in conference play. State was undefeated before todays tilt.

Carolina's starting lineup consisted of Don Gladstone at goalie, Joe Mavretic and Grover Brown at the fullback posts, Harry Brown, Pat McCormick, and Jim Bunting at the halves, Noel Sullivan and Tommy Kirkland at the wings, Jerry Russell and Pete Cothran at the inside slots, and Chip Bryant at center-forward.

Freshman mentor Harry Pawlick announced that his frosh squad will journey to Duke on November 4th. The yearlings defeated State last Friday by a 2-1 score. John Foster and George Holt scored for the Tar Babies. Pawlick commented that the fine spirit of the team aided greatly in the victory.

Femme Intra-Murals In Full Swing; Ladies Are Cautioned To Be On Tim

The women's intramurals are in full swing now. The tennis tournament began about midway in October, and as of now, very few matches have been played. There have been many forfeits, and the WAA has expressed hope that the girls scheduled to play will do so before the deadline. Approximately fifty coeds entered the tournament.

The volleyball tournament is making excellent progress. Thus far, there have been no forfeits. The teams have been highspirited and well-organized and have played some excellent volleyball. The Nurses have won the "Green League," the Chi Omega's are the winners of the "Red League" and either Smith or Alderman dorms will emerge victorious in the "Blue League." The finals are scheduled for Thursday night with the champions of each league squaring off for the title.

The hockey tournament will begin next Monday or Tuesday. Five women's organizations will compete in these intramurals. Each team entered will be required to practice twice before the games begin. Practices will be on Wednesday and Thursday of this week from 4:00-4:45 p.m. and from 4:45-5:30 p.m. at Kenan Stadium.

High School Lad Needs Sea-Sick Pills Before Next Trip To Whirlpool

ASHEVILLE, Nov. 2 (AP)—The much-used water therapy.

Bobby Gibson, a tackle of the high school team, was taken to the hospital with cramped and sore muscles in his legs. The medics immediately inserted Gibson in the "whirlpool," a tub-like apparatus filled with swirling hot water.

A few minutes later Gibson had to go home to bed with an extreme case of nausea.

Landlubber Gibson said the whirlpool made him seasick.

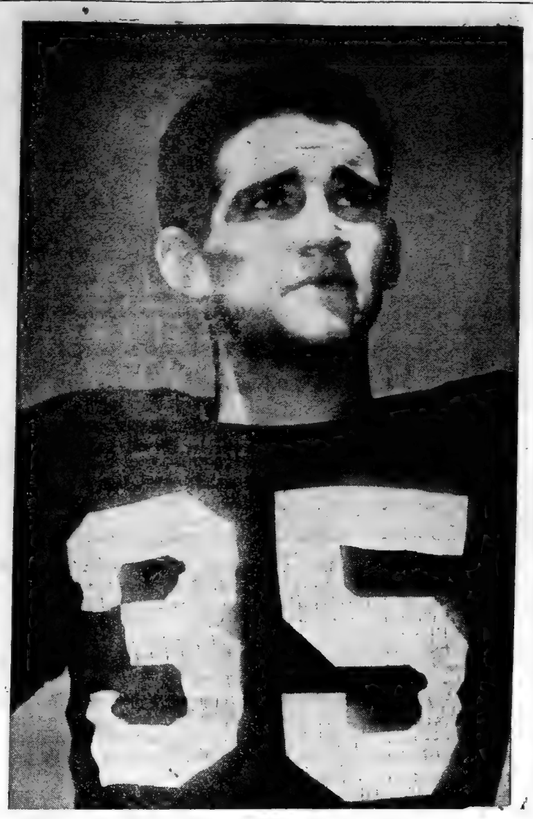
Varsity, Frosh Runners Tramp Duke In Sleet

By RAY LINKER

Carolina's varsity and freshman cross country teams scored wins over Duke in Durham yesterday amid a heavy downpour of rain and sleet, and with hard-blowing winds and sub-par temperatures prevailing throughout the race. The varsity score was 16-47, while the freshmen turned in a 25-33 mark.

UNC's varsity missed a perfect score by one point, as Duke's George Rodgers crossed the finish in fifth place, the last place which the Tar Heels needed to capture for the perfect 15 points. The first four men across were Carolina's Jimmy Beatty, Bobby Barden, Glenn Nanney, and Tony Houghton.

Carolina's Don Wright trailed Rodgers for sixth place to round out the first five for the Tar Heels. The first six men were all under 21 minutes for the 3.7 miles course despite the freezing weather, with Beatty's time being 19:27.



Dave Peyton and Dave Hanner placed eighth and ninth for the Blue Devils, with Hanner edging Tar Heel Scotty Hester by inches. Richard Bain and Richard Reece finished out the Dukes' scoring by taking twelfth and thirteenth places.

Richard Rigsbee and Everett Whatley toured the 2.5 mile frosh course in 14 minutes, 16 seconds to turn in a tie for first place for Carolina. Ben Williams held down the fifth spot for the Tar Babies with a time of 14:52, while two other Carolina men, John Sylvester and Bailey Lipfert tied for eighth place with 15:16.

Chapman, Wife Team Up For Carousel Golf Meet

SOUTHERN PINES, Nov. 2 (AP)—Richard Chapman, former U. S. and British Open champion, and his wife, Eloise, will play as a team in the first Southern Pines Golf Carousel this weekend.

The Chapmans have returned to Pinehurst after spending the summer at Cape Cod. Their entry in the four-ball amateur event here was announced by Chester I. Williams, tournament director.

Ken Keller Selected As 'Athlete Of The Week'

Ken Keller, 5'10", 185-pound left halfback, has been selected as "Athlete of the Week" by the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel.

Keller was given a close run for the title by senior quarterback Albert Long, who tossed two touchdown passes in the losing cause against Tennessee.

It was the speedy Keller who was on the receiving end of one of Long's paydirt tosses. After making a spectacular catch on the seven-yard line, despite the efforts of three Vol defenders, the scrappy junior from Salina, Pa., scampered the remaining distance for Carolina's first score. It was also Keller who added the conversion.

Mid-way in the third period, with the Tar Heels trailing 19-7, Keller halted a Vol scoring threat with a pass interception on the UNC 17 yard line, returning it to the 28. A couple of plays later, he broke loose up the middle, cut toward the right sideline and fought tacklers off from both sides before being dragged down after a 36 yard haul. This launched a Carolina drive that was climaxed by Keller's sweeping right end from nine yards out for the locals' second score.

Turning in his best performance of the year, Keller appeared to be over the injuries which have slowed him down all season. A severe ankle sprain in a pre-season game with Fort Eustis kept him at half-speed until the Maryland game, in which his performance rated him "Athlete of the Week." On the last play of the Terp encounter, he incurred another injury, a shoulder separation. At last, he appears to be in top physical shape.

Keller's rugged defensive play rivals his offensive ability for merit.

Badminton, Fencing Club Meets Tomorrow Night

George McGinty, assistant director of Intra-Mural Athletics, announced yesterday that the Badminton and Fencing Clubs will meet tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in Woollen Gymnasium.

McGinty also disclosed that the tag football play-offs, rained out yesterday, will be played Thursday afternoon. In the fraternity division play-offs will be: Sigma Nu, Sigma Chi, Zeta Psi, Beta Pi, and DKE; while in the dormitory division Med School teams 1, 2, and 3, Law School 3, and Winston 2 will vie.

Vol Fullback Merits Title For His One-Man Circus Against Tar Heels Saturday

Carolina Coach Calls Him "Best Back I've Seen This Year"; Gained 192 Yards Rushing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tom "The Bomb" Tracy, of Tennessee, a young man with an alliterative name and explosive running power, had the best day of his two-year varsity career against North Carolina last Saturday. And in the opinion of the nation's sports writers it was good enough to earn him the designation as Associated Press back of the week.

Tracy had to turn in a remarkable performance to outshine Dicky Moegle of Rice, a consistent contender for the weekly honor; California's passing Paul Larson; Florian Helinski, of Indiana, Jerry Barger of Duke, Ralph Guglielmi, of Notre Dame and Buddy Leake, of Oklahoma, all of whom received strong support from the voters.

After watching Larson complete 25 of 38 passes for 280 yards as California took a 27-6 trouncing from UCLA, one nominator asked: "Does his team have to win to give him proper credit?"

Well, Tracy,'s running feats just about match Larson's passing, and Tennessee did win. North Carolina Coach George Barclay commented: "Tracy was just too good for us. He's the best back I've seen this year."

Tennessee followers, who have seen a good many fine backs, went even farther as they racked their brains trying to remember a Tennessee back who had turned in a greater all-round performance.

Here's what Tom did in beating North Carolina 26-20: Ran 71 and 43 yards for touchdowns. Had one 82-yard touchdown run, accomplished after he had been hemmed in by tacklers, called back for a penalty. Carried 14 times for 192 yards—an average of 13.7. Saved one touchdown by overtaking and tackling a Carolina runner. Intercepted a pass and played a generally fine defensive game. Threw a key block that broke Bobby Brengle loose for a 34-yard run. Kicked two conversions.

Moegle, who has an established "quota" of three touchdowns a game, made it against Vanderbilt and had one 49-yard touchdown run called back. He has been nominated every week for "back of the week" honors.

Barger, who later told Coach Bill Murray, "I knew all the time we were going to win," inspired and led Duke's belated comeback from an 0-20 deficit to a 21-20 victory over Georgia Tech.

Helinski accounted for two Indiana touchdowns and intercepted 3 Michigan passes. Leake played another fine game on offense and defense against Colorado. Guglielmi passed for Notre Dame's only touch down and made two lightning fast recoveries of Navy fumbles, one preventing a tying touchdown.

Others nominated this week included: Charlie Bussey, Clemson; Vic Prinzi, Florida State; Lenny Moore, Penn State; Bill Murakowski, Purdue; Corny Salvaterra, Pittsburgh: Billy DeGraaf, Cornell; Delbert Shofner, Baylor; Richard Vick, Texas A&M; Henry Moore, Arkansas; Glen Dyer, Texas, and Primo Villanueva, UCLA.

World Affairs Group Plans Meet Today

The planning committee of the Fifth Annual World Affairs Conference will meet here tomorrow, Dwight R. Rhyne, assistant director of the UNC Extension Division, in charge of arrangements said yesterday.

The meeting will be held at 11 o'clock in Room 5, Carroll Hall.

The planning committee, comprised of representatives from civic and religious organizations active in the State, will make complete plans for the annual World Affairs Conference to be held here in February. Mrs. Joyce H. Shearin, Roanoke Rapids, chairman, International Relations Department of the North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside.

More and more interest is being shown in the Conference each year, Mr. Rhyne said, pointing out that in the past two years, district follow-up conferences have been held as a result of the work of the State Conferences.

Purpose of the organization, he said, is to provide the leaders with more knowledge about international relations and the United Nations in particular.

Carolina Grad Judge Harris Dies At 68

RALEIGH, Nov. 2 (AP)—Judge W. C. Harris of Raleigh, who guided the course of justice from the Superior Court bench for 27 years, died early today.

Gov. Umstead and Chief Justice M. V. Barnhill were among those who paid tribute to the 68-year-old jurist. Harris retired effective Oct. 1 because of poor health.

Twice in the past year he underwent surgery for a throat ailment. His condition had been critical for about a week.

"The state has lost a faithful and able public servant, and I have lost a fine friend," Gov. Umstead declared. "His fairness, wisdom, understanding of human nature, friendliness and courtesy to all those who came into his court coupled with a desire to always do justice to all men, will be remembered by lawyers and laymen alike for many years to come."

Chief Justice Barnhill said Judge Harris "possessed a great store of sound common sense and his heart was filled with the milk of human kindness." He added Harris "administered the law in a fatherly sort of way" which left litigants feeling "they had received fair and just treatment."

John Beshara, chairman of the IDC Social Committee which is in charge of the event, had this to say: "The IDC is hoping for a big turn-out at this event. We are sponsoring this as a campus-wide program and we urge everybody to come, to bring their dates, their friends and their blankets. We'll provide the rest. In case of rain, heaven forbid, we'll all go over to Memorial Hall and really whoop it up. We are expecting anywhere from two to 5,000 people and we hope that everyone will cooperate with us in making the event a success and with the tremendous problem of keeping the crowd orderly throughout the broadcast."

There They Go—Destroying Childhood Dreams

DURHAM, Nov. 2 (AP)—No Virginia, a camel does not store water in his hump.

Take the word of two Duke University zoologists, Dr. Knut Schmidt-Nielson and his wife, Dr. Bodil-Nielsen, who have just returned from the Algerian desert where for a year they studied how the camel can live in hot dry regions that would kill most other animals.

They found that the camel's hump consists of fat. Nor is there any evidence of a water compartment in the stomach.

They did find the camel can stand an increase of as much as 11 degrees Fahrenheit in body temperature. Such a fever would kill human beings and most animals. But the camel doesn't get a fever.

The doctors found that the camel begins sweating only after a considerable increase in body temperature and even then does not drip with perspiration. This stinginess with body moisture is one of the reasons that camels can go for weeks without water.

The Bodil-Nielsens say they will be busy for another year putting their findings into shape for scientific journals.

Foreign Student Describes India

"In the short term program we have been trying to solve the problem of student lodging and health on a long term basis," Agawala said.

At present neither the government nor universities have introduced any program which provides medical facilities for the students.

WUS has been constructing two student health centers with a cost of $35,000 each. The government of India put up $20,000 and WUS $15,000 on the project.

"These health centers provide a student health insurance scheme to the entire student population. We have been able to complete this project at the University of Delhi and the University of Pata, but there are 30 universities in India and therefore little has been done," Agawala said.

On the short term program the WUS has taken up six programs: Student health, student lodging, text books, scholarships, vocational centers and training of student leaders in rural communities.

On commenting on his visit to UNC, Agawala said, "I have been, to put it in one word, 'educated,' but I don't have a degree. I have learned a lot."

Agawala said the most important function of WUS is to give the student courage in God and to bring a divided world in philosophies, idealogies and religions, the forces breaking up the world, together.

"We have to dedicate ourselves to God," Agawala said, "for service to God is nothing else but to serve our fellow brethren."

upright piano, a gift of the Paris Bach Society. She had the opportunity of practicing on the piano herself. It was especially built for Schweitzer to withstand the ravages of the humidity and weather in Africa. It didn't stay in tune very long, but she said she got used to it to the point that it didn't bother her. Schweitzer did not have an organ, but the Gaveau had a pedal attachment similar to the pedal arrangement that is found on organs.

Working in Africa with Schweitzer was a hard but inspiring job, said Miss Deneke. All of the persons working with him felt that they were privileged to be able to do it.

Miss Deneke is a graduate of Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford University. It was while she was engaged in a concert tour in behalf of her alma mater that Schweitzer whom she had met through her connections with the Schumann and Mendelssohn families, asked her to come to Africa. At first she declined the offer, because of her concert commitments. Then a generous friend, Mrs. Edward S. Harkness, told her she was working too hard and needed a rest, so Miss Deneke then decided to accept Dr. Schweitzer's offer.

This is Miss Deneke's sixth tour of the United States. The first four were on behalf of Lady Margaret Hall, and the present one is for Saint Ann's. The proceeds from her last tour, the fifth, were given to Saint Hilda's College, Oxford, and amounted to a 1,000 pounds. It was in connection with her effort on behalf of Saint Hilda's that she had the chance to meet Princess Margaret Rose. Both of them were present at a cornerstone laying ceremony there, and Miss Deneke had tea with the princess following the ceremony.

Miss Deneke is also the owner of one of the most extensive collections of the letters and manuscripts of Mendelssohn in existence. They were a gift of the composer's grandson.

The Boys In Old West Dorm Are Still Hunting Miss 'B'

Has anyone seen a picture of a girl in blue and gold shorts and sweater with a large "B" on the front of the sweater?

Raymond M. Taylor, president of Old West, announced that the picture of Miss "B" is missing from the dorm social room. Miss B was the Sweetheart of Old West last year.

Miss "B" is Lynda Pope, 17-year-old senior in Belmont High School. She was the "B" in the majorettes of the Belmont band last year.

According to Taylor the Old West boys saw her last year at the band day football game. When the boys had a dorm meeting, someone mentioned the idea of making her the dorm sweetheart.

The idea became a reality and Taylor wrote Miss 'B," asking her if she would accept the honor. Miss "B" said that she would be glad and honored to hold the position. She sent the dorm a picture of her in her majorette uniform.

The picture was placed in a frame in the social room. Taylor said, "The picture was the subject of a great deal of observation."

Since Miss "B" was the dorm sweetheart the boys wired her a dozen red roses on Valentine's Day.

The picture was still in the social room when Taylor went home for the summer. Taylor reported that the picture was taken sometime during the summer. Old West had no residents during the summer because it was being remodeled.

When the boys returned this fall the picture was missing. The old members of the dorm wanted to know where Miss "B" was.

Taylor said "We sure would like to have the picture back."

She Wants Briefcase

Miss Ienke Kimmel, a graduate student from the Netherlands, has lost a brown leather briefcase.

She left the briefcase on one of the shelves in Lenoir Hall Sunday and when she came to pick it up, it was missing.

The briefcase contained letters, photographs and other items including her address in several places.

Miss Kimmel, who lives in several places.

Miss Kimmel, who lives in Kenan Dormitory, says she would like to have the briefcase returned; or, if the person who accidentally took it would call her she would be glad to pick it up.

UP Wants To Exempt Vets From Required Phys. Ed.

Party Feels Ex-GI's Need More Academic Life; Legislature Will Get Measure Tonight

The University Party tonight will introduce a bill in student Legislature to exempt all veterans who can pass the fundamentals test from the one year of required physical education.

Rueben Leonard, chairman of the University Party, said yesterday, "The University Party feels that since veterans have been out of school much longer than the average freshman, that it takes more time for them to adapt themselves to academic life."

Leonard also said that since so many of the veterans are going into pre-law, pre-med and pre-dental schools, that in itself is rough enough without putting an extra hardship on them.

According to the bill, all veterans have been through either basic training or boot camp plus a certain amount of supervised recreation, thus they won't be missing too many of the benefits offered by compulsory physical education. At the present time, veterans with undue hardships can appeal to a faculty committee headed by Dean C. P. Spruill, dean of the General College, for exemptions.

Dean Spruill said yesterday that he knew there was much dissatisfaction on the part of all concerned with the present physical education set-up. He also said that the present policy of the one year required physical education was formulated by the Administrative Board of the General College and submitted to the Faculty Council. The Faculty Council represents the whole faculty in all faculty affairs.

The bill will be in the form of a resolution to be presented to the Administrative Board.

The UP completed nominations for candidates for the coming elections Tuesday night in an unusually long session, which lasted more than two hours.

Before the nominations began, Bev Webb gave a legislature report and discussed the bills introduced by the party at the last meeting of the legislature. He discussed at length the bill concerning the abolishment of quizzes during fraternity rush week, and also told of the bills to be introduced in the near future.

Charles Ackerman gave a publicity report and discussed types of publicity to be used in the coming elections.

The complete slate of nominations is as follows: Dorm Men's I, Buzz Merritt and Steve Phelps: Dorm Men's II, Bill Blue and Dave Whitaker; Dorm Men's III, Bob Stapleton, Bill Groce and Bill Ginn; Dorm Men's IV, Bill Kirkman and Lionel King; Dorm Men's V, Pat Hunter, John Zollicoffer and Jim Montieth.

Town Men's I, Jack Stevens, Colin McMillan, Hoke Thompson, Larry Cobb, Jim Martin and Tom Johnson; Town Men's II, Jim Exum; Town Men's III, Jim Beatty, Charles Ackerman, Jerry Harrington, Watt Huntley and Lamont Krimminger; Town Women's, Bebe Baumann; Dorm Women's, Luanne Thornton, Laura Ervin, Nan Brown and Jane Cocke.

Junior Class Officers: President, Bill Sanders; vice president, Ken Anderson; secretary, Anne Warren; treasurer, Al Resnick, and social chairman, Mary Dunn.

Ed Jordan, attorney general, said, "I sincerely feel that the University Party has the most qualified and responsible candidates running in this election that it has ever had before. They are outstanding."

Chairman Leonard said, The" meeting was undoubtedly the best that the University Party has ever had. There was more enthusiasm present than there is at most Carolina pep rallies. We are confident that we have the best candidates, and we feel sure that the students know it."

Tar Heels Got Cold In Hurry Yesterday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolinians turned from the heat of the political campaigns to another favorite subject today—the weather.

Winter's initial assault on the state found several temperatures well below freezing yesterday, with more of the same predicted today.

Low temperatures of 15 to 20 were predicted for the mountains, with readings of 22 to 28 elsewhere. Increasing cloudiness and somewhat warmer was the forecast for today.

Asheville reported a low of 19 Wednesday morning. Charlotte had a shivering 24, Greensboro reported 25, Raleigh 28 and Wilmington 29.

UNC Agencies Contributed To Negro Study

Two University agencies have already made contributions to the study of racial integration in the public schools as the result of the U. S Supreme Court decision.

The New York Times, in the Sunday edition, October 31, gave high praise to the University's Institute of Government for its recent report to Governor William B. Umstead on the background of the decision and possible solutions.

"Historically and statistically and for its educational value, the Institute's report is almost without parallel in this field of research," the Times' editorial said.

Entitled "A Southern Reconnaissance," the editorial mentioned various Southern groups who have responded cooperatively to the Supreme Court's requests for help from the states in implementing the law.

Governor Umstead's Special Advisory Commission on Education was described as "an able, nonpolitical" group studying the public school system of the State.

Lefler Wins Award

THE WACHOVIA HISTORICAL Society has awarded its Spangenberg medal to Dr. Hugh T. Lefler "in recognition of his excellent 'North Carolina, The History of a Southern State.'"

This medal was "presented as a token of recognition by the Society of important historical contribution to North Carolina's history."

The medal was presented in behalf of the Society by Dr. Douglas L. Rights, Winston-Salem, its president.

Solons Will Get 13 Bills

Thirteen bills will come before student Legislature at 7 o'clock tonight in Phi Hall, New East, including a resolution concerning Rush Week quizes, a bill setting up a Veteran Affairs Commission and a resolution putting the student Legislature on record as being "absolutely opposed to any rise in tuition."

A resolution establishing a Judicial Problems Study Commission; a bill establishing a Legislature Complaint Board; a bill which would establish a board for negotiating with the administration; a resolution asking for a stoplight at the gym; a resolution commending the IDC and establishing a Social Activities Commission; a resolution which would initiate a study of the legislative and executive branches of student government; a bill placing a legislator in charge of Victory Village affairs in the Legislature; a bill setting up a training program for new student government officers, and a resolution establishing a commission to study the problems presented by the lack of University housing will be acted on.

Student Group Secretary Will Talk Tonight

Mrs. Ruth Haines Purkaple, program secretary for the Committee on Friendly Relations among Foreign Students, will speak tonight at an International Student Supper Meeting in Lenoir Hall. The meeting will begin at 5:30 and close shortly after 7 in time for those who wish to attend the Carolina Forum Lecture by Norman Thomas at 8 in Hill Hall.

Those wishing to attend should go through the cafeteria line between 5:30 and 5:45 and carry their trays to second floor front dining room where the meeting will be held.

Mrs. Purkaple will speak on "World Understanding Through Visits With International Students." Mrs. Purkaple comes to Chapel Hill at the end of a month-long tour of university communities in the Mid-West and South. Her meeting here is being sponsored by the World Understanding Commissions of the University YMCA and YWCA.

Late Permission

Late permission will be granted for all girls attending the Stan Kenton concert in Raleigh on November 11.

The girls, who will be representives from the Stray Greeks, Women's Residence Council and the Interdependent Women's Council, will be giving out some 250 dozen cookies from Thell's Bakery.

The Interdormitory Council, which is sponsoring the blanket party and radio broadcast, is also furnishing 100 gallons of coffee through the courtesy of Lenoir Dining Hall.

John Beshara, chairman of the IDC Social Committee, said, "We had originally planned to serve hot chocolate instead of coffee, but we were unable to arrange for anybody to handle such a big order.

"The problem involved was one of keeping the chocolate hot and no one had the facilities. Thanks must go to Mr. Prillaman, manager of Lenoir Dining Hall, who has gone to great efforts in supplying the tremendous amount of coffee. We hope that everybody will be just as happy or happier with the coffee, which will be good and hot."

Fired Catawba Profs Win Right To Papers

By LOUIS KRAAR
DTH Associate Editor

DURHAM, Nov. 3—Two fired Catawba College music professors who are suing their former college for a "malicious and unfair" dismissal won the right to examine certain college documents after an afternoon of courtroom drama.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher J. Thomas, the two former professors, asked Durham Superior Court Judge Clifton L. Moore for 20 documents—several of which relate to alleged embezzlement and homosexuality on the Salisbury college campus. And Judge Moore, reversing a decision of Orange County's Superior Court clerk, granted all but four.

CHRISTOPHER THOMAS

The Thomases were discharged from the college for alleged disloyalty to the administration in 1952. Since then, the American Association of University Professors have declared that the music teachers "were devoted" and "did not fail in loyalty."

The affair started several years ago with an argument over "standards" in the Catawba Music Department, according to Thomas. The discharged professor, who now lives in Chapel Hill, said: "I wanted high standards, and he (the college president) didn't."

William Dalton, Jr., attorney for the Thomases, took the position that the two teachers were fired for saying at a faculty meeting that Catawba College President A. R. Keppel was involved in embezzlement and for reporting to a dean homosexuality in the Music Department, which Thomas headed.

"We have to prove these things. And to do it we need the papers. Our position is that the things Mr. Thomas said were true," the attorney said.

Catawba College attorney Stahle Lynn, Jr., termed the document request "merely a fishing expedition or scavanger hunt to see what they (the professors) can find." He added, "The reason we deny the plaintiffs the right to have these papers is that they do not pertain to the contract."

And Barney T. Jones, attorney for the Thomases, argued, "This is not just a breach of contract. This is a malicious breach of contract. The plaintiff in this action has been falsely accused and discharged."

Jones said that the papers he wanted would show that the professors were wrongfully fired. He concluded, "It is the ugliest pic-

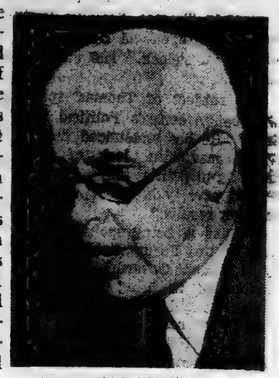
Young GOP's Meet Tonight

Porter Griggs, president of the UNC Young Republican Club, in announcing his group's meeting tonight, said yesterday, "The officers of the YRC are very upset over the seemingly one-sided view of The Daily Tar Heel's editorial page. With Herblock and Drew Pearson running daily with their respective blasts at the GOP, we can't understand why the editor and his associates must also force their pro-Democratic party views on the campus and student body."

The club is meeting tonight in Roland Parker Lounge number 1 of Graham Memorial at 7 o'clock. Griggs said that 'The Daily Tar Heel issue and the Carolina Forum" would be discussed.

The State Of Our Liberty

Norman Thomas is still a man with a program.



In the Twenties and Thirties, as we noted last week, he was plugging away for such "radical" notions as social security and other ideas that have since become accepted parts of the American economy. His latest advocacy is a sane system of civil rights, something which will likely come harder than social security did and is as sorely needed.

Mr. Thomas, who is on the campus today for a Carolina Forum speech, has set down in book form a factual portrayal of the state of liberty in this country, along with his own suggestions for plugging the holes in the dike. (The Test of Freedom, Norton, 1954) He steers a straight, sane and consistent line between the twin evils of Communism and McCarthyism, rejecting both, and arrives at a program that deserves careful study and national acceptance.

Norman Thomas does all this with an insight that is, after all, not so remarkable when one remembers that he has known violations of liberty more intimately than most of us. It was no easier to be a Socialist during the Wilson administration and the first World War than it is today. Mr. Thomas was doing battle with McCarthyism long before Senator McCarthy "discovered" the "Red Menace" in 1949.

Mr. Thomas warns against the assumption that "because the McCarthys, big and little, have given the wrong answer to Communism, there is no need for any answer except a touching faith that truth is mighty and must prevail. "Not so," he says, "can our freedom be preserved and expanded." Guarantee to Communists the due process of law to which anyone in the country is entitled, he urges. Let them stay out of jail, organize their own party, and participate in elections. Do not outlaw them. (He wrote his book before the closing days of the 83rd Congress) but do not allow them conspiratorial privileges any more than you would protect a bank robber's conference.

It is the insistent theme of Norman Thomas that Americans can meet the Communist menace without becoming a race of demagogues. McCarthyism is a terrible burden in the anti-Communist fight and could in itself reduce the United States to a police state. The alternative, on which Norman Thomas has turned a spotlight, is a big stick policy toward both Communist imperialism and McCarthy opportunism. It is possible, it is only consistent, to treat both as enemies, as does Mr. Thomas, and as did Judge Learned Hand, whom Thomas quotes:

NORMAN THOMAS

. . . neither Communism nor McCarthyism is the end

"I believe that that community is already in process of dissolution where each man begins to eye his neighbor as a possible enemy, where nonconformity with the accepted creed, political as well as religious, is a mark of disaffection; where denunciation, without specification or backing, takes the place of evidence; where orthodoxy chokes freedom of dissent; where faith in the eventual supremacy of reason has become so timid that we dare not enter our convictions in the open lists, to win or lose."

That is a description of McCarthyism, and it was this same Judge Learned Hand who upheld the conviction of the Communist leaders under the Smith Act.

Norman Thomas comes to Carolina today as one of the most articulate spokesmen for civil rights in the land. His ideas on the subject are the most reliable and reasonable we've heard. They constitute, as a body, another Norman Thomas dissent against totalitarianism, the same evil he has fought, in all its forms, for four decades. He will have performed another lasting service to his country if someday Americans bear out the truth of his central assumption: ". . . that neither Communism nor McCarthyism is the end of the American dream."

Lux Libertas, But For How Many?

It occurred just as the bell rang to end one of yesterday's English classes. A student jolted us when he asked whether the "Mark Hopkins progressive idea" of "mass education" has not been somewhat discredited.

The remark, coming in the classroom of a State university, a public school, the capstone of a public education system, seems weirdly out of keeping.

Of course, the student has every right to his opinion. And to express it. If he feels strongly enough about his idea, he is entitled to shout it from a soapbox at the corner of East Franklin Street and Raleigh Road. But we disagree with him if he really believes mass, or public, education, has been discredited.

An intellectual aristocracy, valued in its own right, independent from the larger groups who are unfitted to drink from richer nectars of education, can't be expendable in any land.

At the same time, we would remind him that we live in a democracy and that what he has called "mass education" must hold precedence—even over the development of an intellectual aristocracy. We cite a great believer in "mass education," Thomas Jefferson, who wrote: "Every government degenerates when trusted to the rulers of the people alone. The people themselves are its only safe depositories. And to render even them safe, their minds must be improved to a certain degree." In a letter, Jefferson also said: "By far the most important bill in our whole code is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people."

"'Tis education forms the common mind." The ultimate aim of our school system, public or private, must be bent in the direction we hope collectively to follow.

YOU Said It

Is The Guest Room In The Attic?

Editor:

In your editorial of the Saturday issue, October 30, there is a suggestion concerning the possible exchange of a student from the University of Goettingen, Germany. You say that, "One of those empty rooms on the third floor of Steele would provide excellent housing for the German youth and would cost our students nothing." I wish you had stopped there, but you add: "And the exchange student, being from Europe, probably wouldn't realize he was being segregated at all!"

I suppose that in these days of a drive for economy, your first suggestion might merit some consideration. But your last statement can only be attributed to gross naivete. The problem of segregation as it exists in the South of the United States is well known in all foreign countries, and today it is being followed by the world press very closely, ever since the celebrated decision of the Supreme Court. Even the subject is as divided abroad as it is here in this country, but I can assure you that any one of us who has come to this country to study wants to be accepted, wants to be a part with his fellow American students. It would certainly be puzzling, to say the least, to find oneself set aside with others who are set aside because they are not acceptable. An exchange student brought to this campus by the IDC is much more a guest of his fellow American students than other foreign students. And since when do we invite a guest to our home and show him to his room in the attic?

D. E. Weisbach

(The editorial in question intended no inhospitality to the Goettingen transfer student. In it, we were attempting to point a sarcastic finger at the inequity of the University not being able to furnish a free room to the German student, while rooms are vacant on the campus. We believe that nobody, including the two Negro students on third floor Steele, should live in the "attic."—Editor.)

Carolina Front

Some Tips For Ackerman's Committee

Louis Kraar

WITH ADMIRABLE (although characteristic) enthusiasm, two students set out this week to solve one of Carolina's oldest problems—the "distinct line of division between dormitories and fraternities."

The students—Charles Ackerman of the University Party and Robert Newton of the Student Party—will, together with a nonpolitical student, form a committee. And according to Ackerman, father of the plan, the group will investigate the "general thought" that the University Party is dominated by fraternity men.

At this stage, I would like to go along with Chancellor House and Ray Jefferies and pat these students on the back. But I can't.

The line of division between dorm and fraternity men (and it is not as "distinct" as Ackerman would suggest) will take more than study by a three-man committee to erase. And, in many cases, this line is not a bad thing.

Relations between any individuals can be helped by committees, legislation, and discussion groups. But when it gets down to the point of action, it is up to individuals to get along with others on a personal basis. Thus, I find such things as student-faculty teas just poor substitutes for individual students and teachers, who for most part, make little attempt to know each other outside the classroom.

One UNC society, the Order of the Grail, was founded to promote better relations between fraternity and dorm elements on the campus. And to the extend that it's brought the two groups together to do service work and discuss campus problems, the Grail has helped the division.

BUT ON the other hand, campus politics hinge on that same fraternity-dorm split. The very "distinct line of division" that University Party man Charles Ackerman is concerned about seems to be the basis for two campus political parties.

While I wouldn't suggest that the SP is strictly a dorm party and the UP an exclusively fraternity party, it is a fact that the SP gets most of its support from dorm voters and the UP relies mainly on fraternity votes.

Many fraternity men belong to the SP, and many non-fraternity men belong to the UP. But when it gets down to counting the rolls (and evaluating the philosophies) of the two parties, two things are evident: The University Party is dominated by fraternity men, and the Student Party caters mainly to dorm interest.

WHENEVER THE Administration here looks at grades, there is always a fraternity and a non-fraternity average on grades. Intra-murals are divided along the same lines. These two groups simply make up our male population.

It would seem that the concern of committees like the one Ackerman formed is to try to educate the campus to the fact that the interests of the University should prevail over the special interests of any group in it.

This, of course, raises the question of what is the interest of the University. And then one looks about him, decides that the University is here to educate, and that most of the students are here for a vast number of other reason than to be educated. But this is another problem. And if the current mania for forming committees continues, I'm sure one will soon be formed to study this too.

IF THE Ackerman committee can bring students closer together, it's time would have been well spent.

I might suggest that it meet in the Rendezvous Room though, bring dates, and invite a few other friends. Perhaps, at the second meeting more students could be invited.

As for agenda, this reporter knows none better than dancing and pleasant conversation.

After a few such meetings, the group would probably decide that there really isn't any "distinct line of division between fraternities and dormitories"—just between people.

'What I Want Is A New Model City'

The Weeks-Mitchell Feud

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—Now that the President has the elections and his Denver vacation out of the way, there is a problem right inside his own cabinet which will require expert and immediate attention. Otherwise, he's likely to have a cabinet resignation blow up in his face.

Only the phenomenal patience of Secretary of Labor James Mitchell has prevented such a blow-up before this. All summer he has been turning the other cheek to the roughhouse tactics of his colleague, Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks, but how long it will continue is uncertain.

This, of course, may be officially denied, but nevertheless here are some of the inside facts regarding this cabinet friction.

The chief current issue between the two men is the fact that Secretary of Commerce Weeks wants labor put under the anti-trust laws. Secretary of Labor Mitchell does not.

However, the issue actually goes even deeper, to the fact that weeks, reared in a conservative Boston business background, considers it his job to champion every form of business, even to the extent of barging into the preserve of his cabinet colleague who handles the problems of labor.

Weeks' father, a Bay state blueblood, was Secretary of War under President Harding. And Weeks himself was head of the United Carr Manufacturing Company; Reed and Barton, Silversmiths; director of Gillette Safety Razor, Pacific Mills, First National Bank, Rand Pullman Co., Atlas Plymouth, and so on.

Mitchell, too, has represented business a good part of his life but his chief job was to represent it in dealing with labor. He was handpicked by Governor Dewey for Ike's labor post because he knew how to deal with labor, and in a short period of time he has done a creditable job. Labor leaders, though disliking the Eisenhower administration, like Mitchell.

The Weeks-Mitchell cabinet squabble probably would be no worse than the personality tiffs that have occurred in most cabinets in the past were it not for the fact that Weeks seems so determined to prevail on the question of the antitrust laws.

He doesn't seem to care who is Secretary of Labor just so long as his views dominate. He fought Eisenhower's first Labor Secretary, Martin Durkin, and finally induced his resignation over the Taft-Hartley Act. Now, if Ike doesn't step in and stick to his cabinet knitting he may find himself looking for a new Secretary of Labor quicker than he thinks.

FOA Stalls

There's a big difference between the way the American Red Cross operates and the Foreign Operations Administration when it comes to relieving human suffering.

After the disastrous flash flood that killed more than 200 people at Salerno, Italy, the Red Cross was most cooperative in informing this column about the operation of its international organization in Geneva and just what steps were being taken to help alleviate the tragic disaster.

It was further suggested that since President Eisenhower had set a public policy of using American farm surpluses to relieve distress abroad, the Foreign Operations Administration also might tell us what it was doing to help at Salerno.

"Miss Evelyn Ripps in Room 804 at FOA is handling the Italian flood problem," explained Mr. William Breyer of the Red Cross.

The door of 804 was open, and Miss Ripps, a lady of about 30, was seated at her desk.

"I'd like to get any information available on what FOA is doing

SINCLAIR WEEKS

roughhouse tactics

in connection with the recent flood in Italy," she was asked.

Miss Ripps made no immediate reply. Instead she began turning over all the papers on her desk so that the blank blacks stared up.

"When you people come strolling around here, we just turn everything over," she remarked. "And as far as what we are doing in Italy is concerned, you read the papers, don't you?

"I just thought there might be some recent development that I hadn't heard about, or something that the papers had overlooked," was the reply.

"Well, I'll tell you," confided Miss Ripps. "The first thing you find after a flood is that a good many bodies are missing. Does that answer your question?"

By this time she had turned all her papers over, and was looking in an FOA telephone directory.

"Have I done anything to antagonize you? I didn't mean to, but I'm sorry if I did."

Miss Ripps was not to be appeased.

"I don't think that has anything to do with the case," she snapped, and returned to her phone book.

Note—The food sent by the U.S.A. to foreign countries is paid for by all the taxpayers, and the fact that it is needed in certain disaster areas is certain no military secret.

Mohammed Ali's Miracle

Before Prime Minister Mohammed Ali rushed back to Pakistan, he achieved the near miracle of bringing CBS colored television to NBC — A diplomatic feat equal to coaxing India's Prime Minister Nehru to the Capital of Pakistan, Karachi.

NBC and CBS take their rivalry over colored television so seriously that it's taboo around NBC to watch a CBS program. The competition has lasted for years, is deep-rooted and bitter. But Mohammed Ali didn't know this when he was invited up to NBC's executive suite in Radio City.

A public-relations man suggested that the Prime Minister might like to watch colored television. Mohammed agreed enthusiastically, and an NBC official recommended an appropriate NBC program. But the Prime Minister had a conflicting engagement and arranged to come back later.

At the time he selected, however, there was nothing on colored television except a CBS show. So NBC was stuck with a Prime Minister and nothing to show him but a CBS program. Sheepishly, the NBC officials switched on CBS.

But the unfamiliar spectacle of a CBS show on an RCA set in the NBC executive offices was too much. The set, tuned to pick up NBC shows excusively, refused to show more than a fuzzy image of the CBS program.

So embarrassed NBC officials sent their engineers up on the roof to tinker with the antennas.

Finally, after considerable adjusting, the CBS show got through to NBC.

Lincoln, Vikings & Others

Ed Yoder

I first got to know Gilbert Highet when I wandered into a friend's house about two years ago and heard a fascinating Scottish voice pouring out of the radio.

The voice, they told me, was drifting all of the way down into this part of the country from station WQXR in New York City. And it belonged to a professor of classics at Columbia University. From that time on, when my box of coils and tubes would work properly, I was a weekly listener to Gilbert Highet and to his saga and graceful talks on life and literature.

Now Mr. Highet has progressed through enough Sunday night chats to have material for another book—A Clerk Of Oxenford. (New York: Oxford University Press.)

Beyond the shadow of a doubt, Mr. Highet's new book has the stuff of which best-sellers are made. It has grace and wit and thought and is blessed with exposition in a clear and flowing style.

Mr. Highet sees all of literature—novels, poetry, history, books of the sea and of mountain climbing, stories of the supernatural, and great orations—as a continuum. To bring the balanced insight he possesses to bear on current literature has undoubtedly required long years of concentrated, careful, and planned reading. A scholar of the classics, Mr. Highet, retaining his keen knowledge and depth there, has sauntered out into the currents of fiction and non-ficton that have moved through every age since the dawn of creative imagination. So, seeing literature as a vast, conjoined, flowing body as he does, Mr. Highet can also see the intricate and not unimportant interconnection between, say the work of Lucretius and a modern book on physics.

Let's look, for instance, at his little essay, "The Philosopher and the Atom." Mind you, Lucretius lived and wrote several decades before Christ; Highet quotes these lines from the Roman naturalist: "Watch carefully and see how, when the light of the sun/ pierces a darkened room in a house and spreads its rays:/ then you will see a multitude of tiny bodies / mingling in myan ways and moving within the light,/ as though in perpetual conflict, battling eternally,/ struggling with one another in crowds and never stopping,/ incessantly exercised in contact and disjunction. From this you can infer how the invisible atoms are being tossed and driven through the infinite void." Lucretius was clairvoyante to write this. But just as clairvoyant is Highet to draw parallels as he does.

Mr. Highet's essays, as you guess, might swoop down from the Twentieth Century to any period in history. One minute you're reading about Viking heroes named "Burnt Nial" and within ten more you're analysing Lincoln's rhetorical devices as he speaks at Gettysburg.

In this time of abrupt cleavage in literary criticism, a door is shut fast. On one side dwell scholars and vernacular-ridden critics who entone the musty chant: art for art's sak eand that alone. This is extremism and fortunately Gilbert Highest is on the other side of the door. A literature-life synthesis, observant and understanding, lends his criticism a sorely-needed voice. We all, I think, have an inherent love for literature, but not literature examined in a lifeless vacuum.

Quote, Unquote

The modern university may be compared with an encyclopedia. The encyclopedia contains many truths. It may contain nothing else. But its unity can be found only in its alphabetical arrangement. The university is in much the same case. It has departments running from art to zoology, but neither the students nor the professors know what is the relation of one departmental truth to another, or what the relation of departmental truths to those in the domain of another department may be . . .

The study of man and nature and of man and man has thus sunk under waves of empiricism and vocationalism.

Tar Babies Entertain Maryland Freshmen Friday In Season's First FroshGame At Kenan

By BOB DILLARD

"Spirit and desire to play are outstanding," spoke freshman Coach Ralph Floyd yesterday afternoon, as he watched his team limber up for the practice session. Friday afternoon offers the chance for the Tar Babies to exhibit this desire, as they meet the frosh from Maryland in the only home game of the season. The contest, slated for 2 p. m., promises to bring plenty of gridiron action to the turf of Kenan Stadium, in the opening activity of the Homecoming week-end.

Floyd announced that 25 Tar Babies are ready for action, with four men on the sidelines with injuries. Quarterback sensation Buddy Sasser, the shotgun that tore the Gamecock frosh of South Carolina apart, will see limited action in the encounter. Sasser received an ankle injury in the rough and tumble Virginia game, and will not start. David Reid, understudy to Sasser in the Virginia contest, received a head injury in yesterday's practice, and was taken to the infirmary for treatment. Extent of the injury has not been determined as of yet.

Halfbacks Wally Vale, whom Floyd deems one of the brightest prospects on the freshman squad, and Steve Kupchick are also on the sidelines. Vale received a kidney injury early in the season, and Kupchick sustained a knee injury in the Virginia encounter. Kupchick will be out of action for the remainder of the season. Also injured is center Jimmy Jones, who has not yet recovered from a shoulder injury received in the High School All-Star game held last year in Greensboro.

The Maryland frosh are virtually unknown to the Carolina coaching staff. However, three Terrapins received recognition as being worthy foes. Phil Perlo, a 6 ft. 170 lb. quarterback, who is rated a fine passer and a good varsity prospect, Bob Ruselyon, a 6 ft. 170 lb. halfback, primarily known for his lightning-like speed, and Ed Cook, a 6' 4" 217 lb. end, all rated mention by Floyd.

The line average for the Terrapins is a hefty 217 pounds per man, one of the largest to come out of the state in several years.

The Tar Babies will try to preserve their unbeaten record in the contest. They have garnered wins from South Carolina and Virginia, with one game, that with the Wake Forest frosh, being called off because of Hurricane Hazel.

The tentative starting line up, as announced by Floyd, is Vincent Olen and Buddy Payne at ends, Leo Russavage and Paul Blazer at tackles, Willis Setzer and Jack Lineburger at guards, Jack Llewellyn at center, Dave Reed or Jim Marquette at quarter, Bill Williams at one half, and either Jim Varnum or Joe Temple at the other half. John Gaca will start at fullback.

Murray Stresses Passing Phase For Navy Battle

DURHAM, Nov. 3. (AP)—Coach Bill Murray sent his Duke Blue Devils through a one-hour passing drill here today as the Blue Devils prepare for Saturday's clash with Navy in Norfolk's Oyster Bowl.

Both offense and defense came in for attention during the passing phase with all three varsity units seeing action in the control scrimmage session. On offense varsity teams worked against each other, but on defense a freshman unit furnished the opposition.

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

Sonny Ridenhour, 5'10", 170-pound halfback from Winston-Salem, ripped off a couple of lengthy scoring jaunts down on Navy Field yesterday, as the varsity offensive machine appeared well-oiled for the South Carolina test here Saturday.

Parlay sheets are favoring the Gamecocks by six points, but Tar Heel chances are darkening almost as fast as the gray November skies. Coach George Barclay announced that fleet halfback Ed Sutton, sophomore sensation of the turbulent Wake Forest battle, will definitely be unfit for duty Saturday. This brings to two the number of heavy-duty backs Barclay will be minus against the Palmetto crew. Sutton joined Fullback Marshall Newman in the infirmary Monday afternoon, after painfully twisting his ankle during tackling practice. Newman suffered a severe knee injury in the Tennessee race.

The Tar Heel high command was not exuberant over the manner in which its boys allegedly tackled against the Vols. Monday afternoon a refresher course was given in the fundamentals of the art, in the form of an hour-long head-banging tackling session. A more enthusiastic approach to the tackling task may be forthcoming against South Carolina. Movies of the Tennessee tilt (or Tracy's cross-country) revealed that it was not the Vol Fullback's dazzling speed that hoisted him to the pinnacle of "AP Back of the Week" any more than it was Carolina's inability to pin him once a hold was thrown on him.

Glancing at the statistics: The Tar Heels have gained 1546 net yards to their opponents 1616, which is not bad for a team that has won two games, lost three, and tied one. They have acquired 82 first downs, compared to 89 for the enemies—still not bad. They miss the educated toe of last year's Dick Lackey. The punting average is 33.2, but their opponents only average 35.3 per boot.

Individually speaking—Connie Gravitte has picked up the most yards rushing, 249 in 45 carries for a 5.5 average. Ed Sutton is close behind with 233 yards in 20 totes, an 11.6 average. Ken Keller, with 176 yards for 38 tries, is third, averaging 4.6.

Marshall Newman, who started the season passing from the quarterback position and continued slinging from the fullback slot, has netted 193 yards with 14 completions out of 37 attempts. He has thrown one touchdown aerial. Albert Long possesses an admirable passing record. The lanky quarterback has thrown only 12 times, completing a phenomenal nine of them, in gaining 110 yards. Two of Long's tosses were good for touchdowns, tops in that department. Len Bullock, starting quarterback, also sports a nifty completion mark: 12 for 17, gaining 99 yards, none for scores, however.

Leaders in various other departments: Gravitte leads in pass interceptions with two, returning them 54 yards. End Norman Lane has caught seven passes, good for gains totaling 70 yards. Gravitte has caught six in gaining 114 yards. Halfback Larry Parker has gathered in the most kick-offs, six, returning them for a total of 128 yards. Parker has also handled most of the punting chores, booting 13 times for an average of an even 34 yards. Gravitte has returned the most punts, five, running them back for a total of 50 yards. Keller, with 17 points, is high man in the scoring field, having tallied two TD's and five extra points. Sutton and Gravitte have two touchdowns apiece to their credit. Keller has been successful in five of six conversion attempts. Long has tried this twice, making both of them.

Coed Tennis Club Meets Wake Forest Girls This Afternoon

The UNC women's tennis club will play host to the Wake Forest lassies today at 3:30 p.m. on the Varsity Courts. The Carolina coeds have been practicing since the opening of school every Monday and Thursday at 4:00 p.m. About 23 girls are members of the club. Last year, the Carolina lassies were undefeated in match play. Members of this year's club are: Mary Lou Jones, Marion Chalmers, Joan Palmer, Sara Cashwell, Charlotte Clement, Linda Clement, Jackie McCarthy, Mike Underwood, Blynn Durning, Johnnie McClaren, Patti Andrews, Liza Little, Itsie Masterton, Joyce Caldwell, Betty Andrews, Janie Howell, Emily Finch, Carol Ann Lee, Carolyn Nelson, Marvin Yount, Amy Morse, Janie Clement, and Susan Hayes. About eleven of these girls will play against Wake Forest this afternoon. Mrs. Frances Hogan is coach of the club.

MONOGRAMMERS MEET

The Monogram Club meets tonight at 7:15 p. m. Important business pertaining to the sponsoring of game movies and entertainment of orphans at the South Carolina game will be dscussed.

All-America Candidate

LEON CUNNINGHAM, 6'2", 205-pound, center for South Carolina's Gamecocks. Cunningham is the Birds' leading candidate for All-America honors. Last year Cunningham was named to True Magazine's All-America team, was selected as All-Southern, All-Atlantic Coast Conference, and Lineman of the Year in South Carolina.

Parker And Neville Lead Locals Against Gamecocks

Halfback Larry Parker and Jimmy (Hoot) Neville will be game co-captains for North Carolina in its homecoming game with South Carolina here Saturday, making the second time this year the two have had that honor. They also led the Tar Heels in the Georgia game.

Coach George Barclay announced the selections today as he pushed preparations for Saturday's 2 p.m. kickoff in the outstanding Atlantic Coast Conference game. Parker and Neville have been two of the team's steadiest performers. Parker gained 40 yards in eleven rushes as the Tar Heels bowed to Tennessee, 26-20, last week.

Much emphasis is being laid on defense this week as the Tar Heels faltered badly in that department against the Vols. Also, South Carolina, the team that tromped the Army, 34-20, is a powerful offensive team. Quarterback Mackie Prickett is the conference's total offensive leader with 529 yards collected in 49 plays. His passing has been sensational. 39 connections in 65 attempts for a total of 354 yards.

The Gamecocks turned back the Tar Heels 18-0 last year and will be favored to repeat. In addition to Army, Rex Enright's Birds have beaten Furman and Clemson. They have been defeated by West Virginia and Maryland. The host team has wins over N. C. State and Wake Forest, a tie with Tulane and losses to Georgia, Maryland and Tennessee.

Although fullback Marshall Newman is expected to be out with an injured knee, the Tar Heels generally should be in good physical shape.

The question here is which Tar Heel back will be man of the day if North Carolina produces one. Connie Gravitte, Ed Sutton and Ken Keller each has monopolized the show on given days. Last week Keller was the hottest Tar Heel back as he scored two of the three touchdowns, making him team scoring leader for the season with 17 points. Sutton and Gravitte each have twelve.

There were some bright spots in the Tar Heels' play at Knoxville, but costly mistakes and especially defensive lapses erased any chance they had to defeat the Southeastern Conference team. Coach Barclay says team will have to turn in a much better performance against South Carolina if it hopes to avenge last year's loss to the Birds.

The Tar Heels have a wide overall edge in their series with the Birds, having won 19 while losing six with four games tied.

The North Carolina freshmen play Maryland's first year men here Friday at 2 p.m. and many alumni are expected to make it a long weekend and see both the varsity and freshmen games.

Maryland's Tamburello Named AC Loop Sophomore Of Week

RALEIGH, Nov. 3 (AP)—Maryland Quarterback Frank Tamburello has won the nomination as the Associated Press Atlantic Coast Conference Sophomore of the Week for his performance in the 20-0 win over South Carolina.

Tamburello, 19, 180-pounder of Baltimore, started his first varsity game against South Carolina and came through with flying colors. Filling in for the injured Charlie Boxold, he directed touchdown drives of 32, 64 and 48 yards. He completed three of six passes for 30 yards and scored two touchdowns, one from the four and the other from the five.

Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland said Tamburello has been an outstanding performer all year, adding:

"He's the kind of boy who is an inspiration to the whole squad and he was just that Saturday. His ball handling was flawless and his running excellent, along with his kicking—he just had a great day. He's been outstanding on defense all year and played an all-around game Saturday. Frank is going to be really great."

Charlie Bussey, Clemson quarterback, was only a notch behind. With his team trailing, 14-0, he took over the quarterback position Saturday and sparked the Tigers to a 32-20 win over Wake Forest. He directed touchdown drives of 69, 71, 54 and 60 yards.

BASEBALL MEETING

There will be a meeting of all freshman and varsity baseball candidates who participated in Fall practices, tonight in 302 Woollen Gym at 7 p. m. Movies taken during Fall practice will be shown, along with other training movies. Freshmen are especially urged to be present.

'Big Brawl' Unfolds In Y-Court

A student politician and a political columnist came to blows over a petite, vivacious coed yesterday, as Y-Court filled with chilly students taking their mid-morning coffee break.

Dragged away by a University policeman were Louis Kraar, associate editor and columnist for The Daily Tar Heel, and Dave Reid, Student Party legislator.

The woman they were fighting over, Connie McMahon, watched as Policeman Harry Gattis grabbed Redi and Kraar by the scruffs of their necks and led them away —Reid allegedly to the University Infirmary, and Kraar to the Chapel Hill jail.

It's All A Joke

Although Reid and Kraar seemed to be in earnest about their difference of opinion, the whole affair was planned by a UNC law fraternity as part of Law Day celebrations, scheduled to be held this weekend, and no one was hurt.

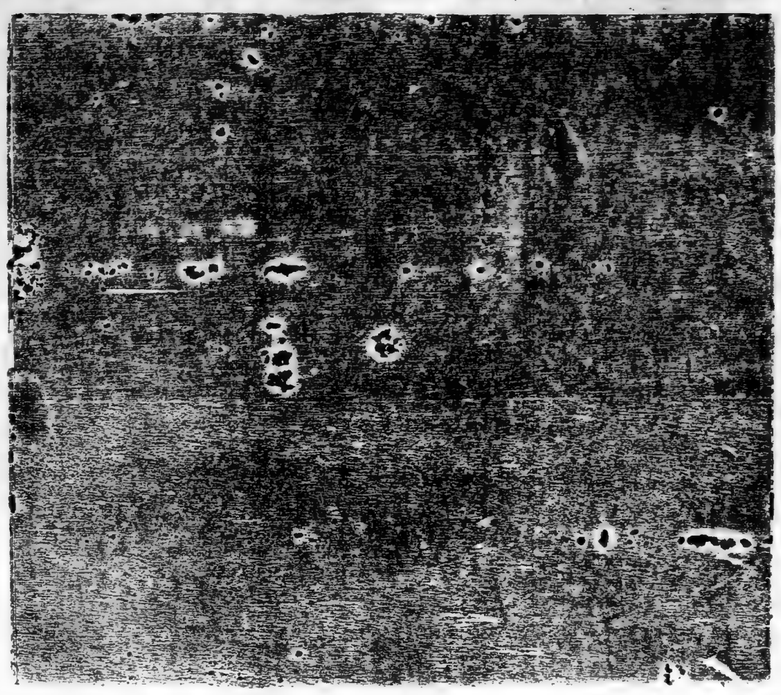
The "fight," which last from 10:02 to 10:05 yesterday morning in the Y's alcove, allegedly started when Kraar and Miss McMahon were in the Y, having a cup of coffee. Reid, alleged to be Miss McMahon's fiance, saw the two and demanded that the coed return his engagement ring.

"I'm fed up with what you've been doing; I'm through with you," Reid was heard to say to Miss McMahon.

(Other informed sources said yesterday that a friend of Reid's had seen Kraar and Miss McMahon in the Rathskeller Tuesday night, drinking beer. The friend, as yet unnamed, told reporters he had followed the two to Kenan Stadium where "I saw them making love." The friend said he visited Reid the same night, and told the politician what he saw. Reid was alleged to say he would kill Kraar.)

Yesterday morning, when the angry "fiance" confronted Kraar and his fiancee, Miss McMahon began to cry. According to witnesses, Reid was heard to say that Kraar could "take her."

"I don't want her," Kraar said, "I was just playing around to test my ability.



"Neither one of you are worth a - - - -," said Kraar. "She's just a Bell Tower baby."

Then the fight began. Reid and Kraar quickly fell to the Y's floor, grappling and trying to get in good blows.

Blood spurted from Reid's neck. (Afterward, Reid maintained that his wound came from a pencil which Kraar wielded when the two were fighting on the floor. Kraar, however, said Reid's neck struck a nail on the wall. Investigation showed a nail did project from the wall approximately where the two were fighting.)

'Case' Will Be Tried

Bob Byrd, of the Law School, said yesterday that Kraar was "out on $5,000 bond," and Reid's "injury" confined him "to the Infirmary." The case of the "assault" will be tried by law students in mock court in the near future.

POLITICIAN DAVE REID has upper hand in this shot as the local politician battles journalist Louis Kraar in fight over young lady's affections.

Cardboard Staff Meeting

There will be a meeting of all cardboard staffers at 7 p. m. tomorrow in the APO room of Graham Memorial. Ushers should bring their pass books. Preparations for the South Carolina and Duke games will be discussed.

CLASSIFIED

THE REWRITE LADY AND THE Managing Editor are now happy to announce that they are going with each other on a steady basis. Flowers and free suppers will gladly be accepted.

ture that I have ever looked at pertaining to a college . . . We're not fishing. We have set forth here only records pertaining to things they (the college administration) say this man was guilty of."

Judge Moore, in granting all but four of the papers, said that the request was "not specific enough to show the purpose of each one." However, he ruled that the professors had a right to some 16 out of the 20. The ones denied included college travel expenses during certain years, "accounts receivable" of the college president, and a committee report by a Dr. Anderson, whose identity wasn't explained in the request.

The professors' attorneys produced a copy of a contract alleged to have been made between Catawba President Keppel and a certain college engineer called Selfridge. The contract, according to the attorneys, provided that Selfridge would build a house for the college president for $2,500.

(Selfridge left the college in 1951 after certain financial irregularities that were settled within the college. Thomas was discharged, according to his attorney, for telling a trustee committee that he "had heard of the contract.")

The copy of the contract the attorneys produced, they said, came from Selfridge's lawyer and they asked the college to produce the original.

Attorney Jones started his final plea in behalf of the professors in a soft, almost inaudible voice, but before he finished he was shouting questions: "Don't they (the college) want the truth? . . . Are they afraid of the truth? Does fault lie with the college?"

From here the case may go a number of places. Catawba Attorneys Lynn and Bonner Sawyer filed notice of an appeal from the document-granting decision. And another phase of the case—a request by the college to have the case swtiched to Rowan County is still hanging.

If the college attorneys gain their appeal, the State Supreme Court may hear the case. If they do not, the professors' attorneys will file complaint and continue the case.

Thus far, action in the has been only in the form of hearings preliminary to the suit. The papers, said the Thomas' attorneys, were necessary in order to file the suit itself.

Honor Council Hopefuls To Be Screened Tonight

The Bi-Partisan Selection Board will meet tonight from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Men's Council Room of Graham Memorial.

The meeting will be for the purpose of interviewing persons for endorsement to run for open positions on the Men's and Women's Honor Councils in the fall elections.

There are three junior seats open on the Women's Council.

On the Men's Council, there are two junior seats, one sophomore seat and one freshman seat open.

Students Listen As Socialist Leader Blasts McCarthyism

By NEIL BASS and DELAINE BRADSHER

"The only people practicing free enterprise today are little boys playing marbles for keeps." So spoke Norman Thomas, Socialist and six-time Presidential candidate, at the Carolina Forum Discussion last evening.

Mr. Thomas was introduced by Dean Fred Weaver, Dean of Student Affairs, who had been introduced previously by Joel Fleishman, chairman of the Carolina Forum.

Thomas, who has been aptly described as being against an upstream current because of his socialistic beliefs, roused the audience with his radical beliefs concerning the current state of affairs of the United States.

A former minister, Mr. Thomas asserted that "straighter thinking is the basic need of the American peoples if universal peace is to be achieved."

Commenting on segregation, the dramatic socialist leader said that he "likes the way that the Supreme Court decision has been received by the South, especially the reaction of Southern religious institutions."

"Communism," Thomas further asserted, "is not to be regarded as a supernatural power. It must be thoroughly understood in order to be dealt with."

"World disarmament in which military powers are reduced to a police level should be enforced by a rejuvenated United Nations," he added.

Aging but still fiery, Thomas, who in two weeks will celebrate his seventieth birthday, also attacked the campaign tactics of both political parties in the recent election. Describing the position of nations in the current state of affairs, the able orator compared them to "quarrelling cats confined to the same cage."

The socialistic political element was described by its leader as being "a catalytic agent to bring forth realignment between the political factions."

Turning to the McCarthy question, Thomas reiterated his former comment that "McCarthy is more of a skin disease than a fatal cancer."

Socialist Talks Of Scientist

The recent Congressional election in the U. S. "doesn't prove much," said Norman Thomas in an interview with The Daily Tar Heel yesterday.

The most remarkable thing about the elections, he thinks, is the wide configuration of results in different localiteis.

Thomas, a tall, amiable, white-thatched gentlemen of 70 years, moved over a wide range of subjects in his interview.

In the Oppenheimer decision, he said, he believes he would have taken the position (against suspension) expressed by Dr. Henry Smyth. Dr. Smith dissented from the Gray Board opinion. His stand on the issue, Thomas said, is close to former High Commissioner John J. McCloy's—favoring "positive security." McCloy thought that Dr. Oppenheimer's value to the country far outweighed any of the charges against him.

McCarthy and McCarthyism, he thinks, are "a bad skin disease and not a cancer." The Communist movement is conspiratorial in nature, he said, and "not a creature of (the investigators') superheated imagination." As an outspoken defender of civil liberties, Thomas, however, strongly opposes McCarthyist tactics.

Thomas's emotions have been strongly aroused by the 83rd Con-

Legislature Accepts Five Bills

Veterans' Affairs And Upped Tuition Discussed By Group

The student Legislature last night passed Manning Muntzing's bill setting up a Veterans Affairs Commission; went on record as being against the proposed University tuition raise; passed a resolution calling for a stoplight at the corner of Raleigh Street and Raleigh Road; and set up a Legislative-Executive Problems Study Commission.

A resolution introduced by Charles Ackerman (UP) which would ask the departments to eliminate quizes during fraternity and sorority rush weeks was held in the Ways and Means Committee because of a plan now being formed to change the length of rush week.

The Veteran's Affairs Commission bill passed unanimously.

David Reid (SP), speaking for Elsie Peterson's (SP) resolution concerning the proposed tuition raise, said there are students at the University now living on the barest minimum. He cited examples of students having to eat on from $1.00 to $1.50 daily. Charlie Ackerman (UP) said that if it was necessary, the state should raise tuition. He did not think the student Legislature was in a position to know whether the raise was necessary.

This resolution passed with only one dissenting vote.

Bev Webb (UP) spoke on the resolution concerning the spotlight at Woollen Gym. It passed unanimously. A bill establishing a commission to study the structure and organization of the branches of student government, introduced by Norwood Bryon (SP), passed unanimously.

Another Dorm Has Paper — 'Grimes Times'

The latest and probably the smallest of the new dormitory newspapers to hit the campus is "The Grimes Times."

The first issue got to the residents of Grimes dorm yesterday. The paper, "published weakly," was organized at a dormitory meeting when residents felt there was a real need of some means to get the news of the various events and happenings in the dorm to all rooms.

Elected as co-editors were Gary Nichols, freshman from Baltimore, Md., and Joe Clapp, freshman from Greensboro. Featured in the paper are weekly messages from the dorm president, Bruce Morton; the intramural manager, Nichols, and University Club representative, Clapp, along with a bi-weekly report from the IDC representative, Troy Barnes.

Circulation for the first edition hit around 150, but that figure is expected to rise in the future when a four-page paper, complete with news, humor, advertisements

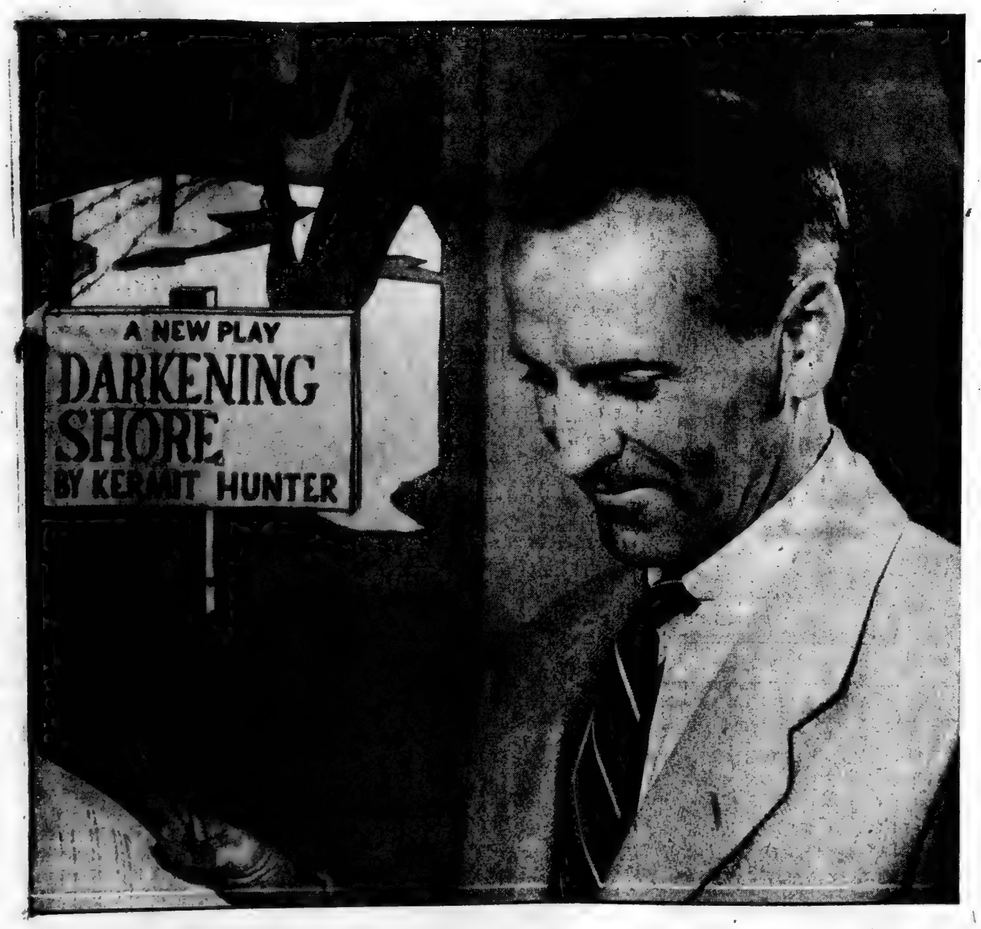
Ambassadors Will Play At Annual Soph Dance



Women's College girls—350 of them—will be invading the UNC campus Nov. 13 to attend the sophomore dance. The annual event will be in Wollen Gym Saturday night from 9 until midnight, and no admission will be charged.

Tickets are now being distributed to sophomore class members and must be shown at the door.

UNC sophomore girls will be hostesses at the dance and dress will be informal, according to Bob J. Young, chairman of the arrangements. The Duke Ambassadors will provide music for dancing and Bill Fetzer, ventriloquist, will entertain during intermission.

Layton McCurdy is handling the tickets. Other committee chairmen include Ann Cannon, Jim Armstrong and Townsend Holt. The dance committee of Graham Memorial Activities Board is co-sponsoring the dance. Chaperones for the evening will be Mrs. Brower from Nurses Dorm, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Holsten and Mrs. Gold from Smith Dorm.

Once A Writer, Always A Writer In Hunter's Case

KERMIT HUNTER, author of the next Playmakers production, "Darkening Shore," smiles as he looks at the script which will soon be brought to life on the stage of the Playmakers Theatre. This new play, following the tradition of The Carolina Playmakers of presenting original scripts of American playwrights, will be premiered Nov. 10 through 14

A director may become an actor and so may a choreographer, but once a writer, always a writer!

This maxim is created by the Who's Who of "Darkening Shore," a new play by Kermit Hunter which will be the second production of The Carolina Playmakers this season.

The play will be presented in the Playmakers Theatre next Wednesday through Sunday at 8:30 p. m.

Hunter wrote "Horn In the West," the outdoor drama at Boone, which is directed by Kai Jurgensen, Chapel Hill, with Harry Coble, Florence, S. C., as choreographer. Now in "Darkening Shore," Hunter's first full length indoor play, both Jurgensen and Coble turn into actors. Hunter is still the author.

Samuel Selden, director of The Carolina Playmakers, has acted in an advisory capacity to Hunter's outdoor dramas, "Horn In the West," and "Unto These Hills," and has directed "Forever This Land," another Hunter drama produced at Petersburg, Ill. He is now the director of "Darkening Shore." Thus, as in "Horn In the West," Selden, Jurgensen, Coble and Hunter are working together.

Of the four men, both Selden and Jurgensen are members of the Playmakers staff as well as directors of outdoor drama. Last year Jurgensen directed the Emily Selden play, "The Outsider." This year he will direct the university theatre premiere of "Show Boat."

His last acting role with the Playmakers was in "Winterset," by Maxwell Anderson. In "Darkening Shore," a story of the struggle between two men, one a Communist general and the other leader of the Polish underground, he has the leading role of General Andreyevski, the Polish patriot.

Harry Coble is now a graduate student in the Department of Dramatic Art at the University. As well as being choreographer for "Horn in the West," he has been choreographer for "The Lost Colony;" assistant curator of the Florence, S. C., museum; teacher of modern dance at the Boston Conservatory of Music, and instructor at Emerson College, Boston. He has also danced with such groups as Ted Shawn and Charles Weidmann. In "Darkening Shore," he has the role of a musician whose work is the symbol of freedom to the people of Poland.

"Darkening Shore" is Kermit Hunter's first full length indoor play. The setting is an old inn in the village of Gorgov in southern Poland. The inn has now, according to Selden, "gone into shadows so that one can almost feel the ghosts. The action takes place in a dark interior while a blinding snowstorm rages outside."

The play is described as a serious play with a lof of action with the author trying to express some of his feelings about conditions in Europe today.

Frosh Like Courses

Statements made by some of the 26 freshmen taking part in a special program show that the group likes the program.

The 26 freshmen are taking special courses in mathematics, philosophy, social science and English. The four professors leading the program are William S. Wells of the English Dept., E. A. Cameron of the Mathematics Dept., James E. King Jr. of the Social Science Dept. and Everett Hall of the Philosophy Dept.

Members of the special group have the four classes together. They are given the choice of what their fifth class will be. The fifth course is taken with regular students.

Graham Holding of Charlotte said that the program was designed so that the special classes were linked together. In mathematics the group studies Descartes and his mathematical principles, while in philosophy they study Descartes' law of reasoning. In social science Descartes will also be studied.

According to Holding the special group has an advantage in that the four professors know each student personally. Holding graduated from Forest prep school in Virginia.

Jim Kimsey of Brevard said that being in such a group caused him to study very hard. He added that with the extra studying he felt that he was getting more out of the courses.

Kimsey graduated from Brevard High School last spring.

Good Weekend Predicted For UNC Area

"All in all this looks like a good football weekend with plenty of blue skies and chilly weather," said an employee of the Raleigh - Durham Airport Weather Bureau yesterday.

Rain is due for this morning, but as far as the weather bureau could see tonight should be cool and dry.

According to the weather bureau, the high for today will be about 57, and the temperature will drop tonight, remaining chilly through tomorrow and Sunday.

Y Planning UN Seminar

One hundred and fifty students from all parts of the country will participate in the National Student YMCA-YWCA United Nations Seminar, which will take place in New York over Thanksgiving weekend.

The program will provide an opportunity to attend the General Assembly of the UN, learn about the work of the specialied agencies of the UN, meet UN delegates from other countries, interview members of the UN Secretariat and visit the United States Mission to the UN.

Concert Series Tickets

All student ticket agents for the Chapel Hill Concert Series have been asked to turn in either the money collected or their unsold tickets as soon as possible to either Herb Browne, SAE House; Don Geiger, KA House, or Jim Wallace in GM.

Mr. Burdick (R-ND) & Mr. Multer (D-NY)

When the bill to outlaw the Communist Party came before Congress last August, it got the greatest support given any major piece of legislation in the session. Not a single Senator and only two members of the House of Representatives voted against it.

It passed overwhelmingly despite the objection of J. Edgar Hoover, despite already sufficient laws on Communist espionage, despite the ominous threat the law presented to non-Communist organizations. It passed because the November 2 elections were only two months away and nobody up for reelection was courageous enough to vote against it.

Nobody, that is, but a Republican named Usher Burdick and a Democrat named Abraham Multer. Congressman Multer reasoned this way: "If you can do away with the Communist Party today, tomorrow you might do away with the Democratic Party or the Republican Party or any religious or social or business group." Most of Multer's colleagues knew that was true, but when they voted, they voted "yes."

Recent sessions of Congress, it seems to us, have produced no story of high principle bearing up under stress, no story of political heroism to parallel this one. But we were afraid that these two men, as sometimes happens to heroes, would be misunderstood in their home states and defeated in the elections.

That's why we're happy to report that the voters in their Congressional districts this week returned Usher Burdick (R-North Dakota) and Abraham Multer (D-New York) to their seats in the House, and by substantial majorities.

Song Of The Open Road

American industrialists, brandishing the slogan, "Keep America Beautiful," are rushing to save the highways and byways of the nation from what they call "a national disgrace"—the newspapers, watermelon rinds and empty cans that clutter up American roads and streets.

Well, we're opposed to the litterbugs too, and to the anti-social instincts that lead people to discard their trash on the highway. But we're not sure the soft drink bottlers, automobile manufacturers and TV magnates can afford to cast the first stone. After all, their peculiar form of litter—the giant billboards that clog all but the most protected roadsides—is bigger, uglier, and much more permanent that a banana peel tossed away by a thoughtless motorist.

"Keep America Beautiful", by all means. And start, we say, by taking the suggestion implied in this familiar Odgen Nash quatrain:

I think that I shall never see
A billboard lovely as a tree.
Perhaps, unless the billboards fall,
I'll never see a tree at all.

A Shot In The Head For Vet's Phys Ed

The Daily Tar Heel supports the student legislature bill to exempt all veterans who can pass the fundamentals test from the required one year of physical education.

As any veteran can testify, there is physical education aplenty in the armed forces. By the time the vet settles down to school work, there is just no need for any more.

The University Party, sponsors of the bill, have also pointed out:

1. Veterans need time to adjust to academic life, and

2. Many veterans are in pre-law, pre-med, and pre-dental school work providing a tough schedule in which physical education is often an unnecessary and tedious requirement.

The Faculty Council should agree that this unreasonable rule has been on the books long enough.

The Eyes & Ears Of Fall In Chapel Hill

Louis Kraar

IT SOUNDED like someone was throwing rocks at the house as I opened my eyes the other morning.

I sat on the edge of the bed a moment, hanging between sleep and consciousness, and listened. The steady, sharp barrage on the roof continued.

Later, out on the porch on the big white house on Henderson Street where I live, I saw the cause of all the noise.

Scurrying squirrels were dropping acorns on the roof from overhanging branches. The acorns would hit the roof with a loud crack and roll off into thick piles of dry leaves in the driveway.

Soon I remembered that I had come out on the porch to study for a history quiz. But somehow the Henderson Street people raking leaves in their yards, the acorns on the roof, and the skidding sound of the dry leaves in the driveway held my interest. And the great story of Scotch, Scotch-Irish, and German Colonial settlements in North Carolina—the one that I was to be quizzed on—just stared up from my penciled notes.

FALL, PARTICULARLY in Chapel Hill is that way. It's a distracting season like spring, and you find yourself pausing to watch the colors.

But although the poets and writers who have written about autumn concentrated on the colors, I've found that the sounds are just as interesting. They're more difficult to describe though.

When you walk through the piles of dry leaves on campus, they have a gushing sound like water. And if there are acorns and twigs underneath the leaves, there's a crackling sound like a big fire.

McCauley Street seems to me one of the nicest autumn-looking streets in town this year. And, like Henderson Street, you will see people out in the yards raking leaves into neat piles. And, if you listen closely, you may hear the squirrels dropping acorns on the roofs.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S snow, while not a usual autumn ornament, reminded me of the time last year here at the Hill when some friends and I found ourselves snowed in.

We had gone out to a friend's house off the Raleigh Road for some coffee during an exam study break. The warm coffee and conversation took our minds off the time, and we talked late into the night.

Finally someone looked at his watch and discovered it was midnight. We stepped outside into a surprise snow storm. Although we didn't realize it, the snow had been failing for some time. The car we had come in was throughly covered with the white stuff.

Pushing seemed to do no good. The car wouldn't move. The wheels only dug deeper into the snow. And we were too far away from the highway to get into town.

I spent the night in an abbreviated coach. Two of my friends slept on the floor, so I really had no complaint. In the morning I heard a WCHL radio announcer say in measured tones that students who couldn't get into town would be excused from their exams. I turned over and went back to sleep. Later the smell of coffee and hot cakes woke me again.

As I said before, autumn is a distracting season. But, for that matter, so is any season—if you get snowed in once in a while or stop to listen to the leaves.

About A Business Man And Non-Segregation

Editor:

I received a terrific shock yesterday! Having traversed this planet some 23 years, I've encountered many unusual situations and irregular conditions, but never one to compare with this.

A certain Chapel Hill business man whom I considered a fine, upstanding, level-headed, kindred, prudent, unbiased un-prejudiced, sensible citizen has betrayed me! This particular gentleman only enhanced my esteem for him and his kind when he voted against the proposal for an unsegregated section in the new burial grounds. But today, ah, today! Would that I had never risen from my pallet.

I purchased some merchandise from this venerable creature, paid cash, and lingered awhile to pass the time of day. As I prepared to leave, a Negro lady came into this man's establishment, paid cash for her purchase, and left. Do you know what this man proceeded to do? He put her money in the same cash drawer with mine! I don't have to tell you how humiliated I was. The audacity, the gall, the utter effrontery of such an act!

This very man I had regarded so highly earlier in the day for his great and benevolent feat of helping strike down that stupid proposal of an unsegregated cemetery, had now shattered my esteem and betrayed my trust and faith. And that's not all—stay yet! The worse is yet to come. I just learned via the "godship" tree that this same man hangs his black suits, his grey suits, his white suits, as a matter of fact, all his suits, in the same closet! Pardieux, we're lost! There is no hope!

As if this weren't enough, Saints preserve us, there's more. This same gentleman has a farm, and on that farm he has some cows—black cows, white cows, and spotted cows; and lo and behold, he keeps 'em in the same pasture! They sleep in the same barn, and their milk is all mixed together before it's sold. Now it is things like this which make us poor mortals cringe from life. One would think those cows to have enough social instinct to at least "know their place."

Where on earth did the Ministerial Association get the idea for that proposal, anyway? How could anyone ever dream of non-segregation in the after-life? To abandon my none too subtle satire for a moment, there is gonna be some segregation in the after-life, there's gonna be a Heaven and a Hell—and believe you me those people who don't think their bones can rest in peace if there are some Negro bones a few plots away are going to have a difficult time getting admitted to the former, "jedge not" be as it may.

More About Kraar And the Honor System

Editor:

In reference to Louis (Moses) Kraar's article in the Sunday, October 31, issue of The Daily Tar Heel entitled, "Hemingway, Notions About Honor, Mercy," I'd say it was about the funniest thing I've read all year.

It is encouraging to know that you in the Mt. Sinai office of the DTH are vigilantly and with much verve (with the second meaning listed in Webster's Collegiate intended here) revising and editing the Ten Commandments. I am sure you could have picked no better person than Ernest Hemingway as a consultant on virtuous living and the more noble aspects of human behavior, unless maybe Mickey Spillane or Erskine Caldwell.

I doubt that Hemingway, modest as he is, ever thought that he would inspire such noble thoughts as, "He knows he stepped off base," referring to a scholastic shoplifter, " . . . and in doing so is forced into accepting his fate like a man," and like Shane fading into the sunset will leave Carolina to face the horrors of raw life such as mom and dad — unjustifiably angry because their boy cheated — the draft board, indigestion, neuralgia, headaches, backaches, mild aches and pains, and other unspeakable evils.

What you said touched thousands of students where they daily sit and ponder yours and Dave Reid's wise sayings.

Did anyone ever mention to you or Reid that you don't solve problems by throwing away solutions?

Charles M. Barrett.

Reaction Piece

On Thomas, Socialists & Democrats

David Mundy

Soclialist Norman Thomas would be a welcome addition to any series of speakers, and the Carolina Forum is providing no exceptional series.

His topic, "America's Political Poverty," is an apt one. It was even illustrated by the Forum's last speaker, Gov. Meyner. Thomas' six unsuccessful tries for the presidency do indicate a paucity of supporters, but no political poverty. Thomas is one of the few contemporary politicians to carry on even a modicum of intellectual activity. No exception being made, of course, to the witty meanderings of any other defeated candidates for the presidency.

With the invitation of Thomas to campus the Forum seems to be making an attempt to be bipartisan. Bipartisan. that is, between left-wing Democrats and Socialists. (Thomas, somewhat surprisingly, is right of many Democrats on many issues.)

Thomas at least deserves praise for adopting a socio-economic philosophy, and for expressing it in definite, open terms. His philisophy of government and his proposed policies are what he claims them to be: socialistic. His views are openly presented for the electorate to accept or reject. For that he has my perpetual and consistent admiration.

In great contrast are the socialist subversives in the Democrat Party. Many of the Democrat left wing, it is true, are professional do-gooders. These are the critters who dash about proclaiming the "liberal cause," and the "cause of the common man." They are the stuff of which "action," and 'front" groups are constructed. And there may be a few honestly misinformed ones.

The real socialist subversives in the Democrat Party, however, are the bright lights (large, small, and blinking) in its loud and vocal left wing. They are sufficiently clever to realize that their plans for socialization and increased governmental controls would be rejected by the people. So they disguise and push the plans.

Socialists of the Thomas stripe have been quite unsuccessful. Reality and the American people are just a little too much for the ideas when openly presented. But a cleverly disguised product, manufactured chiefly by socialist-minded left wingers, has sold remarkably well.

I have some sort of admiration for the finess with which the Democrat Party has been captured and used. The Young Democrat Clubs are providing future leaders for the party, so a complete capture is almost and immediately inevitable.

Towards those conservative and die-hard Democrats whose votes and influence are being used by the socialist subversives, I have but a feeling of mixed compassion and disdain.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

THE HORSE was looking exceptionally pleased with himself, when I saw him near The Scuttlebutt. His eight-balls of eyes were crossed in self-approval, and he purred like a cat while he tongued his mangy coat to glistening.

"I have been nominated to Student Legislature, as a Representative from Town Men's Section One," The Horse explained with annoying hybris, as we toss it off in Dr. Walter Allen's Greek Drama class. "Representative of The Obstacle Course, no less! Like Pegasus, I am Greek clear from alpha to omega! The Frat section, yipe!"

Waaaaaaaaadaminnit, waaaaaaaaadaminnit! The elections have not been held yet, and when they were—well! Ho-ho! Ho-ho-ho! The Horse would get it, and I didn't mean elected.

"You are speaking to as smart a politico as ever walked on four legs." The Horse informed me loftily. "Who cares about the delaying? I have already conceded."

Please! A moment, please, Hoss, ol' hoss. Even for one more than a little accustomed to The Horse's merry-go-rounding activities, I was a mite dizzy trying to visualize this. He had conceded, already??

"Yeah," The Horse nodded equusably, as befits his kind, "I have conceded the election. Huh, these big Republicans like Case of New Jersey and Ives of New York have nothing on me. In fact, I am away ahead of them! They quit, somewhat not too surprisingly, as soon as they begin to get their whacks; me, I quit before the polls open or they can get a ballot printed. Original, that's me."

I agreed in the French sense of the word: Le Cheval! C'est un original! Incidentally, that meant, "The Horse? A screwball!" That was one election everybody would concede!

"Check." The Horse shrugged. "But admirably suited to represent you, Roger, for that very reason. And you needn't trouble to explain your French commonplaces to me, I'm no sales-manager, or something. The Repubs concede at the drop of ballot number 2; but this is conceding at its dazzlingest."

Why had The Horse conceded?

"Three reasons," The Horse explained, dropping down to take up eight places at The Scuttlebutt Coffee Bar: "First, I'm not a politico at heart; second, I'm for everybody—frat, dorms, town, Victory Village—and I was not double-endorsed; and third, I think I am ineligible, as a Grad student."

I'd accept the third explanation. What did The Horse, as a prominent, if not the only Elder Statesman of the current UNC Student Legislature, think of the recent whizz-bang elections?

"With the exception of Dickie-Boy Nixon's perhaps understandably snide campaign in the West, and Tom-Tom Ptooey's banal burpings in Noo Yawk's contest, it was conducted about as well as one could expect," The Horse saw it. "The Demos have picked up in giant strides, since '52. And man, wasn't the Repub campaign a dilly, always expecting Dixon's un-American activities! Cabinet Quiz Shows, on TV, no less! Ike spending who-know's-whose money at the White House in chain-telephone call activities! Florida going Repub! Maine going Demo! Chillin' Chuck Wilson absently stroking a Saginaw Setter Hound while listening to GM money go down the drain with Homer 'Pigeon' Ferguson! Kerr Scott busy measuring how fur it is from Paris to the Haw River! 13 Rooshian spies flipping their lids and committing hari-kari, or is it Borshch, when they realize the impossibility of explaining all this to their Rooshian Democratic masters! But one thing really slays me. Boy, will it be funny watching."

Oh? So?

"The Repubs have been going around howling that Ike would not be able to put across his Social Advancement Program, if you will purdon the left-winging sound of that statement," The Horse horse-laughed, "if he didn't have a Repub Congress; House and Chamber both. Well, doggone iff'n it don't look like he had got a perfectly fifty-fifty split, or perhaps as close to it as ever will be seen."

Wouldn't Ike like this?

"Maybe Ike will, secretly," The Horse chuckled. "But the Repub politicos definitely will not like it. Yoy see, they and Ike figured, as their frantic last minute rhubarb testifies so eloquently, that they would lose both houses, and they would blame any failure of Ike's program on a Demo Congress. Well, with both houses split just about fifty-fifty down the middle, and with the right-wing Repubs hating Ike's social improvement program, if any, worse than they hate graft, dirty tactics and oil-bought states, it will be quite evident which party favors social gains, and which votes down same. Brother, it has been the Demos in Congress who have put across what forward-looking legislation Ike has been able to get past his Old Guard bullyboys in The White House."

The Horse thought so, really?

"Just wait," The Horse grinned. "Just wait! The Demos will not take it out on ike that he played footsie with his own worst enemies—the gold-plated Bourbons in his own party—because the Demos are committed to progressive legislation by the people and for the people, and they would have to go along on such bills if and when the Administration dreamed up any to go along on."

Then, The Horse regarded this as a Democratic victory, this recent national election??

"A Demo governor in Maine, a swing of close to one million votes in New York, and Chillin' Chuck Wilson, Keeper of The Royal Republican Blood Hounds, defeated in his own home kennel," The Horse saw it, "is certainly not cause for festivities in The White House."

Well, warned thusly, the Repubs would do differently, toward a better outcome for them in '54. Or, could Repubs change??

"Nearly ninety years ago," The Horse mused, "a Reb general sat on his duff and ignored the repeated orders of our greatest American soldier, Marse Robert E. Lee, to attack. I predict that in '54 a Yank general will sit on his duff at his Gettysburg farm and refuse to lead the Repubs; and I do not mean General Motors. It is a great American institution, this voting business."

But didn't the wrong people get in, sometimes, I wondered?

"Console thyself with the old adage about Time and wounds," The Horse advised me. "It is a comfort to me, ever and anon."

Did The Horse mean, Time Heals All Wounds?

"I mean," The Horse corrected me. "Time Wounds All Heels!"

Tar Babies Engage Maryland Frosh

Over The Hill

By

FRED BABSON

"I won't predict whether we will win or lose, but I will say that my boys will give it all they've got." Thus spoke Coach Ralph Floyd, freshman grid mentor. Floyd never puts himself out on a limb by prognosticating. Instead he reaffirms his faith in the ability, spirit, and fortitude of his charges. "I've never seen a bunch of boys with more spirit and desire to play," said Floyd, "and they're all gentlemen, right down to the last one."

Floyd is in his first year at Carolina as a coach, although he attended school here for a brief time before entering the service. The 29-year-old native of Bethesda, Md., is a hugh man, dwarfing the average football player; he even looks down on big Marvin Bass, varsity line coach.

Bass undoubtedly figured prominently in Floyd's joining the Tar Heel coaching staff. Floyd played guard at William and Mary when Bass was line coach under Rube McCray. After graduation in 1950, Floyd served a one-year tenure as a high school head coach, returning to W&M as defensive line coach the following year when Bass became top man there.

Floyd is a very affable man. His policy of always having a good word for his boys seems to have reaped profitable results, for the Tar Babies are rated high among frosh teams in this neck of the woods, albeit the talent was already there.

The personable mentor explained that there is a dearth of information concerning the Maryland freshman squad. Knowledge of the Baby Terps is limited to this: Maryland has lost two games, while wining one. However, the losses were suffered at the hands of the highly-touted Navy Plebes and a Bainbridge Naval team, sporting several former college and pro stars, including Bobby Williams, Notre Dame's ex-All-America quarterback, lately of the Chicago Bears. The Terp win was over George Washington's rookies. Floyd listed Maryland's big guns as Quarterback Phil Perello and Halfback Bob Ruselyn, both ex-Washington, D. C., high school flashes.

Floyd's No. 1 quarterback, George "Buddy" Sasser, is operating at a reduced rate of speed, resulting from an ankle injury sustained in the Virginia fracas. His No 2 signal-caller, David Red, tosser of two TD aerials against Virginia, was taken to the infirmary Wednesday with a head injury and will definitely be out tomorrow. The No. 3 general, Jim Marquette, suffered a knee injury Wednesday, and Floyd does not plan to use him against the junior Terrapins. Thus the Tar Babies are left with one quarterback, a crippled one at that. Floyd indicated that he intends to use Sasser on offense, as much as his bad ankle allows, and Roland Goff, a converted half, the rest of the time. The dire quarterback situation my necessitate a little grid-iron wizardry on Floyd's part. Also lost to the team with injuries are Halfbacks Steve Kupchick and Wally Vale, and Center Jim Jones.

This will be the only home game of the year for the local frosh, and it should afford Tar Heel fans some indication of Carolina's Atlantic Coast Conference future.

Mighty Mite

CARL BRAZELL, 5' 9", 155-pound halfback, who figured heavily in South Carolina's 18-0 victory over UNC last year. Brazzell ranks third in Gamecock ground-gaining, first in pass receiving.

Tar Heels In Passing Drills

North Carolina's Tar Heels spent a lot of time on pass offense and defense, yesterday, as Coach George Barclay tuned them up for Saturday's game with the University of South Carolina Gamecocks.

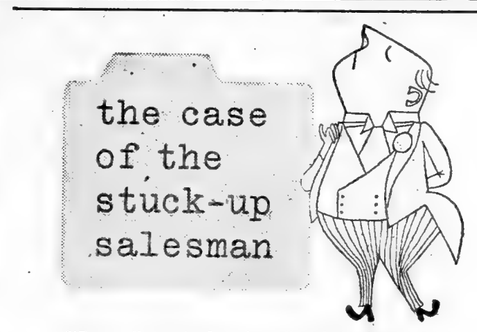
Barclay experimented with a variety of backfield combinations, using Len Bullock, Albert Long and Doug Farmer in the quarterback position. Another of Barclay's passers will be unable to answer the call Saturday. Marshall Newman, converted signal caller who passes from the fullback post, has been absent from drills all week as a result of a severe knee injury suffered in the Tennessee game. The Tar Heels will also be minus fleet halfback Ed Sutton, who twisted his ankle Monday in a tackling session.

Expected to compensate for the loss of Newman are Don Lear and Don Klochak. Lear finished the Tennessee encounter after Newman received his injury. The stocky sophomore blocks and tackles viciously. He has been alternating with Newman at the fullback slot, seeing most of his action on defense. Lear has carried the leather twice this season, picking up nine yards. Klochak started the season at fullback, moving out when Newman moved in.

Sutton has been understudying Connie Gravitte at right halfback, both seeing about the same amount of action.

Kick-Off Time Slated For 2 P. M. In Kenan Stadium

Local fans and early-arriving alumni will get their first view of the North Carolina freshman football team today when the frosh tangle with the Terrapins from Maryland. Kick-off time is slated for 2 p. m.



This will be the only time the Tar Babies will play on their home field this season, as the frosh move to Duke Thanksgiving Day for their final game.

The Maryland squad is rated as a large, tough team. The forward wall averages 217 pounds per man, and the backfield is an aggregation of All-City and All-State stars. The "tough" label is particularly given to two backfield men, Phil Perlo a quarterback, and Bob Ruselyon, a halfback. In the line, Ed Cook, a 6' 4" end is the man to watch.

The Tar Babies have had their share, and more of injuries this season. Quarterback Buddy Sasser will play with an injured ankle. His two subs, Ron Marquette and Dave Reed are both out with injuries received in practice. Wally Vale, Steve Kupchick and Jimmy Jones are out.

Coach Ralph Floyd set forth his tentative starting line-up as: Vincent Olen and Buddy Payne at ends, Leo Russavage and Paul Blazer at tackles, Willis Setzer and Jack Lineburger at guards, Jack Llewellyn at center, Buddy Sasser or Roland Goff at quarter, Bill Williams at half, Jim Varnum or Joe Temple at the other half, and John Gaca at full.

When police arrived at the college haberdashery, they shook their heads in disbelief. Instead of being gagged and bound, the salesman was actually glued to the floor. They took quick stock of the clues . . . an empty glue pot, several odd-shaped pieces of cloth scattered about, an empty show-case, an empty cash drawer. Ingenious shirt-robbery!

"Ugg glub," said the salesman, still all stuck-up . . . stuck down, rather.

When they finally got him extricated with hot water and chisels, he thanked them nicely and said, "What's the matter with you jerks? I haven't been robbed."

"No," he explained, "I was simply making a demonstration of the Van Heusen Century shirt for some of the boys. Showed them why the revolutionary one-piece Century collar just won't wrinkle ever. Told 'em how regular collars are made of three layers of cloth, "glued" and stitched together. I glued a set, just for emphasis . . . learned to demonstrate in Woolworth's."

"Get on with it," said the detective.

"Well, I showed 'em how these 3-piece jobs wrinkle and wilt quickly even with starch or stays. I said the Van Heusen Century collar would stay neat always—without starch or stays—or their money back. When I told 'em that Van Heusen Centurys gave 'em lots more wear than ordinary shirts, yet cost the same price (just $3.95 for whites and $4.50 for colors) they bought me out. I was so overjoyed, I did a little jig and tripped over the glue pot. Got stuck up."

"Oh, yeah?" yeahed the detective. "Well, where's all the dough?"

"Oh, college men never pay. They just charge everything to Dad."

VICTORY VILLAGE NEWS

By DAN WALLACE

CRITICISM of the public phone situation was brought up at the Village board of directors meeting last Friday night in the recreation center.

THREE POINTS were considered—1) the single phone posed an inconvenience of distance for many; 2) it was a pay phone; 3) students in the dorms had free public phones. On the basis of these points, a motion was passed by the board to request three free public phones from the University. A committee of two was selected to see the proper officials.

AT THE TIME of this writing, J. S. Bennett, director of operations, had been approached with this request. He said that the cost for the dormitory phones were taken out of the dorm rents, and that the reason the Village had free public phones dated to when the Village was formed, when the phones were installed as an emergency measure because private phones could not be obtained then. Mr. Bennett would not commit himself on whether or not the Village could have free public phones. He suggested that the request be taken to Assistant Comptroller and Business Manager C. E. Teague and Chancellor R. B. House.

TELEVISION will be available to Villagers every night under a motion passed by the board. On Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights the recreation center had been available to group meetings only. Under the new ruling, groups under 75 must use the meeting room next to the main lounge, and groups over this number may use the main lounge. But in any case, television viewing will be available either in the main lounge or the meeting room.

SINCE THE CARETAKERS do not work on group nights, volunteer groups will be responsible for the TV or ping-pong rooms. On meeting nights, ping-pong players will have the use of the two-year old classroom. Volunteers may contact Mrs. Ruth Sluder at 114 Daniels Road.

A MOTION was passed by the board setting up a committee to circulate a petition for parking lines, road repairs and improved parking lots on Jackson circle, Mason Farm road and Daniels road. The petition will be presented to Mr. Burch, Village manager, for further action.

THE WIFE of the late Richmond Woodson, UNC student and Village resident, had a baby boy a week ago Thursday. She is living in Greensboro with relatives of Woodson. Woodson was accidentally electrocuted last April while putting up an aerial.

FRED McGEE, graduate student in political science and journalist, who spent five weeks in Tennessee last summer doing investigative research on the senatorial elections for Dr. Alexander Heard's project, "Money-in-Politics," will speak today before the political science convention being held in Columbia, S. C., on the results of his work.

SIGNS to suggest the need for careful driving in the Village will soon be erected with the board's approval. They will be constructed by several volunteers and among the materials being sought are three broken-down tricycles. If anyone has a tricycle to donate for this purpose, please call 83045 and it will be picked up.

THANKSGIVING DAY will be an official holiday for the Nursery and it will be closed on that day.

AT LEAST 50 requests for electric hot water heaters have been received at the rental office in the last two weeks, said Mrs. Peggy Rogers, secretary at the office. These requests were in answer to an announcement by Village Manager Burch in this column which stated that those with 220 volt installations in their kitchens could exchange their oil hot water heaters for electric heaters at no cost. It was not known at this time how soon these requests could be serviced.

and editorials, comes out every week as "The Grimes Times."

Other dorms that have newspapers are: "Corn Cobb" of Cobb dormitory, edited by Charlie Barrett, junior from Hickory; Stacy's "Rebel Yell," edited by Bill Acker, freshman from Anderson, S. C., and "The Ram," published by Alexander Dorm, and Editor Richard Thiele, sophomore from Atlanta, Ga.

Manning Muntzing, president of the Interdormitory Council said yesterday, "I believe the dorm papers to be a tremendous help in building a spirit of 'dorm consciousness' in each dormitory. The IDC has been doing everything possible to make the dorm a unit and each man in it an intregal part of the dorm."

Dorm Open Houses

The final Dorm Open House period under the Football Visiting Agreement will be held Saturday, according to Bob Harrington, chairman of the IDC Coed Visiting Committee.

Visiting hours Saturday will be from noon to 1:30 and from the end of the football game (around 4:30) to 6:30 p.m. Refreshments will be furnished by the dorm social committees.

The parade will then continue to Lower Quad for the Interdormitory Blanket Party.

Jim Fountain, head cheerleader, said, "It will be quite an evening. This promises to be one of the greatest events of the year and one of the best pep rallies in a number of years. We want everyone to turn out for it."

The University Club has requested that students be careful in handling the torches during the parade. It also urged that any students who want to have their cars in the parade decorate them and join in.

Concerning the IDC Blanket Party, Manning Muntzing, president of the IDC, said, "I sincerely hope that everyone will have a tremendous time tonight and will keep one thought in mind: As the show is a live one, any out of the way comments or yells will reflect, not only on the individual, but on the University as a whole. I should like to appeal to the members of the student body who will be attending to cooperate in making the show a success, not only here, but also in the minds of those persons who will be listening throughout the state."

The highlight of the IDC party will be the special presentation of Jimmy Capp's disk jockey program, "Our Best To You," which will be broadcast over WPTF in Raleigh, directly from the UNC campus.

Included in Capps' program will be a live floor show by Chee Chee and Tom Davis, Nashville dancing team; a girls' trio from Peace College, Raleigh; David Phipps, Raleigh, baritone, and Becky Lee (Miss Dunn of 1954) doing pantomines.

The University Band and cheerleaders will be there and will take part in the program.

Students will be able to dance in Raleigh Street, which will be blocked off during the evening. Both UNC and USC students will be heard over Capps' broadcast.

In case of rain, the party will be held in Memorial Hall.

Olan Cook, assistant librarian, has announced that the Reserve Reading Room of the University Library will be open until midnight for all students who are planning to study tonight instead of attending the party.

Homecoming displays will be erected on the lawns of dormitories, fraternity houses and sorority houses tomorrow morning, in preparation for the judging at 10:30 a. m. Dean Norval Neil Luxon, Dr. Andrew Horn and Mrs. R. C. Burns will be the judges. Trophies will be awarded to the best displays among the fraternities, the sororities, the men's dorms and the women's dorms.

Displays will be entered by Pi Lamb, Joyner Dorm, SPE, Lewis Dorm, Everett Dorm, Pi Kap, Phi Gam, Chi Phi, ATO, Smith Dorm, Phi Kap, Grimes Dorm, Ruffin Dorm, Old West, Chi O, Deke, Phi Delt, Spenser Dorm, Kappa Sig, Kappa Psi, ADPi, Connor Dorm, Pi Phi, TEP, Alpha Gam, Carr Dorm, Tri Delt, Chi Psi, PiKa and KD.

The trophies will be awarded to the winners during half-time of the game tomorrow afternoon.

The halftime ceremonies of the UNC-USC game will also include the crowning of the Homecoming Queen by student body President Tom Creasy.

The queen will be elected by student voting, to be carried on today in Y court.

The candidates for queen are as follows: Miss Jackie Wilkins, sponsored by Alpha Gam; Miss Joan Palmer, sponsored by McIver; Miss Nancy Whisnant, sponsored by KD; Miss Ann Hebert, sponsored by Smith; Miss Mike Underwood, sponsored by Tri Delt; Miss Patricia Permenter, sponsored by Pi Phi; Miss Barbara Stone, sponsored by ADPi; Miss Gray Proctor, sponsored by Spencer, and Miss Sandy Hirt, sponsored by Carr.

The Hocecoming Queen will also reign at the dance sponsored by the Order of the Grail to be held Saturday night from 9 until 12 in Woollen Gym. The admission charge for the dance will be $1 for couples and stags. Music will be provided by Jimmy Johnson and his orchestra. The dance will be the last football dance of the year.

The oncoming weekend promises to be one of numbers. Although hard-earned knowledge from a Math 7 class won't help to determine the extent of the assembled aggregation, a simple understanding of the impact of the descriptive phrase "homecoming weekend" should be sufficient. Even the most incompetent mathematician should be able to realize that the masses have descended.

Two hundred burning torches, a magnitude of blankets at tonight's "Best To You" festivities, at least 30 uniquely constructed homecoming displays, hoards of alumni with their accessories, an inexhaustible supply of gaily bedecked bands and majorettes, plus the usual illimitable and boundless parties—these will characterize this, the weekend of numbers.

One among the many will be the Beta's, as they celebrate with a weekend of activities. Friday night will feature a cabin party at Beulah's, and Saturday night will find brothers and dates partying at the Saddle Club in Durham.

At the Chi Psi lodge, the fraternity's annual winter weekend will be going full blast. Friday night, before the pep rally and music under the stars, brothers and dates will be entertained at a pajama dance. And after Saturday's game and its following alumni-active meeting, Chi Psi's will journey to the Robin Hood in Durham for a party.

A suppressed desire party at Smith's Lake Saturday night will be the highlight of the ATO weekend. Numerous activities have been planned to welcome returning alumni. A cabin party is on call for tonight, and champagne will be served after tomorrow's game.

Sigma Nu alums will be honored this weekend at the fraternity's Homecoming festivities. Hoenig's cabin will be the site of Saturday's party.

Buffet supper will be served Saturday night to St. A's and dates. The affair will be followed by a cabin party. Also planning a cabin party in Durham Saturday night are the Chi Phi's.

Deke's have been racking their brains to find an original party theme, but, theme or no theme, chances are they will have a party Saturday night at their cabin.

At the SPE house, plans are being formed for a Saturday night party at the chapter house. And KA's offer a weekend highlighted by a combo and cabin party at the little red schoolhouse.

The Castle in Durham will be the Lambda Chi headquarters for a Friday night party. And Saturday night they will journey to a cabin on the Burlington Road, for a party complete with combo.

A party in general will follow Saturday's alumni luncheon at the Phi Delta Chi house. And Phi Kap's plan another big party Friday night.

One of the Phi Delt brothers will be host for a party in Durham Friday night, and blankets will be in order for Saturday night's party. Also partying at a cabin over the weekend will be Phi Gam's and dates.

Sororities seem to be holding their own, as they entertain and are entertained. Pi Phi's were guest of Phi Kap's Tuesday night at a party at the Country Club. And ADPi's joined the SPE's for a party last night. To continue the cycle, ADPi's will be entertained by Chi Phi's next Tuesday night at a cabin party.

Kappa Delta's were hostesses last Tuesday at a tea in honor of their national president. And at the Chi O house, parties with the SAE's and the Sigma Chi's have been featured.

Pinnings

Although this end of the column seems to be lacking in numbers there are still those persistent few who help to lengthen the social tidings.

Bob Venson, SPE from Indianhead, Md., to Fritzi Stollar, Alpha Gam, from Philadelphia, Pa.

Charlie Bowles, KA from Winston-Salem, to Laura Ann Travis, ADPi pledge from Charlotte.

Engagements

Bill McDonald, SAE from Hickory, to Joanne Schell, Kappa Epsilon from Wilmington.

And last, but certainly not least, mention must be made of the newly established Elbow Room on the Greensboro Highway. Its adequacies for private parties was closely observed at Tuesday night's housewarming party.

Capps Stars At Torch Rally

Over 1,800 Attend Giant "Sadie Hawkins" Parade

By NEIL BASS

A wave of torches, shouting students and Jimmy Capps' "Our Best To You," highlighted the festivities last evening as homecoming began in a spirited fashion.

Activities began at the east gate of Emerson Stadium where the paraders assembled. From there the procession wound slowly by South Building, up Cameron Avenue and then streamed, band and all, up Franklin Street to a platform constructed there.

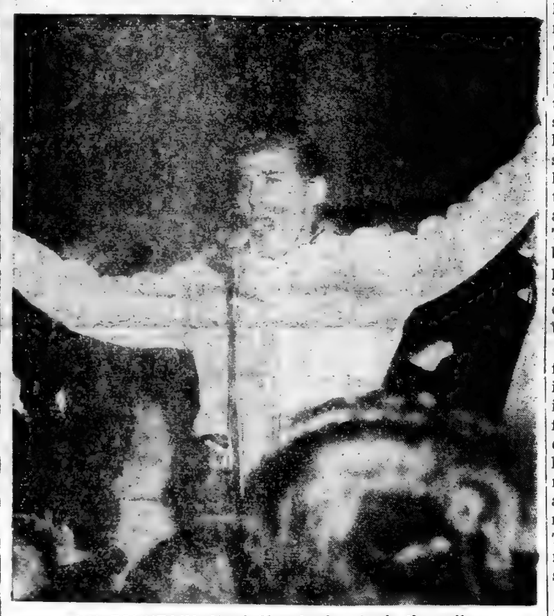
It was here that Jim Fountain and the cheerleaders led the group in a series of spirited and enthusiastic yells.

Fountain then introduced Manning Muntzing, IDC president who commented that he "hoped the students enjoyed the occasion as much as he had enjoyed sponsoring it."

Next the jubilant group—over 1,800 — congregated in Memorial Hall for the high spot of the evening, "Our Best To You." The finale began with a number of resounding yells. From there it was all Capps.

David Phipps, Raleigh baritone, sang the opening selection. He was followed by a girl's trio from Peace College, Raleigh, Chee Chee and Tommy Davis, dancing team from Nashville and Becky Lee (Miss Dunn of 1954) a pantominist.

A mighty roar greeted Capps as the WUTF idsc jockey announced his "Ndeturne of Records." Broadcasting drectly from the stage, Capps serenaded the audience with his usual variety of musical numbers.



During the course of the evening, the celebrating onlookers, which included a mingling of Boy Scouts, townfolk, and students, were served coffee and cakes by the IDC, sponsors of the event.

Resembling "Sadie Hawkins Day" because of the Lil' Abner and Daisy Maes who were in attendance, all a part of the "Dogpatch" theme, the night apparently lacked none of the excitement of that famous occasion as a capacity crowd was on hand for Memorial Hall's contribution to the homecoming weekend.

Capps signed off the evening by remarking that the occasion was "one of the most successful that he had ever taken part in."

De-Emphasize UNC Football, Writer Advises

"Carolina's football is overemphasized," said George North yesterday in The Ram, the weekly paper of Alexander Dormitory.

North feels that too much accent has been placed on winning ball games. "We have forgotten that all that can be expected of the coach is a 50 per cent win-lose record. For every winner there is a loser," North said.

Concerning Coach Barclay and his team, North said "I have heard much undue criticism administered to Coach Barclay. What is expected of him? It appears that Carolina football enthusiasts expect top performance. They will not be satisfied with a 50 per cent win-lose record. For next year, we have scheduled Notre Dame and Oklahoma. Can we really expect our team to put up a good showing against such football powerhouses? The experts will claim that our ball team is undergoing a building process. This might very well be so. It has been indicated that Carolina has fielded its best freshman team in years."

North quoted Jeff Cravath, California coach, on the matter as saying, "Nearly all colleges still playing big-time schedules have been forced into the open market to obtain their raw material . . . Colleges need money to survive. The money must come from wealthy alumni, or legislatures. The alumni demand winning football teams. To get winning teams, colleges must violate the rules they themselves have made."

In conclusion, North pointed out that Carolina was no exception to what Cravath said.

Last year Daily Tar Heel Editor Rolfe Neill instituted an editorial campaign against what he termed "big-time athletics" on the Carolina campus.

UNC And Gamecocks Clash In Airlanes This Afternoon

500 Alumni Expected:

UNC Future Lawyers Have Their Day Here

The UNC campus will take on a legal atmosphere today when alumni of the Law School will join law students here for a special day of celebration.

Designated as "Law Day" by the Law School Association headed by President Bob Byrd, Morganton, the observance, which is principally a student enterprise, will include a round of activities to entertain some 500 alumni.

Last night, a law review Editor's Dinner was held in Lenior Hall. Paul A. Johnston, staff member of the UNC Institute of Government, president, presided.

The Association's Board of Directors will meet this morning at 10 o'clock in the Courtroom of Manning Hall.

A special section in Kenan Stadium has been reserved for the visitors and their hosts for Carolina's homecoming game with the University of South Carolina this afternoon. The group will be identified by the carnations they will wear and will be saluted by the card section during halftime activities.

A reception in the main library in Manning Hall for law affiliates will be held following the game and the Barrister's Ball will be held in the Washington-Duke Hotel in Durham tonight.

In addition to President Byrd, other officers of the Law School Association are Louis Bledsoe Jr., Huntsville, Ala., chief justice of the honor council; J. Albert House Jr., Hobgood, vice-president; Robert G. Windsor, Winston-Salem, secretary, and Jule A. Rouseau, North Wilkesboro, treasurer.

Officers of the Alumni Association are T. A. Uzzell Jr., Asheville, president; Isaac D. Thorp, Rocky Mount; first vice-president; Luther T. Hartsell Jr., Concord, second vice president, and William B. Aycock, University law faculty, secretary-treasurer.

South Carolina Is Favored One Tally Over Tar Heels

By BERNIE WEISS

Whatever happens in a game where the No. 1 passer meets the No. 1 team in pass defense will take place at Kenan Stadium this afternoon when Carolina plays host to their Gamecock cousins from south of the border in the Tar Heels' annual homecoming tilt.

Gametime in the local ballyard is 2 o'clock.

South Carolina possesses the air-lanes artist in question. He's Mackie Prickett, a sophomore who has virtually set the Atlantic Coast Conference afire with his aerial magic.

But his magic is liable to fail him today, inasmuch as Carolina boasts the top air defense in the circuit.

S. C. Favored

Nevertheless, the Gamecocks are a one-touchdown favorite, obviously because of their flashy quarterback. Prickett not only is the ACC's top passer, he is also the individual total offense leader. Prickett has gained 529 yards, with 354 of these coming through the air. Though he has completed 39 passes, none have gone for touchdowns. He has rushed for four six-pointers, however, to lead the team in that department.)

A 165-pounder, Prickett has twice this season been named the Conference's "Sophomore of the Week," although at the beginning of the season he was not even listed as a starter. In S. C.'s loss to Maryland last week, Prickett completed 11 of 15 passes and personally accounted for 85 yards.

UNC has been working on pass defense all week, but the team is still not expected to be up to par. The Tar Hels came away from last week's loss to Tennessee in poor shape, losing the services of fullback Marshall Newman.

Then, in drills early this week, the Carolina squad's speedy halfback, Ed Sutton, sprained an ankle.

George Wallin, a senior who has not seen much action this year, will alternate with Don Klochak as Newman's substitute at fullback. Sonny Ridenhour and Larry McMullen will probably take up Sutton's slack at half.

If South Carolina should win, it will mark the first time in the 51-year history of the series that the Gamecocks have won two straight from their northern rivals. SC won last year, 18-0, but the Tar Heels hold a 20-5-1 lead in the series.

On the questionable basis of comparatives scores, the Gamecocks are seven-point favorites. The only common foe has been Maryland. The Terps trounced Carolina, 33-0, and last week defeated South Carolina, 26-0.

Probable Lineup

Carolina's probable starting lineup will consist of Will Frye and Norman Lane at ends; Jack Maultsby and Roland Perdue at tackles; Jimmy Neville and Ed Patterson at guards; George Stavnitski at center; Len Bullock at quarterback; Larry Parker and Connie Gravitte at halfbacks, and either Wallin or Klochak at full.

The Gamecocks starters will include one of the top guards in the Conference, Frank Mincevich, who has already been drafted by the San Francisco 49ers, and a line-busting fullback, Bill Wohrman, who has been drafted by the Cleveland Browns.

Officials for the game today are: Referee, M. B. Mattox (Washington and Lee); Umpire, M. W. Bird (Presbyterian); Linesman, R. M. Gantt (Duke); Judge, G. K. Husser (Catawba).

An attendance of approximately 25,000 is expected.

Here's Thomas

THE ABOVE PICTURE is of Norman Thomas, who is not Louis Graves. Graves' picture appeared yesterday labelled "Norman Thomas." This was a regrettable mistake. When Thomas saw the paper, he said that he was surprised; he didn't think he looked like that, but he thought that the face was familiar. Graves had no comment, according to his wife.—R. B. Displays To Be Judged, Queen Crowned In Today's Activities

Today's homecoming activities will begin with the judging of the displays erected on the lawns of dormitories, fraternities and sorority houses.

The displays will be judged at 10:30 by Dean Norval Neil Luxon. Dr. Andrew Horn and Mrs. R. C. Burns. Trophies will be awarded during the halftime ceremonies of the football game to the dormitory, the fraternity and the sorority having the best displays.

Displays have been entered by Pi Lamb, Joyner Dorm, SPE, Lewis Dorm, Everett Dorm, Pi Kap, Phi Gam, Chi Phi, ATO, Smith Dorm, Phi Kap, Grimes Dorm, Ruffin Dorm, Old West, Chi O, Deke, Phi Delt, Spencer Dorm, Kappa Sig, Kappa Psi, ADPi, Connor Dorm, Pi Phi, TEP, Alpha Gam, Carr Dorm, Tri Delt, Chi Psi, PiKA and KD.

The UNC-USC game will begin tomorrow at 2 p.m.

The Homecoming Queen will be crowned during the halftime ceremonies by student body President Tom Creasy. The queen was elected yesterday by popular vote.

The candidates for queen were as follows:: Miss Jackie Wilkins, sponsored by Alhpa Gam; Miss Joan Palmer, sponsored by McIver; Miss Nancy Whisnant, sponsored by KD; Miss Ann Hebert, sponsored by Smith; Miss Mike Underwood, sponsored by Tri Delt; Miss Patricia Permenter, sponsored by Pi Phi; Miss Barbara Stone, sponsored by ADPi; Miss Gray Proctor, sponsored by Spencer and Miss Sandy Hirt, sponsored by Carr.

The Homecoming Queen will also reign at the dance sponsored by the Order of the Grail to be held tonight in Woollen Gym from 9 until midnight. The admission charge for the dance will be $1 for couples and stags. Music will be provided by Jimmy Johnson and his orchestra. The dance will be the last football dance of the year.

TV Director Says He Hopes For

Over 2 Million In Audience

"We hope to reach two and one-quarter million people through WUNC-TV," Robert Schenkkan, Director of Television for the Consolidated University, told the Chapel Hill Branch of the American Association of University Women at their meeting here recently.

Schenkkan, introduced by Mrs. Earl Wynn, AAUW president, discussed the evolution of educational television and its vast potential. He noted that viewers within a radius of 100 miles will be able to pick up directly Station WUNC-TV's programs, which will originate at different times from studios on the three campuses of State College in Raleigh, Woman's College in Greensboro and the University here.

"Many WUNC-TV programs will be available to the entire State," Schenkkan said, "through the cooperation of commercial stations which will carry them as live telecasts or as kinescope recordings."

He pointed out that the University television station is "one of 30 such stations which are now either on the air or in the process, and is the only one of its kind in North Carolina."

Another highlight of the AAUW program was the presentation of the Carrie Heath Schwenning scholarship of $100 to Mrs. Willie G. Todd, Guyton, Ga., native, who is completing work for her doctorate in American history at the University.

The award, made annually to an outstanding woman doing graduate work at the University, is the second to be given by the AAUW here.

Mrs. Todd completed her undergraduate work at the University of Georgia and later studied at Duke University and Peabody. She received her masters degree from UNC in 1945 and returned to Chapel Hill last year to complete work for her Ph.D.

Mrs. Todd plans to enter the teaching profession following her graduation.

The local branch of AAUW will sponsor a "Craft Fair" in cooperation with the Penland School of Handicrafts during the early part of December.

In announcing plans for the Fair Mrs. Virgil Mann, fellowship chairman, said that sample crafts from Penland will be on display in Graham Memorial December 3-4 and will be sold to the public. All proceeds from the Fair will go to the AAUW fellowship fund for its scholarship activities.

"Representatives from the Penland School will be on hand to give demonstrations of their work also," she added.

Council Interviews

The Bi-Partisan Selection Committee will interview all men who wish to run for the Student Council in the coming elections on Monday at 3 p.m. in the Men's Council Room of Graham Memorial.

One graduate student is needed to run.

Tarnation Hits Streets Again

Tarnation, the campus humor magazine, hit the streets yesterday afternoon with its first issue of 1954-55.

The mag, sporting a snappy yellow and black cover featuring the "Return of the Slob," boasts 28 pages for its first issue.

Inside the magazine is the usual editorial by Editor Reuben Leon-

Want To Make Some Easy Money?

Chain Letter Hits Campus

Want to make a quick $10,000?

The chain letter has hit the campus, with promises of a big "payoff" for all, even up to $10,240.

The easy money scheme is titled the "Sell Your Way to Wealth Campaign" and involves the use of letters explaining the rules of the game, complete with a list of names of those on the payoff list.

The letter chain, although here only a few days, has spread like wildfire across the campus with hundreds of people signed up on the payoff list.

Here's the way the scheme works: You buy a letter from a person whose name is on the list, paying his $5 for the copy. He then accompanies you to the nearest mail box, where you mail another $5 to the person whose name is currently at the top of the list. The next step is to make two copies of the letter, destroying the one you bought, and eliminating the top name on the list. You then put your name at the bottom, making you number 11 on the list, which at no time has more than 11 names on it.

The final step in the process is to sell the two copies of the letter to friends ("friends who are absolutely trustworthy," the letter urges) for $5 apiece, thus returning your original investment of $10. Your name moves up on the list to 10th place and so on up the ladder until your name reaches the top and you start receiving the payoffs.

The campaign keeps moving on the theory that everyone will get out and try to sell his letters in a hurry in order to regain his 10 dollars and place himself in line for the "jackpot."

The campaign is legal so long as the letters do not pass through the mails, which would violate the mail fraud laws. An Institute of Government spokesman stated that in his opinion the letter chain did not constitute a fraud, nor did it violate the state gambling laws, even though it does involve a certain amount of risk.

The letter chain currently making the rounds here at Carolina reportedly got its start in Tampa, Fla. It leaped from the Florida city to Chapel Hill by way of the Phi Delta Theta house here, when a member received one of the letters. The campaign spread rapidly from there to the rest of the campus.

Several Phi Delts say they have already made a total of over $450 in the campaign. Pete Knight, whose name is currently at the top of most of the lists now in circulation, has reached the $90 mark, and Bill Baker has grossed $45. Bob McLaughlin has also cleared about $45.

The campaign left the Phi Delt house, breezed through the Tri Delt sorority house, and centered itself in several of the dorms. Some of the letters have reached Duke, Wake Forest and N. C. State, and it appears that the campaign has reached the state-wide level.

Elections Candidates

There will be a required meeting of all candidates for the fall elections Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Gerrard Hall. Candidates failing to attend the meeting will be disqualified from entering the election, said officials yesterday.

UP's Nominations

The University Party's nominees for the freshman class officers were mistakenly left out of the list of its nominations for fall elections in Wednesday's paper.

They are as follows: George Ragsdale, president; Jay Walker, vice president; Ham Morrison, secretary; Van Woltz, treasurer, and Miss Amy Morse, social chairman.

The nominations were made Tuesday at a meeting of the University Party.

Sophomores Pick Ambassadors For Dance

THE DUKE AMBASSADORS, above, have been picked by the UNC sophomore class to play at the group's annual dance next Friday. The dance will be held in Woollen Gym between 9 and midnight, and will be co-sponsored by the sophomore class and Graham Memorial Activities Board. Four hundred members of the Woman's College second-year class are expected to attend the dance, which will be informal—men will wear coats and ties, their dates, party dresses.

All That Glitters Is Not $10,240

Not since the last football victory over Duke has the campus been so absurdly elated. Not since the fight against Saturday classes has the Carolina student body been so galvanized to action. Not since the invention of the wheel has a society been so shaken to its roots as has our campus community this week. We speak, of course, of the chain letter racket which has blossomed forth in all its fraudulently deceptive glory in Chapel Hill, having been transplanted by some worthy Floridian to one of our larger fraternity houses.

Chain letters are not new, although you would think so from the gasps of awe which issue forth from those who are being let in for the first time on an easy way to make a million—well, to make $10,240, in this particular version of the racket.

The trouble with chain letters, and the reason why they weren't branded earlier for the frauds they are, is that someone DOES make money from them. There is a gentleman sitting in the above-mentioned fraternity house now with a pile of greenbacks which he has received through the mail. But don't ignore this point: He was in on the game early. The people who initiate a chain letter will probably make some money off it, because they begin to reap the rewards before the chain breaks down or before some wise guy starts playing upsy-daisy with the order of the names on his list. But a chain letter can never keep working unless we can assume two things: (1) that everyone is "honest" enough to play the game according to the rules, (2) that there is an infinite number of people, so the chain can keep going. Neither is true.

All over the campus today, students who have gotten trapped in the racket are wearing themselves out trying to sell the two letters required in this particular chain project. The supply of people available to buy the letters is practically exhausted. The chain is running out. A few people are making money. A great many have lost $10 each. A $10 lesson seems pretty expensive, but they aren't liable to lose $10 the next time around. And there will be a next time, because the few who have made money on this chain letter will start another.

The thing to do, if you're smart and want to make a lot of money for nothing, is to start your own chain letter. But if you're even smarter, the thing to do is to keep your money in your pocket and look for honest ways to make that million.

A Good Word For Benedict

Rove on across this page and you will come upon a letter from Mr. Burke Fox who expresses his gratitude for the noble defense (we) have been conducting for poor, martyred Alger and Owen." He goes on to say that we have omitted one name: "Slip in a good word for Benedict Arnold," he urges.

O.K. Say no more. We have leafed through a couple of good history books, sharpened our recollection of the Benedict Arnold affair and now we will present our case.

Benedict Arnold's heart was so constituted that he liked his glass of wine and his good cigar; and when he did things, he liked for it to be known. (Very common frailties of our flesh.) But at the same time Mr. Arnold was undeniably a brilliant man, one of our most daring and effective Revolutionary generals.

In 1777, our effort in the War for Independence had come to a pretty dark pass. Howe, British commander in the North, wined and dined in Philadelphia social circles. Washington and his freezing army hibernated at Valley Forge.

Burgoyne, dispatched by the British high command to take the Hudson River Valley while Yankee Spirit was at low ebb, was crushed and foiled at the Battle of Saratoga.

It was Horatio Gates, the official American commander, got credit for this victory. But do you know who really led the armies to victory at Saratoga? You guessed it—Benedict himself. This could have been the turning point in the war; the French, long hesitant, scanned the wilderness to the west and said: Mon Dieu Les Americains Sont Tres Good Fighters; and they gave us active aid that helped decide the final outcome.

Alas, in 1780, poor Benedict, unwept, unhonored, unsung and underpaid, turned thumbs down on the American cause and sold himself to the British. He was a traitor, sure enough, (something we're not sure Mr. Hiss was and that we're sure Mr. Lattimore wasn't) but he was hardly alone in his final allegiance to the British crown. Historians say about a third of the colonials joined him.

So our point is made, our "good word for Benedict" slipped in, for Mr. Fox and any of the rest of you who are interested in evaluating history's big black mark on an only half-black man.

Suggestion For Just Another Commission

Louis Kraar

IN AN UNUSUAL atmosphere of calm and quiet the student Legislature revived a committee this week with the official-sounding tag of "The Legislative Executive Problems Commission."

The Commission, (called COMLEX-STUD in student government circles), met last spring, and its findings embodied such vast changes in student government that the committee records are still confidential.

Joel Fleishman, chairman of the group, explained yesterday that the records would have to remain undisclosed because "the thing hasn't crystallized yet."

But when this group met last spring with former President Bob Gorham, so this reporter understands, here are some things it considered.

1. The group concluded that the President should have more appointive power. It was emphasized that the fruits of political victories in the form of appointments would be good incentive for students to get into government here.

2. Student government should have a secretary of state, the commission decided. The secretary would be appointed by the student body president.

3. The need for a legislative-executive committee to see legislation implemented was brought out.

One informant called this group "a sort of brain trust."

WHILE THIS commission seems necessary, the rash of committees that the Legislature has broken into seems almost ludicrous. Jim Turner, Student Party floor-leader, introduced one bill calling for a Legislature Complaint Board.

"This Board shall be the official aura of student government, but shall not discourage contact or complaint by other means," the bill states encouragingly.

This reporter appreciates the consideration Turner has shown would-be complainers. Somehow, though, I find it difficult to visualize an irate student storming into Turner's office to complain and Turner, seeing him, explaining: "Sorry, friend, you'll have to wait for the next Complaint Board meeting."

Another portion of the bill says, "The Board shall vary its meetings from place to place in order to gain as wide a scope of opinion as possible." This part amuses me. I might suggest shifting the time of the meetings, too, so that no student could find the group, and it's uselessness would be more easily seen bylegislators.

IN ANOTHER BILL, introduced by SP Chairman Joel Fleishman, the Inter-Dormitory Council's members and officers are commended. Then, the bill goes on to set up a Social Activities Commission to work with the IDC "in the administration of its social progress."

While this group will tie the IDC closer to the fund-granting Legislature, there seems little other need for it.

This current legislative trend of establishing a committee "to look into the possibilities of" or setting up a commission "to work with" a certain group is a little alarming. Soon I expect to see student legislators pass out from sheer exhaustion after attending their regular committee, party, caucus, Legislature, and commission meetings.

In addition to their student government duties, most of the people in the Legislature belong to either the Di or the Phi, the campus debating societies, and many belong to social fraternities. And, on the side, I assume some of them study once in a while.

Perhaps the Legislature will soon appoint a commission to look into the busy schedules of its members. The problem then, it would seem, will be when it could find time to meet.

Historical Background Of The Paris Agreement

Saar: A Franco-German Basketball

Dr. C. H. Pegg

(When France and Germany "agreed" on the Saar last month, Secretary Dulles messaged President Eisenhower, "Everything, including the Saar, has been signed, sealed and delivered." One newspaper headlined the end of the "300-year fight over the Saar." The Daily Tar Heel asked Professor C. H. Pegg, of the History Department faculty, whose primary field is Western Europe, to shed some historical light on the Saar dispute.—Editor.)

The Saarland, which is now and which has been many times in the past a burning issue in Franco-German relations, is a highly industrialized, coal-seamed area of 991 square miles running north from Lorraine and east from Luxembourg. Linguistically and culturally the Saar is German, but economically it is closely integrated with France and its coal seams jut nto the iron fields of Lorraine. Its explosive character stems largely from three facts: (1) its strategic location on old invasion routes between Germany and France; (2) its economic wealth (in 1953 it produced approximately 17,000,000 tons of coal and 3,000,000 tons of steel); and (3) its appeal to the national aspirations of the German people.

Historically, this tiny territory has passed back and forth between France and Germany, following the ups and downs of their military fortunes. Since 1918 its status has been provisional most of the time. In 1919 it was placed under the administration of the League of Nations, and its mines were assigned to France for a period of fifteen years as partial compensation for the damage which German army-ies had done to her own coal fields. In 1935 it was re-incorporated into Germany as a result of the plebiscite which had been provided in the Versailles Treaty. In 1945, after the collapse of the Third Reich, France, victorious by the grace of her allies, received the Saar as part of her zone of occupation.

This time France did not ask to be allowed to annex the Saar, but she set out to detach it from Germany, to give it political autonomy, and to integrate it into her own economy. She saw to it that the Saarlanders had adequate food, that their factories were not dismantled, and talked vaguely of an autonomous Saarland. The shattered Saar economy revived rapidly, and the Saarlanders, whose national aspirations had been dampened by another defeat, began to rally around the French program.

'Long Life'

In 1947 the Saarlanders, gently pressed by the French, elected a constituent assembly and framed a constitutional statute which called for an independent Saar regime and a customs and currency union with France. The French government approved the statute, and Johannes Hoffman, leader of the powerful Popular Christian party, formed a Saar cabinet. In November 1947 the French franc became the monetary unit of the Saar, and in April 1948 a Franco-Saar customs union was established.

In 1949, with East and West bidding for German support and the matter of Western defense a burning issue, the Federal Republic of Germany was set up. Paris, sensing the growing strength of Germany's position and the inevitability of some sort of German rearmament, decided to alter the course of her traditional policy and to try for an understanding with Germany within the framework of a European union. Though Konrad Adenauer, Chancellor of the West German state, responded warmly to the French gesture, he did not conceal the German hope to recover the Saar. In the early days of 1950, as France opened negotiations with the Saar in an effort to establish the Franco-Saar economic union on a contractual basis, there was a sudden flash of German nationalism. Even Theodore Heuss, president of the German Federal Republic, declared that the Saar was German and that its status could not be defined in advance of a peace treaty. Although France proceeded to sign a series of agreements in March 1950 which put existing arrangements on a contractual basis, Robert Schuman repeatedly assured Chancellor Adenauer that nothing had been done to prejudice the final status of the Saar.

From that moment until this, the Saar has been a topic of debate throughout Europe and a matter of almost constant negotiation between Paris and Bonn. After the Saar entered the Council of Europe in July 1950, there was much talk of its organization as a "Federal European State" and as the home of the various European bodies. The agreement which Mendes-France and Adenauer signed on October 23, and which is yet to be ratified, contains little that is new, despite screaming headlines. It puts the Saar vaguely under the Western European Union, which is a new name for the enlarged Brussels Pact organization, originally created in 1948. The Council of the Western European Union is to name a neutral high commissioner for the Saar to take the place of the present French high commissioner. Under the tutelage of the neutral commissioner, the Saarlanders are to vote on the new plan, and, if they approve, it must be incorporated into the Saar constitution and a new parliament elected within three months.

But Mendes-France and Adenauer did not pretend to have achieved anything beyond a modus vivendi. The agreement states that the Saar question will be re-examined when a German peace treaty is made, and that the Saarlanders will be permitted to decide whether they will retain their "European" status.

Perhaps the most significant thing about the agreement is that it marks a step, however timid and halting, in the direction of the Europeanization of the Saar.

The Dorm-Frat Division & How It Grew

Dick Creed

The most accurate reflection I've heard on frat man Charles Ackerman's fear that the campus is breaking down into two factions came from a dorm acquaintance the other day.

"Breaking, hell. It's already broken."

That's all he said before he folded his Daily Tar Heel and finished his yellow-green Lenoir hall eggs, made infamous recently by The Ram, Alexander dorm's weekly newspaper.

Impressed by his acidulent manner in stressing the past tense, I wanted to know more, and asked him when the breach occured.

He answered, rather too dramatically, I though, "It happened on the day the first fraternity came to campus."

He didn't volunteer any more information, and I didn't ask for any more.

Unqualified as his views may seem, I find myself agreeing with him.

I expect that the two-man committee studying the "distinct line of division" between dorms and fraternities could get most of the reasons for the schism from him.

The only thing is, the committee hasn't said yet what it's looking for and what it's going to do when it finds it. One thing's for sure. They'd have a heck of a time abolishing dormitories.

The reasons why there is a not-so-pleasant feeling between dorm men and frat men are ridiculously simple. And they're amazing similar to the reasons why some people are bent on destroying the American class system.

A. Frat men have cars and money. Dorm men don't.
   1. Frat men have oodles of girls and fun. Dorm men don't.
   2. Frat men can make liquor runs to Durham. Dorm men can't.

B. Frat men have the benefits of a club. Dorm men don't.
   1. Frat men make lifelong buddies. Dorm men don't.
   2. Frat men can choose their friends. Dorm men can't.

If the committee is looking for the causes of the break, these are all the reasons they will need.

If it's a cure they're after, they won't find it, unless, of course, they and South Building are willing to listen to suggestions from the Kremlin.

Rather than talking and theorizing about the discontent and envy in the heart of the dorm man, somebody, committee or not, ought to do something about those yellow-green and gunmetal-grey Lenoir Hall eggs.

They really are that color. I've seen 'em.

GM Recital

"Hazel" found a close rival in the fury of pianist David Barillan, who performed for the Petites Musicales series last Sunday night. Bar-illan's technical skill, power, and interpretations make his playing a whirlwind of sound. To review his concert is hard—I can't find anything nasty to say. The program matter varied from two Bach preludes to the Sonata by Roy Travis, a contemporary composer, and Mr. Barillan introduced each of his numbers by telling something of their background.

The first two numbers were Bach, and were played with quite a bit of definition and care. After the Bach, Bar-illan played Schubert's Fantasie, "The Wanderer," which might be considered a set of variations on a theme. The four movements treat the theme much as life treats a wandering soul. This piece is a challenge to any artist's ability as an interpreter of human emotions.

Following "The Wanderer" were two preludes by Debussy, and as I listened to Bar-illan play I could hear an echo of "The Old Man of Debussy," Giesiking. For his last number before the intermission he played a Pastorale and Toccata by his close friend Paul Ben-hayim. After the intermission, Bar-illan did another contemporary work, Roy Travis' Sonata No. 1. I must confess that this was just a little too modern for me; as the pianist said, "It sounds like a machine with a bolt loose." His playing was, nevertheless, technically beautiful, and the interpretation was as it should have been—quite machine-like. The last set of numbers left the audience breathless; two Etudes, a Nocturne, and a Ballade by Chopin. I won't try to describe the delicate precision with which he played them.

For his encores Bar-illan chose Soler's Sonata, Chopin's G minor Waltz, and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2. The audience slowly broke up after the last encore, leaving about a dozen of us begging for just one more piece.

YOU Said It

Editor:

I just can't resist expressing my gratitude for the noble defense you have been conducting for poor, martyred Alger and Owen. Your words have tugged at the hearstrings of all red-blooded campus liberals and many of the anemic ones.

My admiration is such that I hate to remind you of one notable oversight on your part. I am sure you have been so busy castigating the reactionaries that you have overlooked one name. Slip in a good word for Benedict Arnold, will you?

A great deal has been said about Mezz Mezzrow and fortunately for Mezz, little of it has pertained to his ability as a musician. His is a sad story of a man who learned the blues in an Illinois jail as a youth, and has had them ever since.

It is generally accepted that Mezz, like Eddie Condon, reached his place in jazz circles because of enthusiasm and the ability to organize, the musicianship running a not-so-close second. The only difference between Condon and Mezzrow seems to be that Condon attempted to hide his secondary ability behind the rest of the band, while Mezz never quits trying to come out on top. But despite his contaminating clarinet work, Mezz's devotion and efforts to preserve jazz as a basic art in its basic form, have been felt both in this country and in Europe, especially Paris. It is in Paris that he now resides, performing with many American jazz greats who live in pleasant exile, maintaining a safe distance from the commercial trend at home.

Victor has released a 12-inch collector's item featuring Mezzrow and Frankie Newton on either side. Its title—MEZZIN' AROUND, an apt description. Frankie Newton, a relative unknown who died last spring, is featured with his trumpet and orchestra and plays in the Mezzrow outfit. Likewise Mezz is featured with Newton, explaining the title.

The sides are not new ones. Mezzrow's five selections were cut some time in 1938, while Newton's came in 1939. Jazz historians would find these numbers interesting, as they represent the transitional period of Chicago-to-swing. If music has growing pains, they too, are here represented. The rosters of both groups are star-studded, and this, certainly, accounts for the real qualities found therein. With apologies to Mezz, we must say that the performances are predominately swing, and jazz suffers some definite alterations. Show tunes, muted horns, a swing beat, big-band drum solos, and extensive use of saxaphones, are not elements of pure jazz. Improvisation is at a minimum, and to be honest, the record has a touch of the juke-box sound.

Considered for what it is, MEZZIN' AROUND is a fine performance, but compared to the pure jazz of Jimmy Noone, or to the polished swing of Goodman it's a failure. However, it is not swing, or jazz, but some orphaned style claimed by no one but Mezzrow and Newton. Certainly an organization containing the fine work of Cozy Cole, James P. Johnson, Bud Freeman, Willie "The Lion" Smith, and Al Casey is nothing to which a deaf ear should be turned.

On side 1, we find Mezzrow's Swing Band doing MELODY FROM THE SKY, an obscure pop song from the early thirties. The vocalist, a soprano of sorts, winds her weary way through two choruses, never to be heard again, I'm sure. But the accompaniment is good, the solos by Freeman, Newton and Smith somewhat reminiscent of the early Beiderbecke bands. Though ragged and loose, the number invites easy listening because of the definite swing beat and the reckless abandon with which Freeman and Smith romp along.

MUTINY IN THE PARLOR comes closer to jazz than the others. The swinging stomp rhythm presents ideal opportunities to the soloists, and they seem to achieve their goals here. Gay tune, MUNITY IN THE PARLOR is of the school that preceded the jump tunes of the early forties.

Perhaps the most interesting of Mezz's sides is by far the least artistic. I'SE A-MUGGIN is nothing more than a prolonged number game, using the jive talk of the middle thirties. The music stops after a short be-bop vocal by "The Lion", and he takes a while to explain the rules. Then, in their own way, the Mezzrow boys count to seventy, rhythm background provided. Bud Freeman wraps it up with one of his famous honking sax solas.

Mezzrow's selections are not gems of any school or type. They're just swinging pop tunes and novelties, recorded to sell but didn't. Now that they're twenty years old, they fit into a picture somewhere in between a couple of accepted styles, and they certainly show that swing music wasn't made overnight.

Frankie Newton's side is definitely swing, and closely resembles the first Artie Shaw band, differing only in size. A strong rhythm section featuring Cozy Cole, drums, Al Casey on guitar, John Kirby on bass, and the ragtime piano virtuoso, James P. Johnson, creates a secure and often loud beat, forming a thorough pattern into which even Mezz works a fair solo.

Leading off with ROSETTA, Newton shows that he is a trumpet man worthy of high praise in swing circles. Throughout the six sides, his work with the ensemble and on solos is clear, strong and melodic. Basically a dixieland musician, his leadership is similar to Bobby Hackett. He holds the band together with his powerful and somewhat sweet continuity. Frankie Newton's obscurity, due in part to his political feelings, is one of the major disappointments among musicians. Truly versatile trumpet men are scarce, and were Newton alive today, his work would surely be welcome and appreciated.

The entire Newton side is honestly happy, even on the blues numbers. Cozy Cole and James P. Johnson, reputable buffoons, add many a touch of humor in their renditions. Combining swing and drive, the Newton band far surpasses Mezzrow's. This may be due to the three-year difference in recording and reformation of groups, but the talent advantage and the ensemble sound of the Newton band makes it look far superior. It definitely sounds so.

Terplets Come From Behind To Top Carolina Frosh 12-7

Existence Of Bad Feelings Hinted Over Cancellation

RALEIGH, Nov. 5 (AP) — The scheduled freshman football game between North Carolina and Wake Forest has been cancelled.

The game, sponsored by the Wilson Shrine Club, originally was slated for Oct. 15 but was rescheduled for Nov. 12 by mutual agreement.

This was before the Oct. 23 game between the Varsity's of both schools at Chapel Hill which ended in a free-for-all, missing teeth and bloody noses on both sides.

After that game Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers charged Carolina with playing dirty football and Dr. Harold Tribble, Wake Forest president, issued a statement which was critical of Carolina coaches.

Bob Brooks, assistant sports editor of the News and Observer, said today that Irving Carlyle of Winston-Salem, outgoing president of the board of trustees of Wake Forest, sought to smooth the troubled waters by writing to Carolina Chancellor Robert B. House. Carlyle urged the two schools to bury the hatchet, but so far has not received a reply.

Wake Forest athletic director Pat Preston told Brooks the Carolina folks said they wouldn't be able to work out a playing date. No reason was given.

Preston then went ahead and scheduled another game with Hargrave Military Academy.

Homecoming Captains

LARRY PARKER AND JIM NEVILLE have been selected to cocaptain North Carolina's Tar Heels in today's Homecoming Game with the University of South Carolina Gamecocks. Both Neville and Parker are seniors and have been stand-out performers for the Tar Heels for the past two seasons.

Locals Lead At Halftime On Temple's 87-Yard TD Sprint

Lineberger And Llewellyn Lead Tar Baby Line; Williams Sparks Offense

By FRED BABSON DTH Sports Editor

Trailing 7-6 at halftime, Maryland's Terplets drove for a score early in the third quarter and doggedly held onto their lead to defeat North Carolina's highly-touted Tar Babies, 12-7, at Kenan Stadium yesterday. A crowd estimated at 1,500 braved the cold confines of the Carolina ampitheatre to witness the close struggle between the future Tar Heels and Terrapins.

The Carolina underlings came within a bobble of beating the visitors in the fourth quarter on a 40-yard, last down pass. With the ball resting on Maryland's 30-yard line, Carolina Quarterback George Sasser faded back to the 40, spotted End Paul Pulley all alone, nearing the goal line, and fired a strike. Pulley, participating in his first play of the ball game, picked the leather out of the air on the goal line, bobbled it, stumbled, and fell, reaching vainly for the pigskin as he hit the turf.

JOE TEMPLE

Tar Baby Halfback Joe Temple turned in the most spectacular feat of the afternoon, returning a Maryland kick-off 87 yards for a touchdown with roughly a minute remaining in the first half, giving the locals their halftime 7-6 lead.

Temple's brilliant run came immediately after Maryland had scored its first six-pointer. He gathered in the ball on his 13-yard line, went straight up the middle of the field, aided by some well-executed blocking, and once past the midfield traffic-jam, simply outran three Terplets to paydirt.

Maryland's initial tally came as a result of Carolina's Don Kelly's weak punt, which netted only three yards, going out of bounds on the Tar Baby 30. On the Terplets' first play following the misguided boot, Maryland's second-string quarterback, John Fritsch, dropped back and heaved true to Jim Steppe, who had slipped out of the Carolina pass-defense network and was roaming loose in the end zone. Guard Jack Lineberger broke through like a steam-roller to block the conversion attempt. Maryland led, 6-0, but its lead was short-lived due to Temple's handiwork. Phil Blazer split the uprights, following Temple's long haul of the ensuing kickoff: UNC-7; Maryland-6.

Carolina kicked off to open the second half. An exchange of punts followed, and Maryland had the ball on Carolina's 33-yard stripe. Three plays later the visitors were knocking on the scoring door from the four yard line, mainly on the strength of Halfback Dick Kennedy's scrambling 17-yard burst up the middle. Maryland's first string signal caller, Phil Perlo, sneaked to the two. On the next play, Perlo faked a pitch-out, and slanted off his right tackle for what proved to be the margin of victory. The conversion attempt was wide this time.

With two minutes time remaining in the final quarter, the Tar Babies threatened when interference was ruled on a 33-yard pass from Sasser to Pulley, giving them the ball on the Mary 32. But the Maryland line perked up, stopping one run, and forcing Sasser to run twice when he intended to pass. A last-play, desperation toss from Roland Goff, in for Sasser, to End Buddy Payne fell incomplete as the final gun sounded.

The Tar Baby line was outstanding all day, continually thwarting the Maryland offense, with the exception of its 33-yard scoring drive Guard Jack Lineberger and Center Jack Llewellyn were all over the field, tackling and blocking viciously.

Along with Temple, Howard Williams bore the brunt of Carolina's offense. Both were consistent ground-gainers all afternoon. Sasser turned in several fine exhibitions of broken-field running, but had bad luck with his passing. The locals completed only one out of nine aerials thrown.

Maryland threw four times, completing three. Perlo, Bob Rusevelyn, Fred Hamilton and Dick Kennedy were the Terplet offensive standouts.

This was Coach Ralph Floyd's Tar Babies' first loss, having won twice previously. It was Maryland's second victory, against two defeats.

Tar Baby Racers Face Myers Park Harriers

By RAY LINKER

A revival of high school cross country with a meet between Myers Park High of Charlotte and the Carolina Freshmen today kicks off a busy period of running throughout the state during the next few days.

The Tar Babies and the high schoolers will toe the line at 11:20 this morning, and on Monday both the varsity and frosh will compete for the state championship in Raleigh. Both teams are also entered in the four-mile AAU meet at Davidson November 20. The ACC conference meet will take place in College Park November 15.

Coach Dale Ranson, always trying to stimulate more interest in high school track and cross country, will send his harriers after their fifth win of the season. They have stopped Duke twice, and downed Richmond and Wake Forest once each, while losing to State twice.

Starting today for the UNC frosh will be Everett Whatley, Ben Williams, Bailey Liipfert, John Sylvester, Woodrow Thomasson, Phil Hamrick, Rand Bailey, and Nelson Wilder. Little is known about the strength of the Mustangs from Myers Park.

The varsity with four wins (over Virginia, Richmond, Duke, and Tennessee) and one loss (to State) and a second place in a three way meet with Maryland and Wake Forest—will have to top the Wolfpack if they are to bring home the trophies from the Big Five meet. Wake Forest, Duke, and Davidson, will also enter teams in the varsity division, while the freshman division is open to any college freshman or Junior College runner in the state.

The event, sponsored by State College, will see seventeen trophies given away. Team cups will be awarded to the varsity and freshman teams finishing first in their respective divisions. The first ten varsity runners and top five frosh will receive individual awards.

Concerning the meet, Coach Ranson said yesterday, "State college thinks they bought a lot of hardware for themselves, but we want it and are going over there to pick up a lot of it."

Ranson will be depending on Jim Beatty and Bob Barden to spark the Tar Heel hopes as well as expecting superb performances from co-captains Tony Houghton and Don Wright, and Boyd Newnam, Marion Griffin, Glenn Nanney, Scotty Hester, Ed Joyner, and Pete McGee.

Freshmen runners in the meet will include Richard Rigsbee and Everett Whatley, the teams top men, and Bailey Liipfert, Ray Montgomery, John Sylvester, Ben Williams, Gary Nichols, and Ben Rose.

Patton, Palmer Exhibition Set

WAKE FOREST—Two of the nation's top amateur golfers will meet in an exhibition match over the Wake Forest College course Saturday morning at 10:30.

Arnold Palmer and Billy Joe Patton, both former Wake Forest stars, will oppose each other in a foursome which includes Phil Weichman, the Deacons' number one man, and Dick Tiddy, Charlotte professional and former Deacon.

Palmer and Weichman will play against Patton and Tiddy. The public is invited to attend the match at no charge. The exhibition is a feature of Wake Forest's Homecoming festivities. Saturday afternoon the Deacons play host to Duke in an Atlantic Coast Conference game beginning at 2 o'clock.

Patton and Palmer will be honored at halftime of the football game along with James H. Weaver, Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner and former Wake Forest Athletic Director, and Miss Betty Jo Ring, another Wake Forest graduate who is Miss North Carolina of 1954.

3 Dormitories Approve Idea For IDC 'Brigadoon' Dances

Three dormitories have approved the bill proposing the establishment of "The Brigadoons."

Stacy, Lewis and Grimes have approved the bill and voted to sponsor "The Brigadoons."

John Beshara, social chairman of the Interdormitory Council, proposed the measure to the IDC. In order for "The Brigadoons" to be effective, it will have to be approved by all of the 19 men's dorms by Nov. 17.

"The Brigadoons" is a function of the IDC, created in order to sponsor a dance this year and one such dance each semester beginning with the 1955-56 academic year.

College Presidents Talk Integration

By The Associated Press

Elections of officers and a discussion of how North Carolina college presidents feel about admission of Negroes concluded a two-day meeting of the North Carolina College Conference here today.

Most of the presidents indicated in a survey that they are "undecided" on how to cope with the racial integration problem.

Reactions reportedly ranged from the heads of "three colleges" which now admit "carefully selected" Negroes to their former all-white student bodies to the statement of two presidents that their schools are "categorically opposed" to admitting Negroes.

Dr. Arthur M. Bannerman, president of Warren Wilson College at Swannanoa, who made the survey, said that most of the 37 colleges which are members of the conference "lie somewhere in between" those two extremes. His report, read to the conference in his absence by Dr. L. C. Lamotte of Presbyterian Junior College, Maxton, did not name the three colleges whch now admit Negroes.

He said the survey showed, generally, that trustees are inclined to be more opposed to the admissions than the faculties and students, and the faculties are more opposed than the students.

The conference's new slate of officers is headed by Dr. B. Dennis Cooke, president of High Point College, who succeeds Dr. Carlyle Campbell, president of Meredith.

Miss Bonnie Cone, president of Charlotte College, was elected vice president and Dr. James Hillman of Raleigh, a member of the State Department of Education, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Members named to the executive committee were Dr. Campbell, Dean R. L. Lee of Mars Hill and Dr. R. D. Welions, president of Pembroke State College.

Dr. Bannerman's report on integration revealed that 22 college presidents are in favor of beginning integration on a college level, while seven are opposed. Twenty-four indicated a belief that integration will become a reality soon, while six believed it will be blocked for some years to come.

The conference acted to bring teaching of high school and college levels more in step with each other by approving plans for a statewide testing program designed to spotlight college material all the way through the public school system.

UNC Press Books Are On Display

A permanent display of current books published by the University Press is now on exhibit in the lobby of the Library.

As new books are published by the Press, they will be added to this exhibit and the older ones will be withdrawn. By using this method the latest publications of the Press will always be displayed.

Aside from the permanent display, there are numerous exhibits of other books that have been produced by the Press that have won wide acclaim throughout the publishing world.

Among these are numerous books that have won the Mayflower Award, which is presented annually to the resident of North Carolina who writes the most outstanding book in the non-fiction field.

The University Press was founded in 1922 by members of the UNC faculty and board of trustees who believed that scholarship and scholarly publishing must go hand in hand if learning was to flourish.

In its first year of operation, the Press published one paper-bound book and one cloth-bound book, after examining a few manuscripts. Today the Press examines hundreds of manuscripts annually and publishes dozens of books every year.

Since its small beginning 32 years ago when only two books were published, the University Press has, to date, published some 700 books and has distributed tens of thousands of these volumes.

Police Act On 'Note'

Some time between 4 p.m. Wednesday and 10 a.m. Thursday, the ignition key was stolen from the car of Leon Meadows, a grad student in education. According to Meadows, the key was stolen by another motorist who was "dissatisfied" with the way in which the car was parked.

A note was found inside the car. It was a "very profane" note which stated that the writer intended to do away with the car key because he thought the car was badly parked. The police sergeant who investigated the theft thought that the car was properly parked, and that it was blocking no one.

The note is being examined by the police for possible fingerprints. According to a report received by The Daily Tar Heel, "a positive arrest is indicated."

Explorer Scouts Arrive

Three to four-hundred Explorer Scouts arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon to attend the Explorer Vocational Conference program which will climax tonight with a dance.

The Scouts set up came in the Tin Can due to inclement weather. They were given a tour of the campus by members of Alpha Phi Omega, Carolina's service fraternity.

After a kick-off meeting at 7:30 p. m. at Gerrard Hall they moved down to Woollen Gym to a sports carnival presented by the UNC gymnastics team.

Tom Creasy, president of the UNC student body made a formal address at a general assembly yesterday morning at 9 o'clock welcoming the scouts on behalf of the UNC student body.

Also yesterday there were four vocational sessions for the scouts. Each Explorer chose any four of 15 subjects he wished to hear lectures on and that he thought he might be interested when he attends college.

The University Testing Service gave the Scouts personal interest tests last night. Each will be notified of his own special aptitude toward a profession.

There will be a selection and crowning of a Queen at the dance to be held at the UNC Naval Armory from 7:30 until 11 o'clock Saturday evening. All girls and Explorer Scouts are welcome to attend.

Tar Heels Turn Last - Minute Disaster Into Last - Minute Victory Over Gamecocks; Win, 21-19, Before 22,000 Fans

Bullock's Aerial To Lane Wins For UNC

By BERNIE WEISS

Carolina's Tar Heels converted last-quarter disaster into last-minute victory to upset South Carolina's Gamecocks, 21-19, yesterday afternoon before 22,000 thrill-filled fans at Kenan Stadium.

A Len Bullock to Norman Lane pass was completed in the end zone with only one minute and 36 seconds remaining in the game, bringing the Tar Heels from out of the doldrums after apparent disaster had struck only a few minutes earlier. The Birds had taken a 19-14 lead with less than three minutes to go when South Carolina end Buddy Frick intercepted a pitchout and raced 79 yards for what seemed to be the icer.

Lane's catch in the end zone was a beauty, and Bullock, too, deserves much credit for his accurate toss: Briefly, here was the situation.

Taking the kickoff after the South Carolina score, the Tar Heels moved uptown to the Bird 12-yard line, largely because of fullback Don Klochak's 30-yard gallop deep into scoring territory. Klochak tried right end on the next play and gained one yard to the 11.

Then Bullock faded back for a pass, drifted far to his right searching for an open man. He almost ran with the ball as no Tar Heel eligible to receive was clear of interference, but he spotted Lane in the end zone, threw, the six-foot, two-inch flankman leaped high into the air, outjumping two defenders, and hauled in the pass for the winning score.

Ken Keller added the extra point and Carolina had evened its season's record once more at 3-3-1.

All had appeared lost for the winners just prior to the once-in-a-lifetime finish.

Third-string quarterback Farmer was running the team in the last four minutes and had his crew on the South Carolina 21-yard line. The S. C. line was holding well, so Farmer elected to try the ends. A pitchout to halfback Larry Parker, who was headed in the general direction of the goal, was late. From out of nowhere Frick appeared on the scene, gathered in the floating pigskin and outraced Farmer in the opposite direction.

UNC, Wake Forest Bury The Hatchet After Fist-Fight

RALEIGH, Nov. 7 (AP)—The University of North Carolina and Wake Forest College officially buried the hatchet late Friday.

Wake Forest College's President Harold W. Tribble, and football coach Tom Rogers, apologized for implying lack of sportsmanship on the part of the University of North Carolina football team.

At the same time officials of the University said they welcomed and accepted the retraction.

The action on both sides was made in a joint statement by Dr. Tribble and Chancellor Robert B. House.

The statement was drawn up Friday night at a meeting at North Carolina State College here and issued to the press by William Friday, administrative assistant to Gordon Gray, president of the Consolidated University.

The statement added that "both institutions feel that the freshman game should be played in Wilson, N. C., on Nov. 12."

This referred to a freshman football game between the schools which apparently was cancelled following the bad blood which developed after the varsity game fracas at Chapel Hill.

But whether the freshman game will be played could not definitely be determined last night.

The varsity game Oct. 23 wound up in a free for all which saw several players banished from the game. Wake Forest Quarterback Nick Consoles lost three front teeth and had a battered face, all sustained in the closing minutes of the game.

After the game, a fist fight broke out among the players as they were en route to their dressing rooms.

Rogers accused the Tar Heels of "playing dirty football."

On the following day, Dr. Tribble issued a statement which said in part "it was a very unfortunate display of bad sportsmanship. Carolina had won the game . . . then a Carolina player slugged Consoles after a play had been completed . . . It looked like a deliberate attempt to knock Consoles out. Then, of course, the rest of it—the fists flying, and so forth—resulted from that.

"I did not go to the dressing

Major General Visits

Major General M. K. Deichelmann, Headquarters Commandant AFROTC in Montgomery, Ala., arrived here Friday night.

He attended the Carolina homecoming game yesterday afternoon, and with other AFROTC officials he made a "staff visit" of the UNC Air Science unit.

Major General Deichelmann is in charge of 188 U. S. college AFROTC detachments. He has 104,000 potential officers under his command, 24,000 of which are advance students.

Before coming to Carolina, Major General Deichelmann visited A & T College.

Artists' Ideas Display Slated In Person Hall

The Art Gallery is open to the public from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. on week days, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. on Saturdays, and from 2 to 5 p. m. on Sundays.

Characteristic examples have been chosen from each master's work, and the paintings, drawings and prints included are accompanied by pertinent statements and commentaries provided by the artist himself or selected from published sources, according to John V. Allcott, head of the UNC Art Department.

Hailing from different schools, most of these six men have been

Carolina Honor Organizations Have Long, Colorful Histories

By BOB EBERLE

Every spring, in the latter part of April, in the traditional atmosphere of darkness and Wagnerian music, hooded giants search through the audience of Memorial Hall for male students to be tapped by the highest honorary organization on campus. That organization is the Order of the Golden Fleece, and it is said to be the oldest group of its type in the country still to engage in public tapping ceremonies.

Ranking side by side with this organization is that of the Valkyries, which taps the outstanding females on campus. In predawn ceremonies during the year those girls chosen as outstanding in leadership, scholarship and character at Carolina are chosen for this honor. Since 1940, when it changed from a national organization, Alpha Gamma, to a local one, the Valkyries by custom have chosen the outstanding two percent of the coed population of the University.

Though these two organizations are considered the highest, there are two others which are considered at the top. These two orders, The Order of the Old Well and the Order of the Grail, are both honorary and service organizations and stem from essentially the same idea except that the Order of the Grail was founded for a different reason.

In 1920, the Order of the Grail was founded for sophomores and juniors, and was started for the purpose of eliminating the rivalry between dormitory and fraternity men. During its first years this organization picked seven fraternity and six dormitory men, and the following year it picked seven dormitory and six fraternity men. Since this time, however, Grail leaders felt the rivalry had subsided so now the thirteen men are

Eruption In Kenan

By FRED POWLEDGE

That man that usually flies around in the Jones Sausage plane sure missed something yesterday.

He missed a funny kind of eruption that occured back of the Bell Tower, in a clearing with pine trees all around.

The eruption occured a little late in the afternoon . . . at least, the cheerleaders thought so. But occur it did.

It all happened when the people on the south side of Kenan Stadium (who hadn't been yelling too much until the people from South Carolina made a touchdown) all of a sudden decided they would start yelling. And when they started yelling, 11 men and a slightly bad-looking scoreboard couldn't keep them down.

One fellow got up and led the crowd in a new-type cheer, "Fumble Play." Since everybody knew the tune (From "Super Suds," and the radio commercial of the same name) the new-type cheer caught on quickly.

Another couple of fellows, who had obviously been smelling the cork a little too much, were singing "We're Gonna Go To The Arnge (for Orange) Bowl." And they meant it.

From a jealous coed came the half-time remark about the beautiful South Carolina majorette, clothed rather barely in a wisp of pink: "That pink she's wearing doesn't go very well with the rest of them."

Twinkling Miss Nancy Whisnant, who is also chairman of the Women's Honor Council, a cheerleader and a very important person on the campus of the first state university, was crowned Homecoming Queen by student government President Tom Creasy. She got (or rather Creasy was treated to) a short, sweet kiss, along with her flowers and queenship.

There was a little Boy Scout—one of 500 attending the Explorer Scouts' annual encampment here—and he was a really little one, too: he stood in front of the University Band and in the middle of Kenan Stadium before all those people and saluted while the band played the National Anthem. He looked very proud.

A little later, when the winter sun went down behind Mr. Morehead's and Mr. Patterson's gift, and when students started getting cold, the little Scout walked up and down behind the Carolina bench, following the game. He wore the biggest, furriest, warmest-looking parka, probably, that has ever been

Story Book Battle Leaves S.C. Players Tired, Silent Losers

By BOB DILLARD

"What's the matter with that guy?" The group of players in front of the door of the South Carolina dressing room turned a their teammate's words just in time to see Bill Koman's blue jersey dive into the UNC dressing room. Nobody else made any comment, and the players resumed their silent positions before the door.

One Gamecock rode into the dresing room on the hands of four teammates. However, most of them seemed in good shape, but tired after the story-book battle.

Members of both teams driting slowly into the field house, in marked contrast to the dressing room episode of the last Carolina home game. Groups of UNC and South Carolina players talked, congratulated each other and shook hands before departing for their respective showers. Tar Heel halfback Ken Keller came through the crowd into the Gamecock dressing room to continue a conversation begun on the field.

Shouting and yelling came from across the way, but the Gamecocks felt no inclination to take part in the festivities. They continued the quiet conversation begun after the game.

Coach Rex Enright, a short, soft-spoken man, was button-holed outside the dressing room door by a group of inquiring reporters.

"It was a good hard game. They deserved to win," he said. Enright took nothing from the Tar Heels in their moment of glory. But he thought his Gamecocks deserved the victory too. Enright commented that he thought injuries received last week by some of his key players lessened his team's chances for a victory.

When asked which Carolina player he thought outstanding, Enright commented, "That big fullback, whoever he was." Don Klochak drew praise from the opposing coach as well as from his own team supporters. Enright closed out his observations with, "We made some mistakes, but that happens. It was a good Homecoming win for them."

And it was.

You Can Go Home Again

A man walking past Murphy Hall on his way to the game yesterday afternoon turned to his companion and said, "You know, it hasn't changed so much. It's pretty much the way it was 30 years ago."

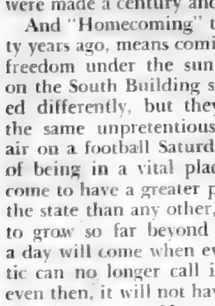
That wasn't quite true, of course. Since 1924, the campus has more than doubled, spread out in all directions until it hardly resembles the University the man graduated from.

But in a larger sense, we think, Carolina probably hasn't "changed so much," and this alumnus may have been right. Even for those whose earliest memory of Franklin Street is of a rutted dirt road and for those who knew, in their student days, every citizen in town, Chapel Hill has remained, despite all its physical growth, somehow different. Everyone who has been here for any length of time knows it, but we have never heard that feeling adequately expressed.

It has to do with the function of this village: the process of teaching and learning. That sets it apart in the beginning from Kannapolis, which makes cloth, and Raleigh, which dispenses government, and Southport, which catches fish. Chapel Hill teaches people, and that makes it different.

So do other things, however, and it is those other things that makes the word "Homecoming" peculiarly applicable to our town. The alumnus of whom we spoke was coming back to the things that really haven't changed so much since 1924—the ancient hill on the edge of the Carolina Piedmont covered with the burnt, brown leaves of fall, the old oaks of the north campus, Old East and Old West, rising out of the same yellow clay from which their yellow bricks were made a century and a half ago.

And "Homecoming" to a graduate of thirty years ago, means coming back to the same freedom under the sun, the same students on the South Building steps (they are dressed differently, but they haven't changed), the same unpretentious excitement in the air on a football Saturday, the same feeling of being in a vital place, a place that has come to have a greater part in the history of the state than any other, a village that is yet to grow so far beyond its boundaries that a day will come when even the most romantic can no longer call it a village; and yet even then, it will not have changed so much. What's more, at Homecoming, 1984, there will be an alumnus on hand to remark that it hasn't.



They call it "Homecoming" everywhere, of course. At UCLA there's a parade miles long; at Michigan, they crown a queen before a crowd of thousands. They come "home" to Duke, too, from Philadelphia and New York, crowd beneath the Gothic spires, slap each other on the back and make uproarious comparisons to the size of the old bald spot.

But, we venture, the significance of the word is nowhere so great as it is on this campus, where this weekend there is a coming home to Chapel Hill.

Thomas Wolfe, who knew this town, should have known better than to write, "You can't go home again . . ." We have seen the alumni treading the brick walks of the campus this weekend, Tom, and you were wrong. Even after thirty—or forty or fifty years—you can.

Bloomers To Blue Jeans: That's Coeds

Louis Kraar

COEDS AND the clothes they wear have frequently been the subject of biting criticism from this reporter. But—after a look at the fashions of other college generations—I'm ready to reform.

Thanks to that great tower of news (at least, all "that's fit to print")—The New York Times—I got a glimpse of some of our ancestor's college clothes. And, as I said, I'm ready to reform.

Back in 1867, which was probably the time when the young girl realized that college was as good a husband-hunting grounds as any, they wore hats and hoop skirts to class.

Later, as going to college became the thing for girls to do (if you could afford it and hadn't hooked a husband yet), Vassar girls went athletic. The pink V (for Vassar) became the sign of fashion.

World War I brought bloomers. And by the twenties, belted sweaters, silk stockings and high heels, raccoon coats and the hip flask were standard coed equipment.

Skirts fell with the stock market in the 1930's, and pavement-pounding oxfords became the vogue (mainly due to necessity.)

By the next time the world had gone to war, the coed decided to be practical to the point of conformity, and even Wellesley girls took to blue jeans and sloppy shirts.

Today—if you haven't noticed—the coeds wear trim skirts, neat blouses and sweaters, and those horrible (I still don't like them) Burmuda shorts.

Ivy League fashion-setters predict the short skirt with high socks. I'm not sure about this either. But as long as the girls don't go back to bloomers or blue jeans, I'm all for them.

WHILE ON the subject of fashion, I might add that the University of Virginia has become worried about its male students and their dress.

Apparently, the Virginia gentlemen have been cavorting about campus without coats and ties (a sin, by UVa. standards). In addition, these rude students have had the audacity to go around wearing T-shirts, "spotted and colored shirts" and tennis shoes.

But the student paper, The Cavalier, put them in place with this haughty slap: "If the aesthetic depravity of these 'students' continues to be in evidence, then we suggest that all gentlemen, whose tastes in clothes is on a slightly higher and more appealing plane, either forceably change the ways of their younger classmates or give up the traditions of the University to those of a state 'U.'"

By all means, Cavaliers, I suggest that you don't give up your traditions for those of a state university. After all you're not a state university, you're just a country club—aided and abetted by state funds.

GEORGIA TECH, with one of the college football's biggest teams in the last few years, has an angry student body these days.

After students learned they couldn't purchase date tickets to their biggest game—with Georgia—the student paper declared:

"We may as well face it, the high-powered football played here in the Southeastern Conference has taken the game away from the students. Evidently the Athletic Association is more interested in cutting down a little scalping—which is impossible—and catering to the alumni than it is in pleasing the student body.

CALDWELL MONUMENT is still looking sad and unfixed. May I recommend to the authorities that they proceed to fix it, or should the student Legislature appoint another of its committees to "look into the possibilities of" fixing it?

McCarthy Aide Talks Tactics

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—On the eve of the McCarthy censure debate, a former associate of McCarthy's has given highly revealing information regarding his operations. They include:

1. An attempt by McCarthy to thwart the Senate committee probing his finances in 1951.

2. McCarthy's efforts to defeat Democratic candidates in Utah, Montana and Washington by smearing them as pro-Communist.

The ex-McCarthy associate, Harvey Matusow, is a former member of the Communist party who became disillusioned, gave information to the FBI and later joined McCarthy's long list of friends, informers and paid employees. Interviewed by this writer, Matusow told in detail how McCarthy had sent home to Utah to re-elect—of all people—Sen. Arthur Watkins, now chairman of the Senate Committee which recommended the censure of McCarthy.

Matusow did this, he said, first by testifying before a Senate committee in Salt Lake City about Communists in the government and later by smearing Congressman Granger, Democratic opponent of Senator Watkins, as soft toward Communists.

"I used McCarthy logic," Matusow explained. "I said Granger was pro-Administration policy on China . . . China fell to the Reds and your boys are fighting in Korea.

"I also campaigned in Montana against Senator Mansfield and in Washington against Senator Jackson," Matusow said, "But the smear technique was not successful."

Lady Witness Exits

Describing his work for McCarthy in thwarting the Senate committee probing McCarthy's finances, Matusow said he had received a call from Mrs. J. B. Matthews, whose husband was then McCarthy's committee counsel, asking him to take Mrs. Arvilla Bentley out of the United States util the probe of McCarthy's finances blew over.

Mrs. Bentley, former wife of Congressman Alvin Bentley, had "loaned" $7,000 to McCarthy, while the congressman "loaned" $3,000. And the Senate wanted to question her regarding this and other contributions. Mrs. Bentley, Matusow said, had also paid for a Mutual network broadcast which McCarthy made before the 1950 elections.

Matusow said McCarthy knew all about the idea of taking Mrs. Bentley out of the United States away from Senate probers and that he, Matusow, had talked to McCarthy himself about it. He also said that McCarthy's attorney knew about the plan.

Mrs. Bentley remained in the British Bahamas outside the arm of a Senate subpoena for about two weeks, then came back to the United States, Matusow explained.

"Was this $110,000 the money used by McCarthy to speculate on the soy-bean market?" Matusow was asked.

"That's correct."

"Did Mrs. Bentley have any idea that McCarthy was going to use it for speculation?"

SEN. KNOWLAND

. . . a watering down will be tried.

"No, she did not."

"Did she express any opinion to you about it?"

"Very definitely," Matusow replied. "She said that if she had known Senator McCarthy was going to speculate with this money, she never would have loaned it to him."

Matusow also said that McCarthy had asked him to investigate the New York Times, Time Magazine and other newspapers with a view to pinning the Communist Party label on them.

"They had been attacking Senator McCarthy," the ex-McCarthyite explained, "and he was sore about it and wanted to take his revenge."

Lone Star Revenge

There was an interesting inside reason why the Republicans elected one lone Texas Congressman, Bruce Alger, from Dallas. It was a pure case of Democratic revenge.

The revenge was not against the Republicans but against Democrat Walter Savage, who had double-crossed the Democrats in the 1952 Presidential election.

Savage, who ran for Congress last week, was Democratic state chairman two years ago when he turned the Democratic machinery over to the Republicans in the presidential election and helped swing the state to Eisenhower. While Savage was Democratic state chairman, his partner, Alvin Lane, was Republican state chairman. They formed an interesting GOP team.

This year Savage decided to run for Congress as a Democrat. But when Dallas voters went to the polls on Tuesday, thousands of Democrats boycotted the Democratic candidate. Remembering the man who as Democratic chairman had thrown the party machinery to Eisenhower, many Democrats either voted against him or just didn't vote at all.

Meanwhile, the Republicans, who used Savage in 1952, destroyed him in 1954. They elected their own man, Alger.

Note—Savage had been so confident of victory that he had lined up his staff and even rented a house in Washington.

Republican Headache

Republicans are worried that the McCarthy censure session will turn into a party brawl with the Democrats sitting serenely on the sidelines.

Their chief concern is that McCarthy, who insists he can't be bought off with anything less than acquittal on the censure charge, will aim his smear machine at Republicans and drag them down with him. To avoid this, a group of moderates headed by Majority Leader Bill Knowland will try to water down the censure resolution and persaude McCarthy to accept it.

McCarthy is almost sure to refuse and will carry his fight on for weeks, no matter how much the censure resolution is toned down.

God & The Juke Box

LOCAL NICKELODEON GETS CUSTOMER'S COIN
. . . for a talk with the Man upstairs?

(These are excerpts from an article by D. W. Brogan in the British newspaper, The Manchester Guardian. They afford a look at an Englishman's look at this year's spate of religious popular songs.—Editor)

When you sit down in a dining-car of the New Haven Railroad you find on the table a little card on which are printed three forms of grace before meat—Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish. It is not perhaps worth insisting on the fact that the New Haven, for reasons best known to itself, does not print a form of grace after meat. What is more significant is the attempt to recall the passengers of the line to their religious duties. And it is only one sign among many of the degree to which religion is being pushed, "sold" as the advertisers might put it, to the American people.

It is easy and tempting to smile or even laugh at some of the manifestations of the revival of religion. To see on the filthy wall of a Harlem slum a poster advertising the good results to be expected from regular church-going is to be tempted to irony. For this so prosperous middleclass pair with their smart little boy and smart little girl belong not to Harlem but to Westchester or Fairfield County. Their churches, their religion, seem to have little relation to the religious or social condition of Harlem. It is possible to smile, too, at the unconscious identification of God with the free enterprise system. This is a God who rewards here and now. "Grace and gear," as Burns put it, still go together in America.

Perhaps the oddest example of American religiosity is to be found in the field of popular music. God has invaded the juke-boxes. It is not a matter of Negro spirituals or hymns like "Silent Night." There is a special juke-box religious music. I first noticed this when I listened idly to a tune called "Talk to the Man Upstairs." I thought at first that this was a variant on a common amorous theme. But I realised suddenly that the "Man Upstairs" was God. I listened, too, to "Are you friends with the King of Friends?" There is another song called simply "My Friend" but the singers are made so inarticulate by their snobbing that I have been unable to determine who the friend is. It may be that this invasion of the jute-boxes is simply a result of the fact that this is a very poor year for popular music. The song that most assaults the ear is a melancholy and quite undistinguished ditty called "Take me in your arms." It is difficult to get a glass of milk in New York without having to endure this. It is the old theme of Venus and Adonis, and Adonis, like Orpheus, would be well justified in taking off "down the swift Hebrus to the Lesbian shore."

It is perhaps no wonder that a different theme should have some appeal. And of course the propagators of juke-box religion may ask with Rowland Hill "Why should the Devil have all the good tunes?" Alas! the religious tunes are not good not as good, for instance, as a California wine firm's current commercial "jingle." And I wonder whether the propagandist effect is always what is hoped for. I was recently in a bar presided over by a former star of the Howard Athenaeum (of Boston, Mass.). It was full of young people "horsing around" as the saying goes. A young man and a young woman were wrapt in the pursuit of love and were feeding nickels, more or less automatically, into the juke-box. They gazed into each other's eyes to the tune of "Steam heat" (the title tells all). Then came "The Man Upstairs," but as I left the bar Eros was winning over Agape hands down.

YOU Said It: A Plug For Leniency

Editor:

A referendum is before the students which, if passed, will raise the honor system out of the judicial doldrums and give it real meaning for each student.

Ask yourself, "What is the trouble with our honor system?" Why don't students support the honor system any better? The answer is simple: we have a system of punishment and intimidation, not of honor. A student reporting an offender for cheating will hurt him, not help him. As long as this is the case, the old stigma on "stooling" will remain the powerful inhibition it is. Until reporting an individual can be considered as doing him a favor we cannot expect maximum participation on the part of students. And we must MAKE it a favor. No greater lesson can be learned than honor.

The honor system is the best system possible. But is is not perfect and it can be improved. It can be improved by greater student support and by treating offenders as individuals.

When a student breaks the honor system, we want him to change his ways. This can be done in two ways: rehabilitation and punishment. Punishment has two great drawbacks: it is brutal and wasteful, and its objective can be achieved easier—through rehabilitation. We want offenders to accept the honor system as THEIR honor system. What is important is not the fact that they broke the honor system but WHY they broke it. Offenders can not be dismissed as malicious incorrigibles fit only for exile. They must be understood as individuals with individual problems. Until you have done this you have done nothing.

Why suspend a student for first offense cheating? Is it assumed that because he has cheated once he will cheat again? Does his presence here contaminate honest students and make them dishonest? I think not. Is it possible that ostracism will bring about correction better than sympathetic individual attention? I think not. Is it necessary to disrupt a students' entire life—perhaps permanently—for a mistake that could be corrected more easily and an effective without a personal revolution. Hell, no!

If we want to make the honor system really work, the students must abide by it because they want to—not because they are afraid not to. I suggest the best way to reconstruct an erring individual is to guide him in his efforts, not to push him off the cliff and expect him to crawl back alone. If you agree, vote FOR the referendum for leniency in first offense cheating and put some honor in the honor system.

Charlie Wolf, Student Council

'Not Asked,' Says Panhellenic Council

Editor:

I am writing this letter as a point of information to anyone who is interested in the issue recently brought up in legislature concerning the abolishment of tests during rush periods.

Since the question of sorority approval on being included in such a bill was not brought to the attention of the Panhellenic Council before its proposal, I would like to mention some of the points which may have been overlooked concerning the sororities' position.

Panhellenic has its rush week at the beginning of the school year for the convenience of both students and administration. At that time they are not confronted with the problem of tests. Since rushing is an extra-curricular activity and does not concern the whole student body, there is an endeavor to keep it in its proper perspective.

In conclusion, the doubt lingering in my mind is why sororities were included in such a bill without the endorsement of their official organization.

'Normality' in Venable & More Bunsen Burners

Editor:

There is an amusing side to every situation and even Venable with its somber dark halls has a little cheer now and then. It seems during a lecture for students having trouble with calculations in lab, the lab instructor discovered why students were receiving 30's as grades.

These students were using the bottles of solution on the side shelf with a given normality. The instructor enlightened these unfortunate victims that those bottles were marked incorrectly and therefore their lab results were incorrect. This was so delightfully hilarious to the instructor that he held his sides and screamed for joy.

Why not, it only meant a few students had to re-do twenty-four titrations, weigh twenty-four samples again, hent twenty-four solutions and clean their equipment twenty-four times. What could be funnier than going to lab Monday through Saturday?

Think what a joy it will be for these people to be able to toast their bread over a bunsen burner in the morning and sleep on those soft desks over night, or perhaps just bring a cot over and stay at Venable for a few months.

Mighty Blue Devils Humbled By Navy In Oyster Bowl, 40-7

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

South Carolina won the pre-game flip of the coin, but they were not smart enough to quit while they were ahead. The Gamecocks' much-heralded quarterback, Mackie Prickett, galloped onto the field, replete with publicity notices, bushy hair, et al. For the first three and a half minutes his stock soared even higher, as he snapped the whip and the Palmetto lads pranced 81 yards to the promised land in six plays.

But somewhere in the shuffle, Mackie lost his press clippings, and Carolina End Will Frye used him for a waltzing partner for a good part of the afternoon. Catching Prickett in the act of pitching out to a halfback, Frye would trip in from his end position and apply an old-fashioned bear embrace; whereupon they waltzed, with Frye leading. Frye would drop Prickett rather rudely to the turf, ending each canto; and both trotted back to their respective positions to wait for the next number.

Frye spent so much time in the South Carolina backfield that Gamecock Coach Rex Enright tried to send in a substitute for him.

Mr. Enright stated after the game, "that number 40 hurt us all afternoon." Number 40 was Fullback Don Klochak, and he had a rather successful afternoon for a second-string sophomore. All he did was gain 124 yards rushing in 12 plays. That's a little better than a first down every time he carried, and not bad for a guy who has been gathering splinters for the last three weeks. Psychologist George Barclay had the 6'2", 213-pound, Pennsylvanian so eager to play that Klochak forgot South Carolina had two All-American candidates, Center Leon Cunningham and Guard Frank Mincevich, and ran right over them without even speaking.

Play-maker Len Bullock stole Prickett's top billing. Bullock hauled home the aerial honors, slinging two touchdown passes. The gymnastic coach here at Carolina rushed down after the game and tried to balk End Norman Lane into coming out for the team, so impressed was he by Lane's circus-catch of the winning touchdown toss.

The South side of Kenan Stadium had a lot to whoop it up over, and they whooped, keeping the bottles under their blankets. Cries of sympathy rose from the Carolina section when the half-time score (Richmond—13; Wake Forest—0) was announced. It was moving, indeed, to witness the manifest compassion for our beloved brethren in Baptist Hollow. The little brothers of the Tar Heels and Deacons will have an opportunity to exchange amenities when the UNC and Wake Forest frosh meet in Wilson next Friday.

At halftime, while shy Tom Creasy, Student Body President, was handing Homecoming Queen Nancy Whisnant some flowers, South Carolina showed its strongest point—seven, lovely majorettes, especially the tall, slim beaut with the long, blonde hair.

Frosh Distance Team Defeats Myers Park By 25-30 Score

By RAY LINKER

Everett Whatley and Ben Williams paced the Carolina freshman cross country team to a 25-30 win over Myers Park High of Charlotte here yesterday.

Whatley finished way out in front of the pack in turning in his time of 12:14 for the 2.2 miles. It was his second fastest run of the course, his best coming in 12:05 against Wake Forest two weeks ago.

Williams finished 36 seconds behind Whatley with a 12:51.5 time, and Myers Parker Bill Van Every took third (12:53). Van Every was some distance in back of Williams with a half mile to go before he started closing the gap, but Williams refused to give up the position as he streaked down the homestretch a few feet in front of Van Every.

Verner Stanley (13:11) was fourth for the Mustangs from Charlotte, and Tar Baby Bailey Lipfert (13:22) captured fifth. Mustangs Bobby Connor (13:29) and Dick Gates (13:31) scored the next two places.

Two Carolinians John Sylvester and Phil Hammrick tied for eighth place with a time of 13:44, to close out the Tar Babies top five. Vores Brookshire (13:54) placed tenth to end Myers Park's scoring.

The remaining runners and their times were Nelson Milder, C, 14:06; Don McNeil, MP, 14:36; John McCauley, MP, 14:42; Rand Bailey, C, 14:50; and Thomasson, C, 15:07.

The meet was a result of the efforts of Tar Heel Coach Dale Ranson to revive interest in high school cross country throughout the state. Ranson hopes that by next fall there will be enough schoolboy teams to justify the running of a state championship meet.

With a record of 5-3 now, the UNC freshmen journey to Raleigh with the varsity on Monday to participate in the state championships. The meet was the second loss for the winless Mustangs in their initial cross country season.

Richmond Tops Deacs, 13-0; Ohio State Halts Pitt, 26-0

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 6 (AP)—Ohio State's powerful Buckeyes enhanced their No. 2 national ranking today as they scored in every period and stopped the Pittsburgh Panthers cold for a 26-0 non-conference victory before 80,885 fans.

Pittsburgh, which had defeated Northwestern and unbeaten Navy and West Virginia in its last three starts, failed to reach the Ohio 40-yard line as the Bucks completely smothered the Panther power and passing attack.

Probably the happiest kid in town was Ken Thompson, sophomore halfback from Dayton, Ohio, who got into the game in the last three minutes. Carrying the ball for the first time for the Buckeyes, Thompson took a pitchout from Bill Booth and rolled 32 yards around his left end for the final touchdown.

Earlier the Bucks had moved 81 yards in 19 plays, 34 in 3, and 80 in 14 for touchdowns with Bobby Watkins getting two on the ground, and Quarterback Dave Leggett pitching 13 yards to End Bill Michael for the other.

Pittsburgh gained only 118 yards rushing and 19 passing to Ohio's 242 on the ground and 83 through the air. The Bucks had 20 first downs to Pittsburgh's 5.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 6 (AP)—Richmond's amazing Spiders blended the splendid passing of Tommy Theodose with a dashing ground attack to pick up two first half touchdowns here today and then kept Wake Forest at bay with an impregnable defense to upset the Deacons 13-0 before a shivering turnout of 8,000 homecoming fans in City Stadium.

It was the fifth time Wake Forest Coach Tom Rogers had brought his team into the stadium to meet an underdog Virginia foe since he took over the job of coaching the Deacons in 1951 and the fifth time he has met disaster here.

Richmond staged drives of 48 and 81 yards in wrapping up today's game with touchdowns in the first and second quarters.

Fullback Frank Pajaczkowski, the outstanding runner on the field with 67 yards in 13 carries, swept left end for 11 yards to give the Spiders, winning their fifth game in seven outings, their first score as the opening quarter came to a close.

Theodose accounted for the other Richmond touchdown with an arrow-straight 45-yard pass to Halfback George Riggs after 10 minutes of the second period. The pitch climaxed a Spider surge that started on their 19.

Ga. Tech Rambles Over Vols, 28 To 7

Yellow Jackets Romp In Last Period For 3 TD's

ATLANTA, Nov. 6 (AP)—Georgia Tech took three of Tennessee's favorite weapons—a pass interception, a punt return and a clutch defense—and used them today to trample the Vols 28-7 in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Wade Mitchell, sophomore quarterback, did everything and did it well, and with two sophomore halfbacks, Jimmy Thompson and George Volkert, led the winners' explosive fourth quarter victory drive.

Tom Tracy, Tennessee's battering fullback, carried the load for the Vols—and he gave Tech's defense fits. But he didn't have enough help.

The game was tight until the fourth quarter when Tech broke it up with three swift touchdowns.

Tech marched 73 yards with the opening kickoff, Fullback George Humphreys scoring from the one on the 11th play of the game.

Tennessee tied it in the first play of the second quarter when John Majors dove in from the two to climax a 10-play, 51-yard drive.

The Yellow Jackets rammed 91 yards in 14 plays for their first score of the final period, Humphreys diving over from the one.

Then Mitchell intercepted T. L. Cloar's pass and raced 36 yards to the Tennessee eight. Three plays later he threw a two-yard jump pass to Henry Hair in the end zone.

Volkert scooted 65 yards with a punt for Tech's final touchdown.

Terrapins Roll To 42-14 Victory Over Toothless State Wolfpack

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Maryland strengthened its bid for a second straight trip to the Orange Bowl by running up a three-touchdown lead in the first half and coasting to a 42-14 football victory over North Carolina State today.

A homecoming day crowd of 21,000 saw the Terrapins score in the first period on Ronnie Waller's 61-yard punt return and in the last quarter on George Albrecht's 20-yard pass return.

In between there were four Maryland touchdown marches guided by Sophomore Sam Tamburello and Senior Charley Boxold, ranging from 70 to 95 yards.

Boxold completed a 34-yard pass play to End Russell Dennis for the second score shortly after the second period got under way.

Then came touchdowns by Ed Cereb on a three-yard plunge, Howie Dare on a lateral from Dave Nusz to complete a 37-yard dazzler, and a three yard smash from Joe Horning.

North Carolina State, suffering its seventh loss in eight games, tallied in the third period on a 49-yard pass from Eddie West to Don Langston and in the fourth on a 19-yard flip from West to Jim Meadlock.

Maryland's victory was its fourth against two losses and a tie, and its third without defeat in the Atlantic Coast Conference. A deadlock by Wake Forest is the only mark on the conference record.

Trojans Roll Over Stanford

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 6 (AP) Opportunist Southern California converted two fumbles and an intercepted pass into a 21-7 Pacific Coast Conference football victory over Stanford today and virtually clinched a bid to the Rose Bowl before a crowd of 38,000.

The big Trojans, who now have a 5-0 conference record, capitalized on their first break in the opening period when Guard Orlando Ferrante scooped up a fumble on the Indian 35. From the 17, Quarterback Jim Contratto threw a wobbly pass to Left Half Aramis Dandoy who snagged it in the end zone.

Southern California snapped up another Stanford fumble on the Indian 17 in the third quarter. Contratto passed to Dandoy for 16 to the 1 and the quarterback went over on a sneak.

UCLA, No. 1 In Nation, Stomps Oregon, 41-0

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6 (AP) — Halfback Jim Decker rolled around right end and ran 91 yards for the knockout touchdown and unbeaten UCLA, the nation's No. 1 football team, went on to crush Oregon today 41-0.

The dramatic run late in the second quarter sent the Pacific Coast Conference kingpins into a safe 21-0 lead and came on the first play after the Webfoots' first—and only—scoring threat of the afternoon died on the Bruin nine.

Duke Victim Of Seven Pass Interceptions During Contest

Devils Held To One First Down In First Half; Jerry Barger Scores Only Blue Devil Touchdown

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 6 (AP)—Navy shattered Duke's big line and Duke's morale with a furious first-half attack today, then stood off the comeback kids from North Carolina to win Norfolk's eighth Oyster Bowl football game, 40-7.

The Midshipmen, playing as if they were out to surpass Army's 28-14 victory over Duke, the only game the Blue Devils had lost before today, smashed to a 26-0 lead in the first half.

Then, after Duke finally scored in the final quarter, Navy's second-string lineup drove to two more touchdowns, just to show that nothing could stop the Midshipmen today.

It was Navy's day on the Tars' first appearance in this city, site of a huge naval base. And a capacity crowd of 27,000 turned out for the game, a Shrine-promoted affair for the benefit of hospitals from crippled children.

In addition to running Duke completely ragged with a great ground attack, the Midshipmen handcuffed the Duke attack with seven pass interceptions.

The Midshipmen, charging fast and blocking with deadly accuracy to pave the way for long gains, started to move at the opening kickoff and hardly hesitated until they had piled up four touchdowns in the first half.

They might have had five or six except for a pass interception by Duke's Jerry Barger in the end zone and a holding penalty incurred by a Navy lineman when Bill Hepworth dashed 18 yards across the goal just before the half ended.

Navy piled through the Duke line for an amazing total of 250 yards by rushing in the first half while Duke got only one first down and penetrated Navy territory only once. That was when Sonny Jurgensen completed a 31-yard pass to Bernie Blaney on the Navy 23.

But two plays later Hepworth intercepted a Jurgensen pass and Navy was off to its fourth touchdown.

The scoring plays were comparatively short, but the long gainers set them up. Pat Craig scored on a 14-yard burst through guard on Navy's fifth play and again on a four-yard end run.

Welsh sneaked over from the one for Navy's second score and Hepworth made the fourth from nine yards out.

Paving the way here was a 43-yard dash by Welsh on a keep play, a 15-yard Welsh to Jack Weaver pass and another long run by Welsh, this one a twisting, dodging gallop that accounted for 31 yards after the quarterback apparently had been hemmed in.

With Navy's second unit in to stop Duke's only threat, Jack Garrow took a pitchout and raced 34 yards to the Duke nine to set up Navy's fourth tally.

Tar Heels Top S. C., 21 To 19

Farmer, obviously dejected after that play, was in much better spirits five minutes later.

The game was a see-saw affair, packed with action from the opening series of plays when the visitors from Columbia quickly drove down the field to draw first blood. The lead changed hands no less than six times, neither team scoring two successive touchdowns.

Concerning statistics, the teams were even in most departments. There were no significant differences except in the score, and had it not been for two blocked placements, the score would have been even too.

Carolina's Connie Gravitte was given credit for one blocked extra point kick, and Roland Perdue broke up the other attempt.

Klochak played one of the best games of his career yesterday. He was a starter at the beginning of the season but had been relegated to the ranks of the second-string in following games.

Yesterday, however, he once again drew first rate attention with his rushing, which might be said to have taken up the slack created by the absence of Ed Sutton, the Tar Heels' amazing sophomore halfback.

Klochak rushed 12 times and gained 124 yards. He was a "hoss" when carrying the ball, and by that it is meant that he literally carried South Carolina tacklers on his back on some occasions. Piggyback rides on Klochak were S. C.'s divertissement when the game was slow.

Will Frye also played an outstanding game for the upset victors. His defensive end action kept the Gamecocks running around the opposite side. At one point early in the game, Frye made four successive tackles on four plays.

Prior to this game, Klochak had carried 22 times for a net gain of 104 yards, making his average per carry 4.7.

The Gamecocks got down to business quickly after the opening kickoff. On the first play, Mike Caskey took a pitchout around right end and raced from his own 19 to the 39 where Gravitte made the tackle. Quarterback Mackie Prickett then tossed to Joe Silas, who snagged the ball and would have scored easily had he not stumbled long enough for Gravitte to remedy matters again, but this time the Birds were on the Carolina 19, the play having covered 40 yards. Two line bucks failed to gain any ground, so Prickett tried a pass to Carl Brazell who made a beautiful catch on the two. Prickett took it over this point on the next play.

Carolina tackle Perdue blocked Silas' point-after-touchdown attempt, but the visitors had a 6-0 lead.

The Tar Heels got into the act shortly ater the commencement of the second period. They took possession on the South Carolina 44 and Long engineered the 48-yard touchdown drive. A key maneuver was his 21-yard pass to end Darden Livesay to the Gamecock eight. Sonny Ridenhour dashed around left end to the two and Keller, with head down and legs churning, drove over for the tally. His conversion was perfect and Carolina took a one-point, 7-6 lead.

But South Carolina, not to be outdone, countered with a 48-yard run by Caskey which took the 'Cocks to Carolina's nine. Three plays later Prickett pitched out to Caskey and he loafed into the end zone via right end. This time Silas' point try was good and the Birds had a 13-7 margin at intermission.

Carolina opened the third period with its second touchdown. After an exchange of punts, the Tar Heels unleashed their power and in five plays moved from the South Carolina 35 to paydirt. Gravitt moved from the 35 to the 33 off left guard. Klochak skirted left end for 19 yards to the 14 and a first down. Klochak hit right guard to the 11 and Parker broke through the left side of the line to the nine. Bullock then tossed his touchdown pass to Parker who scored standing up. Keller's placement was good again and the Tar Heels took a 14-13 lead.

Then came the fourth period, apparent disaster and then victory.

Keller, incidentally, has now made good on eight of nine extra-point placement attempts over the season.

Prickett, the Atlantic Coast Conference's passing leader, did not appear to be in top form yesterday as he completed only five of nine passes. Most of his yardage was gained on the first series of plays when he threw the Gamecocks to their initial touchdown. His total yardage for the day was 85 yards, and little of this came after the USC score.

Silas was his major target. Silas caught three aerials for 56 yards, and he also played a good defensive game.

The Gamecocks backfield was sparked by the outstanding broken field running of Caskey, a fast-moving halfback. Caskey broke loose for a few excellent runs to boost his average-per-carry mark to 11.4 for the contest. His total yardage was 80 in seven carries.

Brazell, who average 5.8 yards per carry from scrimmage, also gave the Tar Heels a fit.

Carolina coach George Barclay had nothing but praise for his victors. He singled out Frye in particular, who was assigned to cover Prickett on plays around his end.

Rex Enright, Gamecock mentor, had no excuses, but pointed out that it was the loss of two linemen early in the game because of injuries hurt the team. They were guards Dick Covington and Frank Mincevich.

room with the players. The report has come to me that the Carolina coaches engaged in the fight and slugged one of our players near the dressing room. I've made no effort to verify this."

Tribble added "this unfortunate occurrence followed a similar incident at Carolina in basketball last year. The two things together would seem to indicate that the coaches either encouraged or condoned this sort of thing . . ."

Carolina officials refused to comment on the allegations.

The joint statement of House and Tribble stated:

"Following this game, President Harold W. Tribble and Coach Tom Rogers made public statements charging or implying that the university coaches condone or encourage unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of players. They now voluntarily retract these charges or implications. The officials of the university welcome and accept this retraction.

"The officials of the University of North Carolina and of Wake Forest College feel that the long-standing athletic relationships between the two institutions should continue and that such relationships, in good feeling, can enrich other more precious areas of their common task. Accordingly, both institutions feel that the freshman game should be played in Wilson, N. C., on Nov. 12."

Friday said it probably would be up to the Atlantic Coast Conference whether the freshman football game would be replayed. A conference rule prohibits a freshman football team from engaging in more than five games.

The game, sponsored by the Wilson Shrine Club, originally was slated for Oct. 15 but was rescheduled for Nov. 12 by mutual agreement.

This was before the Oct. 23 game. The teams never got together for a new date and Wake Forest meanwhile scheduled a game with Hargrave Military Academy, which would give the Deacons five games.

associated with avant-garde movements. Moloy Nagy and Albers, for long years instructors at the Bauhaus in Weimar, Germany, came to this country only after its doors were closed by Nazi order.

Hayter, at the beginning of World War II, transferred his successful "Atelier 17" from Paris to New York; and both Ozenfant, the founder of the Purist movement, and Hofmann, had already conducted their own schools and classes in their respective homelands; while Zerbe only started his teaching career after arrival in the U.S.

"Although differing in methods and approach," Professor Allcott said, "each one has founded his teaching on personal experiences and researches undertaken in pursuit of his own creative work. Discarding academic rules and formulae, it is their common objective as teachers to release the creative impulse of the student on a more individualistic basis, since it is the tenet of their own art that the creative experience is an expanding experience in which the artist seeks to progress toward new aesthetic realizations."

picked on their merits.

The Order of the Old Well was founded in 1949 by three faculty men and 11 students for the purpose of recognizing those individuals who do outstanding work in the field of extra-curricular activities.

Each time that a student takes part in some activity he is given points for his participation, and after he has amassed a certain number of points he is automatically tapped into the order. To date there are 437 members, with 72 of them coming from the last tapping. Since this order is primarily a service organization, the only limitations set by scholarship is that each new member have a C average.

Of these four highest honorary organizatons, the Order of the Golden Fleece and the Valkyries are considered the highest. Though the Valkyries were once a part of a national honorary organization, it was felt that more could be accomplished if they were to become local: since 1940, when they became local, the Valkyries have served to recognize those coeds which have given so much of themselves to the University.

Student Elections Nearing; More Polling Places Set Up

Graham Rights, of the Elections Board, said yesterday there will be approximately 25 polling places for student elections next Tuesday, Nov. 16. He hopes this will raise the fall vote from last year's vote of a little under 50 percent for the fall election.

Reuben Leonard, chairman of the University Party, said, "I think the students are showing more interest in student government this year and as always when their is more interest shown, there will be a large turnout of votes. We are expecting the largest vote the fall elections ever had. The excellent program President Tom Creasy has outlined can only be accomplished with a University Party majority in the Legislature. We are confident students realize this and we are expecting victory."

Student Party Chairman Joel leishman said, "I think that there will be a larger vote this fall because the Student Party has made it easier for the students to vote by establishing polling places in all dorms and within easy access of those who live in town. I feel that we are willing to wage this campaign on the basis of the Student Party program in Legislature; the program which we have carried out; the platform which we promise to accomplish, a realistic platform of practical idealism, and on the basis of the qualifications of the candidates. I think that President Creasy has done a good job in administering student government, but his party in the Legislature and his administration of the executive branch shows little imagination and no positive constructive ideas. These the Student Party has proposed and carried out in the past and will continue to accomplish in the same spirit in which it has achieved the program of last fall and spring, which received the overwhelming student mandate."

The following candidates have been endorsed by the bi-partisan election board: For Men's Honor Council Seats: Gene Whitehead, Charlie Thompkins, Bill Pindar for the one freshman seat; Bill Bob Peele, Mebane Pritchett, Rick Cokerfor the one sophomore seat; James Seely, Tommy Moore, Ogburn Yates for the two junior seats. Jack Warner and Bill Redding are running independently for the freshman seat.

Endorsed for Woman's Honor Council were Esten Bahannon, Nancy Jordon, Nancy Capenter, Edna Dillon, Joan Palmer, Jean Robertson. Lois Owen, Robin Fuller, Pat Dixon.

University Party candidates for Legislature are: Steve Phelps and Buzz Merritt for Dorm Men's I; Bill Blue, Dave Whitaker for Dorm Men's II; Bob Stapleton, Bill Ginn, Bill Groce for Dorm Men's III; Lionel King and Bill Kirkman for Dorm Men's IV; John Zollicoffer, Jim Montcith, and Pat Hunter for Dorm Men's V; Jack Stevens, Hoke Thompson, Larry Cobb, Colin McMillan, Jim Martin and Tom Johnson (6 months seat) for Town Men's I; Laura Ervin (6 months seat), Nan Brown, Jane Cocke, Luanne Thorton for Dorm Women's; Bebe Bauman for Town Women's; Jim Exum for Town Men's II; Charles Ackerman, Watt Huntley (6 months seat), Kay Wilson (6 months seat), Jim Beatty and Jerry Harrington.

Student Party candidates are: Louis Brumfield, Barry Clark for Dorm Men's I; Bob Harrington, Keith Snyder for Dorm Men's II; Bob Elder, Jack Hudson, and Bill Maready for Dorm Men's III; Jim Armstrong, Bob Young for Dorm Men's IV; Bill Baum, Chuck May, Jim Turner for Dorm Men's V; Amy Cooke, Ruth Jones, Mary Ann Keeter for Dorm Women's; Sue Fink for a six month's seat in Dorm Women's; Wayne Brown, Ken Clark, Frank Harris, Al Taylor, Herb Wentz, and Pepper Tice (6 month's seat); for Town Men's I; Larry Williams for Town Men's II; Townsend Holt, Dave Garnise (6 month's seat) for Town Men's III; and Marilyn Watson for Town Women's.

Student Party candidates for Junior Class officers are: Tom Bennett, pres.; Joan Palmer, vice-pres.; Pat McBane, sec.; Ji Ji Rainwater, treas., and Donna Ashcraft, social chairman.

SP candidates for Freshman class officers are: Sonny Evans, pres.; Jerry Mayo, vice-pres.; Nancy Nussear, sec.; Jim Dixon, treas., and Gwen Lemly, social chairman.

Isaac Edward Emerson:

Fund Slated Here By Bromo-Seltzer Inventor

A second memorial is to be established here soon in honor of a Chapel Hill boy who worked his way through the University and later gained national fame and fortune.

That boy was Isaac Edward Emerson, who in the years ahead became widely known as drug manufacturer, naval officer, hotel and apartment builder, cattle breeder, plantation owner and yachtsman.

The new memorial to Captain Emerson, as he later became known, is to be called "The Isaac E. Emerson Memorial Fund."

It has been established in the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Research Foundation by a gift of 1,000 shares of Class A Stock in the Emerson Drug Company of Baltimore from F. Jackson Andrews of Baltimore, president of the company.

Fellowshio Fund

It is expected that this Fund will yield an annual income of $1,000 which will be used for promoting pharmaceutical education and research at the Universty of North Carolina in the form of research fellowships, special supplies and library materials, says Pharmacy School Dean Edward A. Brecht, secretary of the Foundation.

The first memorial to Captain Emerson, although it was not given as a memorial at the time, was Emerson Stadium, which for many years was the University's playing field for football, baseball and track.

That was back in 1914 when Captain Emerson presented to the University a check for $26,000 to cover the cost of construction which today would be several times that figure.

He also contributel substantially to the cost of erecting the Alumni Building and to the University Library. Although residing in Maryland the greater part of his life, Captain Emerson retained deep interest in his native state and his alma mater.

In 1927 he gave two endowments to the University of Maryland totaling $6,000 annually for the establishment of a professorship in biological testing and drug assaying, and for the maintenance of a fellowship in pharmacology in the University's School of Medicine.

Captain Emerson died in Baltimore on January 23, 1931.

Tar Heel Born and Bred

He was a Tar Heel, born and bred. His father, Robert J. Emerson, was an Orange County planter, while his mother, Cornelia Lewis (Hudson) Emerson, was the daughter of Colonel Isaac Hudson, of Wake County. Isaac Emerson (affectionally called "Ike") was born at Chapel Hill on July 24, 1859.

Energetic and ambitious from early boyhood, he was one of the first students to enroll in the University when it re-opened after the War Between the States.

He was a student 1876-1879, majoring in chemistry and serving as an assistant in the chemical laboratories his final year. During his college days he worked part-time and during vacation in the drug store of Dr. A. B. Roberson.

In 1881 he became a resident of Baltimore and rapidly became identified with the business interests and development of that city. He opened a drug store at Gilmor and Lafayette Streets. Between 1884 and 1889 he became the Fire Guts KA House

Fire broke out last night at the Kappa Alpha House at 110 West Cameron Street, leaving almost the entire ceiling of the house gutted by the blaze.

The fire was discovered at about 9:05 last night and apparently started in the basement furnace room of the KA House.

The blaze is believed to have started from a pile of trash which was lying in the coal bin next to the furnace. The first spread to the woodwork in an adjacent bar and to the dining room which is also located in the basement. The entire basement ceiling was damaged by the fire along with the woodwork and furniture in the downstairs rooms.

The floor in the upstairs living room was also badly charred, especially around the huge stone fireplace.

KA secretary Gordon Forester estimated damage to be at approximately $10,000," including damage to the floors, walls, paint and woodwork.

Memorial Slated For Gov. W. B. Umstead

Farmer's Son Goes To Rest This Morning

DURHAM (AP)—The frail body of a farmer's son who became governor of his state will come home today to the quiet country churchyard of Mount Tabor Methodist Church.

William Bradley Umstead will be laid to final rest near the graves of his mother and father, in the soil of the northern section of Durham County where he was raised.

Last tributes to the man who served North Carolina as congressman, U. S. senator and governor will be paid at funeral services in Trinity Methodist Church here this morning. The body will lie in state at the church for two hours before the services at 11 a. m.

Lt. Gov. Luther H. Hodges, who succeeds Umstead as the state's chief executive, will join members of the family, other high state officials and legions of friends at the final rites.

Umstead, 59, died early Sunday morning at Watts Hospital of a heart ailment complicated by a siege of pneumonia. His wife, the former Merle Davis of Rutherford County, and 12-year-old daughter, Merle Bradley, were at his bedside.

Umstead reached but never fully realized his ambition to be governor. Less than three days after his inaugural he was stricken with a heart attack and was rushed to Watts Hospital. He remained at the hospital and in bed at the executive mansion until after the 1953 session of the legislature.

In spite of his illness, he was hard at work on plans for the 1955 legislature when he returned to the hospital last Thursday. He had been released after a three weeks stay about 10 days earlier.

Dr. C. D. Barclift, pastor of the Trinity Church, will be in charge of the funeral services. He will be assisted by Dr. D. D. Holt of Greensboro, former pastor; the Rev. A. D. Clark, pastor of Mount Tabor; and the Rev. C. S. Hubbard pastor of the Chapel Hill Methodist Church.

State offices at Raleigh will be closed for the funeral, as well as city and county offices, public schools and businesses here.

New Governor Luther Hodges Rose Quickly

RALEIGH, Nov. 8.—(AP)—In less than three years fate has moved Luther H. Hodges from virtual political obscurity to the governorship of North Carolina.

At 4 p. m. today he will be sworn in to succeed Gov. William B. Umstead who died Sunday morning.

In his first political venture in 1952, Hodges was elected lieutenant governor. During his campaign he traveled more than 11,000 miles over the state handing out cards which read:

"My name's Luther Hodges. I'm not a politician, but I'm running for lieutenant governor and I hope you'll vote for me."

Hodges, 56, who has proved popular as lieutenant governor, was associated with Marshall Field & Co. for 30 years, retiring in 1950. During that span he rose from office boy to general manager of Fieldcrest Mills and later vice president of the company.

Hodges once said he chose the lieutenant governorship as his first political ambition "because I knew it was a job offering tremendous possibilities for good. A man can make it a big or little job, and I intend to make it big."

One of Hodges' duties as lieutenant governor was to preside over the 1953 Senate and to name Senate committees. He streamlined Senate operations by reducing the number of committees from 37 to 28. The action, he explained, was to save money and promote efficiency.

Hodges had been mentioned as a possible candidate for governor in 1956. Questioned about this on one occasion, he remarked, "Every decision I make now will be made without regard to future consequences. I am interested only in doing a conscientious job as lieutenant governor."

The youngest of nine children, Hodges was born on a farm in Pittsylvania County, Va., on March 9, 1898. His father, a tenant farmer, moved to Leaksville and began work as a carpenter in a Leaksville mill. He later became a storekeeper.

With $62.50 in his pockets, Hod-

Classes End For One Hour In His Memory

The three units of the Consolidated University will suspend classes tomorrow from 11 a.m. until noon out of respect to Governor Umstead, ex officio chairman of the University's Board of Trustees.

President Gordon Gray said yesterday that classes will be suspended here, at State and at W.C.

Fifteen minute memorial services were held last night in all the dorms at W.C.

Appropriate music will be played on the chimes of the bell tower here and in Raleigh on the State campus. The bell in the South Building steeple will toll for five minutes at 11 o'clock this morning.

President of the student body Tom Creasy said in a statement issued yesterday afternoon, "I am sure I speak for the entire student body of the University when I say how deeply shocked and distressed we all are over the untimely death of Governor Umstead. He was one of our greatest and most outstanding alumni. Respected and admired by all who knew him, Governor Umstead was a devoted servant of the people. The student body joins the people of the state and the nation in mourning the passing of a truly great man."

Chancellor R. B. House, a University classmate and a close friend of the Governor for 42 years, said yesterday, "During the two years he was permitted to serve the state as governor, Bill Umstead did a magnificent job as history will show, and at a great personal sacrifice of his health. His death is a great loss to the state, and naturally I feel a deep sense of personal loss."

Governor William Bradley Umstead died Sunday morning at 9:10 in Watts Hospital of Durham, the victim of "congestive heart failure," not bronchial pneumonia as was earlier reported, according to his personal physician, Dr. Ralph Fleming, who made a statement to the press Sunday afternoon.

Gov. Umstead entered the hospital Thursday afternoon after he had appeared — pallid — weak and hoarse — at a hearing of the Advisory Budget Commission. At the hearing his voice carried only a few feet and he obviously was very ill according to observers.

"He was very sick Friday," Dr. Fleming said. "He improved Saturday morning and was much better. He was sitting up and didn't want oxygen.

"Saturday afternoon he began to tire." Saturday night his condition worsened.

"I was not at all satisfied with his condition," Dr. Fleming said. He called Mrs. Umstead about 7 o'clock a.m. Sunday. For about 30 minutes Mrs. Umstead and their daughter, Merle, chatted with the governor until his death at 9:10 a.m.

The last time a governor had died in office was in 1891. He was Gov. Daniel G. Fowle, who died on April 7 of that year.

Umstead was only the third N. C. governor to ever die in office.

Almost immediately after his death condolences and expressions of sympathy started pouring in from all over the country. All of his friends in Washington expressed their shock and regret at his death.

President Eisenhower Sunday sent a personal telegram to Gov. Umstead's widow and issued a public statement expressing his regrets over the governor's death.

The President's public statement said, "The people of the State of North Carolina have lost an experienced and devoted public servant in the passing of Gov. William B. Umstead. As a representative, then senator and finally chief executive, Gov. Umstead served his state with integrity and distinction.

"His passing is a loss not only to North Carolina but to the nation."

The state's highest offices passes automatically to 56-year-old Lieut-

Louis Graves Is The Weekly

By BARBARA WILLARD

The New York Times once called The Chapel Hill Weekly "unique in American journalism;" The New York Herald Tribune declared: "What the country needs is more papers like The Chapel Hill Weekly." Meanwhile, Louis Graves, who created this exceptional newspaper in its present form, stands back while his brainchild is showered with bouquets.

Graves, a native of Chapel Hill now residing at 111 Battle Lane, ran The Weekly for 20 years and only last year exchanged the title of editor for that of contributing editor. He said on the 27th birthday of the paper in 1950. "I have been running this paper for 17 years and I'm tired of it." Even now, though, he spends most of his time on the Weekly.

Graduating in 1902 from this University, as the youngest man in the class, Graves was Phi Beta Kappa, although he says it seems to him he devoted most of his time and enthusiasm to football. He was varsity quarterback for three years.

LOUIS GRAVES
. . . the town's sage chronicler

To New York

From the University in 1902, Graves went to New York, and from then until 1921, be built a career in the "big city." He was on the staff of the New York Times for four years, did publicity work for the Pennsylvania Railroad and other railroads; was a New York City government official and was a captain of infantry in World War I.

He did Sunday free-lance writing during his years in New York. His first short story appeared in The Atlantic Monthly and later he had stories in The Saturday Evening Post and other magazines. He returned to Chapel Hill in 1921, to become a professor of journalism. He had planned to combine teaching with running a newspaper, but found it didn't work. He wasn't cut out to be a teacher anyway; so he resigned from his faculty post to devote all his attention to The Weekly.

When asked why he didn't continue to write fiction, he replied, "It was too much of a struggle." I decided I didn't have enough of what is called 'natural inventiveness.' I decided newspaper writing was my dish."

Graves-Weekly, Synonymous

One can't talk about Graves without talking about The Weekly. Graves is a Chapel Hill man, and The Weekly is a Chapel Hill newspaper. Although articles from The Weekly have been used in papers in and out of the state (The New York Sun had an article based on something in The Weekly every week or so for years, and The Baltimore Sun has written articles about it and reprinted scores of its editorials and stories), Graves is much more interested in its value as a Chapel Hill community paper than in its outside worth.

Chapel Hill, A Utopia

The man behind the newspaper sees Chapel Hill as a typical community and uses the paper to create this image. Author Noel Houston, another native of Chapel Hill who is an experienced newspaperman and writer of fiction, said of The Weekly, and so of Graves: "The visitor to Chapel Hill almost always remarks how attractive, serene and pleasant the town is, how it seems to be a place where most of what happens is good. The Chapel Hill Weekly is remarkable for the way it reflects in print these impressions of the town's personality. The Weekly itself is attractive, with easy-on-the-eyes type and makeup, it speaks pleasantly, its attitude is serene, and just about all the news it carries is good news.

"Reading The Weekly and nothing else, a person might get the idea he lived in a Utopian world. But read as a companion to the daily press, its pages pro-

'Adventure' Tryouts Are Slated Today

Tryouts for "American Adventure," a nationally broadcast radio series produced on the campus will begin this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Director John Clayton announced yesterday.

Those who try out need have no previous radio acting experience, though such experience is valuable, Clayton said. The series, which is transcribed annually at the Center, has attracted national attention. It is heard each year on several hundred radio stations in the United States.

Applicants for "American Adventure" parts should go to Studio B, Swain Hall, from 2 to 4 today or from 4 to 6 tomorrow afternoon.

Di To Debate Dixon-Yates At 8 Tonight

The Di will debate the Dixon-Yates power contract tonight at 8:00 p. m. in Di Hall, New West.

Senator Larry McElroy will introduce a bill proposing to halt the Dixon-Yates contract. The affirmative position is that the Dixon-Yates contract with the AEC is detrimental to the national defense, TVA is important to the national defense, TVA would be damaged by the proposed contract.

The Governor And His Work

The best appraisal of any leader is a look at what he did—his accomplishments. On that basis, Governor William B. Umstead emerges as a great and energetic worker for his state and friend of this University.

The last meeting he attended, despite a severe cold that was to complicate his heart condition and take his life, was of the Advisory Budget Commission, which is seeking a way to overcome the grave problems of finance that the University faces.

He always believed in services to the people extending to the limit of the state's resources. His progressive program included the successful bond issue in behalf of public schools and mental hospitals, an expansion of industry and tourist attractions and a utilization of water resources. He strengthened the Department of Motor Vehicles and expanded paroles activities. When the 1955 General Assembly convenes, most of the bills up for debate will be ideas of Governor Umstead, among them judicial reform and administrative reorganization.

These things, Mr. Umstead believed in and literally gave his life to. The state is poorer without him, but immeasurably richer because of his work.

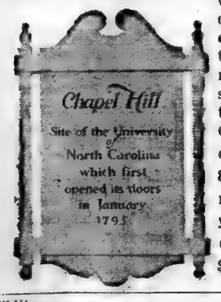
No Subject Is An Island

One of the 26 freshmen taking special instruction brought out a salient and noteworthy point the other day when he spoke of the way "classes are linked."

He had noticed, along with others, that the students encounter Descartes at every turn. In math they studied his mathematical principles; in philosophy they became acquainted with his laws of reasoning; and in social science they found that he was an important 17th Century historical figure and a forerunner of the philosophes.

Very few subjects, in fact, can, or ought to be, studied apart from each other as if they concerned intellectual development on different planets. Every subject is a "part of the main." One finds Descrates and de Vinci and Churchill (in our time) and others whose work threads out into many branches of learning.

We fail to see how, realizing this fact, students can afford to tune their learning apparatus to one particular field (or subject) to the total exclusion of others. If some students work toward technical educations to the injury of general knowledge, there remain plenty of those enrolled in liberal arts who are just as narrowly specialized. They spend all of their time on English or philosophy or history or foreign languages. They forget that interaction as this student discovered in the case of Descartes) occurs between them all.



One of the first steps toward thorough education is the realization that no subject is an island, entire of itself.

Dingy Stars & Stripes

We noticed — likely, you did too — the American flag flying at half-mast on the south campus flagpole yesterday as a mark of respect to Governor Umstead. The flag was thus near enough to the ground for an observation: it is dirty, something they used to tell us in grammar school the flag should never be.

Politicos Woo Veteran Vote In Proposals

Louis Kraar

CAMPUS POLITICIANS from both parties are working overtime to win the 1,200-strong veterans vote in next week's fall elections.

Manning Muntzing of the Student Party asked the Legislature to establish a Veterans Affairs Commission. Purpose of the group, said Muntzing, would be "to look into any and all problems relating to the veterans on this campus."

The University Party went a step further and asked the Legislature to exempt veterans from physical education. Currently, vets have to take a year's physical education. This requirement was started last year, and the vets, primarily older students, any way, have strongly objected to it.

(The SP had promised earlier in the week that they would work for an elimination of veteran physical education as well as a veterans' club house. But the UP introduced the bill. Both Parties said the idea was original.)

Apparently, the politicians realize that the veteran vote is important for another reason beyond its numerical strength. Veterans share a number of common problems unique to that group, and on an issue required physical education they will vote as a bloc.

After World War II, when most male students were veterans, control of campus political parties rested in the hands of the ex-GI's Now, with 1,200 vets, there are few—if any—in either campus political party.

Thus far the only efforts the vets have made to organize have been on a social basis in the form of a veterans club. Reports on campus are that even this effort has met opposition from various quarters.

But the veterans will deserve watching. Not only are they, as a rule, more mature students, but—if organized—they could be a powerful campus political group.

Perhaps the SP and UP politicians realize this potential power in offering the vets a commission and physical education exemption.

BEFORE FALL campus elections there will be much talk (mostly among those running) about getting out the vote. Then, few will vote. And there will be more talk about why they didn't.

The lack of interest in campus elections is caused mainly by the lack of any clear-cut issues. The programs offered by both parties are remarkable alike, and many platform planks—like some candidates—appear year after year.

Without the benefit of two alternate programs from which to pick, the races boil down to popularity contests between individuals. In the fall, since there are few major campus-wide posts picked, the interest in personality is on a dorm level and less interesting to the campus at large.

Neither campus political party will include in its platform its stand on this year's two most controversial issues—closed sessions of representative government groups and the proposed Honor System lenieney bill. If they did, there might be more interest in what otherwise promises to be a dull election.

ELECTIONS BOARD officials might look into the matter of using IBM machines to count the votes in this fall's elections.

Every campus election ends with harassed and tired Elections Boards members who counted votes by hand.

Several colleges have found that special ballots marked with electrographic pencils can easily be fed into IBM machines with the results emerging quickly and accurately.

Perhaps a conference with the University Testing Service would save many headaches for the ballot counters.

Backstage Election Night

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Millions of TV viewers saw what went on in Republican and Democratic headquarters on election night — as far as the formal statements and outside congratulations were concerned. But not many saw the suspense, the headaches and the heartaches inside both party headquarters as the up-and-down returns rolled in.

What happened there gives insight regarding the depth of party bitterness and the problems of the future.

So here is a quick look-see at some of the backstage events the television cameras missed:

DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS — Real Democratic inner sanctum was not Steve Mitchell's elaborate suite on election night but the small single-room hideaway of ex-Senate Secretary Les Biffle . . . Here a select inner circle of top Demos were saying what they really thought as each bit of news flowed across Biffle's desk . . There was a tiny radio tuned into NBC where the news slant was definitely pro-GOP, Two telephones rang intermittently and those in the room strained their ears to catch Les Biffle's soft, unemotional voice . . . Around him sat John Horne, Sam Brightman, Ken Birkhead, Joseph Keenan, former Justice Department official who prosecuted the Japanese war criminals, Steve Mitchell, between handshaking and radio-TV appearances, joined the group . . . The zero hour was between 3 and 4 a.m. Senator Clements called from Kentucky. "We're in the closest race since 1916," he said (That was the year Charles Evans Hughes went to bed thinking he was President, only to wake up next morning to find Woodrow Wilson elected.) . . . Someone put a slip of paper in Biffle's hand. Carroll had conceded in Colorado. The Democrats had counted him a sure winner. Gillette was licked in Iowa . . . A CBS television commentator had erroneously reported Senator Murray 2,000 behind, with almost all the votes counted in Montana . . . Biffle picked up the phone. Charlie Murray, son of the Senator, on the line from Butte, reported all's well in Montana. The TV report had been wrong — Murray ahead by 2,000 votes. Cracks Steve Mitchell: "We win by a landslide in Montana."

NEW JERSEY SLIPS — Someone from Wyoming called: "O-Malley ahead by more than a thousand — we're in." . . . "Another landslide for us," commented the caustic Biffle. He put the receiver down . . . Reported the NBC commentator: "Saltonstall takes the lead from Furcolo in Massachusetts." It's nearly four o'clock . . . "Get Mrs. Furcolo at the State House," says Biffle to his secretary, Betty Darling. Mrs. Furcolo says there is still a chance if they don't steal it . . . Mrs. Stanley Woodward, wife of the former ambassador, sticks her head in the door. "Steve, what's going on — I can't figure it out." . . . "Understatement of the evening," someone quips . . . Reports from New Jersey are coming in at a terrifying pace. Howell, with a 97,000 lead with nearly 90 per cent of the voting districts in, was counted a sure winner. "I called Governor Meyner," says Steve Mitchell, "and told him to get the State Police to lock up the boxes. They're pulling a fast one on us in Jersey. With strange unnatural regularity, every box is being reported 400 votes against us."

George Bender of the GOP takes a substantial lead in Ohio. Joe Keenan, who lived in Cleveland, can't understand why Cuyahoga County is holding back. "Maybe they want to see what Hamilton County (Cincinnati) will do for Bender." . . . In Michigan, GOP Senator Ferguson is leading, but the farm areas are not piling up the commanding lead he needed to lick McNamara. Wayne County (Detroit) has only reported 20 per cent. "The Democrats are not going to let them get away with another steal like the one they pulled upstate on Blair Moody last time," says Sam Brightman."

OREGON UP — Biffle is restless. Mitchell is cheerful, reasonably optimistic . . . NBC reports that Chairman Hall concedes victory for the Democrats in the House . . . A slip of paper is handed Bibble. He passes it around. Batista wins his election in Cuba by 87 per cent of the vote. "Let's charter a plane and go to Havana," says the nervous Mitchell.

Charles Murray, son of the Senator, calls back. He had just talked to O'Mahoney, and Joe thinks he's in in Wyoming . . . Neuberger in Oregon was whittling down Cordon's lead of 4,000 . . . Joe Kennan says Cuyahoga County and Wayne County should determine the Ohio and Michigan elections. If the Democrats win either one they they will organize the Senate . . . Ken Harding of the Democratic House Election Campaign Committee comes in. "We're 35 votes ahead in the third district in Oregon. Mrs. Edith Green will be the first Democratic Congresswoman ever elected from Oregon." . . . And McCarthy's double in the House, Congressman Kersten, has been sunk by Henry Reuss in Milwaukee . . . The Democrats began to feel better.

DEMOCRATIC BITTERNESS— It was about 4:15 a.m. Bald, rolypoly Chairman Len Hall was sitting in front of his TV set. Some of the evening's earlier gloom had evaporated. He was feeling much better, figured there was a good chance for the Republicans to carry the Senate, even retrieve some of those governorships that seemed to be slipping . . . Suddenly Steve Mitchell, Hall's Democratic counterpart, appeared on the TV screen. Hall listened . . . Boiling over with resentment at "McNixon" tactics, Mitchell read a statement reminding the electorate that the Democrats had waged a clean campaign, had not indulged in below-the-belt tactics . . . The more Mitchell talked, the redder Hall's face got. Finally he exploded . . . "Nuts!" he said . . . He then went into a private huddle with press advisers to figure out an answer to Mitchell. Three press agents, talking almost at once, urged him to hold off . . . "Who's listening at 5 a.m.?" they pleaded. "Tell them you'll give your answer at 11 a.m. Wait until people get out of bed in the morning." . . . Finally Hall agreed. That was why a press spokesman went out front, told the press: "The Chairman believes this is not quite the proper time to give his answer. We won't know the full story until tomorrow."

IKE'S PROBLEM — This bitterness points to Ike's greatest problem during the next two years . . . Democrats like Speaker Sam Rayburn who have been in Congress for almost half a century are smarting with anger over being labeled traitors and warmongers who plunge the country into war to achieve prosperity . . . Rayburn has made a statement that he will cooperate with Eisenhower on foreign policy and national defense. And he means it . . . But privately, not only "Mr. Sam" but other Democratic leaders will play things their own way on domestic policy unless Vice President "McNixon" drastically revises his tactics.

Biltmore Is No Dixieland

Light Satire Best Feature Of 'Tarnation'

Ed Yoder

Raunchy and risque as ever, Tarnation hit the campus and student funny bones this week.

As usual, the campus humor mag plays heavy on sex and slapstick humor. But a much-needed satirical vein has also been adder, making for the best feature of the magazine.

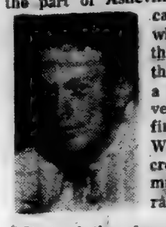
The satire is evident in Connie McMahon's clever poem "But I Live Here," a sonnet (loosely speaking) on the Carolina coed's plight. Harwell Conklin and Jerry Reece wax satirically on the fraternity situation in "Of Time And Fraternity." And Louis Kraar takes a crack at the character quirks of campus politician Joel Fleishman. All these articles add up to what a campus humor magazine should be—light and satirical with good taste.

Unfortunately, the same compliment can't be given to "The Death of Cleopatra," a one-act play about the tactile play of Anthony and Cleo. Aside from the very able cartooning of Jaek Markham, "I Wonder As I Wander" wanders through a sex theme with a teaser ending and ends up exactly nowhere.

Cartoonist Stan Smith, now is the service, supplied Tarnation with its best cartoons. His full-page Esquire magazine type drawing is the best in the issue. A take-off on South Building moguls and the drinking agreement is another Smith cartoon that has it.

Regulars like the Slob (brainchild of artist Jerry McMahon) and sexy Lili Christine, better known as the Cat Girl are included in the issue.

Markham's Advertisements spark the back pages of Tarnation. For once, I think, the ads in a publication are as interesting as its editorial matter.



Worst breach of good taste are the little jokes sprinkled throughout the issue. Sample: "I'm losing my punch," exclaimed the coed as she hastily left the cocktail party.

Tarnation has gotten off to a good start. The campus is reading it. Now the editors can utilize their talents (and that of their writers) to give readers more of the lampooning efforts of Connie McMahon, Jerry Reece, Hartwell Conklin, and Louis Kraar and less dirt.

Characters like the Slob are funny at first, but they really do not reflect anything of the campus. Tarnation, like any good humor magazine, could accomplish a great deal by making fun of things it thinks are foolish. College students know the facts of life, so they can ease up on the sex and step up the satire.

Somewhere on the inside pages of the newspapers for August third an AP story appeared, headlined in one sheet, "Wolfe's Home At Asheville To Be Razed."

The story, having overtones of nonchalance on the part of Ashevillians and even Wolfe-admirers, caused some stir. I know one girl who wrote a personal letter to the Governor, asking if something could be done. She got back a courteous answer, mildly conversational and personal. But the final conclusion of it all was that Wolfe's birthplace was to get the crowbar treatment. There wasn't much to be done to stave off the razers.

Part of the alarm came from the mistaken impression that the old two-story house black-marked for destruction was the same as "Dixieland," the boarding house belonging to Wolfe's mother—and the building that Wolfe immortalized in his novels.

Even though Dixieland was apparently safe from the hammers, the large amount of callous indifference about tearing down the birthplace is out of keeping with Thomas Wolfe's memory. It indicates a general tendency to forget landmarks that are worth keeping and remembering. But the Twentieth Century (mid-point version) prefers to grind on, caring not what falls in its wake.

Be that as it may, Dixieland has been singled out for immortality and that is fortunate. Horace Sutton's "Booked For Travel" column in the Saturday Review of November 4 picks Dixieland as one of the two very noteworthy edifices in Asheville. (Altamont and Lybia Hill Wolfe called Asheville in the books.)

The other famous house, of course, is Biltmore, the synthesized Blois-Chambord chateau that old George Vanderbilt, the Commodore's son, erected on the flanks of Mt. Pisgah. In size (780 feet of frontage) and stateliness and pure pomp (138 rooms) this neo-French Renaissance miracle of architecture dwarfs poor little Dixieland, the white-framed "Spruce Street place" located behind the Asheville Biltmore hotel.

But Biltmore draws its breath of fame from sheer, overpowering size and beauty. It has not had the pen of a Wolfe to bless it with literary renown. In fact, I doubt that a drama with the humanity of Look Homeward Angel could happen at the Biltmore chateau. For Biltmore, I think more in terms of some dreary Gothic novel, like The Mysteries of Adolpho maybe, with hyper-sensitive young ladies confronting inhuman monsters.

When the Saturday Review's columnist got to Dixieland, Mrs. Mabel Wheaton, Tom Wolfe's sister, was sitting on the front porch. A sign hung over her head and it identified the place as "The Old Kentucky Home."

Mrs. Wheaton took Mr. Sutton on an inside tour. "Lace curtains," he writes, "hung at the living room window and photographs in frames ran across the top of the upright piano. A book of music was opened to 'O See the Swift Swallow Flying' . . . (Mrs. Wheaton) sat down at the stool and ran her hands over a few classical bars, then cut into a more brisk rendition of 'Alexander's Ragtime Band.' 'This is more what the family liked,' she said.

Then, as Mr. Sutton records the day in the article, Mrs. Wheaton showed him the tables that so often sagged with rich, aromatic foods. It turned out, as Mrs. Wheaton tells him, that the Wolfes "had soup 365 days of the year."

"In the kitchen was Mama's ironing board, all set up and ready to use (Mrs. Wolfe preferred flatirons to electric) . . . On a table across the room were atlas jars of peaches and others that held grapes and currants. They looked strangely discolored . . .

"We walked upstairs together to see the dress Tom wore at three, carefully pleated and trimmed in lace, hanging on a wall. There was a child's desk and a sign on it which said, 'The Chatauqua Industrial Art Desk — a plan to promote the culture of work and play among children in the home.' In another room was Tom's furniture from New York, his studio couch, the Remington Standard he worked on, and the portable he took to Europe." I was sorry that Mr. Sutton failed to mention the leather couch supposedly imprinted with the form of W. O. Wolfe.

It was in this house that Thomas Wolfe cultivated the sensibilities that gave edge to his later writing. And in this same house Wolfe began "The last voyage, the longest, the best." Just before the funeral in 1938 Jonathan Daniels, in "Poet of the Room," tells how he saw Wolfe, "lying against the crinkly undertaker's satin," wearing the wig someone had made 'for him to be dead in."

Afterwards, Daniels recalls the service at the Presbyterian church there where the smooth young preacher talked and they sang lusty hymns.

It all happened at Dixieland. I doubt that Biltmore will ever have such a tale to tell.

Poor Little Dorm Men Speak Up To Dick Creed

Editor:

Yes, sir, we really do envy those "Frat" men with all the money they can spend, those nice big cars, and their many girl friends; to say nothing of those [illegible]r runs to Durham (sorry, but we dorm men can't even mention that bad bad word.)

And if this was not enough to make us all dry up and die, we are so unhappy and lonely that our little "ole" hearts are about to break. NO lifelong buddies and we can't even choose a special friend out of the lot.

We are formulating plans to conduct a "service" in the social room of Everett Dorm for all those maladjusted and displaced dormitory dwellers who wish to come. The date will be announced later.

I wonder what the boy on the first floor with the nice Cadillac convertible thinks about Creed's omnipotent evaluation, and the boy on second floor who carries a stick with him to beat off the girls, or the men who came through Everett the Saturday of the WF game reminiscing of the good times had in the "ole" dorm and the many friends they have contact with who enjoyed the fun with them?

Strange Bedfellows

We were shaken out of our provincial boots the other day when we found out that Columbia's is not the only Bicentennial on the beach.

It seems that a small Amish town in Pennsylvania with the charmingly symbolic name "Intercourse" is also celebrating its Happy 200th. Sans Convocations, sans honorary degrees, sans theme, sans Grayson Kirk, Intercourse's small population of 435 (what's in a name?) is bringing its message of community life "to all who will listen, to all who will read."

We would strongly recommend that Columba's Bicentennial Committee find some way to join with this small town in our common celebration.

We firmly believe that there is room for Intercourse in Columbia's Bicentennial.

Tar Heel Distance Runners Win State Title

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

Fans are still reminiscing last Saturday's thriller. But the UNC Athletic Department has set its sights on Notre Dame. Athletic Director Chuck Erickson and Publicity Director Jake Wade are already up in Yankeeland. Erickson is laying the ground-work for the South Bend sojourn, while Wade is beating the Tar Heel drums.

The once-beaten Irish had probably been counting on the UNC tilt as a breather. But the Tar Heels' victory over the Gamecocks, conquerors of Army, will, no doubt, make the high-and-mighty lads from South Bend bend an ear to their scouting reports.

Carolina's chief scout and defensive specialist Steve Belichick, has done a little scouting himself. He observed the Irish in their games with Pittsburgh, Navy and Pennsylvania. Belichick is said to be one of the sharpest strategists in the game, so it is safe to say the Tar Heels will know what to expect next Saturday.

While the locals were battling it out with Prickett, Caskey, Brazell, Ltd., Notre Dame was having its own way with winless Pennsylvania. The Quakers had one of their better days, however, holding the Irish to 42 points and scoring seven themselves. Ordinarily, a 42-7 score would merit a superlative rating, for the victors, but Duke trampled Pennsylvania 52-0, and Navy turned the trick, 52-8. Since kicking the daylights out of the Quakers seems to be the trend this year, Notre Dame's showing was only mediocre.

Meanwhile, spirit in the Carolina camp was never higher. Immediately following the Gamecock tilt, Coach George Barclay, who has never appeared happier, asked that the Tar Heel dressing room be cleared of reporters and well-wishers for "just two minutes, so that I can say something to the boys." He was so pleased with his team's performance that he gave them a holiday from practice yesterday.

Barclay rates Notre Dame two or three TD's better than his club. He is making no rash predictions of an upset, but it is apparent that he has not ruled the possibility out. When asked in the dressing room following the USC tilt, "Do you think you will take Notre Dame now?" he smiled rather shrewdly and answered reservedly, "Well, I won't say that;let's just say, we will play them."

What the non-committal Carolina mentor lacked in enthusiasm, his players more than made up for. Guard George Foti, grinning toothlessly from ear-to-ear, over the last-minute upset victory, made his usual pre-game prognostication. "We'll whip hell out of Notre Dame," he asserted modestly.

END NORMAN LANE, whose touchdown grab of Bullock's pass in the waning minutes of the fourth quarter brought victory over South Carolina to the Tar Heels last Saturday.

Sophomore Flash Beatty Runs In New Course Time

UNC's Barden Runs Second As Varsity Wins Meet With State, Duke; Frosh Place Second

By RAY LINKER

Jimmy Beatty and Bobby Barden paced the Carolina cross country team to a close win in the state championship meet in Raleigh yesterday, with Beatty establishing a new course record.

The Tar Heel harriers turned in the winning score of 31 to edge by the N. C. State Wolfpack, who had 35. The Blue Devils of Duke and Davidson's Wildcats tied for third with 88 each.

In a freshman meet held prior to the varsity run, State defeated Carolina 27-43 for the freshman state championship as Duke trailed with 60 points.

Sophomore Beatty bettered by 30.7 seconds the four-mile course record of 20:50 previously held by State's Buz Sawyer to remain undefeated this season.

It was a great team victory for the Tar Heels, who had been defeated by the Wolfpack, 26-30, in their opening meet of the season.

Dave Miller and Mike Jones figured greatly in State's second place as they captured third and fourth for the Wolves. Pete Ashcraft was the first Davidson runner across when he tied down fifth, while George Rodgers in eighth was the first Blue Devil to finish.

Carolina's Glenn Nanney in sixth place, Tony Houghton in ninth, Don Wright in thirteenth, Boyd Newman in fourteenth, Scotty Hester in fifteenth, Marion Griffin in seventeenth, Ed Joyner in eighteenth, and Pete McGehee in twenty-fourth place were responsible for the excellent showing of the Tar Heel club. There were approximately 40 contestants entered in the race.

It was a clear day with no wind and a little warm for November weather as Beatty, Barden, and Miller started out together, with the pack following. The two Carolina runners pulled away together from the Stater after about one and a half miles. Near the two mile mark each was about fifteen yards apart in the same order in which they finished. They remained like this until after approximately three miles when Beatty pulled away to take a rather good lead, and Barden also moved out in front of Miller during the last mile.

In the freshman race, Maurice Barbour of State ran the second fastest time ever recorded for the 2.5 miles course as he led the Wolflets to their victory.

Everett Whatley and Richard Rigsbee captured second and third place for the Tar Babies, but strength down the line proved to be in State's hands. The other top runners for the Carolina team were Ben Williams (sixth), Ray Montgomery (fifteenth), and Bailey Liipfert (seventeenth). There were twenty-five entries in the freshman division. Gary Nichols, Phil Hamrick, and Jim Rose also ran for the Babies, finishing in twenty-first, twenty-second, and twenty-fourth places.

Wealth Of Material

There is a wealth of story material in the 71 years of this man's life lived so far—a father who died when young Louis was six, a mother who took in boarders to educate four children, a son who followed Louis' profession to become city editor of the New York Times, another son who is next to his classmate, Douglas MacArthur, to being the oldest Army man on active duty, a daughter who is a portrait painter here in Chapel Hill, a wife who is everything from homemaker to general adviser, a friend and former associate editor, Joe Jones, who is now managing editor, and a host of other incidents and people who have influenced him and been influenced by him.

HALFBACK SONNY RIDENHOUR sweeps left end in the second quarter of the UNC-USC game for no gain. Unidentified Gamecock makes tackle.

Improved Soccer Team Host To Virginia Today

Carolina's vastly improved soccer team plays its last home game of the season today against Virginia. Game time is 3 p. m. on Fetzer Field.

The Tar Heels are riding on the crest of a two-game winning streak in which they toppled Duke and State. Today's encounter will be the fourth ACC game for the UNC squad, the only loss being to Maryland's defending champions.

The Cavaliers, though possessing a 4-2 record, are undefeated in conference play. They whitewashed Duke by a 4-0 score, while the Tar Heels defeated the Blue Devils by a 2-1 margin.

Coach Marvin Allen has announced that the starting lineup will be the same as in last week's overtime victory against State. Don Gladstone will be the goalie, Grover Brown and Joe Mavretic will be the fullbacks, and the halfback posts will be manned by Jim Bunting, Pat McCormick, and Harry Brown. The starting forwards will be Capt. Jerry Russell, Tommy Kirkland, Pete Cothran, Chip Bryant, and Noel Sullivan.

Lacrosse Meeting Slated For Tomorrow Afternoon

All lacrosse players are urged to attend a meeting Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. in Room 304 of Woollen Gym.

Tar Heels Take Practice Rest

North Carolina's Tar Heels got a day off yesterday as a reward for their upset 21-19 win over South Carolina Saturday.

However, Coach George Barclay warned the squad that the remainder of the week's work in preparation for next weekend's clash with Notre Dame will be hard and rough.

The Tar Heels left the South Carolina encounter without any new injuries. Albert Long, No. 2 quarterback who had to leave Saturday's game after being knocked unconscious, is all right, trainer Doc White said, and should be able to play against the Fighting Irish.

Backs Ed Sutton and Marshall Newman, the team's only major injuries, are still on crutches as the result of ankle and knee injuries. Neither is expected to be able to play against Notre Dame.

The Tar Heels will leave Friday afternoon for South Bend.

Femme Netters Seeking Second Victory Today

The University of North Carolina women's tennis club seeks its second victory in as many starts when it meets Woman's College of Greensboro on the varsity courts at 4 p. m. today.

In their only contest this season, the local girls routed Wake Forest's lassies, Carolina's first seven racqueteers took victories over the Deaconess netters in straight sets. Lou Jones, playing in the number one slot started the ball rolling, and the trend was followed by Betty Andrews, Liza Little, Patti Andrews, Mike Underwood, Sara Cashwell, and Carol Ann Lee. Maroin Chalmers was the only local girl to taste defeat, going down in a close match by the score of 4-6, 4-6.

Three singles matches and the doubles matches were called because of darkness.

Candidates' Meeting

There will be a required meeting of all candidates in the fall election tonight at 7 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

Any candidate failing to attend this meeting will be disqualified unless he contacts the Elections Board and pays a $1 fine within 48 hours of the required meeting. All candidates are allowed a maximum of $12.50 for campaign expenses except student council nominees who may spend up to $15.

– Dr. Odum Dies –

He received his Master of Arts degree in 1906.

Odum's sensitivity to the living, human scene around him caused his interest to turn in that direction. In 1908 he entered Clark University to study psychology under G. Stanley Hall, receiving his Ph. D. degree in 1909. At Clark he met Anna Louise Kranz, also a student of Hall's, whom he later married. The same year he entered Columbia University, studying sociology under Franklin H. Giddings and receiving his second Ph.D. degree in 1910. His two dissertations were based on work begun in Mississippi on the social and mental traits of the Negro.

In 1953, Odum received the O. Max Gardner Award, as the faculty member in the Consolidated University of North Carolina who "in the current scholastic year has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race." In his speech of acceptance, Odum paid his tribute to North Carolina as "the very best place to work in all this land."

Recognition of the high esteem in which he was held is further evidenced by the honorary degrees received from Emory University (LL.D., 1931), College of the Ozarks (LITT.D., 1935), Harvard (LL.D., 1939), Clark University (L.H.D., 1941). Odum was also president of the American Sociological Society in 1930; President of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service, 1936-37; Walker-Ames Professor at the University of Washington in 1942; visiting Silliman Professor, Yale University, 1946-47; fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

– New Governor Rose Fast –

ges arrived at the University of North Carolina in 1915. With campus jobs and summer work, he was able to earn enough money to pay his way through college. He was graduated in 1919 after his education was interrupted by service in World War I.

He was active in sports as a member of the varsity basketball squad, the football scrubs and manager of the baseball team. He was president of the senior class and named best all-round student by the school yearbook.

Returning to Leaksville he went to work with Marshall Field Co. In 1938, at the age of 40, he was named general manager of the Felderest Mills. In 1943 he became vice president of the company.

A few months after his retirement in 1950, Hodges was appointed chief of the ECA's industry division in Western Germany, a spot that kept him busy for 13 months. During World War II, he was price executive of the OPA's textile division in Washington. He also served for a time as special consultant to the secretary of agriculture.

He is a Mason, Methodist, fromer president of the New York Rotary Club and past governor of North Carolina Rotary. He represented Rotary before the United Nations.

Hodges is married to the former Martha Blakeney, of Monroe. They have three children.

Hodges' son, Luther Hodges, Jr., is a student at UNC. Luther Jr., is a sophomore and a member of the Honor Council. He lives at 114 Winston Dormitory.

Scott Names Cochrane To Executive Post

William M. Cochrane, administrative director of the Institute of Government and associate professor of public law and government here has been appointed private secretary to Senator-elect W. Kerr Scott. The announcement was made by Scott at his home Saturday.

Cochrane will assume his duties in Washington Nov. 24. He will join Ben Roney of Rocky Mount, who is administrative assstant, and William B. Whitley of Chapel Hill, who is press secretary.

The new appointee attended school here and received his L.L.B. in 1941. Cochrane got his L.L.M. from Yale in 1951.

– Governor Umstead –

Gov. Luther Hodges of Leaksville, who will take the oath of office this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the hall of the House of Representatives in Raleigh. Chief Justice M. V. Barnhill of the State Supreme Court will administer the oath. Hodges said he preferred to wait until after the Umstead funeral to be sworn in.

State Senator Luther Barnhardt of Concord probably will preside over the 1955 Senate, since Lieut. Gov. Hodges is assuming the governorship.

Until the new Senate is convened, Senator Edwin Pate of Laurinburg remains as president protem. Pate now is in Mercy Hospital at Charlotte where he recently underwent an operation.

Returns from senatorial districts composed of more than one county must be canvassed by the State Board of Elections Nov. 23. After that date, should the Legislature be called into special session before it is scheduled to meet Jan. 5, the Senate would organize itself and elect a president protem. In either instance, Barnhardt probably would be the senators' choice. A vast majority of the senators had pledged him their support even as far back as several months ago.

Whenever the Senate does meet, it will be called to order by Secretary of State Thad Eure and a president protem formally named. Should Hodges for any reason become unable to carry on as governor, the president protem would become governor.

Barnhardt, 50, was elected last Tuesday to his sixth Senate term from the 21st District, composed of Cabarrus and Rowan counties. He is a Methodist and a lawyer.

proprietor of three drug stores. It was during this period that he originated the now famous formula for Bromo-Seltzer which in a short time was to make him wealthy.

In 1889 he withdrew from the retail drug field to devote himself exclusively to the manufacture of his specialty. The Emerson Drug Company, which he organized in 1891 and served as president with a controlling interest in the stock, grew to such proportions that by 1911 a large five-story building was erected in downtown Baltimore, topped by a 357-foot tower resembling the Palazzo Jecchi in Florence, Italy.

Until 1937 a huge blue Bromo-Seltzer bottle, 51-feet high and 21 feet in diameter advertising the headache remedy, revolved in the top of the tower with a gilded crown visible many miles down the Chesapeake Bay.

Believed in Advertising

He was one of the few American business men in the "90's" who saw the importance of advertising. His preparation was advertised throughout the world in many languages. His career was marked by achievement in whatever direction he turned his energies.

Captain Emerson erected and for many years owned the 17-story hotel building in downtown Baltimore, which appropriately still bears his name.

In 1894 he organized the Maryland Naval Reserve, which he commanded until 1901 when he resigned to take a trip around the world. In 1895-96-97 he attended the course of instruction at the Naval War College in Newport. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War in 1898 he equipped and manned an entire naval squadron of 27 commissioned officers and 449 petty officers and men at his own expense, which was mustered into the service of the United States Navy. He was commissioned as lieutenant in the U. S. Navy and Assistant to the Chief of the Auxiliary Naval Force. On April 19, 1900 he was elected Capital to the Maryland Naval Brigade. It is as "Captain Emerson" that he has been known since then.

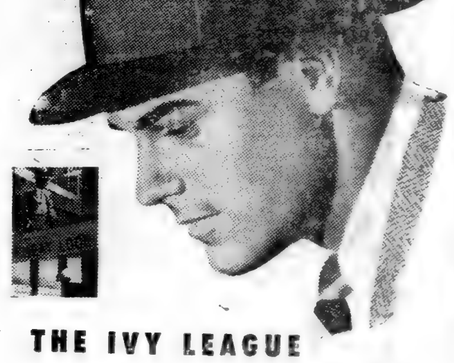
Took World Cruises

He was one of the few men of his time who, having amassed a big fortune, was able to divorce himself sufficiently from the cares of the business world to enjoy the wealth he accumulated. Well known in this country and abroad, especially in international yachting circles, Captain Emerson maintained several expensive ocean-going yachts, notably the "Margaret" and "Queen Anne." On one cruise around the world he was away over a year and traveled 44,500 miles.

In Baltimore, his town house at 2500 Eutaw Place was for many years one of the city's showplaces. On the ground formerly occupied by the garden, he later erected the Emersonian Apartments—one of the best equipped apartment houses in Baltmiore.

The latter part of his life he lived at "Brooklandwood," a handsome estate in the Green Spring Valley, where one of his hobbies was the breeding of fine cattle and where he had a model dairy and herd of government tested cattle. The original part of this home was built in 1780 by John Carroll, fo Carrollton.

This estate was recently sold to a group of Baltimore real estate men and is being subdivided to provide home sites for scores of people in the lower income brackets. The house itself is now occupied by the St. Paul School for Boys. Captain Emerson also owned a magnificent 12,000-acre colonial plantation called "Arcadia" on the Waccamaw River, near Georgetown, S. C. The Marquis de Lafayette is said to have spent his first night in America beneath this roof. The Captain usually spent his summers at "Whitehall," his 30-room house on a 12-acre ocean front estate at Narragansett, Rhode Island.



In addition to his "Bromo-Seltzer" interests Captain Emerson was president of the Citro Chemical Company of America, located at Maywood, N. J., and he organized and controlled the Maryland Glass Corporation, Mt. Winans, Baltimore, Md. He was a member of the New York Yacht Club, the Royal Yacht Club of Belgium, the Maryland Yacht Club, the Harford Hunt Club, the Maryland Jockey Club, Port Judith Country Club, the American Pharmaceutical Association, the Maryland Polo Club, New York Southern Society, North Carolina Society of Baltimore and Racquet Club, Baltimore Country Club, Circum-navigators Club, Dunes Club, Green Spring Valley Hunt Club and Maryland Pharmaceutical Association. He was a 32nd degree Mason and Shriner.

Captain Emerson's first wife was a daughter of the late Col. W. F. Askew, of Raleigh. Their only daughter, Margaret, was her father's devoted companion on many of her father's voyages around the world on the yacht he named for her. The two were also interested in breeding some of the best horses on the Amercian turf. His second wife was Mrs. Anne Preston McCormack, of Irvington-on-Hudson, who died May 5, 1946.

University Party Is Indifferent--SP

By JACKIE GOODMAN

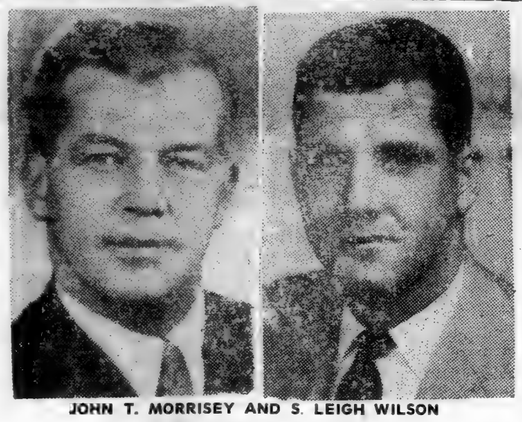
Joel Fleishman, chairman of the Student Party, delivered a speech to the Student Party last Tuesday night concerning the coming campus elections.

"Once again the energies of the student political community are bent on informing the student body of the factors which will be involved in the election a week hence. This is true of both campus parties. And this is where the similarity ends," said Fleishman.

Concerning the qualifications of the candidates which have been nominated in the past by both of the campus political parties, Fleishman said, "With not one exception, the Student Party has nominated experienced students for all positions, students who have the interest of the student body at heart and who will be ever ready to devote their time and energy to making this campus and University a better place to live for all concerned. The University Party has nominated mostly persons who, heretofore, have taken no intereset in student government and who are running solely in order that the University Party might try to capture offices so that they will be filled. We are the party of experience and interest; the University Party is the party of indifference and spoils."

'. . . Vote Of Confidence'

". . . this election will be, if nothing else, a vote of confidence in the record of the Student Party for the past year," said the Student Party chairman. Concerning the actions of both parties during the past year, Fleishman said, "During the last 12 months, the Student Party has amassed more achievements through hard work in the student Legislature than the University Party has accomplished certainly within the last three years they have controlled the executive branch. The lack of concrete actions by the University Party is their own fault, for the record will bear witness that the Student Party has never blocked constructive University Party proposals in the Legislature. The only thing is that the University Party has never brought such measures up for consideration."



Summing up the Student Party's accomplishments, Fleishman said, ". . . we have done what the other party has not had enough interest to do. We have carried out our platform in the past and I can assure you that we will not fail the students this time."

Student Takes Awards

Two First Premium awards at this year's North Carolina State Fair in Raleigh were won by a senior here.

Betty Bell, of the Art Department, won the two awards with a pen and ink drawing and an etching which she entered in the Graphics division.

The prize money amounted to $25.

JOHN T. MORRISEY AND S. LEIGH WILSON

UNC Grads Are Honored

President H. L. Burdette, city manager of Hickory, yesterday announced the appointment of John T. Morrisey to the North Carolina League of Municipalities and the promotion of S. Leigh Wilson to the position of assistant executive director of the league. Both men are graduates of the University.

Wilson graduated with a degree in political science while a student here. A native of Norfolk, Va., he served in the Army during World War II, during which time he rose to the rank of captain. He remained in the reserves as an officer. Before his promotion, Wilson was the League's field consultant.

Morrisey, originally from Massachusetts, is Phi Beta Kappa graduate in law and holds a literary degree. While a student, Morrisey served as editor of The Law Review in 1951. He was also president of the Delta Theta Phi law fraternity, and is presently serving as the chancellor of the North Carolina-South Carolina District of

Crime Fighter Estes Kefauver Coming To Campus Dec. 3

The Hon. Estes Kefauver, U. S. Senator from Tennessee, will be the next speaker sponsored here by the Carolina Forum, according to Joel Fleishman, chairman of the Forum.

Kefauver will speak here, probably in Memorial Hall, Dec. 3. Fleishman said yesterday that the engagement came after four years' negotiation with the senator.

Kefauver has had a very active role in the national scene. He is particularly noted for his part on the Kefauver Committee, which investigated crime and corruption in the U. S. several years ago.

He was a strong campaigner for the Democratic presidency nomination in 1952.

University's Dr. Thurstone Receives Swedish Honorary

Dr. L. L. Thurstone, Research Professor of Psychology and Director of UNC's Psychometric Laboratory, recently returned from Sweden, where he was awarded an honorary doctorate degree, Ph.D., H.C., by the University of Gothenburg recently.

In announcing this award, Chancellor R. B. House commented: "Professor Thurstone's colleagues throughout the University are gratified by this additional international recognition of the many signal contributions to the advancement of the science of psychology that have come through his work. We are indeed proud that as a member of our faculty he is directly available to North Carolina students."

This was Dr. Thurstone's second trip to Sweden within a year. Last spring he was visiting professor of psychology at the University of Stockholm. In addition to lectures and seminars in Stockholm, he also presented lectures in several other universities, including Uppsala, Gothenburg, Lund, Oslo and Helsinki.

For three weeks in the summer he worked on a research problem at the Educational Research Institute at Frankfurt, Germany.

KA's Praise Cooperation

Origin of the fire which gutted the basement of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity house last night and demolished its living room floor has not definitely been determined but members of the fraternity believe that the ravishing flames sprang from a faulty furnace in the building's basement.

Extensive damages amounting to an estimated $10,000, excluding damages inflicted by smoke and water used to extinguish the blaze, were reported to the Southern Fire Insurance, whose policy covered the residence.

An all night vigil was kept over the Franklin Street structure last evening by eight of its members to prevent possible recurrence of flames from embers left in the fire's wake. Other KA brothers were forced to evacuate in favor of near-by fraternity houses and dorms.

Martin Jordan, president of the group, said that the response of students in aiding the temporarily homeless KA's was "truly gratifying." He voiced especially his sincere appreciation to neighboring fraternities for their "invaluable assistance."

"Darkening Shore," a new play by Kermit Hunter, will have its premier performance tonight at the Playmakers Theater at 8:30.

"Darkening Shore" is a story of modern post-war Europe of which Hunter has a first-hand knowledge as he was stationed abroad for four years as a lieutenant colonel in the infantry during the past war.

After tonight's performance only, Hunter will meet the audience and discuss the play. Members of the audience will be urged to participate in the discussion both with the playwright and the director, Samuel Selden.

Tickets for the performance are available at the door. The setting was designed and executed by James Riley, costumes by Jimmy Sechrest and lighting by Harvey Whetstone.

Final Rites For Dr. Odum At 11 Today

Hodges Sworn In

RALEIGH (AP) — Luther H. Hodges was sworn in as Governor of North Carolina yesterday afternoon.

Chief Justice M. V. Barnhill administered the oath to Hodges at a ceremony held before a crowd of state officials and others which packed the Hall of the State House of Representatives to capacity.

Hodges was Lieutenant Governor and succeeded to the governorship upon Gov. Umstead's death Sunday.

Police Get Plane Complaints

Local police have received numerous complaints in protest of the airplane that buzzed the campus last Friday morning dropping leaflets promoting homecoming activities.

A spokesman for the local officials said that the police had received calls all morning long, most of them anonymous. Some of the complainants identified themselves as students or faculty members. Most of them were pretty hot in their protests, the spokesman said, reporting altitudes ranging from 100 to 300 feet.

The police said that notification of the protests had been sent to the Civil Aeronautics Authority, but the CAA in Raleigh has not received them yet, according to W. R. Elder, aviation safety agent for the CAA. The minimum altitude for flying over cities is 1,000 feet above any obstructions, which would make the minimum in Chapel Hill 1,100 or 1,200 feet, according to Mr. Elder.

As yet no action has been taken on the complaints. Officials say they have not yet determined who the pilot was.

Tickets are on sale for "Three For Tonight," the new Paul Gregory-Charles Laughton touring attraction starring Marge and Gower Champion, began yesterday.

The production, sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers, will come to Memorial Hall Thursday and Friday, Dec. 9 and 10. Tickets are selling for $2.20, $3.30 and $4.40 at the Playmakers' Business Office, 214 Abernethy Hall.

Stars of "Three For Tonight" are the Champions, popular dancing couple, and Harry Belafonte, who was featured in the movie, "Carmen Jones" and hailed as one of the greatest dramatic and singing talents discovered in the past year. Belafonte recently appeared in the Broadway show, "John Murray Anderson's Almanac" and has starred in the movie, "Bright Road." A folk singer, he is hailed as a leader in the field of American jazz and blues songs.

The Champions, who made their movie debut in the film version of "Show Boat," recently finished two movies, "Hannibal's Woman" and "Three For The Show." Before the couple teamed up as dancing partners, Marge Champion served as the model for Walt Disney's "Snow White" and later as the "Blue Fairy" in "Pinocchio."

Gower Champion, who did the choreography for the Broadway show, "Lend An Ear," will also stage "Three For Tonight."

Original music for the show has been written by Walter Schumann, the man who originated the "Dragnet" theme song. The "Voices of Walter Schumann," the musician's chorus, will come to Chapel Hill with the show.

Sir Walter Award To Be Given Soon

One of the biggest North Carolina literary events of the year will occur December 3 when the Sir Walter Raleigh Award is presented by the Historical Book Club of Greensboro.

Thirty volumes have been entered in the competition. Part of the entries are now on display in the lobby of the University Library.

The award, which is given by the Historical Book Club of Greensboro, will be presented at the annual meeting of the State Literary and Historical Association in Raleigh.

Each year the winner receives a replica of the statue of Sir Walter Raleigh which stands on top of the big cup kept in the Hall of History in Raleigh. The name of the winner is inscribed on the cup each year.

The award was first given in 1952 when it was presented to Chapel Hill's Paul Green for achievement in literature. Last year duplicate awards were given to Inglis Fletcher for the book Queen's Gift, and to Frances Grey Patton for The Finer Things of Life. Miss Patton's current book, Good Morning, Miss Dove, was book of the month selection for October.

The year 1952, the year the award was established, marked the 400th anniversary of the birth of Sir Walter Raleigh.

Should You Stop Smoking?

Cigarette Controversy Flaming Hotter

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP)—The great cigarette controversy is flaming hotter.

It has millions of Americans puzzled or confused, and many frightened. Are cigarettes really a great boon for all of us?

It finds the house of science and medicine divided. Some authorities frankly call cigarettes a major factor in causing human cancer, especially lung cancer, and say they are bad for one's heart. But others, equally prominent, say the case against cigarettes is by no means proved.

It finds many hundreds of thousands of dollars being poured into research to find the answer, or answers. That fact could produce great boons for all of us, for the research will dig deep into some biological mysteries. What is learned could turn up vital links about the cause, control or treatment of cancer, heart disease or possibly other health matters, quite aside from its effect in the cigarette controversy.

The controversy finds unknown thousands of men and women giving up cigarettes, or trying to, or thinking they should.

Health & Enjoyment

Human health is one stake in the controversy: Are cigarettes harmless, bad, or somewhere in between? Human enjoyment is another: Most smokers enjoy their smoking.

The tobacco industry—the big and small growers and manufacturers and processors, middlemen, wholesalers, retailers, vending machine operators and many others—owes its livelihood to tobacco. Governments derive much revenue from tobacco taxes.

Science and medicine have a stake. Should a reputable scientist disclose his findings which lead him to suspect hazards in smoking or anything else? or should he wait until he has definite proof? If he's proved wrong after his early announcement, will people accuse him of scare mongering, or lose faith in scientific research? If he is proved right after deciding not to warn the public would people accuse him of having shirked his responsibility?

A Long Time

The cigarette controversy, like most big public issues, didn't spring forth overnight.

Some 15 years ago, Dr. Alton Ochsner, famous New Orelans surgeon, was reporting observations which led him to believe that cigarette smoking was a cause of lung cancer. Just yesterday Dr. Ochsner published a book, "Smoking and Cancer, a Doctor's Report."

In 1939, an Argentine physician, Dr. A. H. Roffo, reported that tars obtained from tobacco often could produce cancer in the skin of rabbits.

These and other reports were mentioned in the news through the years.

In 1950, newspapers headlined stories from a cancer congress in Paris reporting three separate studies, mostly statistical, which linked cigarettes with at least part of an increase in lung cancer among Americans. The studies were made by Dr. Ochsner, by Doctors Evarts Graham of St. Louis and Ernest Wynder of New York, and by Dr. Morton L. Levin and associates of Albany, N. Y.

A British study just a bit later, by Dr. Richard Doll and Prof. A. Bradford Hill, pointing to an association between cigarettes and lung cancer, also was published by American newspapers.

But these and other reports coming still later seemed to find the American public only mildly interested.

Perhaps many missed the stories. Perhaps it takes time and repetition—in the absence of stark drama—to get rapt attention. Or perhaps many people wanted stronger evidence.

No doubt some dismissed the reports as another instance of crying "wolf" at cigarettes. For tobacco has been accused of many sins in the past—of leading to poverty, of creating mustaches on women, making men sterile, poisoning the unborn babies of smoking mothers, contributing to tuberculosis.

Fence-Mender For The South

Grumpy Henry L. Mencken, with his pen dipped in acid, sat down one day back in 1917 and gave the South the worst verbal lashing she has ever gotten. Listen to what Mr. Mencken said:

"It is, indeed, amazing to contemplate so vast a vacuity. One thinks of the interstellar spaces, of the colossal reaches of the now mythical ether. And yet, for all its size and all its wealth and all the 'progress' it babbles of, it is almost as sterile, artistically, intellectually, culturally, as the Sahara Desert. There are single acres in Europe that house more first-rate men than all the states south of the Potomac . . ."

Somewhere in the sterile ranges of interstellar space and mythical ether that looked so void to Mencken's eye there lingered a man who was, within the next 37 years, to play a vital part in filling the "vast vacuity" of the cultural South. He was waiting in the wings, waiting for Fate to beckon him to the spotlight downstage—a then comparatively obscure professor at the University of Georgia.

He was anxious to prove that the South was not really so vacuous as many Yankees and disillusioned Southerners thought. His affection for the South was deep: but it was not one, fortunately, that could distort his picture of it. He knew there was work to be done, fences to be mended, a razed culture to rebuild.

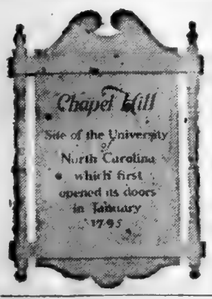
In time, his reputation as the "academic statesman of the South at its best" had been carried to the national scene. At this school he had founded the Institute for Research in Social Science, established the best school of Sociology in the South, edited a scholarly journal "Social Forces," written a penetrating trilogy on the trials of the black man, and published an internationally known work on The Southern Regions of the United States.

As scholar, author, teacher, and diplomat for the South, he had, until death cut short his still unfinished work Monday, seen the South through an era of growth that now could boast that Faulkners and Penn Warrens and Wolfes and Sandburgs had written within her boundaries.

So if grumpy Henry L. Mencken were still living today and could look with his piercing eyes across the Southland he would have trouble calling the South a Sahara—if only because Dr. Howard W. Odum had lived and worked here.

Now Is The Time For All Good Men To Get The Heave-Ho

Get out your list of men who have been fired by the government for "security" reasons with no further explanation and add the name of John Patton Davies, who after 23 years of high service to his country and after clearance by eight security boards, finally got the gate last week.



Mr. Davies' loyalty, according to Secretary Dulles, is not in question. Rather, it is his "judgment, discretion, and reliability" that are at fault. Despite Mr. Davies' requests, the State Department remains unwilling to release the facts; and so, Mr. Davies has lost his job as a result of a star chamber proceeding, has suffered a loss in reputation and a financial penalty, and this without even being charged with a crime.

Secretary Dulles has wondered publicly why more men of courage and intelligence do not make government work a career. The answer is painfully obvious. It would take an extraordinarily courageous man indeed to enter the diplomatic service knowing that at some future time, a sober policy disagreement with his superiors might be held adequate grounds for furtive investigation, a questioning of integrity, and summary dismissal.

Surely, one is tempted to believe, this time Dulles has gone too far. But the State Department has nothing more to say. Unless Congress reopens the case, it is closed, and another loyal and outstanding government employee whom we can ill afford to lose is lost.

How To Write A Column In The Tar Heel

Louis Kraar

YOU SLIDE your chair up to the typewriter and roll the long white sheet of copy paper into the machine.

"Carolina front

Set: 11½ picas 8 on 10."

That's what you write at the top of the big, blank-looking sheet, then you lean back in your chair and think. The long white sheet of paper stares up at you from the typewriter. — Then it comes.

You need a Coke, and that's what, you tell yourself. And then you walk out into the noisy newsroom and match Fred Powledge or Jerry Reece for one. If you lose (and I usually do), you walk downstairs and buy the drinks.

Finally you're back behind your typewriter again, and a wet ring on the metal desk is all that is left of the Coke.

"THE YOUNGER generation . . . ," you start to write, then you realize how silly it sounds. Rip. Out comes the paper, and you roll another long sheet into the typewriter.

AS SOON as you've typed the heading out again, you hear a knock at the door. It's Jim Turner. Jim is student politician in the student party, and he is very shaken up about something that was in the paper.

Turner comes in, sits on the desk next to yours, massages your desk with his feet, pleads, explains, then leaves.

You're all alone again, just you and the big, white sheet of paper.

"CAMPUS POLITICS are . . ." you begin again, but another burst at the door interrupts, Martin Jordan, student body vice-president, sticks his friendly face in the door and you ask him in.

Martin tells you a joke he heard at the KA house over the weekend and you remind him of a ridiculous ride you both had back from Ames, Iowa and the National Student Association Congress. He doesn't stay long.

After Martin shuts the door, you're at it again.

"CAMPUS POLITICS are . . ." says the paper, and you've forgotten what you meant to say. Out goes the sheet, and in goes another long fresh one.

Then you lean back to think again. Outside you hear some music, probably some Dixieland show they're listening to out in the newsroom. You stick your head out the door and listen awhile. Say, that's Armstrong, you tell yourself, and so you stay outside and listen to old Satchmo for a couple of tunes.

THE BLANK sheet's still there, and you still can't think. You take a walk downstairs to Tarnation's office. Rueben Leonard and his co-producers of the humor magazine are sitting around reading jokes to each other.

You listen awhile, then ask Rueben, who's also University Party chairman, about the coming campus election. Rueben stops reading jokes, answers, and then you climb the steps back to the typewriter.

The blank sheet is still there when you slid up to the machine, and you type out the heading again.

"Carolina front

Set: 11½ picas 8 on 10."

THE SOUND of laughter pulls you away from the typewriter and you're out in the newsroom again.

Jerry Reece, the news editor, has just told one of his jokes, and he repeats it for you. You laugh, and then it's time to get back to the typewriter.

Outside the window, you can see that it's getting dark. The lamps along the campus are already on, and rows of students are walking to town and supper.

You turn back to the typewriter, think hard, then it starts to roll. The big sheet of paper becomes filled and you sit back to read it, knowing that this was just one of those days.

McCarthy Revenge Technique

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—The two factors which have hurt Joe McCarthy most during his acrimonious career in the Senate are: 1, his attacks on members of the Eisenhower administration; 2, his vindictiveness against fellow senators who oppose him.

McCarthy's attacks on members of the Eisenhower administration have been well publicized. His revenge technique of investigating those who oppose him is not so well known. But it has made Senate colleagues bitter. Here is part of the revenge record.

SENATOR SYMINGTON OF MISSOURI — When Symington persisted in digging into the reasons why Don Surine was dropped from the FBI, a friend of McCarthy's approached Democratic senators on the McCarthy Committee and warned that if this line of cross examination continued, McCarthy would insist on publishing the police records of senators. This was aimed at Symington who as a youngster went on a joy ride in a neighbor's car without bothering to ask permission and later pleaded guilty. The neighbor later wrote a letter pooh-poohing the incident, but it remains a matter of police record.

SENATOR JACKSON OF WASHINGTON—When Jackson asked searching questions of Roy Cohn, Cohn jostled him in the corridor and whispered: "Want to get rough? We can get rough too." Surine then brought into the hearing room a file marked "Senator Jackson's Record" and ostentatiously put it on the table where everyone could see it.

JOHN J. McCLOY—When McCloy, former high commissioner to Germany, now head of the Chase Bank, instigated Eisenhower's book burning speech at Dartmouth, McCarthy investigators turned up in Germany, to probe McCloy's operations, even including whether Mrs. McCloy used her government car to buy groceries. McCarthy also accused McCloy of destroying records on Communists inside the War Department.

SEN. ROBERT HENDRICKSON OF NEW JERSEY — When Hendrickson signed the Senate Subcommittee report condemning McCarthy's finances, McCarthy threatened to fight Hendrickson's re-election, called him a "living miracle . . . the only man in the world who has lived so long with neither brains nor guts."

SENATOR TYDINGS OF MARYLAND—When Tydings refused to confirm McCarthy's charges of Communists in the State Department, McCarthy raised Texas and Chicago Tribune money to defeat Tydings and circulated a fake picture of Tydings smiling at Communist Chief Earl Browder.

SENATOR MARGARET CHASE SMITH OF MAINE — When Mrs. Smith signed the declaration of Conscience indirectly criticizing McCarthy's behavior, he maneuvered one of his friends Robert Jones, into running against her.

STRUVE HENSEL, ASSISTANT DEFENSE SECRETARY—When Hensel wrote a report on the Cohn-Schine attempts to browbeat the Army, McCarthy got hold of Hensel's income tax returns and sent two investigators to browbeat Hensel's mother-in-law; even told her her daughter was in a hit-and-run-accident in order to scare her into giving information.

TIME MAGAZINE — When Time published critical stories about McCarthy, he wrote every advertiser asking them to cancel

HUBERT HUMPHREY
. . . the farmers' man

their advertising; later secured from Postmaster General Summerfield the figures on Time's second class mailing privileges and proceeded to cross examine Summerfield in an appropriations subcommittee meeting in an obvious effort to undercut Time's mailing privileges.

SENATOR HENNINGS of MISSOURI — When Hennings served on the committee probing McCarthy's finances, McCarthy charged that Hennings had three Communists in his office. Hennings asked the FBI to investigate, disproved the charge.

SENATOR BALDWIN OF CONNECTICUT—When Baldwin a Republican, refused to swallow McCarthy's charges that American officers had tortured the Nazi SS men who murdered 150 Americans at Malmedy in the Battle of the Bulge, McCarthy proceeded to bulldoze and torment Baldwin until he resigned from the Senate.

NEWSPAPERS AND NEWSPAPERMEN—The list of newsmen against whom McCarthy has used his revenge technique is too long to be published here. He has leveled charges of pro-Communism at the Christian Science Monitor, Saturday Evening Post, Washington Star, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Milwaukee Journal, Madison (Wisc.) Capital Times, Portland Oregonian, and many others.

But the most dangerous aspect of McCarthy's revenge technique is that he uses private money contributed by his Texas oil friends to hire an army of investigators and they in turn are able to secure the tax return of anyone against whom McCarthy has a personal gripe.

This is probably the first time in history that a personal, private army of investigators has been able to use U. S. Government records and the power of U. S. Government subpoenas in somewhat the same manner Hitler used his elite corps in Germany.

Politico-Go-Round

GOP Chairman Len Hall tried to console his assistants over losing the House. "All the committee chairmen are conservative Southerners," Hall told his associates. "Name one Northern chairman of an important committee." . . . He forgot that Vice President Nixon warned the nation that Congress would be in the hands of leftwingers . . . Ike lost both his home districts last week. Morningside Heights, New York, home of Columbia U., elected a Democratic Congressman, Herbert Zalenko, for the first time in years, while Gettysburg, Pa., where Ike held the Pennsylvania political rally, also elected a Democrat, James M. Quigley . . . Congressman Zalenko was once star wrestler for Columbia . . . One thing that hurt Sen. Guy Gillette in Iowa was failure to take a stand on McCarthy. He lost in a big farm state while Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota was rolling up a terrific majority in another farm state. . . Wisconsin farmers turned Democratic with such a vengeance that GOP leaders just aren't talking about it. They almost defeated Republican Governor Kohler. (His family make the famous bathroom bowls) . . . Says Dave Lloyd, ex-aide to Harry Truman: "The only food poisoning Nixon has to worry about is letting one of his speeches fall into his soup." . . . Mamie Eisenhower almost wept at the defeat of her close friend Mrs. Ellen Harris, who ran for Congress from Denver. Mamie had even made a speech for Mrs. Harris and speechmaking is something Mamie almost never does.

New Year's Predictions Circa 1955

David Mundy

Why wait two months for New Year's predictions? Being an impatient creature, perhaps desirous of being first on the New Year's prediction market, here are mine.

First, the UP will pick up several seats in this fall's elections. Of this I'm sure. Should they lose a few they will be out of business.

Second, student body presidential aspirant David Reid will instead become SP chairman next spring. It is hard to place SP'er wheel Jim Turner, but he will probably cop one of the top appointive or legislative posts.

Third, IDC president Manning Muntzing will be the next president of the student body, and the best one yet.

No Pearson-like 99 and .44 per cent accuracy can now be claimed for these predictions; but just wait and see.

Last spring, like several other people, mostly members of the SP, I estimated candidate Creasy to be not far removed from a second class simpleton. And I voted that way. His credit account still shows no great quantity of deposits, but I have changed that original estimate. The reason: His statement that campus political parties are a necessary evil. A very encouraging statement for a campus politico, and an impossible one for anything like a simpleton. At last a BMOC has been able to discard ambition-tinted glasses and appraise a campus situation.

While discussing people in particular, I would like to make a standing apology to Louis Kraar, boy DTH'er. An apology, i. e., for all the nasty things I have said (or will say) about him.

'Tis but too bad that such a nice guy has to be so perpetually wrong and generally impervious to reason.

This week could indeed be designated "Be Kind to Creasy and Kraar Week." Next week might be devoted to Lenoir Hall and South Building. No comparison intended.

The Carolina Forum gets no apology of any kind.

Charges that a biased (even if unintentional) series of speakers has been presented still stand. More conservative speakers than liberal ones may have been invited, but the only way to judge the existence of bias is in a review of those the Forum actually brings to campus. You might also check the decorations in the Forum office and the sign in the window when investigating the "facts" of Forum bias.

The charge that the Forum has presented a string of uninteresting politicians was partially demolished by the appearance of Socialist Norman Thomas. Excepting his stimulating appearance, the charge still stands. A rotten apple like Meyner can spoil any barrel.

The subsidiary charge, that the Forum chairman has received the majority of any benefits accrued from the student-financed Forum, still stands. Invaluable contacts in the left wing of his party? Yes, Jonathan Daniels substantiated that one. And Democrats never lie, and, most of all, never even slightly misrepresent a situation.

(The retort was that most of the people he had contacted wouldn't be in the government when he got out of the Navy. Since my reference was to the left wing of his party, I can only hope so. Out of the Navy? Admiral Radford was one of the people invited this year. He, incidentally, is numbered among the Republicans. Looks like a fast riser in the Navy's Supply Corps.)

No mismanagement of the Carolina Forum has been charged. A check of its finances shows excellent management to the last penny. The management is clever; very clever in the wrong direction.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

THE HORSE was preening himself close to The New-Old Well, when I saw him. He looked a mite smug.

"And why not?" The Horse chittered. (I hate The Horse when he chitters.) "I settled that ugly Wake Forest-Tar Heel rhubarb, didn't I? Didn't I!

No, The Horse didn't settle that. It had been settled among Chancellor Bob House, President Tribble, Coach Rogers of the Deaks, and others.

"Yeah," The Horse agreed, "but who kept talkin about it all the time, who? Me, thass who! Deny I kept talking about it all the time, Roger."

Not alone would I not deny it, but rumor had it that the rancorous disputations was settled despite The Horse's brayings and not because of them; and rumor went further to say it all would have blown over sooner had not The Horse kept squalling about it.

"Aw, you're just jealous," The Horse stated waving a derisive hoof. "But I do wish I owned a hat so I could take it off to Prexy Tribble and any others at Baptist Hollow who were big enough to admit a mistake and to come out and say so. President Tribble, by his courageous example, has gained stature above and beyond the already considerable one he possessed ere the lamentable remarks. In fact, he is the larger in our affections because by his remarks immediately after the game he established himself as fallible, and therefore like unto the rest of us; and, by his recent and ungrudging retraction, he has given us all an ensample of how a big man should act when he had been detected in error."

Now, The Horse saw it, we were all one big, happy, ever-lovin' family again, we Atlantic Coast Conference members? All good friends and good sports!

"Er, speaking of good sports, Roger," The Horse put in, his eyes avoiding mine, "what happened to the weekly, ugh, Dook Hoofball TV Show this past weekend, huh? I and tens of thousands of others in the area got us'uns all squatted down in front of a TV screen to see the weekly game pics."

Ohhhhh, yesssssss! The Durham TV station had announced that, because of technical difficulties beyond its control, they were unable to show the pics of the, ugh, Dook-Navy clambake at Norfolk.

"Ho-ho!" The Horse ho-hoed. "Ho-ho-ho! The score was something like Navy 40, Dook 7, if rumor does not mislead me? Wel-l, now, I guess you could call it a 'technical difficulty' if the Dookers carefully collected the films of that game, if you can call that slaughter a game, and burned same beyond all recognition. The technicality of letting WTVD get a-holt of the film had not been met. Technical difficulty, indeed!"

What! Did The Horse then presume to suggest that The Dookers refused to let the Durhamite supporters of The Big & Very Blue Team see the Navy at its best because they would also have seen Dook at its worst?

"Nothing happened to the film that showed Dook beating the ears offa Pennsylvania to the tune of 52-0." The Horse shrugged. "Nothing happened to the film that showed Dook taking Georgia Tech 21-20 in a Garrison finish. Now, I am not suggesting that the Dookers love to dish it out, but can't take it. But I am hinting that it would be sorta nice if the Dookers would take a page from the sporting-book of the good President Tribble, of our good neighbors and good competitors. The Demon Deacons of Wake Forest, and eat their crow when they have cooked themselves one. People would think a lot more of them if they did. But, consider their sponsors ere you condemn the Blue Dooks."

Their sponsors were an honorable insurance company.

"Yeah," The Horse grinned, "and even honorable insurance companies have somethings in the verry-very small print. This Dook-Navy rout, for example."

Men Make A University

For his twenty years as Harvard's president Conant persisted in the working conviction that the three requisites for a successful operation of a university were and would always be financial solvency, a student body of high quality, and an outstanding faculty.

"A university," he declared, "is a group of men, a community of scholars and students. Here is the real problem in regard to the future of all institutions of higher learning. Harvard's success will depend almost entirely on our ability to procure men of the highest caliber for our student body and for our faculty. Harvard must endeavor to draw to its staff the most able investigators and teachers of the world. We have today a faculty of which we may justly be proud, but we cannot ignore the fact that it is increasingly difficult to attract from other universities and research institutes the outstanding men whom we desire. I need not stress the necessity of our having at Harvard great scholars and investigators. Our ultimate contribution to society will depend on their scholarly output and their stimulating teaching. What they accomplish and those whom they inspire will be the measure of our success. If we have in each department of the university the most distinguished faculty which it is possible to obtain, we need have little worry about the future. If we fail in this regard, there are no educational panaceas which will restore Harvard to its position of leadership.

We have at Harvard unusual advantages for scholarly work: Libraries, museums, laboratories and special institutes. In some fields we can provide opportunities for investigation which are unequaled in this country. It is clearly our first duty to see that our permanent staff is composed of those who can use these facilities most effectively and wisely. We must provide every opportunity for the ambitious, brilliant young scholar to come to Harvard and demonstrate his worth. In order to obtain such men for our Harvard family, the academic life in Cambridge must be made more attractive in a number of ways. Sufficient time should be allowed for writing and investigation. A satisfactory balance must be struck between teaching and research."—From "Six Upon the World" by Paul F. Douglass. Copyright, 1954, by Paul F. Douglass. Little, Brown and Company.

Carolina And Virginia Booters Battle To 1-1 Tie

DKE, Winston, Lawyers Win

Med School-2, 3, Sig Nu Drop Intramural Grid Play-Offs

Extra points decided two quarter-final Intramural tag football games yesterday, as the Deke's downed Sigma Nu 7-6, and Winston—2 edged Med School—3 13-12. Law School—3 defeated Med School—2, 13-0 in the only other game.

The Deke's put Sig Nu in a hole in the first minute of play, as Sig Nu fumbled the kick-off and the Deke's took possession shortly after but could not score. An attempted field goal was no-good.

DKE pressed hard, but an intercepted pass moved the ball into their own territory, and Sig Nu drew first blood on a pass play. The kick for the point was no good, and at the half, Sig Nu led, 6-0.

The battle see-sawed in the second half, with each team gaining the ball, only to lse it again. But a DKE pass intercepted turned the tide, and the Deke's went on to score and boot the game winning extra point.

Winston-2 and Med School-3 appeared evenly matched from the beginning. However, Winston broke the scoring ice on a pass, and added the point to make the score read Winston-2, 7, Med School-3, 0. Med School went on the offense but a stubborn Winston team held, and the half ended with Winston out in front by one touchdown.

The tempo of action increased in the second half. Med School swept to a quick touchdown, but the point was blocked and that proved to be the margin of defeat. Winston moved out in front once again on a pass interception which was good for a t. d., and the point was again good. Med School, fighting back, scored again on a long pass, and this time the kick was good. But it was not enough, and Winston ran out the clock to take a 13-12 win.

Law School-3 kept the heat on Med School-2 for the entire game, to take a 13-0 decision. Med School was unable to move the ball out of its own backyard for the first half, as the Law School team jumped to a 6-0 advantage on a tricky pass play. The pass for the point was good, and Law School led, 7-0.

Med School intercepted a pass on the kick-off but were stalemated, and Law School took possession once again. The Med School team came to life in the third quarter, but could not muster a scoring punch. They drove deep into Law School territory, but the defense held, and the ball was lost.

Law School scored again in the second half, on a circus-catch of a pass. The kick for the point was blocked, and the score read, Law School, 13, Med School, 0. The Lawyers kicked off but retained possession of the ball, as they grabbed a short kick. They ran out the clock and the game ended, Law School-2, 13; Med School-2, 0.

Don Klochak Named 'Athlete Of Week'

Sophomore fullback Don Klochak, a line-busting, tackler-dragging North Carolina Tar Heel, has been chosen by the sports staff of The Daily Tar Heel as "Athlete of the Week."

Klochak, a six-foot, two-inch, 213-pounder, won the selection after battling four other Tar Heels for the honor on the basis of their performances Saturday in Carolina's 21-19 victory over South Carolina.

He was given a run by the following players:

Ken Keller, halfback, who scored one touchdown and kicked all three extra points to provide the margin of victory—scored a total of nine points.

Len Bullock, quarterback, who pitched two touchdown passes, one to Larry Parker and one to Norman Lane.

Lane, an end, who caught the decisive pass in the end zone with less than two minutes remaining to play, bringing the Tar Heels from apparent defeat to victory.

End Will Frye, who played one of the best defensive games of his career. Frye effectively bottled up the Gamecock offensive attack around his end and forced the opposition to run nearly alll of their plays to the other side.

But the big man was Klochak, who, in the last quarter, provided the spark in Carolina's most thrilling victory of the season.

The soph picked up 124 yards in 12 carries for an average of more than 10 yards per carry. It was the first time Klochak had played extensively since the first game of the season, and he probably would not have seen much action Saturday had it not been for an injury to Marshall Newman, the No. 1 fullback.

Gamecock coach Rex Enright saw what Klochak did to his team and remarked after the game: "That fullback up the middle that set up the touchdown was the key play. If we had stopped that one, I believe we would have been able to hold them. That No. 40 (Klochak) hurt us all afternoon and meant a big difference in the North Carolina team."

The play which Enright referred to came just prior to the Tar Heels' winning score. At the time, Carolina had possession on the SC 42.

Frank Selvy To Play In Raleigh Friday

RALEIGH, Nov. 9 (AP)—Frank Selvy, former basketball ace at Furman, will be in the lineup of the Baltimore Bullets when they meet the Minneapolis Lakers in a a National Basketball Assn. game Friday night in Reynolds Coliseum.

Tar Heels Dominate Overtime Periods, But Fail To Score

Russell, Cothran, Kirkland Lead UNC Offense; Grover & Harry Brown, Mavretic Defensive Stars

By DICK ARMSTRONG

The Tar Heels and Cavaliers battled to a standstill yesterday in one of the finest exhibitions of soccer seen on Fetzer Field this year. Despite two overtime periods, neither team could break the 1-1 deadlock which existed at the end of the regular game.

Capt. Jerry Russell scored the lone Carolina tally in the first quarter, and fancy Danny Rojas tallied on a penalty kick for Virginia in the third period. The Tar Heels completely dominated play in the overtime periods and missed several fine scoring opportunities.

Jerry Russell, Pete Cothran, and Tommy Kirkland led the UNC offense, while Grover Brown, Harry Brown, and Joe Mavretic shared the defensive honors. Cothran's passing, Grover Brown's long kicks, and Harry Brown's hustle were outstanding factors in the play of the Tar Heels. Small but versatile Danny Rojas, who turns somersaults when he is angry, was the top player for the Cavaliers.

Virginia coach Wilson Fewster, still brooding over the calls by the referees in Monday's Virginia-N. C. State tilt, almost called his team off the field in the third period. It all started when Virginia's Bill Hazelgrove was thrown out of the game. The Cavalier forward had been warned by the referees twice to refrain from his rough-house style of play, and when he committed his third offense, he was immediately ejected from the game. After a ten-minute conference with the referees and UNC mentor Marvin Allen, Fewster, whose team was losing at the moment, decided to finish the affair.

Yesterday's game was the last home match for the Tar Heels, who now have a 2-1-1 record in ACC play. They journey to Durham Friday to play a return game with Duke.

The Carolina freshman booters lost a 2-1 thriller to the Blue Devils at Duke yesterday. This game also went into two overtime periods, with Duke scoring the winning tally in the last period. George Holt scored for the Tar Babies.

Frosh Coach Harry Pawlick was very pleased with the play of the entire squad and was very impressed by their consistent hustling. Holt, Braxton, Covell, Blair, Foster, Harris, Littlehales, Sturdivant, and Oyer all played well for the Carolina team. The next freshman tilt will be against N. C. State on Fetzer Field Friday.

Judge Says Papers & Law Are In Accord

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Superior Court Judge Susie Sharp says that newspapers and courts are in complete agreement on major issues concerning freedom of the press.

Speaking at the closing session of the annual fall meeting of the North Carolina Press Assn. here recently, Judge Sharp said the two differ on some minor issues.

Judge Sharp said she thought that testimony kept from jurors should not be published and that she is opposed to publishing claimed confessions before they have been entered in court as evidence.

Newspapers shouldn't stress amounts claimed in damage suits before they come to trial, Judge Sharp said, since the information possibly might influence a jury.

'Conservative Progressiveness'

UP Boss Leonard Outlines Platform

By CHARLES JOHNSON

The whole basis of the University Party is "conservative progressives," stated Reuben Leonard, party chairman, at the University Party meeting Tuesday night.

He said, "The University Party stands for conservative progressivenes. By this, we mean that we do not jump immediately to conclusions, but instead we discuss the problems of the students enough to find out just what is best for the students and what the students want. Our party floor is always open to suggestions and constructive criticism from the students.

"We stand as a body for a finer and a more complete Carolina. We do not profess to be politicians. We are merely a group of students authorized to represen all of the students. Our representatives are either elected by the campus organizations that they represent, or by their own initiative submit a petition signed by twenty-five students. This is in direct contrast with the SP's policy of one member representing that one member.

"We do not believe in merel jotting down on a piece of paper a few choice projects that wil appeal to the students and later be dropped after the election are over. We believe in executing our promises. We stand on the policy that every student is a plank in our platform."

Bev. Webb gave a student Legislature report. He discussed the party's bill, which was introduced at the last meeting of the legislature, which would abolish Physical Education for veterans if they pass the fundamentals tests; and which would require them to take only one year of Physical Education if they did not pass the test.

Bill Sabiston, campaign co-ordinator for the party, gave a report on the tentative progress in the campaign for the elections. he also expressed his thanks for the help received from the members of the party.

Charles Yarborough, senior class president, discussed the prospects of the elections and expressed his confidence of a University Party victory. He also complimented Bill Sabiston for his work in the campaign.

It was announced that there will be no meeting next Tuesday due to the elections.

In Public, Private Colleges

Gray For Support

GUILFORD COLLEGE, Nov. 10.—(AP)—In what was regarded as a major policy statement, President Gordon Gray of the University of North Carolina, today declared that both public and private institutions of higher learning must seek greater corporate support if they are to keep abreast of their responsibilities in the future.

Speaking at the annual Founder's Convocation of Guilford College, which is rapidly becoming one of the state's most distinguished academic occasions, President Gray also affirmed his belief in the need for privately-supported colleges as an integral part of the educational system.

The University of North Carolina, Gray said, as the largest institution of higher learning in the state must take the responsibility and duty of serving senior partner to the smaller colleges in the job of education.

President Gray said that he was convinced that for every philanthropic dollar "induced" into education at the Greater University, "there will be several dollars going into education generally." The University, he declared, is interested in education generally and not alone on its three campuses, and its general policy is to encourage support to all institutions of higher learning.

Following the initial convocation, Dr. Clyde Milner, president of Guilford College, and Mrs. Milner entertained President Gray and other guests at a luncheon at Starmount Forest Country Club.

Following the luncheon, Gray spoke briefly and informally of the need for all colleges to establish coherent development programs, preferably staffed by volunteers versed in both the various needs of each institution and business practices. The University of North Carolina, he said, had such a program and was presently learning its great value.

The second convocation session at 8 p. m. today centered around an address by Dr. Courtnes C. Smith, president of Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa., another Quaker college.

Morton B. Kurtz, executive secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches, will speak during tomorrow's assembly, and the fifth annual Ward Lecture will be delivered tomorrow evening by Dr. Roland Bainton, professor of Church History at Yale University and an internationally known theological scholar.

Piano Quartet Coming

EIGHTY NIMBLE FINGERS
. . . play here Nov. 18

Piano Quartet Will Play Here November 18

The First Piano Quartet will be presented by the Student Entertainment Committee as their second concert of the year, free to students, next Thursday, Nov. 18, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

Though the concert is a student sponsored attraction to which students may attend free upon presentation of their ID cards, faculty and townspeople may attend after 7:40 p.m., if seats are available, for $1. Student wives and husbands may attend the program with their spouses at any time at a cost of $1.

The First Piano Quartet, for many years heard weekly over the National Broadcasting Company's facilities, is the first musical unit of its kind in the world. The four artists who compose the group are Adam Garner, Glauco D'Attili, Frank Mittler and Edward Edson.

The field of four-piano music, as well as four-piano arrangements, had been virtually unexplored until the appearance of the First Piano Quartet in 1940 under the guidance of their originator, manager and producer, Edwin Fadiman.

Little music has ever been created for four pianos. One exception was an obscure work by Bach—the Vivaldi Concerto. This piece was originally written for four violins and then arranged by Bach for four pianos.

Also, there is a Stravinsky for four pianos in "Les Noces." Consequently these four artists were forced to call on their own arranging talents for an adequate repertoire.

At present, the Quartet's repertoire consists of every phase of music, from primitive Italian and French composers to the modernists. Not only are Scarlatti and Couperin represented, but also Schubert, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Chopin, Strauss, Debussy, Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Gershwin and Cole Porter.

Interesting is the fact that sometimes the Quartet plays in unison, sometimes with two carrying the melody and two the obligato. Again, the pianists will play three to one and at still other times each plays his own separate part.

The First Piano Quartet is the first group of four pianists to perform simultaneously at four instruments. As far as they know, there never has been another such group before theirs.

Two UP, 8 SP Bills Up For Vote Tonight

Ten bills came before the Ways and Means Committee of the student Legislature late yesterday. If not held in the committee, these bills will come before Legislature tonight.

Two of the bills were introduced by the University Party last week; eight are from the Student Party deluge of bills two weeks ago.

Bev Webb's (UP) bill setting up a group to work through the administration to eliminate physical education for veterans and a resolution commending the interdormitory council and setting up a commission to work with the IDC in solving the lack of social facilities on the campus, introduced by Joel Fleishman (SP), will come up.

A resolution, introduced by David Reid (SP), setting up a Judicial Problems Study Commission—to study all aspects of the organization, administration, and effectiveness of the Honor System and recommend any changes which it deems necessary to the Legislature—and a resolution, introduced by Watt Huntley (UP), establishing a committee to insure the proper handling of resolutions pertaining to the University administration, will come before the legislators. This bill is introduced for the purpose of making sure the administration takes proper notice of student resolutions.

Other bills are: A bill concerning the Student Welfare Board and negotiation with the administration, introduced by Charlie Dean (SP); a bill establishing a Legislature Complaint Board, introduced by Jim Turner (SP); a resolution establishing a commission to study University housing problems, introduced by Amy Cooke (SP); a bill to set up a commission to acquaint newly elected student officials with their duties, introduced by Tom Lambeth (SP) SP member Chuck May's bill which would place a legislator in charge of Victory Village problems which the Legislature could solve, and a bill changing the set-up of the Executive Committee, introduced by Jim Armstrong (SP).

The Legislature will meet at 7:30 in New East.

WC's Television Personality Will Take Part In Soph Dance

Plans were completed yesterday afternoon for the first annual Sophomore Class dance, co-sponsored by the CMAB Dance Committee and the sophomore class, which will be held Saturday at 9 p.m.

Music will be furnished by the Duke Ambassadors. Composed of 14 musicians and one vocalist, the band is known for its versatile and unusual arrangements. Such prominent musicians as Les Brown, Johnny Long and Sonny Burke are included in its alumni.

During intermission, Jen Mickey, a sophomore from Women's College, will play the piano and sing. Miss Mickey has a radio and television show in New York City during the summer.

Bill Fetzer, a senior here, will be on hand with his ventriloquist's act. He has appeared several times at other functions on campus.

The girls from WC will arrive at the gym at about 8:30 Saturday night. Sophomore girls from UNC will act as hostesses during the evening.

In addition to the girls from WC, the dance-planning committee has decided to extend an invitation to all coeds here. They will be admitted without tickets.

Tickets will be available for male students—other than sophomores—who have dates, at the "Y" on Thursday and Friday afternoons. Any sophomore who did not receive a ticket may get one at the "Y" or from any of the class officers.

Judges Announced For Annual Beat Dook Parade Nov. 23rd

Judges of the queen contest for the annual "Beat Dook" float parade have been announced. They are Katherine Carmichael,, Dean of Women, Edwin S. Lanier, mayor of Chapel Hill, and E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theater.

Judging of the candidates for queen will be held at the Pi Kappa Alpha House on Thursday, Nov. 18, following a dinner in honor of the candidates and their escorts. The PiKas are sponsors of the annual parade.

Entries are coming in rapidly for the parade, and it looks like there will be more dorms participating than have been in the past, acording to the parade chairman.

The parade is scheduled for the afternoon of November 23. The procession will form at 2 o'clock at Wollen Gym and get under way at three for the down town section of Chapel Hill.

Deadline for entries will be at midnight on Nov. 16. They should be turned in to Claude Popt, float parade chairman, at the PiKa House. Pope announced that all campus organizations must enter a candidate for queen to be eligible to enter a float.

The float entries must be one moving float from each organization. No limitation has been set on cost. The entries will be judged on beauty, originality, and effectiveness of the "Beat Dook theme.

The name of the queen will be announced on the day of the parade. She will ride on the special queen's float in the parade. The winning float will be announced at the "Beat Dock" pep rally.

Praise Still Pouring In For University's Dr. H. W. Odum

Praise for the late Dr. Howard W. Odum, noted UNC sociologist and author who died here late Monday night, continued to pour in from the University, state and nation yesterday.

Dr. Odum died in N. C. Memorial Hospital, where he had been a patient for several weeks. His funeral was held yesterday at 11 a. m., at the graveside in Chapel Hill Cemetery, with the Revs. Henry G. Ruark and Charles Hubbard officiating.

Governor 'Distressed'

Governor Luther H. Hodges said: "I am deeply distressed. Dr. Odum was one of the South's foremost scholars and men. It was my privilege to be a close personal friend of his for many years. The South, and ...orth Carolina in particular, will miss him greatly. His death is a great personal loss to me."

Chancellor Robert B. House said: "Dr. Odum was distinguished in every respect of a University professorship—in teaching, research and direct service.

"He was a creative artist, but I think he was greatest as a seer and as a leader. He was a constructive force in the building of this University, State and region. He founded a new era in the greatness of his profession and his University. Through it all he kept his spirit humble, lovable and neighborly."

President Gordon Gray said that "Dr. Odum meant much to institution, state, region and nation. We shall all revere his memory. I personally shall miss his wise counsel, always perceptive and dispassionate."

University Provost J. Harris Purks said, "One of the greatest educators of our times has moved into an honored place in history."

Dr. Louis R. Wilson, professor of library science administration and former University librarian, said: "Few members of the faculty have rendered so significant service as he as a scholar and leader in the social development of the state, the South and the nation.

"Dr. Odum came to the University in 1920 to join President H. W. Chase and other members of the faculty at the moment the forces released by World War I were sweeping over state capitals and state universities. It was at the time when the Graduate School was being reorganized under Dr. Edwin Greenlaw to enter upon its period of splendid achievement. The School of Commerce was beginning its great career. The Department of Music and the Carolina Playmakers were beginning their contribution to the artistic life of North Carolina.

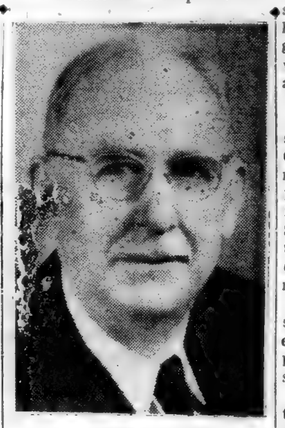
"Dr. Odum headed the Department of Sociology and the School of Social Work, organized the Institute of Research for Social Science, and became one of the incorporators of the University Press. In all of these activities the University profited tremendously from his fine enthusiasm and unbounded energy."

'. . . Gave Dignity'

Dr. Robert M. Lester, secretary of the Carnegie Corporation of New York, said: "Dr. Odum was one of those rare beings whose character, words, and works go to make up the tradition of human excellence. The University community, the South and the scholarly world have been made better by him. His death removes from the educational world a man who by his personality, scholarship and public spirit gave dignity to the profession of teaching."

Dr. Frank Mourns 2 Deaths

In the passing of Governor William B. Umstead and Dr. Howard W. Odum "our Universty, State and country has suffered losses of regional and national magnitude," Dr. Frank P. Graham said in a statement here yesterday.



Dr. Graham, who is special mediator for the United Nations, former president of the University, and former U. S. Senator, flew from New York to attend the two funerals.

"From his student days William Umstead had the will for dedicated public service," Dr. Graham said. "As Congressman and member of the Naval Affairs Committee he was one of the builders of the modern American Navy. As political manager and leader he had a decisive part in carrying forward the development of the North Carolina Good Health, Hospital and Medical Center Program.

"He led our people in calm consideration of the Supreme Court's decision regarding the integration of the public schools. He served bravely in war and died valiantly in the unstinting service of the people he loved."

Dr. Graham said that Howard Odum became at Chapel Hill "one of the foremost American sociologists and the founder not only of a great department and a pioneering institute of social research but also the father of studies in regionalism which have given a new direction and impetus to geographic-economic - social - political-cultural studies in the South and the nation.

"The vigor and variety of Odums' researches in regional and racial problems, his zest for living and his enthusiasm for learning have lighted fires which will burn at Chapel Hill and in American universities for generations to come."

Telegram Going To Indiana

Tomorrow the University Club will send a night-letter telegram to the Carolina football team in South Bend. The telegram is to consist of a 50-word body, followed by the signatures of all the students who contribute to the wire.

Collections for the wire will be taken in Y-court and at various places around the campus, and all students interested in having their name on the telegram can do so by donating a dime. The Western Union office here will have an open wire to South Bend Friday night for sending the wire.

A University Club representative said. "We want this to be the longest wire ever sent to the team, and we are hoping that the whole student body will come through to make this the best yet."

"The longest wire ever sent the team," the U. C. representative added, "was the one sent to New York in 1950 when we played Notre Dame there. and that one was 90 feet long. I'm hoping that this wire will beat that one."

D.A. Grad Is Rising On Stage

Nancy Rose Green, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. Sylvester Green of Chapel Hill, who starred with the Carolina Playmakers while at UNC and who has played a number of roles with the Barter Theater of Virginia, is currently reaching new heights in the field of dramatics.

As professor of dramatics and speech at Belmont College she will direct the fall production of "Bell, Book and Candle." Also, she will play the female lead in Clifford Odet's "The Country Girl," which will open in the Circle Theatre in Nashville on Nov. 22.

In addition to acting, Miss Green has established herself as a dancer with 10 years of formal study in ballet, tap, toe and modern dancing. She has appeared as a singer in four shows. She has also had wide experience in costuming, scenery construction, make-up, stage and sound engineer work and publicity.

A native Tar Heel, Miss Green played her first important role while still at Durham High School. She was Mrs. Sandow in "One Foot in Heaven."

After a year at Westhampton College in Richmond, Va., she transferred to UNC and immediately began her major study in dramatics and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree in dramatics in 1953.

Miss Green's summers have not been spent idly. In 1951 she had her first experience in outdoor drama in "Unto These Hills." In the summer of 1952 she was with the Little Theater of the Rockies in Greely, Colo., and this past summer she was given excellent press notices for her latest role in "Horn in the West."

UNC-Duke Meet

Student leaders of both Duke and Carolina will meet tonight at Duke University to discuss plans to prevent vandalism on the campuses of the two schools.

Holsten announced plans for the meeting in a letter addressed to several student leaders, including Tom Creasy, Herb Browne, Manning Muntzing, Jim Fountain, Henry Isaacson, Charles Kuralt and Bob Litaker.

The meeting will be held at 6 tonight and the group will leave South Building at 5:15.

Baptists Vote To Endorse Court Decision

SALISBURY, Nov. 10—(AP)—The 25th annual convention of the North Carolina Baptist Student Union Saturday endorsed the U. S. Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Between 400 and 500 delegates attended the convention at the First Baptist Church here. About 12 people remained seated when the standing vote on the issue was taken.

The group resolved to "exercise the utmost Christianity in Christian love and understanding in accomplishing this principle of brotherhood as a reality within ourselves and our society."

The resolution also urged the Baptist State Convention to implement the principle in all North Carolina Baptist institutions with "all haste commensurate with sound Christian love."

Date Set For Draft Exams

Major General Lewis B. Hershey, National Director of Selective Service, announced October 26 that the fifth series of Selective Service College Qualification Tests will be given on Thursday, Dec. 9, 1954, and Thursday, April 21, 1955, at approximatelq 1,000 examination centers. Chapel Hill will be one of these centers, Col. F. C. Shepard, UNC veteran's advisor, said yesterday.

To be eligible to apply for the Selective Service tests a student must: (1) intend to request deferment as a student; (2) be satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of instruction, and (3) must not previously have taken the qualification test.

The Undebated Case Against McCarthy

In opening debate on the McCarthy censure resolution yesterday, Senator Arthur V. Watkins accused Joseph McCarthy of failing to uphold his oath of office.

Senator Watkins, as chairman of the committee that has recommended reprimand for McCarthy ought to know. He and his committee members reviewed more than 40 instances of misconduct by McCarthy. They picked two—contempt of a Senate subcommittee and abuse of an Army general—to bring before the Senate. Those are the charges on which McCarthy will be censured or cleared.

But the Watkins committee made it clear that one reason for not presenting other charges was the time factor, and, while not recommending censure on the other charges, the committee did not want to be understood as approving the action involved.

And no wonder. The list of charges not even included in the public hearings is a remarkable record of demagoguery. In the next weeks, you will hear much of the charges being debated. Look now at some of the charges of which this man already stands convicted in the eyes of his fair-minded countrymen:

1. While a member of a committee having jurisdiction over a government-financed corporation, McCarthy received $10,000 as a gift.

2. Without proof or other justification, he has made an unwarranted attack on Gen. George C. Marshall.

3. He has permitted and ratified over a period of several months the abuse of senatorial privilege of his chief counsel, Roy Cohn.

4. McCarthy has conducted his committee in such a slovenly way that cases of mistaken identity (Annie Lee Moss, Lawrence Parish) have made the Senate look ridiculous.

5. He has attempted economic coercion against the press and radio.

6. He has used distortion and innuendo to attack the reputations of such citizens as Former President Truman, Attorney General Brownell, John J. McCloy and Phillip Jessup.

7. He has intruded upon the prerogative of the executive branch.

8. He has questioned adverse witnesses in public session in such a manner as to defame loyal and valuable public servants, whom he has rarely provided an opportunity to answer his charges.

9. He has infringed upon the jurisdiction of other Senate committees.

10. He has held executive sessions in an apparent attempt to prevent the press from getting an accurate account of the testimony of witnesses, and then released his own versions of that testimony, often at variance with subsequently revealed transcripts.

11. He has denied members of Congress access to the files of the committee, an illegal act.

12. He has permitted changing of committee reports and records in such a way as to substantially change or delete vital meanings.

That, in case you've been away these last few years, adds up to McCarthyism.

Hearts & Flowers

Every year, student leaders from Carolina and Duke break bread together as a sign of their high friendship and warmth, and then go out and holler for their respective football teams to commit a gory massacre. Still, the supper is a nice idea and is exceptionally well scheduled this year. Although Roy Holsten swears it's a coincidence, there must be some significance in the fact that the peace-pipe smoking session will occur today—November 11—which is Armistice Day, even among sworn enemies.

'Last Chance' For Coed Gets Real Sympathy

Louis Kraar

THE GIRL walked into Danziger's with her boy friend and a huge package wrapped in tinfoil.

The usual Sunday night crowd filled most of the tables, but the girl and her escort found one empty in the back.

"We'll just have some coffee," the girl told a waitress. And then she began to unwrap her tinfoil package. Mr. Danziger eyed the package and the couple. The girl finally called Mr. D. over to the table.

"I hope you won't mind my bringing this in here, but I just had to show him. It might be my last chance," she said smiling.

"For such a noble thing, I cannot be mad," said Mr. D. as he saw what was in the tinfoil package—a lemon pie.

A FORMER TEXAS coed who quit school to fight bulls (real ones) has written a book about her work in Mexican bull rings that many an aficionado will enjoy.

Patricia McCormick, the lady bullfighter, tells in her book, called "The Lady Bullfighter," about her college days at Western Texas College in El Paso. She says she picked the school because it was across the river from Juarez, a bullfighting center.

Toreadora Pat used to cut classes to fight bulls in the Juarez plaza. Her dormitory housemother covered up for her, (an interesting innovation.))

At twenty-four, Pat is a gal totally dedicated to her profession. She swears she hasn't had a date in four years. Her parents, who are in th oil business, at first objected to her fighting bulls, but Pat talked them into it.

Miss McCormick found the bull throwing her a couple months ago, and she was gored. But fortunately for true aficionados, Pat recovered quickly and is already training for her next tangle with a bull.

After her fling in the ring is over, Miss McCormick says she wants to retire, marry, and raise a family—which should prove as interesting as bullfighting for such an energetic young lady.

EVEN CHAPEL HILL has its ad men, as the inside of a matchbook cover proved the other day. Describing the Hill as "the heartbeat of the old North state," the ad continued in glowing terms:

"More than a place, Chapel Hill is a spirit—a spirit of liberality having its core in the University; its roots in town. Born of toil and strife, it has a pride and mellowness, as Thomas Wolfe once said, beats every other town all hollow.' It is a product of the new South, an eager, vibrant far-sighted South."

All this and the New Old Well too. Thanks to some public relations man, it sounds like the town is trying to talk itself into something.

Sure, the Hill is grand. But why have advertising men tell us. We know it.

WOMANS COLLEGE'S student paper asked voters to cast their ballots for Republicans to promote the two-party system in the South.

"At this stage, a convinced Democrat need not feel uneasy about casting a Republican ballot," the paper declared.

Have the girls forgotten about the Eisenhower presidential race in '52 when that's exactly what "convinced" Democrats did? Many of those voters are sorry today, I might add.

The Attack On The Intellectual

Why Are We Mad At Teacher?

Henry Steele Commager
In The Reporter

The historian of the future who chronicles this decade will be puzzled by the depth, strength and prevalence of our anti-intellectualism. This emotion finds expression in the general distrust of universities, particularly of those centuries-old universities that have been our pride.... and in the exaction of loyalty oaths from teachers; in the stereotype of the professor as long-haired and absent-minded.... in the widespread zeal for censorshop and for book banning if not book burning; in the vague aura of guilt that surrounds association with academic, intellectual, literary and reform societies; and—most alarming of all—in the widespread suspicion that intellectuals are peculiarly susceptible to subversion.

This is a puzzling situation in a society which has long made a religion of education, which boasts the highest college and university population in the world, and which has depended and continues to depend on intellectual leadership for its social progress, its political soundness and its very security.

There is, to be sure, nothing new about the notion that the intellectual is a disturber of the peace, or about the resentment that such disturbance excites. Socrates paid with his life for "corrupting" the minds of the young by forcing them to challenge accepted ideas and to consider new ones, and from his day to the present philosophers and scientists who have disturbed the peace have been exposed to misunderstanding or contumely—or worse — for their willfulness. When we consider the present wave of anti-intellectualism, then it is well to keep a sense of perspective and of proportion. The intellectual today may be the victim of fear or derision, but he is not the victim of the rack and the fagot. He may not enjoy the prestige he commanded when he was an orthodox member of a church which had a monopoly on all matters of mind and spirit or of an aristocratic class which enjoyed special privileges, but such prestige as he does enjoy he has earned on his own merits.

An American Phenomenon

Yet realization that anti-intellectualism is very old, or that the position of the intellectual in the past was artifically bolstered, is of little relevance. After all, our interest in this matter is not inspired by sympathy for the intellectual, but by concern for society. It is essential to abate anti-intellectualism because it is hard on all of us....

Irrationalism is one thing, emotional anti-intellectualism another. As exemplified in the antics of a McCarthy, a Jenner, a Tenney or a Broyles, it is peculiarly an American phenomenon. Nowhere in the West has it made such progress as in our own country....

The fact is that the intellectual class enjoys no privileged place in American society chiefly because it has no place at all. It is proper to speak of an intellectual class in Holland or France or Sweden, but not in the United States. Just as we have, strictly speaking, no clerical class, no military class, no official class. So we have no intellectual class. The intellectuals are not only part of society at large, they are merged in and lost in the society. They have no special status and can claim special distinction.

This is particularly true of professors, perhaps the chief objects of hostility from the anti-intellectuals. Many an American professor looks longingly at the exalted position enjoyed by his colleagues in Sweden, for example, where the title "Professor" is so honorable that it is conferred on illustrious scholars by Act of Parliament. But the term "Professor" is an honored one in Sweden and something less than that in America because the Swedes have not debased the coinage and the Americans have. The six professors of history in Sweden—that is the total number—are in fact men of great distinction; it would be an exaggeration to claim such uniform eycellence for the five or six thousands American professors of history. Second, and more important, American professors partake, for better or for worse, of the character of the institutions they serve, and these institutions have never been things apart (as in many Old World countries) but a part of and a function of society. We expect our colleges and universities to serve us, to reflect us, to conform to us; we require them to do a hundred things only indirectly related to the search for knowledge; we cherish them for achievements other than intellectual.

"The University in America," Walter Metzger has recently written, "is not a community of scholars, but an enormous agglomerate service station, where one can be born, go to kindergarten, lower school and high school, meet the girl-friend, and get married, where one can get religious solace or psychiatric help; where one learns to turn out a newspaper, to do bookkeeping, to cook. No wonder the universities have been hiring generals to run this domain...."

The Professor In Our History

Here, then, is a fundamental factor in anti-intellectualism: the leveling force of legal democracy, its hostility to distinction, and its pressure for conformity. A second is less fundamental but more ominous. It is that intellectuals have been given a large part of the responsibility—blame may be an apter word—for leading the nation along the hard paths of reform and internationalism. In a sense the intellectuals have been the conscience of American society. Again and again in the last sixty or seventy years, they have been in the forefront of reform movements, pointing out the mal-practices of the trusts or the railroads, pleading the cause of the farmer and of labor, championing the underdog, calling—and this was perhaps their worst fault—for governmental intervention and for the welfare state. They played a prominent part in the Populist revolt, and a number of them lost their jobs as a result—President E. Benjamin Andrews of Brown, Thorsten Veblen and Edward Alsworth Ross at Stanford, and others. They were active again in the period of the New Freedom, whose tone was set by Professor Woodrow Wilson.

They were guilty not only of forcing democratic reforms on a reluctant business community but of championing intervention and internationalism. Professor Wilson was himself a leading internationalist. The intellectuals and the professors became identified in the public mind with international do-goodism.

But it was during the third great era of reform under Franklin D. Roosevelt, that the intellectuals really got themselves in bad odor. Roosevelt himself was no intellectual in the commonly used sense of the term, but it is notorious that when he raised the banner of the New Deal it was the professors who rallied around most enthusiastically. In the early years of the New Deal, indeed, Washington looked like a perpetual meeting of the A.A.U.P. This was the heyday of the "brain trust," popularly supposed to be responsible for every dangerous experiment in government and politics, for crackbrained projects like the Federal Arts or the Federal Writers, for skyrocketing taxes, for curious new fiscal notions, for the burgeoning welfare state, for the socialistic notion that the state was responsible for jobs, health, and a dozen other things that had been assigned to private enterprise or to fortuity.

This is one of the stereotypes that emerged, then, from the New Deal: the intellectual as reformer, experimenter, and dreamer. To this the war and the postwar years were to add another and more dangerous stereotype—the intellectual as subversive. Much of this suspicion of the intellectual, and of this resentment against the causes he espoused and the standards he maintained, came to a head with the trials of Alger Hiss. Since those memorable trials all intellectuals have been fair game. They are guilt until proved innocent, though just what they are guilty of is never quite clear.

THE PROFESSOR

. . . he is the chief object of hostility

A Heavy Price

Thus the intellectuals, who had ben so largely responsible for prodding the American people into adapting their government and their economy to the necessities of a new day, and for making clear the inescapable necessity of assuming international responsibilities and obligations, paid a heavy price for their triumph. They made clear the course that the United States had to follow, and they contributed greatly to the education of public opinion and the provision of administrative leadership. But in the process they earned for themselves a good deal of resentment and dislike.

The intellectuals and academicians are themselves responsible for some of this anti-intellectualism. After all, we have had something like universal public education for a long time, and no other society can boast as many college graduates as our own. If the most educated generation of one of the most educated nations plunges into anti-intellectualism, something must be seriously wrong with either the principle or the practice of education. Since it is almost inconceivable to confess anything wrong with the principle, the responsibility comes back to the practice—that is, to the schools and the colleges, to the intellectuals themselves. They have failed to make clear the role of the intellectual in American life, to instill an appreciation of the necessity for intellectual independence. They have failed to enlist the great mass of their countrymen in the common cultural and intellectual enterprise necessary for the Republic's progress and security.

Only last month, speaking in Los Angeles, the President, as quoted in the New York Herald Tribune, defined the intellectual as "a man who takes more words than he needs to say more than he knows." The attack on the intellectual proceeds.

'Now, Don't Be Afraid To Speak Frankly'

The Day Of The Egghead Revolt

Ed Yoder

Folks never bothered to remember what happened in The Great Revolution.

Utopia for the Eggheads had been reached. No one cared what others said or thought. No one had to worry about demagogues. For society was open and there was nothing to be demagogic about. It was in violation of the unspoken and unwritten Utopian laws to be curious about what historians thought and wrote. After so many years, then, you could ask the historians. And they would scratch their heads and say:

"Revolution? You know, I just don't remember."

Of course, you can still read the great pre-revolutionary philosophers—Alan Barth, Henry Steele Commager, Elmer Davis, Gerald Johnson, Arthur Schlesinger. From their writings, you could piece together how it might have happened. Then, there were fragments of the great speeches that had been made on Revolution Eve.

This was the situation until the Senate Manuscript was discovered. The Senate Manuscript had been rotting in a pumpkin in a Wisconsin corn field. Some important passages had been obliterated by mildew; but, working carefully, a group of researchers managed to piece together this account:

The Revolutionary idea for Eggheads dated back thousands of years, actually. But more realistic historians have decided that ferment became most intense just after the failure of The Great Senate Censure. McCarthy, a minor demagogue, but one whose methods and reputation had made him the post-Revolutionary bete noir, had to go before his fellow Senators to answer censure charges.

By means of a filibuster he and several of his henchmen delayed the proceedings until Thanksgiving season came. On Thanksgiving Day, the Senators, in despair at not being able to pass the censure motion, adjourned and went home.

Unrest spread fast among the Eggheads. Before many days had passed, the Eggheads had fused into the critical mass for Revolution. They were late joined by The College Students, The Editorial Writers, and The Scientists—many of whom were already ex-officio Eggheads.)

The Senate Manuscript doesn't make clear just where the unrest was most fervid but scientific research has pinpointed Cambridge, Mass., as the most likely place. Further research has determined that Princeton, N. J., in the North, and Chapel Hill, N. C., in the South were also active breeding grounds for the revolution.

The manifesto of the Revolution is not quoted entirely in the Senate Manuscript (part of it burned in the Great Chicago Tribune Fire.) We do have a fragment of the manifesto. It was written by the Great Egghead, Nosnevets, who had received his revolutionary indoctrination at Princeton. Most famous quotation from the manifesto is intact. It said:

'Eggheads of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your yolks."

Tell Humanity The Truth

From The Christian Science Monitor

Every day that passes now brings increasing awareness to American officials that what the atomic scientists said nearly 10 years ago—that war is obsolete—is astonishingly true.

We are speaking here of large-scale warfare between nations possessing nuclear weapons. The fact was clear to some of the atomic scientists as soon as the first bomb was tested in July, 1945, in New Mexico. These men knew then what they were playing with, and that the test was a mere droplet to what would come. In 1945 men such as Messrs. Oppenheimer and Teller believed that an incredibly more destructive bomb, was probably attainable.

In the United States it is becoming recognized that in such a war there will be no victor.

So the true revolutionary force of nuclear weapons is again becoming recognized. This awareness remains dim up to now, but it is here and it is proclaimed, by President Eisenhower and by other leaders such as Mr. Attlee in Britain, in his famous dictum that the world has the choice of "co-existence or co-death." Many believe it is as literal as that. And one reason for this belated recognition is the re-discovery of the problem of radiation in connection with the H-bomb.

Experts in nuclear weapons, examining the results of the Eniwetok H-bomb test last March, when the Japanese fishermen were showered with radioactive dust 72 miles from the source of the blast, are attempting to re-awaken people to the gravity of radiation.

This comes specifically in articles in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists pointing out that the American people do not realize the implications of what happened to the fishermen of the Lucky Dragon, or the threat of enormous radiation that could result from hydrogen-bomb attacks upon the United States. They do not realize because, these articles imply, their government has not yet been sufficiently candid.

There are indications, however, that American officials, military, civil defense, and State Department, do recognize that the hydrogen bomb has so geometrically increased the danger to civilization—both in blast effect and even more in radiation—that they now see great wars have become obsolete. This recognition comes from the information obtained in the various types of weapons tests, which the Soviets also conduct periodically.

The information Americans obtain from such tests the Soviets likewise obtain. So it seems prudent to conclude that they, too, may come to regard great wars as obsolete.

This is an awakening which every atomic scientist as well as citizen will hail. Perhaps it is time for some of the scientists to speak out again, as they did in 1945-46. Dr. Albert Schweitzer has, in fact, urged them—in a letter to the London Daily Herald—to "tell humanity the truth" in speeches and articles. And we should not forget that he did not say tell Americans the truth, or Englishmen the truth, or Russians—he said "tell humanity."

Tar Heels Impressive In Preparation For Notre Dame Tilt

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

The parlay sheets are not giving Carolina much of a chance against Notre Dame. The big money boys rate the Irish 27 POINTS better than UNC.

They also said Wake Forest was two touchdowns better than the Tar Heels, and that South Carolina was at least one score better.

UNC has played Notre Dame five times, and is still looking for a victory. For the past two seasons the score has been 34-14. The closest the locals ever came to beating the South Bend Titans was 7-12 in 1951.

No matter what the experts say about Carolina's inferiority to the Irish, we haven't heard any Tar Heels concede defeat. Last year it was a foregone conclusion that Notre Dame would walk over the locals. Carolina seems to be in much better shape now than they were at this stage of last year's season. The locals are resurging. We are looking for a close one. We will take 27 points from anybody who wants to give it.

Carolina should be able to get a line on what to expect from Virginia Saturday, when the Cavaliers battle South Carolina in Columbia, S. C. The Gamecocks caught Army off-stride in the season's opener, winning 34-30. Virginia held the Cadets to 21-20 two weeks ago. Incidentally, Rex Enright, South Carolina's coach, was a star at Notre Dame years ago. He probably did a little scouting for his alma mater last week against the Tar Heels.

A thriller should be in the offing down in Baptist Hollow this Saturday. The Deacons play Duke. It will be Homecoming Day for the Preachers, and Wake Forest coach Tom Rogers, who as you may recall "played under Wallace Wade at Duke," would like nothing better than to defeat his alma mater. The bookies are giving the Deacs 13 points.

If Clemson can turn the trick against Maryland, and Carolina defeats Notre Dame, Virginia, and Duke, the Tar Heels may get a summons from the Orange Bowl. Clemson is Maryland's last Atlantic Coast Conference opponent, and the Terps have not lost in the league yet, although Wake Forest tied them. Whereas, Carolina has dropped one conference game, to Maryland, incidentally. Since the loss to the Terrapins was rather decisive, 33-0, the locals will have to look nothing short of great from now on if they harbor any hopes of seeing Miami this winter.

In addition to the Orange Bowl rumors circulating around the campus, there has been much talk of Carolina playing in the Oyster Bowl in Norfolk next year. Nothing official can be obtained on this matter, since both Athletic Director Chuck Erickson and Publicity Director Jake Wade have been out of town all week.

Freshman Gridders Seeking Win No. 3 Against Deaclets

Coach Ralph Floyd's University of North Carolina freshman footballers, beaten in their last outing, 12-7, by Maryland, will go for victory number three tomorrow night as they tangle with the Wake Forest frosh at Wilson, N. C. Game time is 8 o'clock.

The game between the two Atlantic Coast Conference freshman teams was originally scheduled for Oct. 15, but Hurricane Hazel forced postponement.

North Carolina, handicapped in its last outing by practice injuries, will again be short several key players for the Wake Forest clash.

David Reed, a spunky little quarterback from Scranton, Pa., who led the Tar Babies to victory over Virginia after regular Buddy Sasser had been injured, will be out for the second game in a row, as will halfback Steve Kupchick.

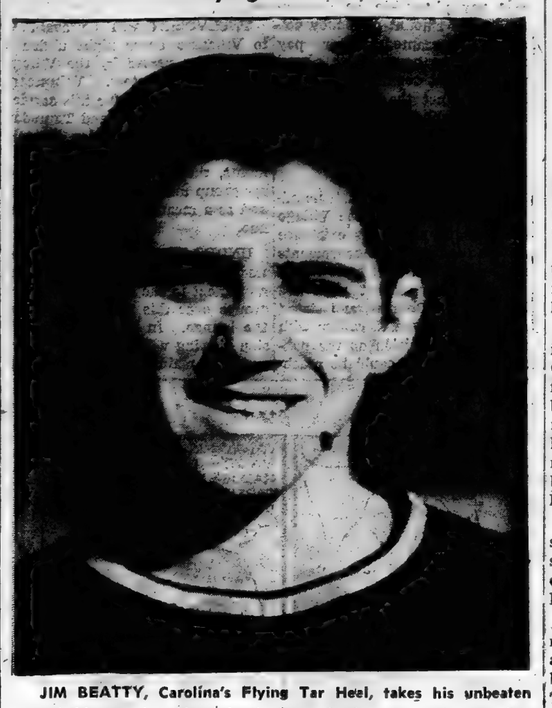
Kupchick, came up with leg trouble in the Virginia game and Reed a head injury in practice. Sasser, who played with a sore leg against the Baby Terps, should be able to go at full blast, trainers said.

In addition to the loss to Maryland and the win over Virginia, the Tar Babies beat South Carolina.

Femme Netters Down Woman's College, 3-2

The UNC women's tennis club defeated the Woman's College girls Tuesday to win their second straight encounter. The Carolina coeds won three out of five matches, with one being called on account of darkness.

Victorious coeds were Lou Jones, Betty Andrews, and Amy Morse. Marion Chalmers went down to defeat in a very close match, and Joan Palmer's match was called on account of darkness.



Mrs. Frances Hogan, coach of the club, was very pleased with the showing the girls made and declared that they played better against WC than they have all season.

Flying Tar Heel

JIM BEATTY, Carolina's Flying Tar Heel, takes his unbeaten record this year into the Atlantic Coast Conference track meet this week-end.

Beatty And Barden Carry Carolina Hopes In ACC Run

North Carolina's varsity cross country team, which captured the State title this week, will place most of its hopes on Jim Beatty and Bob Barden Monday when it competes in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament at College Park, Md.

Beatty, only a sophomore, has captured first place in every race he has run this season including the State finals last Monday to establish himself as the most outstanding cross country runner in the conference.

Barden, who also with Beatty forms the North Carolina "one-two" punch, has either finished second or third in every meet this season.

Coach Dale Ranson's charges, by virtue of their victory in the State competition, will be ranked as one of the top teams in Monday's ACC event.

NC Picks Squad Of Heavies For Shrine Affair

CHARLOTTE, Nov. 10 (AP)—North Carolina will field one of its heaviest lines and a speedy backfield in the 18th annual Shrine Bowl football game in Memorial Stadium here Dec. 4.

This was revealed today with the release of a 33-man squad picked from senior players among the state's high schools. The squad was selected last Sunday at a meeting here of the team's three-man coaching staff and three advisors. It was announced today by Shrine Bowl Athletic Director Stan Cropley. All players have accepted the invitations to play.

The South Carolina squad also has been picked but it will not be announced before next week, Cropley said.

The annual prep-school classic is played for the benefit of the Crippled Children's Hospital in Greenville, S. C.

Deacs Not Impressive In Duke Preparations

WAKE FOREST, Nov. 10 (AP)—Wake Forest got a long workout today as Coach Tom Rogers put the Deacons through an offensive and defensive scrimmage in preparation for the Duke game here Saturday. It was the third scrimmage of the week.

With Halfback Bill Barnes and Fullback Nick Maravic leading the attack, the Deacons had little trouble in moving the ball on offense against the freshmen.

On defense, the first and second teams tried to halt the reserves who were running Duke plays. Fullback Bob Caesar, imitating Bryant Aldridge, found several holes in the Deacon defense and ran for long gains.

Earlier the line worked on blocking and goal line stands while the backfield brushed up its passing and run plays.

Nurses Capture Mural Volleyball Tourney

The nurses have won the 1954 volleyball tournament. In the exciting finals, the spirited nurses downed runner-up Chi Omega and third place Smith Dormitory.

Miss Mary Frances Kellam, advisor for the tournament for the women's physical education department, declared that these intramurals have been among the best ever played. There were only two forfeits in the entire tournament—both of those coming from the same team.

Barclay Pleased With Team's Play Against Frosh Offense

Long, Bullock Impressive In Passing Game; Koman And Patterson Stand Out On Defense

By BOB DILLARD

Carolina's Tar Heels whooped it up yesterday afternoon on Navy Field, and in the process, ran roughshod over the freshman squad. The Tar Heels ground out five touchdowns, and with their vicious tackles, made the frosh offense look very much undermanned.

Prior to the rough scrimmage session, Barclay sent his charges through a session on pass defense, in preparation for Notre Dame's highly touted Ralph Guglielmi.

Albert Long, who was injured in last Saturday's clash with South Carolina returned to the practice field today, but participated only briefly in the scrimmage. He did not wear heavy equipment, and handled the team for a short period before turning the quarterbacking chores over to Len Bullock and Doug Farmer.

The Tar Heel's blocking was sharp throughout the practice session, opening holes for Don Klochak, Don Lear, and George Wallin to plow through for long gains.

The freshmen were unable to move the ball more than ten yards against the varsity defenders, led by Bill Koman and Ed Patterson. The line broke through to nail the frosh backs repeatedly, and the Tar Babies were unable to gain through the air lanes. Barclay termed the afternoon's work "a very good defensive showing."

Several of the varsity touchdowns came via the pass route, as Bullock and Long completed passes all over the field. Sonny Ridenhour broke loose for one score, and an ankle tackle prevented Keller from adding another. Klochak, Lear and McMullen were impressive in handling their blocking assignments.

Bullock and Farmer handled the ball well during the afternoon's encounter, faking the freshmen out of position on several occasions.

Fullback Marshall Newman and Halfback Ed Sutton are definitely out of action for the Notre Dame encounter. Sutton, who sustained an ankle injury in last week's practice, is still on crutches, while Newman, whose injury came in the Tennessee game has abandoned the walking aids, but is still limping.

State Preps For Richmond

RALEIGH, Nov. 10 (AP)—North Carolina State's Wolfpack held a spirited practice session today as work continued for Saturday's game here with Richmond.

Emphasis was placed on defensive drills. Coach Earle Edwards groomed his line and defensive backs in expectation of facing one of the best teams on State's schedule.

The reserves used Richmond's T-formation attack to familiarize the varsity with the Spiders' style of play. Defenses got a thorough checking over from backfield Coach Al Michaels as he guided the Richmond style offense against the first and second teams.

C. M. Price moved up to first string tackle today, replacing John Bagonis.

HOME, SWEET HOMECOMING

A great number of people have been asking me lately, "What is Homecoming?" Yesterday, for example, as I walked from my house to the establishment of Mr. Sigafoos, the local lepidopterist where I had left a half dozen luna moths to be mounted—a distance of no more than three blocks—I'll wager that well over a thousand people stopped me and said, "What is Homecoming?"

Well, what with company coming for dinner and the cook down with a recurrence of breakbone fever, I could not tarry to answer their questions. "Read my column next week," I cried to them. "I'll tell all about Homecoming." With that I brushed past and raced home to baste the mallard and apply poultices to the cook, who, despite my unending ministrations, expired quietly during the night, a woman in her prime, scarcely 108 years old. Though her passing grieved me, it was some satisfaction to be able to grant her last wish—to be buried at sea—which is no small task when you live in Pierre, South Dakota.

With the dinner guests fed and the cook laid to her watery rest, I put out the cat and turned to the problem of Homecoming.

First of all, let us define Homecoming. Homecoming is a weekend when old graduates return to their alma maters to see a football game, ingest great quantities of food and drink, and inspect each other's bald spots.

This occasion is marked by the singing of old songs, the slapping of old backs, and the frequent utterance of such outcries as "Harry, you old polecat!" or "Harry, you old rooster!" or "Harry, you old wombat!" or "Harry, you old mandrill!" All old grads are named Harry.

During Homecoming the members of the faculty behave with unaccustomed animation. They laugh and smile and pound backs and keep shouting, "Harry, you old retriever!" These unscholarly actions are performed in the hope that the old grads, in a transport of bonhomie, will endow a new geology building.

The old grads, however, are seldom seduced. By game time on Saturday, their backs are so sore, their eyes so bleary, and their livers so sluggish that it is impossible to get a kind word out of them, much less a new geology building. "Hmphh!" they snort as the home team completes a 101 yard march to a touchdown. "Call that football? Why, back in my day they'd have been over on the first down. By George, football was football back in those days—not this namby pamby girls game that passes for football today. Why, look at that bench. Fifty substitutes sitting there! Why, in my day, there were eleven men on a team and that was it. When you broke a leg, you got taped up and went right back in. Why, I remember the big game against State. Harry Wallaby, our star quarterback, was killed in the third quarter. I mean he was pronounced dead. But did that stop old Harry? Not on your tintype! Back in he went and kicked the winning drop-kick in the last four seconds of play, dead as he was. Back in my day, they played football, by George!"

Everything, say the old grads, was better back in their day—everything except one. Even the most unreconstructed of the old grads has to admit that back in his day they never had a smoke like today's vintage Philip Morris—never anything so mild and pleasing, day in day out, at study or at play, in sunshine or in shower, on grassy bank or musty taproom, afoot or ahorse, at home or abroad, any time, any weather, anywhere.

I take up next another important aspect of Homecoming—the decorations in front of the fraternity house. Well do I remember one Homecoming of my undergraduate days. The game was against Princeton. The Homecoming slogan was "Hold That Tiger!" Each fraternity house built a decoration to reflect that slogan, and on the morning of the game a group of dignitaries toured Fraternity Row to inspect the decorations and award a prize for the best.

The decoration chairman at our house was an enterprising young man named Rex Sigafoos, nephew of the famous lepidopterist. Rex surveyed Fraternity Row, came back to our house and said, "All the other houses are building cardboard cages with cardboard tigers inside of them. We need to do something different—and I've got it. We're going to have a real cage with a real tiger inside of it—a snarling, clawing, slashing, real live tiger!"

"Crikey!" we breathed. "But where will you get him?"

"I'll borrow him from the zoo," said Rex, and sure enough, he did.

Well sir, you can imagine what a sensation it was on Homecoming morning. The judges drove along nodding politely at cardboard tigers in cardboard cages and suddenly they came to our house. No sham beast in a sham cage here! No sir! A real tiger in a real cage—a great striped jungle killer who slashed and roared and snarled and dashed himself against the bars of his cage with maniacal fury.

There can be no doubt that we would have easily taken first prize had not the tiger knocked out the bars of the cage and leaped into the official car and devoured Mr. August Schlemmer, the governor of the state, Mr. Wilson Ardsley Devereaux, president of the university, Dr. O. P. Gransmire, author of A Treasury of the World's Great Southpaws: An Anthology of Left Hand Literature, Mr. Harrison J. Teed, commissioner of weights and measures, Mrs. Amy Dorr Nesbitt, inventor of the clarinet, Mr. Jarrett Thrum, world's 135 pound lacrosse champion, Mr. Peter Bennett Hough, editor of the literary quarterly Spasm, and Mrs. Ora Wells Anthony, first woman to tunnel under the North Platte River. ©Max Shulman, 1954

News From Victory Village:

Free Village Telephones Are Discussed

By DAN WALLACE

AL TAYLOR, senior in geology, living at 217 Jackson Circle, will represent Victory Village as candidate for the Student Legislature in the Nov. 16 elections.

NOMINATED by the Student Party last Monday night, Taylor will advocate further benefits and improvements for the Village such as were received a year ago under Student Party auspices with the furnishings and improvements in the recreation center.

TONIGHT at 7:15 bridge instruction will begin at the recreation center with 23 players. There is a charge of 50 cents per lesson. John Beshara, former bridge instructor at Graham Memorial, will be the instructor.

CRITICISM of the public 'phone situation was brought up at the last meeting of the Village board of directors.

THREE POINTS were considered—(1) the single phone posed an inconvenience of distance for many, (2) it was a pay phone, (3) students in the dorms had free public phones. On this basis, a motion was passed by the board to request three free public phones from the University. A committee of two was selected to see the proper officials.

AT THE TIME of this writing, J. S. Bennett, director of operations, had been approached and he said that the cost for the dormitory phones were taken out of the dorm rents, and that the reason the Village had free public phones in the past dated back to the formation of the Village when private phones were unobtainable. He suggested that if the use of the single pay phone—to be determined by the amount of money collected — warranted, other pay phones could be installed. Bennett would not commit himself on whether or not the Village could have free public phones. He suggested that the request be taken to Assistant Comptroller and Business Manager C. E. Teague.

TEAGUE, who was instrumental in the formation of the Village and who is proud of its existence and the continual improvements being made, said that he was not in such direct contact with the Village as was Bennett, and stated that he would have to confer with him before a decision on the public phone situation could be reached.

TELEVISION will be available to Villagers every night under a new ruling passed by the Village board of directors. Volunteers will be responsible for this service on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights when the regular caretakers are off duty. On these three nights, the rec center is available for group meetings — as a service and as a means of additional revenue.

UNDER THE new ruling, groups under 75 must use the meeting room next to the main lounge, and groups over this number may use the lounge. In any event, television viewing will be available either in the main lounge or the meeting room every night.

TELEVISION volunteers to date are Barbara Wilson for Monday nights and Nancy Ragland for Thursday nights.

After Hazel Twisted The Antennas:

IDC Plans To Request TV Help Directly From Gray

By NEIL BASS

A motion was introduced and passed by the Interdormitory Council Wednesday night to appeal directly to President Gordon Gray for financial help in the matter of repairing TV antennas damaged by Hurricane Hazel. The motion, according to IDC officials, as the result of a statement by J. S. Bennett, director of operations, that he and other South Building officials would not approve the appropriation of any funds for this cause. The motion elaborated that Bennett had offically stated that the tangled antennas were the responsibility of the individual dorms and it was their duty to pay for any necessary repair.

The appeal will be made in the form of a letter to the University president by Manning Muntzing, IDC president. It will offically protest that dorms here are allowed only limited funds and that such repair would practically exhaust their appropriation.

'Phones

The council also reaffirmed its stand favoring the painting of dorms every sixth year instead of of the customary five-year span, in order to provide a fund which will be used in install telephones on each dorm floor.

Lewis Brumfield, housing committee chairman, presented a plan to establish a summer school IDC.

Graham Rights, student elections chairman concluded the meeting with a report that "dorm presidents would be responsible for supervising the conduct of polls in Tuesday's elections." There will be a polling place in every dorm, Rights said.

Student Directories

Student directories are scheduled to arrive here tomorrow and will go on sale at 11 a.m. in the YMCA office.

UNC Debaters Argue In S.C. At Meet Today

The Tournament is being held at the University of South Carolina in Columbia.

This is the first scheduled tournament for the UNC team. The question which the team will debate is "Resolved: That the United States should extend diplomatic recognition to the communist government of China."

Approximately 30 schools from the East and Southeast will be represented at the tournament.

UNC will be represented on the affirmative side by Beverly Webb and Forbes Ramsay; Bill Moore and Carl Barrington; and Misses Ann Huffman and Virginia Agnew.

Defending the negative side for UNC will be Dave Lieberman and Charles Katzenstein; Tom Bennett and Miss Donna Ashcraft, and Bob Harrington and John Black.

Students Talk On Proposal For Leniency

Student proponents and opponents of the David Reid Honor Council leniency bill presented the issue—which the campus will decide in next week's election—to women's dorms Wednesday night.

A leading supporter and opponent of the bill spoke at each of the dormitories in a program initiated by the Women's Residence Council.

The Reid bill, if passed Tuesday, would establish a system of probation as the usual punishment for first offenders of the Honor System. It would not prescribe leniency to the courts for all cases.

Joel Fleishman speke for the bill and Kendrick Townsend against at Carr Dorm, Charles Kuralt for and Gordon Forester against at Spencer, Charles Wolfe for and Carol Webster against at McIver, Louis Kraar for and Ozzie Ayscue against at Smith, Reid for and Tillman against at Alderman, and Jim Turner for and Herb Browne against at the Nurses' dorm.

"I think our case was strengthend by the presentation," Reid said yesterday, "because so many students misunderstood the bill, and these misunderstandings were cleared up."

Chi O Bazaar Had Everything

By ELEANOR SAUNDERS

Over-anxious Christmas shoppers, bargain hunters and curious but hesitant buyers flocked yesterday to Chi Omega bazaar, held in the sorority's chapter house on Franklin Street.

Articles of all sizes, shapes and descriptions, ranging from soap leaves in their own green leather case to size seven white pigskin gloves, were featured at the sale, which was the first of its kind for the sorority.

The bazaar had been planned as early as last spring for a fund-raising project. During the summer, members of the sorority collected the items which appeared on the many exhibit tables. Some were handmade articles, some brought back from vacations abroad and others donated by alumnae from all parts of the country.

Extremes

Interest appeal ranged from one extreme to the other. The more reluctant prospects rushed straight for the fishing booth, and the 10-cent deposit toward a sure prize. The rewards from a few minutes' patience holding the fishing pole came in the form of anything from a miniature cigarette lighter to a package of donuts. At the opposite end of the buying scale, the enthusiastic purchasers consulted their Christmas lists and made their way toward one of the five assorted booths.

Reminiscent and prospective mothers lingered over the children's booth, where finely embroidered baby pillow cases, daintily smocked dresses and minute socks and gloves, all in soft pastel hues,

Notre Dame Telegram:

400 Have Signed

University Club Representative and Head Cheerleader Jim Fountain announced yesterday evening that the telegram being sent to the UNC football team at Notre Dame this weekend is fast gaining momentum.

At 3 p.m. yesterday Fountain estimated that over 400 students had already given their dimes and he hoped that the number will be more than tripled today.

All students wishing to have their names put on the wire may do so by giving a dime at Y-Court or the Town & Campus by 5 o'clock this afternoon. University Club members in fraternities are also taking names, and they will turn them in to Jim Fountain at 5 p.m.

To aid in sending the wire, Western Union will be standing by with a direct line to South Bend tonight.

UNC Will Send Three Bills To N. C. Student Legislature Meet

The University delegation to the North Carolina State Student Legislature has written three bills for presentation next weekend, when the model assembly meets in Raleigh from Nov. 18 to 20.

"These bills were prepared to stimulate interest and to create active debate," and not as an indication of what the delegation favors, according to Gordon Forester, chairman of the UNC group.

The three bills deal with the general topics of desegration, academic freedom and an endorsement of the Eisenhower administration.

The desegration bill says, in effect, that students realize integration is the only answer to the Supreme Court's move, and outlines in detail a plan for gradual integration in the state schools.

The bill for academic freedom records disapproval of limitations on classroom instruction and disapproval of censure of instructors for their beliefs. It further states that students should be encouraged to debate on controversial subjects, that libraries should be encouraged to subscribe to literature of un-American groups and that colleges should set up courses in communism and totalitarianism.

The bill endorsing the Eisenhower administration praises in particular the foreign policy, the national prosperity and the encouragement of private power in the Tennessee Valley Authority area.

Officers of the delegation are Gordon Forester, chairman; Virginia Agnew, secretary, and Lewis Brumfield, treasurer and social chairman.

Members of the delegation elected to the Senate are David Reid, floor-leader; Virginia Agnew and Manning Muntzing. Scotty Hester is the Senate alternate.

State College Will Celebrate Homecoming With Parade, Tilt

Miss Lynda Flowe of Charlotte has been chosen "Miss Wolfpack of 1954" and will lead the North Carolina State College homecoming parade through downtown Raleigh tomorrow morning.

Selection of Miss Flowe for the honor was announced late yesterday by H. Robert Krook, Jr., senior at State College and president of Blue Key, junior honor society, which sponsored the annual beauty contest.

Sponsored by Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity, Miss Flowe will be presented during the halftime program at the game between the University of Richmond's Spiders and State College's Wolfpack in Riddick Stadium in Raleigh tomorrow afternoon. She will be awarded a cup by the Raleigh Merchants Bureau.

Parade

The homecoming parade will be made up of floats, decorated automobiles, bands and other marching units. It will begin at Raleigh's Memorial Auditorium tomorrow at 11:30 a. m., and will go up Fayetteville Street to the Capitol, around Capitol Square to Hillsboro Street, and out Hillsboro Street to the State College campus.

The Raleigh Merchants Bureau will award three prizes to the leading fraternity floats in the parade, three to the winning dormitory floats in the parade and three to the best floats of other student organizations. Thirty and Three, sophomore leadership society, is sponsor of the parade.

Golden Chain, senior honor society, is sponsoring Dad's Day tomorrow. It will be celebrated jointly with State College's homecoming.

Student Legislature Votes To Look Into University Housing

Bill Against Veterans' Physical Education Is Snagged, To Come Up At Later Meeting

At a stormy Legislature meeting last night the resolution setting up a commission to study the housing situation passed, a bill setting up an Executive Committee passed; a bill setting up a Legislative Complaint Board was recommitted after much discussion.

Through "difficulties"—Clerk Caroline Davis' resignation and Monday night's Kappa Alpha fire, which took Legislature Speaker Martin Jordan from his duties—the bill concerning physical education for UNC veterans did not get to student solons in time for consideration. The bill should come up at the Legislature's next meeting, a spokesman said last night.

The bill setting up a Judicial Problems Study Commission passed with an amendment saying that if necessary members of the administration and legal faculty would be invited in as advisors; the bills setting up a Social Facilities Commission, a Student Leadership Commission, and a Student Welfare Board also passed.

Max Crohn (UP) introduced a bill which would seek to rectify the seating situation at Memorial Hall.

The evening was frequently interrupted by points of order and calls for a quorum. Max Crohn, University Party floor leader, and Joel Fleishman, Student Party chairman, both made statements concerning the Legislative session.

Charles Dean (SP) called the attendance as Legislature "shameful." Approximately 25 of the 45 legislators were present for the meeting.

CHEERFUL CAROLINE DAVIS, above, last week wound up her year's duty as student Legislature clerk. Miss Davis handled minutes, mailing and a dozen other jobs for the '53-'54 Legislature. She resigned last week to start practice teaching.

Person Hall Show

A show of the representative works of six outstanding artist teachers in America is now underway at Person Hall Art Gallery.

The show will run through Nov. 30.

Those whose work is presented are Mololy, Nagy, Albers, Hofman, Ozenfant, Hayter and Zerbe. Commentaries taken from published sources and the artists' own statements concerning their works are placed along with their selected exhibits.

Books & Uncle Sam

SENECA, S. C.—(AP)—A Seneca youth decided yesterday he may have some time for sergeants after all.

In the mail he received his latest edition from a book club. It was entitled "No Time for Sergeants."

In the same mail came the young man's draft notice.

IWC Slates Open House For Candidates, Interested Coeds

The Independent Women's Council is sponsoring an open house for candidates running in campus elections.

The open house will be held in the Rendezvous Room at GM next Monday from 5 to 6 o'clock. Refreshments will be served and entertainment provided.

The purpose of the open house is to acquaint all women of the University with those persons they will be voting on next Tuesday.

Aside from the candidates, other student leaders invited include Don Fowler, Joel Fleishman, Tom Creasy, Martin Jordan, Rueben Leonard, Manning Muntzing, members of the Women's Honor Council and the staff of The Daily Tar Heel.

Misses Laura Ervin & Amy Morse:

2 Senators' Daughters Like UNC

By MARY BURNETTE

There are two coeds here who probably listened a little more closely to the recent election returns on the radio and read a little more thoroughly the election results in the news than the rest of the coeds.

THIS IS AMY
Sen. Wayne Morse's daughter

The interest of these two coeds was not aroused by any unusual election prerequisites or some bookie's sharp choice.

To these young ladies, Miss Laura Erwin, and Miss Amy Morse, daughter of Sen. Wayne Morse, the elections were of personal interest.

Senator Erwin ran unopposed for re-election to the Democratic seat in the recent election. Sen. Morse of Oregon will be seeking re-election in 1956.

Amy, who is a freshman in Nursing School, was born in Eugene, Oregon, but she says that she feels as though Washington, D. C., is her home. She has lived there since 1944, when her father was first elected senator. Amy says that she enjoys living in Washington, but that her heart was still in Oregon until she came to UNC. Now her heart is back with her, here on the campus.

"I'm just crazy about it," Amy said. "Everyone is so friendly. I came to Carolina because it offered a four year nursing course which is organized so that participation in campus activities is possible."

A 1954 graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, Amy says that her hobbies are sports. Her love of sports and ability in them has won her a place on the women's hockey and tennis teams and on the nurses' volleyball team. She has also won many trophies in horse shows.

Laura has not had the experience of being a senator's daughter quite as long as Amy. Sen. Erwin was appointed to replace Sen. Hoey, who died last summer.

Laura was born and raised in Morganton. She graduated from high school at St. Mary's in Raleigh and attended Woman's College before coming to Carolina. Like Amy, she "loves" Carolina.

"I came because I've always wanted and planned to come," Laura said.

Laura is finding that her hobby, reading, can be combined very beneficially with her major, which is English.

Both Laura and Amy pledged Chi Omega sorority in September.

A Slight Case Of Perjury

"We do not profess to be politicians."

That bit of coy perjury was committed yesterday by University Party Chairman Rueben Leonard in outlining for the student body his party's platform.

The statement could be dismissed as election season hypocrisy but for its prevalence these days. North Carolina's new governor, a competent, qualified politician, is fond of prefacing his remarks with, "Now, I'm no politician, but . . ." Just the other day, student body President Tom Creasy commented, without even blushing, "Politics is only a necessary evil."

When will otherwise scrupulous politicians cease this embroidery? The University Party's "conservative progressiveness" program is sure to be attractive to a large segment of the student body. The party shows every sign of becoming a more powerful political force on the campus than ever before. Its members cannot hope to hide behind a shuffling disavowal of their function. They are politicians, and they have every right to be proud that they are.

Leonard and Creasy (and Gov. Hodges, too) need to take to heart a line from the oratory of upper-case politician Adlai Stevenson: "Politics is nothing to be ashamed of. It can be the noblest, as well as the most dangerous of arts."

Quantity & Quality In Education's Future

President Gray, speaking at the Founder's Convocation at Guilford College Wednesday, declared that both public and private education must seek corporate and philanthropic support if they are to met the challenge of the future.

President Gray is right. His remarks are particularly timely, coming as they do during National Education Week.

The most awesome problem, as Mr. Gray has seen, is the need for immediate physical growth. Twice as many children were born in 1953 as in 1933. Sometime within the next few years the schools must undergo tremendous physical expansion.

But this tells only half the story. While we must attend to the quantitative needs of the schools, we will commit folly if we neglect the qualitative needs. The atmosphere under which we expect the teacher to work must be kept free of coercion from the outside—whether coercion threatens in the form of underpayment, overcrowding, or thought control.

Education is mushrooming into big business. The great problem confronting us now is to keep it free of the flaws that so often come with sudden growth.

'Go You Forth . . .'

The North Carolina Baptist Student Unions, meeting in their annual convention, have endorsed (about 450-12) the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the public schools.

In so doing, BSU members have demonstrated again that they are willing to assert their Christian beliefs in the struggle for legal equality. It was the race issue that smoldered under the statewide fight last year between Baptist students and their elders, the State Baptist Convention. Three BSU Secretaries were fired, but the students did not retreat from their stand.

Now, in resolving so overwhelmingly to "exercise Christian love and understanding in accomplishing this principle of brotherhood," the Baptist youth group has seconded the action taken last month by state Methodist students (and subsequently by the Methodist Convention). It is encouraging to note that the students—the ones who would be immediately affected by the end of segregation—are the ones who are taking the lead in propagating the integration gospel.

The Baptist and Methodist students have recognizzed that there is no room in their Christian faith for warped intolerance, that nothing short of brotherhood will meet the demands of the hour. This is a time for speaking out, for affirming that the rights of men are being violated, and for taking a stand against the violation.

Election Tunes Are Old, But Not Favorites

Louis Kraar

SHE WAS having trouble pushing the thumb tack into the hard wooden wall next to Kemp's on Franklin Street. She was trying to hang up a poster.

"How about a little help?" the girl asked. I gave the tack a good, firm push. Then, looking at the poster I had helped hang, I realized that I had aided the young lady in a most partisan cause. The poster urged students to go out and vote for certain candidates for Junior Class officers.

That's the way it is this week, just five days before campus elections. Many of us will—without realizing it—be pushing for some candidate. Elections are that way. The campus politicians politic for a week, most students ignore them, and then few students vote.

But those that vote help candidates, many without knowing why.

Perhaps there is little reason to know exactly why we vote for a certain class officer or legislator. There is hardly any difference in the programs offered by the two political parties this fall. For that matter, there's hardly any program at all offered by either party.

IF YOU'RE for "conservative progressives," according to University Party Chairman Reuben Leonard, you'll want to vote for the University Party. And if you're for "a party of experience and interest," you'll want to vote Student Party, according to SP chief Joel Fleishman.

If you're against the "SP's policy of one member representing one member," you'll vote UP, according to Leonard. And if you are against "the party of indifference and spoils," you'll vote SP, according to Fleishman.

What you will probably end up doing, after listening carefully to both campaign tunes, is to become utterly confused. In all of these charges and countercharges is nothing more definite than that pop quizz that a prof "just might" give on a football Saturday. It's campaign talk.

However, party chieftains Fleishman and Leonard are to be complimented for their statements, both of which were made at party metings. Both statements have wide, blanket attacks of opposition, both have a good party catch word—all in the traditional style of vigorous campaigners.

STUDENT PARTY politicians are promising two class-free Saturdays, one more free Saturday than both parties promised last spring. (This is, in itself, no doubt a sign of campus political progress.)

Both parties are promising to work to abolish required physical education for veterans.

The Student Party, warming up an old platform plank and adding a new touch, promises dorm quiz files—complete with file cases. (The file cases are the new touch.)

The Student Party, worried about "rumblings from South Building" that "the Trustees are going to abolish student cars" have pledged themselves to oppose this "unceasingly." (I might add, who wouldn't?)

A LOOK at the statements of the two party chairmen and the platforms offered seem to prove one thing. Like any campus election, the victors will be chosen because of their personalities and the amount of campaigning they do.

I'm not saying it should be this way. It shouldn't. But until the parties start talking to students on a student level, this won't change.

'Something In The Wind?'

Hurley Gets His Revenge

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—The newspapers carried big headlines last week that John P. Davies, eight times investigated by a State Department security board in the past and eight times cleared, had been called in by Secretary of State Dulles and fired.

The headlines carried the essential facts in the case, the fact that no doubt was cast upon Davies' loyalty and that no taint of Communism was involved. But because of space and the press of other news, they did not carry the human, backstage story of John Paton Davies, fired after 23 years, largely because of the personal revenge of one man.

That man is Patrick J. Hurley, the likable, voluble ex-Secretary of War in Hoover's cabinet, who was sent by Roosevelt as wartime ambassador to Nationalist China.

It was there that Hurley, not Gen. George Marshall, made the decision to favor a coalition between the Chinese communists and Chiang Kai-Shek. Hurley has been blaming John Davies for that decision ever since.

It was Hurley who first brought disloyalty charges against Davies. It was Hurley who kept nagging, badgering the State Department until Davies was scrutinized a total of nine times. And it was Hurley who was the main witness against Davies during the latest hearing.

All this took a long time, for Davies had some faithful supporters, among them Gen. Bedell Smith, former Undersecretary of State and Wartime Chief of Staff to General Eisenhower. Smith not only paid public tribute to Davies in his book but also staunchly supported him in loyalty hearings.

But, finally, Hurley got his man. Last week, John Davies, after 23 years in the career service, was called in by Dulles and fired. He got no severance pay as he would in working with most private firms. He got no pension. He did not even get two weeks notice. He has four small children, aged three to eleven, and he's now looking for a job.

To get the full picture, you have togo back to the war days of 1944-45 when American personnel in China was at sixes and sevens, and when Gen. Joe Stilwell was in such a bitter feud with Ambassador Hurley that for weeks they would hardly speak though they shared the same bathroom.

Hurley, a tempestuous gentleman, who once picked a near fist fight with Gen. Robert McClure at a Chungking cocktail party with Chinese present, was quite emphatic in those days that the United States should work with both the communists and Chiang Kai-Shek. In fact, it was Hurley who went to Yenan personally to persaude Communist Chief Mao Tse-Tung to come to Chungking to patch up differences with Chiang Kai-Shek.

Hurley, of course, would like to forget all this. And some of his most vigorous reports favoring cooperation with the communists were censored out of the state Department's publication of diplomatic correspondence on China. But enough stayed in to give Hurley away.

Furthermore, a photo still exists at the Chinese Embassy in Washington of Patrick Hurley as big as life with his arm around Communist dictator Mao Tse-Tung; while Washington newsmen well remember Pat's press club speech on Nov. 29, 1945, in which he proclaimed:

"The only difference between Chinese Communists and Oklahoma Republicans is that the Oklahoma Republicans are not armed."

Hurley and Davies

Davies first came to know the grandstanding ambassador to China when he, Davies, was attached to General Stilwell in Peking. Davies remained on only a few months.

It was quiet true that he, like Hurley, believed cooperation between Chiang Kai-Shek and the Chinese Communists was the best salvation for China. He too, like Hurley, made a mistake.

But last week Davies was called in by John Foster Dulles and fired for an error in judgement made 10 years before. Meanwhile, Hurley, who made the same error and who advertised his views from Moscow to Chungking to Washington, was able to relax in his New Mexico mansion while Davies, with four children to support, went out to look for a job.

'Little Things' Count A Lot On Campus

David Mundy

Little things, as more than one old saw tells us, count for a great deal. And Carolina is loaded.

First there is the flag on the staff in front of South Building. Like many U. S. flags in the South, it gives appearance of having been dragged through more than one gutter.

And even more annoying is that puddle of water in front of Lenoir Hall's north door after every rain. Like an old soldier, it just stands there until it fades away. Sweep it off, so everyone won't have to jump across? Not on your life! And if you like pancakes for breakfast, don't try that line at the other end of Lenoir. Three times this week I've gone through it; three times there has been a wait for pancakes.

"There is one "little thing" that I do appreciate; the movie ads that give the prices and times at which the showings begin. A picture may be super-stupendous, colosically super-staged and extra-ordinarily acclaimed, but it is always better if seen from the beginning.

For a state generally acceded to be one-party, North Carolina has been experiencing a rapid "turnover" of political leaders. Senators Smith, Hoey, Lennon, Scott, and Ervin are, quantitatively speaking, a lot of senators for a state to have in so short a time.

Governor Umstead, had his health not interfered, would have probably proved adequate for his office. It is doubtful, however, that the State would have received anything more than a fairly "minor" administration—minor scandals, minor quarrels, minor disagreements, and minor (but greatly magnified) accomplishments.

But the advent of Governor Hodges to office foreshadows better things. First, of course, he has the opportunity of occupying the governor's chair for six consecutive years. That is a long time in which to achieve lasting political influence.

Not having "come up" through the party heirarchy, he has escaped the multitude of minor, bitter scraps which leave the scars of mediocrity so common to our state leaders. The governor, at any stage in his career, could be called a party hack only with the greatest difficulty.

I also suspect that his views on race relations are more progressive than those of most party chieftans in the state. A little wisdom and discretion, the governor having a good supply of both, will greatly ease the unfortunate effect of liberating our second-class brethren. If not a time for greatness, it is a time for a good governor. North Carolina is fortunate.

He and Gov. McKeldin of Maryland are the only two southern governors likely to do anything progressive toward settling desegregation. Of clever politicians we have a surplus; men of discretion and wisdom are rare in politics. North Carolina is fortunate.

For the first time in over a half-century, a North Carolinian, even a Republican, can be proud of having a state governor.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

The Horse sees imperfectly, magnifying some things, minimizing others . . ."—Hipporotis, circa 500 B. C.

THE HORSE was sprawled outside South Building when I saw him, breathing stertorously and conning the Durham Morning Herald of October 10. What was he reading?

"Newspaper," The Horse clipped.

Yes, to be sure. But what?

"Durham Morning Herald," The Horse barked.

But, what, in the Herald?

"An article," The Horse snapped.

Yes; but, about what?

"About three minutes long," The Horse crisped.

On what?

"On the grass," The Horse specified.

Yes; but what was the article on?

"Paper," The Horse pointed.

Oh? Paper was the subject?

"Object," The Horse corrected.

I saw! And—the subject?

"Eddycation," The Horse grudged.

Higher Education?

"Ummmm," The Horse hedged.

Elementary?

"Wel-l," The Horse parried.

Oh. Intermediate Education?

"Er, ah-h," The Horse fenced.

All three? Higher, Intermediate, Elementary?

"At times," The Horse conceded.

Listen, I was getting ill and ennuied with this equine evasion! Just what was the idea? Explicate!

"Until now," The Horse sighed, "it was stichomythy: a form of speech found in Greek Drammer: in New England; and in the average household, once the honeymoon is over. I am just nuts about stichomythy. Most men are."

Would The Horse elucidate?

"Stichomythy is short lines of dialog, rather than expanded idems of same, with the sponders and the responders alternating in rapid or laconic tort and retort." The Horse shrugged. "Popular with males, it is not highly valued among shemales, being classed by the femmes as a trick like unto a single burst from a machine gun, and thus a sheer waste of opportunity."

Women, then, avoided stichomythy?

"They detest it," The Horse saw it. "The wimmin God bless 'em, say either nothing, or all there is. But this stichomythy of mine is for artistic purposes as well as explicatory. The Horse is sponsoring a new school of writing—Architectural Writing. Look at this column and see how it balances: three lines of solid type; a panel of thin stichomythy; a fat waistline; a second balancing of thin stichomythy; a base of three solid lines of type. Good, hah?"

Was it Writing?

"Architectural," The Horse said.

Would would read it?

"Same people," The Horse stated.

Would they like it?

"Negative," The Horse denied.

Well, then? Why use it?

"Understanability," The Horse offered.

Understood by whom?

"L. J. (Hap) Perry," The Horse instanced.

Oh? Who else?

"Salesmanagers," The Horse added.

No others?

"Education Faculty," The Horse optimized.

And nobody else?

"Jimmy Moosemoose," The Horse hoped.

They'd read it? Understand it?

"They'd see it," The Horse queasied.

And like it?

"Imaterial," The Horse dodged.

How, immaterial?

"Do they like anything?" The Horse rebutted.

That was immaterial!

"It is understandable you can't please everybody," The Horse chittered, "with a column. This way, them as don't like to read it can admire its architecture."

Too Many Abstracts In New Hunter Play

Ted Rosenthal

Sharply at 9:30 Wednesday evening, Kermit Huter's latest opus "Darkening Shores," stepped upon the boards; by the final curtain at 11:10, it was nailed securely within them.

As a drama of ideas it was twice curst: on one hand the characters spewed forth oceans of dialogue dealing with grand abstractions—honor, patriotism, truth, virtuous simplicity, the indomitable nature of mankind—without the play's doing very much to implement the theme naturally, by means of plot action; on the other hand, the ideational material presented a study in stereotype, some of which was not only dangerously beguiling, but mutually contradictory.

It is unfortunately easy to illustrate these contentions. At one point in Act III, Mr. Hunter decries the tendency to always think the "other side" is "bad"; but he himself is guilty of this, and worse—of picturing it as ridiculous. The communist official Polinski is portrayed as stupid, vicious, dishonest, preoccupied with his own bureaucratic sense of self-importance, all to the point of ludicruity, and he is shown to be a coward in the face of danger. This is not only hackneyed characterization, but while it may be a comforting delusion to think our enemies as such, this attitude does not seem justified in the light of reality, and because it results in underestimating them, can produce irreparable harm.

In developing von Bretstein, the former German commander now working for the Russians, not only do tired generalizations about the workings of the "military mind" lurk beneath the surface of the writing as assumptions, but the representation of him as an individual is a current and well-worn cliche. This past year has been open season on Prussian generals who at first seem to be nothing more than cold soldiers, but when stirred by the catalyst of a sweet girl, (always a member of the "good" side, whose nation is occuppied by the villians), reveal soul and sensativity, rehash touching stories about their childhoods, (of which the girl invariably reminds them), and eventually see the light and turn against evil.

And nowadays, what saga of innocent people being ravaged by tyranny and injustice, would be complete without a devoted priest who radiates love and kindness? Fear not. "Darkening Shore" has one, and just about everything else except puppies.

Don Klochak Injured During Practice

Over The Hill

By FRED BABSON

North Carolina's resurging Tar Heels depart at 12:15 today from Woollen Gym, bound for South Bend, Ind., where they meet a 27-point favorite Notre Dame aggregation, which is rated the fifth best team in the nation.

At this point we would like to digress slightly: The spirit of the student body cannot be underestimated or overlooked. Last Saturday the Tar Heels showed that they have the stuff of which winners are made. You, the fans, came to life and yelled your heads off; and the Blue and White played in the tradition of the greatest Carolina teams. They handed you a homecoming victory, and you could not have asked for a more thrilling one.

As they prepare to face mighty Notre Dame, everybody seems to have counted the Tar Heels out—everybody, that is, but the Tar Heels themselves. Their spirit is high. They are going up there to win. It would mean a lot to them if they knew the student body had a little faith in them, and after last Saturday you should have.

Everybody who possibly can should be in front of Woollen Gym at noon today to give the team a rousing sendoff. Let them know that you expect the most from them. It may put them on the spot when they tangle with the vaunted Irish before an expected crowd of 56,000 tomorrow in Notre Dame Stadium, but it might be good for them to be on the spot.

* * * *

The Irish may sport a better record (5-1) than the Tar Heels (3-3-1), but the locals hold an edge in beef. Carolina's starting line averages more than 208 pounds per man, while Notre Dame's average is slightly under 202. UNC's opening backfield will average a little over 191 pounds, Notre Dame's 183.

Carolina also appears to be deeper in reserves than the favorites. Eight members of the Notre Dame team have averaged 44 minutes or more per game playing time in their six contests this season. Their strongest "iron man," Center Dick Sysmanski, has averaged 48 minutes per Saturday afternoon, but has played his last game for Notre Dame. Sysmanski, a senior and bulwark of the Irish forward wall, suffered a ruptured spleen in last week's Pennsylvania game, which ended his playing days in South Bend. Junior Jim Mense has been moved up to the starting pivot slot, but may suffer from a lack of experience, having seen very little action in playing behind Sysmanski.

The Irish rank 14th in the nation in total offense. Almost solely on the efforts of Quarterback Ralph Guglielmi, they stand ninth, nationally, in passing offense. They have averaged 138.3 aerial yards per game, including six touchdown tosses. North Carolina has limited its opponents to 58.3 yards per game through the air, the eighth best pass defense in the land.

The biggest problem facing the Tar Heels will be that of stopping Guglielmi. The 190-pound senior has led the Irish since the start of the season in passing, pass interceptions and scoring. He has completed 42 of 78 aerials for 739 yards and four touchdowns. His completion percentage is .538. He has intercepted five passes, returning them 51 yards, and scored four touchdowns, besides recovering two fumbles. In last week's 42-7 win over Penn, Guglielmi hurled two TD passes, scored once himself, and set up another, while completing 13 of 19 tosses for 260 yards.

Don Schaefer, 187-pound fullback, is Notre Dame's rushing leader, having gained 410 yards in 70 tries, an average of 5.9. Halfback Joe Heap ranks second to Schaefer with 240 yards in 62 attempts. Heap leads in pass-receiving, having snagged 13 aerials for 267 yards. End and Co-Captain Dan Shannon has caught the most touchdown passes, three.

The most amazing figure in Notre Dame's statistics is the number of yards their punts have been returned. The Irish have been forced to kick 24 times, once more than their opponents, but Notre Dame boots have only been returned for a total of 16 yards, less than one yard per kick. That's what you call nailing them in their tracks.

* * * *

The Tar Heels Capital Airliner is scheduled to depart Raleigh-Durham Airport at 1 p. m. today, arriving in South Bend at 3:15 (CST). Upon arrival Coach George Barclay will take his charges to Notre Dame Stadium for a light work-out this afternoon. Game time tomorrow is 1 p. m., South Bend time, or 2 p. m., Chapel Hill time.

Frosh Journey To Wilson For Deaclet Game

Carolina's Tar Babies tangle with the Deaclets of Wake Forest tonight at Wilson, N. C., in a game originally scheduled for October 15.

The game was originally called off because of Hurricane Hazel. Until this week, efforts to reschedule the contest had been to no avail because of reprecussions from the varsity encounter between the two schools. However, difficulties were ironed out and the game is to be played tonight.

Coach Ralph Floyd of the Tar Babies said yesterday that his team is in better shape for the tilt than they were for the Maryland game, which resulted in the only loss suffered by the Carolina freshmen this season.

Quarterbacks David Reed and Ron Marquette are still hampered by injuries, and it is doubtful that they will see action in the game. However, freshman star and the only remaining quarterback Buddy Sasser is back at full strength for the contest.

Jimmy Jones, center from Greensboro, N. C., who received a shoulder separation in the All Star Game at Greensboro last year, will play for the first time in tonight's contest.

The Deaclets somewhat resemble the freshman team from Maryland. They are just about as heavy (line average over 200 lbs.) and have one lineman who tips the scales at 260 lbs.

Wolfpack Preps For Tilt With Richmond

RALEIGH, Nov. 11 (AP)—North Carolina State's Wolfpack divided its time between offense and defense in a long workout today as Coach Earle Edwards prepped his charges for Saturday's Homecoming scrap against the invading University of Richmond.

Quarterbacks Eddie West, Billy Franklin and Joe Barringer took to the airlanes in a lengthy passing exercise with Ends Harry Lodge, Henry Brown, Ronnie Gall and John Lowe leading the way among the receivers. Gall, a 6-6 sophomore from New Castle, Pa. was sharpest of the receviers and was praised by the State coaching staff.

Continuing the offensive work the Wolfpack backfield combination of John Zubaty and George Marinkov at the halfves and Don Langston at fullback ran well against the reserves employing Richmond defensive formations.

Barclay Optimistic Before Klochak Mishap

North Carolina's chances of pulling an upset against Notre Dame took a tumble yesterday when first string fullback Don Klochak suffered a shoulder inury in practice.

Klochak, voted the Atlantic Conference's Sophomore of the Week for his performance against South Carolina last Saturday when he gobbled up 124 net yards in 12 attempts, came up with the bad shoulder in a pass defense drill. He apparently injured a nerve.

Trainer Doc White said that X-rays were being made to determine the exact nature of Klochak's ailment. White declined to say whether the injury would definitely keep Klochak out of the Notre Dame game Saturday, pending further treatment.

Carolina grid coach George Barclay expressed optimistic views yesterday concerning the Tar Heels' chances against Notre Dame's nationally fifth-ranked Irish, before Klochak was injured.

The two teams clash tomorrow in an intersectional battle at South Bend, Ind.

Barclay said, in part, "My boys are up for the battle and I know we'll give Notre Dame a rough time. I don't see how they can rank them (Notre Dame) 27-point favorites, although I never have known how they figure those odds."

The congenial mentor added that he didn't think the Irish were as good as they were supposed to be. "In fact," he said, "I don't think this year's team is as good as the 1953 team."

He may or may not have been alluding to the fact that Notre Dame is operating under a new coach this season—Terry Brennan. So far, the team has had quite a few close calls and have dropped one game, to Purdue.

Yesterday afternoon the Tar Heels went through their final practice in Chapel Hill before departure for the Hoosier State today. Carolina drilled on defense, with special emphasis on the aerial defense, and brushed up on kicking formations.

Bullock yesterday reported that he thought he had a touch of the flu, but there was no definite news.

The co-captains for the game will be Frye and Maultsby.

Meredith Play

"Quality Street," one of the Meredith Play House's three major productions of the year, will be presented in Raleigh tonight and tomorrow. The play will be given in the college's auditorium.

Lawyers Dorm Champs; DKE's In Frat Finals

Law School—3 dumped Winston—2, 13-0, yesterday afternoon, to take the Intramural Tag Football Dormitory Division crown. The Lawyers effectively throttled the Winston offense, and with the aid of numerous penalties incurred by Winston, swept to a 7-0 halftime lead, and went on to sew up the game with a second period touchdown.

Winston went into the hole on the opening play as they fumbled the kick-off in their own territory. Unable to move forward, the Winston team punted, but the ball only went to their 30 yard line. Law School couldn't make headway, and punted over the goal line, bringing the ball out to the Winston 20. After a series of downs, Winston dropped back to punt, but the kick was blocked in the end zone by Brad Cameron, and the Lawyers had their first touchdown. Mac Goodwin grabbed a pass for the extra point and the score read, Law School—7, Winston—0.

The half ended with the Lawyears again threatening.

Law School received to open the second half, and with the aid of a penalty moved deep into Winston territory. A few seconds later, the Lawyers scored the only other touchdown of the game, as Bill Osteen snared a pass in the end zone. The try for the point was no good, and Law School led 13-0.

Winston threatened before the game was over, but the losers could not cross the Lawyers goal, and the game ended.

Law School—3	7	6	13

In the other Intramural contest, DKE moved to the finals of the Fraternity division, via a win over Sigma Chi by the score of 9-6.

Sigma Chi scored first, as a result of a pass interception deep in DKE territory. Four plays after the interception, Dave Brown caught a pass in the end zone to put Sigma Chi ahead 6-0. The kick for the point was blocked.

The Deke's received the kick-off but couldn't make any forward progress and punted to the Sigma Chi goal line. Skip Rand broke through and socred a safety for the Deke team, and Sigma Chi's lead narrowed to 6-2. Immediately following the Sigma Chi kick, the Deke's moved deep into Sigma Chi territory and scored again, to move out in front by 8-6. The kick for the extra point was good, and the Deke's led, 9-6.

Neither team could muster a scoring punch in the second half of the bitterly fought contest.

Booters At Duke; Frosh Host To State Today

By DICK ARMSTRONG

Carolina's strong varsity booters travel to Durham today for a return match with Duke's Blue Devils and a spirited squad of Tar Heel yearlings are host to N. C. State on Fetzer Field.

After garnering two wins and a tie in their last three outings, Coach Marvin Allen's well-balanced team will be favored to defeat the Blue Devils for the second time this season. Duke, however, toppled N. C. State on Wednesday by a 1-0 score, the same margin by which Carolina defeated the Wolfpack.

The Tar Heels now possess a 2-1-1 record in ACC play, and as overall 2-3-1 mark for the season. The conference championship will be decided next week when Maryland's defending champs meet the Cavaliers of Virginia, who were tied by the UNC squad on Tuesday.

The only announced change in the starting lineup for Carolina will find Bob Boerner starting in the place of the injured Pat McCormick. Boerner will man one of the halfback posts along with Harry Brown and Jim Bunting. Fullbacks Grover Brown and Joe Mavretic, goalie Don Galdstone, and forwards Chip Bryant, Pete Cothran, Tommy Kirkland, Jerry Russell, and Noel Sullivan will round out the starting team.

Reserves Jim Skidmore, Doyce Wise, and Frank Butler are expected to see a lot of action. The Tar Heels will finish the 1954 season by meeting State in Raleigh on November 16th.

Coach Harry Pawlicks' hustling freshmen, who have a 1-2 record for the season, will be slightly favored to win over the Wolfpack. The Tar Babies lone victory was over the Raleigh team by a 2-1 margin. As usual, the State squad will boast a number of experienced players from South America.

George Holt, who is leading the frosh scoring parade, is expected to lead the Carolina attack. Here is the starting lineup for the Tar Babies, who will be out to even up their season's record in the 3 p. m. affair. Oyer, Morris, Covell, Foster, and Holt will start at the forward positions; Sturdivant, Blair and Brame will be the halfbacks; Harris and Littlehales will handle the fullback slots, and Braxton will be the goalie.

In Speech At Duke:

Morse Assails GOP

DURHAM — (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse censured the Republican Party in general and its foreign policy in particular during a public address at Duke University Wednesday night.

Calling foreign policy "the issue of all issues," the controversial independent senator from Oregon declared that our policy won't work "until cartel influence stops in our state department.

"Bi-partisanship isn't satisfied by briefing after policy already has been formed. Bi-partisanship should mean that members of both parties participate," Morse said.

"American boys would be dying in Indo-China right now if Vice-President Nixon's recommendation had been followed last spring," he declared.

We have to beat Russia on propaganda and economic fronts, our most effective weapon being surplus food, he said.

"I'm for every ounce of food that can be grown on our lands to fight the battle on economic fronts. I'm for maximum production rather than Republican scarecrows," Morse declared.

The United States needs to export "enlightened" capitalism, he said. The 54-year-old senator proposed international economic agreements which would provide food in exchange for investment opportunities for American business.

"Western civilizaton can't dominate the world," he asserted, "but it can lead the world."

Trade our surplus food for good will, he urged, "we can use some of it in the world."

On his topic, "We Must Think in Terms of Historical Time," Morse predicted that students 25 years from now will have a better understanding of last week's election than do the students today.

"Goofus University" will be the setting for a musical comedy to be given by Sound and Fury, the newly organized Graham Memorial Activities Board stock company.

The comedy, which is a take off on university life, will be presented Dec. 16 in Memorail Hall.

Miss Bo Bernardin, director of the company, has announced that rehearsals will begin Monday night for the 45 members of the cast.

The musical scores of such roadway hits as "Can Can" and "Pajama Game" will be used in the production, which was written by the members of Sound and Fury.

Gray To Moderate Meet

Gordon Gray, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, will moderate a medical-press panel discussion in Raleigh Tuesday.

The program was announced Wednesday by Dr. Donald B. Koonce of Wilmington, chairman of the State Medical Society's committee on press relations, and Holt McPherson of High Point, president of the North Carolina Press Association. The two agencies are sponsoring the discussion jointly.

The panel discussion will begin at 2:30 p. m. and the panel will include the following: Miles Wolff, executive edtor of The Greensboro Daily News; W. Horace Carter, editor and publisher of The Tabor City Tribune; Kenneth I. Tredwell, vice president in charge of programs and public relations for WBTV, Charlotte; Phil Ellis of Raleigh radio station WPTF; Dr. Paul Whitaker, Kinston; Dr. Wingate Johnson, Winston-Salem; Dr. David G. Welton, Charlotte, and Dr. Amos N. Johnson, Garland.

The purpose of the panel is primarily to discuss mutual responsibilities and understanding between medicine and the press, and to develop a sound basis for working together, according to Dr. Koonce and McPherson.

Author Asks For N. C. Study

"North Carolina is rich in story material, but much of our story heritage has a chance of perishing or being permanently lost simply because so much of it is still transmitted only by work of mouth."

These were the words of John Harden, Greensboro, vice-president of Burlington Mills, former newspaperman and author of ghost stories, who addressed a Bulls Head Bookshop tea in the University Library here Wednesday afternoon.

Harden recently published Tar Heel Ghosts, his second volume on the subject.

Speaking of the stories included in his new book and those in his first volume, The Devil's Tramping Ground, Harden said "These North Carolina spirits have righted wrongs, brought criminals to justice, punished wayward husbands, avenged cruel deeds and even gotten themselves into court —as active and hard-working as any lot of spooks ever assembled. They come from or inhabit cabins and mansions, boats, trains, trails and mountain recesses."

"Attendance at outdoor dramas and acquaintances with places of historcial and cultural interest is leading us toward more and better attention to our background and tradition. There is a new creativeness underway. We need more of it," said Harden.

The North Carolina author urged that groups such as those which assemble for Bulls Head teas do all they could to further the general cause. He recommended book clubs, study groups and discussion meetings to stimulate creative thinking and encourage production.

Entries Are Due Monday

Entries in the third annual Southern Books Competition of the Southeastern Library Association will be accepted through Monday, according to O. V. Cook, associate librarian here, who is on the Association's Southern Books Committee.

Cook explained that the competition is open to all books published, printed or designed in the 15 southeastern and southwestern states. Any press or publisher, whether commercial or private, may submit books, according to Cook.

Books published or to be published in 1954 or which were published in Nov. and Dec., 1953, but were not available for entry before the 1953 deadline, are eligible, Cook added.

Three Chicago bookmen have been selected by the committee as jury members. They are: R. Hunter Middleton, Ludlow Typograph Company; Walter Howe, R. Donelley and Sons, and Burton Cherry, who heads his own book designing firm.

attracted their eyes and perhaps their pocketbooks. A special feature of the booth was a life-sized baby doll, complete with a hand-made wardrobe of ruffled organdy pinafores and a snow outfit. The doll plus its layout was to be raffled, with bids costing 50 cents apiece.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the bazaar was an attention-getting raccoon coat, which was sold to the highest bidder at an auction last night. The father of one of the sorority members felt a definite need for a special appeal to the masculine buying audience, so he expressed the coat guaranteed to have seen many years of Ivy League wear, directly to Chapel Hill, just in time for the bazaar.

Other booths at the sale featured articles for the college crowd, for kitchen and general household use, and for Christmas decorations. The refreshment counter, which boasted a large array of calorie-rich and mouth-watering pastries, cakes, brownies and donuts, attracted the attention of the long-winded and empty-stomached shoppers.

Sherrill Speaks Tonight On N. C.'s Motor Vehicle Laws

Basil Sherrill, assistant director of the Institute of Government, will speak to law students and the general public on "North Carolina Motor Vehicle Laws" at 7:30 p.m. today.

The speech is being sponsored by the Law School Association and will cover the same material taught in the N. C. Highway Patrol Officers' training course conducted by the Institute.

Specific fields to be discussed are such major offenses as hit and run, reckless and drunken driving, right-of-way, revocation and suspension of licenses, statutory procedures for getting them back and aspects of proving financial responsibility.

Sherrill joined the staff of the Institute of Government in 1950 as an assistant director and is now also associate professor of public law and government.

His duties at the Institute include working with public officials with respect to legal matters involved in the performance of their duties in the motor vehicle area, and also instruction of clerks of Superior Courts, sheriffs and registers of deeds.

Publications by Sherrill include "Penalties for Violations of the Motor Vehicle Laws in North Carolina," "Clerk of Superior Court's Office" and "Justice of the Peace: Fees and Jurisdiction."

Sherrill, a native of Gastonia, did his undergraduate work at Appalachian State Teachers College. During World War II he served with the Navy and is now commanding officer of two Naval Reserve Surface Divisions in Durham.

After the war, he attended UNC and received his degree in economics. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the Order of the Golden Fleece, Order of the Old Well, and president of the Law School Association.

Sherrill graduated from the law school in 1950 and was admitted to the bar a few months later.

16 Songs In Musicale

Miss Jan Saxon, coloratura soprano, will be featured Sunday in the Petite Musicale series.

Miss Saxon, a special student of the Drama Department, has been in many Music Department programs, including "The Telephone" and "The Messiah."

Walter Golde will accompany Miss Saxon in a set of 16 songs which range from a ballad written in the time of King James I to "Almost Like Being In Love," from "Brigadoon."

Other numbers to be on Miss Saxon's Sunday night program include "The Laughing Song" from "Die Fledermaus," "Juliette's Waltz" from "Romeo and Juliette" and "O Mio Babbino Caro" by Puccini.

To Entertain Here

Playmakers' 'Shores' Opens Here

The Carolina Playmakers premiered a new play by Kermit Hunter, author of the outdoor dramas "Horn in the West" and "Unto These Hills" Wednesday night.

"Darkening Shore," Hunter's new drama, is the story of two men in post-war Poland, one of them a former Nazi general now working for the Russians and the other a former Polish general, now leader of the Polish resistance movement.

Donnell Stoneman, Greensboro, does characterization of the German, Von Bretsteni. Playing opposite him as the Polish patriot is Kai Jurgensen, Chapel Hill.

Miss Lois Garren is the Polish peasant girl, and Miss Marion Rosenweig plays the role of the sister of the musician, who is about to be smuggled out of Poland. Carl Williams, Charlotte, is the Russian officer, Comrade Polinski.

Planetarium Is Now Showing Special Program For Children

A new program on the solar system, the first ever prepared at the Morehead Planetarium especially for children under 10 years of age, was shown here this week.

The first showings of the program, designed to provide a "receptive" atmosphere for the youngsters, were held Wednesday and Thursday at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. The same schedule will be followed next Wednesday and Thursday for a total of eight performances.

The combined facilities of the Planetarium instrument and the Copernican Orrery are used to create an initial impression of the order and objects in the sun's family.

Cooperation of the observatories at Mount Palomar, Lick and Mount Wilson has made possible the realistic presentation at the Morehead Planetarium here.

The demonstration, a winter version of heavenly objects now visible in the night skies of North Carolina and neighboring states, "does not tax the visitors' imagination," accordnig to Director A. F. Jenzano. "Rather many of our celestial companions are actually shown superimposed on the Planetarium sky as they appear through large telescopes."

"All are visible, weather permitting," Jenzano said, "in North Carolina skies from now until the show closes Nov. 21. All will be visible, regardless of the weather, in the Planetarium skies during this same period."

These presentations are given daily at 8:30 p. m. with regular matinees at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. and Sundays at 2, 3 and 4 p. m.

Photographs and current data included in the performance are presented "for those who are acquainted with our universe. Basic facts of general astronomy are offered those who desire an introduction to the heavens," the Planetarium manager added.

At McIver Dance

McIver Women's Dormitory will be the scene of an informal dance tomorrow night from 9 to midnight.

Music for the affair will be furnished by the Avery Mills combo. This five-piece group has played for other social events in the past. Refreshments will be served by the girls of the dorm.

Invitations have been issued but all stags who are interested are welcome to attend.

Santa Claus Will Arrive Here Nov. 29; Group Sing Planned

Santa Claus will arrive in this community on Monday evening, November 29. Plans for the Merchants' Association's annual Christmas promotion were set at last night's meeting of the board of directors, which set the official opening date of the Yule shopping season for two weeks from next Monday.

Santa will ride on a float thru Chapel Hill and Carrboro, leaving the Carrboro Lions Park about 7 p. m., proceeding down Main and Franklin Streets to the Planetarium and back to the Carl Smith Building on North Columbia St., where a community sing, led by a choir, will be held. A band and choir will precede Santa Claus on his ride through the community.

Joe Robbins, chairman of the Association's Christmas promotions committee, said that he hoped they would be able to set up a lighted community Christmas tree in the yard of Chapel Hill High School. The downtown Christmas lights will also be turned on for the first time on the evening of Santa Claus' arrival.

Plans Made For United Nations Meet

One hundred-fifty students from all parts of the country will participate in the National Student YMCA-YWCA United Nations Seminar, which will take place in New York over the Thanksgiving weekend.

The program will provide an opportunity to attend the General Assembly of the UN, learn about the work of the specialized agencies of the UN, meet UN delegates from other countries, interview members of the UN Secretariat and visit the United States Mission to the UN, according to the office here.

The activities will begin at 9 a. m. on Friday, Nov. 26. The schedule will leave evenings free for dinner, theater and concerts.

Accommodations will be reserved at the Hotel Diplomat in the Times Square area for students requesting them. Special seminar rates are $2.50 per student per day. The registration fee is $10. Room and board for the three-day period will cost about $15.

Participation in the seminar is open to all students.

Klochak May Be 'Ready To Go' Against Notre Dame

Irish Spirit Permeates The Campus'

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Sprawling over 1,700 acres on which are more than 50 buildings housing everything from a barber shop to a fire department, the University of Notre Dame stands ready to welcome its visitors from the Old North State to its campus this weekend.

To the fighting Irish, their famous spirit "that permeates the campus . . ." according to the ND Freshman Fact Booklet, "is as important as the physical structure. This spirit is partly a way of life, partly the traditions of generations of college men who have trod the same paths that others will walk and partly the quiet religious ferver that permeates Notre Dame."

Also according to the handbook, "Notre Dame is a friendly place . . ." so visitors to the campus should not hesitate to ask directions or aid.

ND differs from its visiting institution for the weekend in many ways. While Carolina is a state-supported and owned University, Notre Dame is a Catholic school and religious life on campus plays an important role in the student's life.

All-Male

While Carolina is a coed school, ND is an all male University and probably the most strict all male University in the country. The students must be in their rooms at 10 o'clock every evening and the electric current for the dorms is cut off at this time.

Both schools are on the semester system (complete with Saturday classes), have the honor system, the cut system and other similarities.

Ending this weekend at ND is the annual Festival of Arts. The Arts and Letters Ball was held last night with Hal McIntyre's Band. A "Victory" Dance will be held tonight with a campus orchestra playing.

Recommendations to visiting Tar Heels as to eating and drinking spots: restaurants—Sunny Italy Spaghetti House, The Volcano, The Albane, Mark's, The Philadelphia and Eddie's Prairie Steak House. Beverage spots recommended are Joer's and Stratigon in down town South Bend.

CONNIE GRAVITTE here demonstrates what he thinks about the Irish of Notre Dame. The halfback will be in the Tar Heels' starting line-up today when the teams clash at South Bend. Game time is 2 o'clock (EST).

Big Fullback May Play And Help Upset 27-Pt. Favorites

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 12—North Carolina's Tar Heels held a brisk 45-minute workout here in Notre Dame Stadium this afternoon in final preparation for Saturday's game with the 27-point favorite Irish.

Don Flochak, 213-pound fullback who was injured Thursday in practice, was operating on the No. 1 team today as the Tar Heels ran through signal drills in sweat suits. Coach George Barclay stated that he thinks Klochak will be "ready to go" against the Irish.

North Carolina had the huge, bowlshaped stadium to itself, with the exception of a few Notre Dame fans, curious to see what the visitors looked like, and a sprinkling of newspaper reporters. Coach Terry Brennan's Irish held no practice session today, and only a brief one hour session Thursday, with no contact work.

The huge gold dome of the Notre Dame Cathedral shone brightly, despite the fact that the sun was hidden behind a cold, gray sky. Snow is expected here this week-end, but latest weather reports give assurance that it will not arrive until Sunday. Taking no chances, Notre Dame officials had tarpaulins rolled over the grid immediately after the Tar Heels trotted off.

Soph Dance Slated Tonight

Three hundred and fifty sophomore girls from Woman's College are coming here tonight for the Sophomore dance to be held in Woollen Gym. UNC coeds have also been invited and will be admitted without tickets.

The dance, co-sponsored by the sophomore class and the Dance Committee of GMAB, will last from 9 until midnight.

The girls from WC are expected to arrive at 8:30. UNC sophomore girls will act as hostesses.

Sophomores may pick up tickets at the YMCA.

McIver Dance

McIver Women's Dormitory will be the scene of an informal dance tonight from 9 to midnight.

Music for the affair will be furnished by the Avery Mills combo. This five-piece group has played for other social events in the past. Refreshments will be served by the girls of the dorm.

Dental School Mrs. Becomes U. S. Citizen

Mrs. Carol Adams Mason of the UNC Dental School became a citizen of the United States Thursday during special Veterans' Day ceremonies held in Federal District Court in Greensboro. The attractive blonde ,who came to this country from England, was one of 50,000 persons who were naturalized in nationwide ceremonies.

In all, some 65 persons from North Carolina took the ath at Greensboro. The special program featured delegations from the American Legion, the DAR, and other groups.

In addition to her position with the School of Dentistry, she has also appeared with the Carolina Playmakers, and has worked as an artist. She is the wife of Paul Mason, former UNC journalism student, who is now connected with a radio station in Raleigh.

It's Been There Since Hazel Passed

PRESIDENT JOSEPH CALDWELL'S MONUMENT
. . . almost four weeks have gone by, and still the obelisk lies, undignified, on the ground.

A UNC President's Dignity Still Lies On The Ground

By ARCHER NEAL

Almost four weeks have passed since Joe Caldwell's Monument was toppled by the fury of Hurricane Hazel.

As of press time last night it was still on the ground.

Director of Operations J. S. Bennett has said he's going to get around to fixing it pretty soon. As yet, nothing has been done to restore Joe's dignity.

A lot of people have been wondering when the monument will be put back in shape. Many feel that it's a disgrace to leave it lying helpless on the ground, fallen from its former majestic position. Bennett said there are more important things to be done first. Walkways and roofs need attention before the monument can be fixed. Meanwhile, Joe's just going to have to wait.

The white marble monument was dedicated June 2, 1858 to the memory of Joseph Caldwell, first President of the University of North Carolina. The eulogy for the occasion was to have been delivered by ex-Governor Charles Manley, but he was ill, so the president of the Alumni Association, Paul Cameron, did it. A procession if alumni came from the library in Smith Hall to the monument. There they sang the Doxology and joined in prayer offered by the Rev. Dr. James Phillips. The procession then made its way to Gerrard Hall where the rest of the ceremony took place. The thanks of the Association were extended to the Wilmington and Weldon and North Carolina Railroad Companies for their liberality in transporting the monument free of charge; to Paul Cameron for hauling it from Durham to Chapel Hill, and to the Memorial commission for their prolonged attention to the business and their skill and good taste in executing it. The monument was built in the works of Struther and Company of Philadelphia.

In July, 1904, the remains of Dr. Caldwell, his wife, and her son were transferred to the eastern base and reinterred.

Strangely enough, Hazel didn't bother the venerable Davie Poplar. It was thought that it would have been one of the first victims of the hurricane's fury. While other giant trees fell all around, including the oak that knocked over the Caldwell monument, it remained upright, again proving itself vcitor over the elements. It has suffered other storm damage, however. On August 7, 1873, it was struck by lightning. The tree was badly bent, but survived. In August of 1902, a windstorm tore off two large limbs. Again, in September of 1944, the tree lost another limb to a storm.

The Caldwell Monument won't be too much trouble to repair. The shaft was broken off cleanly at the point where it joins the pedestal. It was originally divided at this point. Matching pinholes in the base and shaft will have pins of cement or lead inserted in them when the obelisk is put back together. A heavy truck with a crane will be used to raise the shaft back on its base.

The shaft bears a tablet toward the top on the north side commemorating Dr. Caldwell's services to the State and to relgioin.

It consists of a railroad wheel, an engineer's transit and the Holy Bible. The north side of the pedestal bears the inscription:

"In grateful acknowledgment of their obligations to
The First President of this University,
Joseph Caldwell, D.D.
The President of the United States, and other Alumni

have raised this monument

On the south face is inscribed:

Duke Prof Says Keep Schools

DURHAM, (AP)—If Southern states decide to get out of the business of public education completely, the federal government might step in, a Duke University professor of law said here Thursday night.

Prof. Robert Kramer of the Duke Law School outlined for the University Faculty Club the legal implications of the Supreme Count's decision on segregation in the schools.

Emphasizing that he was speaking neither "for nor against" the court's decision, Kramer suggested that various legal problems may confront South Carolina, Mississippi and Georgia if they decide to switch to private school systems.

All three states have proposed constitutional amendments permitting the states to abolish their public schools if deemed necessary.

The states' action is based on the 14th Amendment, Kramer said, which is interpreted to mean that discrimination of color and race is illegal only when practiced by public authorities.

'Game'

"This looks like a game of bluff and counter-bluff," Kramer stated, and what these states seem really to be trying to do is "not to abolish the public school system, but to make a few changes in it so that it can be called private."

The Plan

Here is the theory of the plan: Private, non - profit corporations may be organized to run the schools. However, no private group has sufficient funds to do this, so aid will have to come from the state. In operation the state might pay each parent a fixed sum, say $600 for each child's education. The parent in turn would give this to the private school system.

However, the court is likely to rule this illegal on the argument that the system is receiving state money, as well as from the fact that education is a public function and the state is supporting it.

Major difficulty in plans outlined by South Carolina, Georgia and Mississippi, the Duke professor explained, is that to truly achieve a private school system the states will have to get entirely out of the business of education, a "very difficult" thing to do. State cumpulsory attendance laws would have to be repealed; state laws regarding teacher certification and qualification would have to be wiped off the books.

"In order to carry out the program the state would have to smash to smithereens every aspect of public education in the state,

The Leniency Bill

He Introduced It... THE BILL . . . ...He Opposes It

By DAVE REID
Sponsor Leniency Bill

The Leniency Bill that you will vote on in Tuesday's election is really, as the bill states, a bill "to liberalize penalties in first offense cheating cases."

What is the need for liberalization? Liberalization is needed because at the present time, for all intents and purposes, there is only one penalty for first-offense cheating — suspension.

This is little better than the inhumane imposition of exile that existed in now archaic and outmoded societies. A precedent in the Men's Council has grown up through the years which stifles all attempts at judging cases individually. The unwritten, iron-clad law is that if you cheat, you are suspended.

In some rare cases the honor courts have risen above this weighted anchor of tradition. These occasions have been regretfully few and most have occured in the Women's Council. I believe that adequate arguments have already been presented favoring this bill in The Daily Tar Heel. I would like to answer some of the main charges the opponents of this measure have raised. Most of these stem from four major misconceptions of the bill.

DAVE REID
. . . let's have a new tradition

The first charge is that all first-offense cheaters will be given a second chance. The bill specifically states that the maximum penalty for first-offense cheating will be suspension. The Honor Council involved will be the sole judge of whether a person does or does not deserve a second chance. A second chance under the new proposal would mean a more rigorously-enforced probation than at present.

Secondly, there is a misconception that some people will feel they are granted "one free cheat." This is ridiculous. Our honor system does NOT depend upon intimidation for success. If the honor system depended on fear for its success, then we should stop calling it an "honor" system and face up to what it would be — nothing more than a FEAR system . . . a fear system where honor was merely a word brandished about for its soothing effect.

The third contention is that the bill would limit the council's decisions. This is the most remarkable argument of them all. If the honor council had been willing to use a little imagination and originality of its own in trying cases, this bill would not have been necessary. The very fact that it (the Men's Council, in this case) has used only one punishment — suspension — for cheating violators, makes it necessary for us to "impose" greater freedom of choice

A BILL TO LIBERALIZE PUNISHMENT IN FIRST OFFENSE CHEATING CASES

Whereas: There has long been a need for rehabilitation and correction instead of mere punishment in first offense cheating cases brought before the Honor Council, and

Whereas: Reform in this area would encourage more widspread participation in the operation of the Honor System since reporting an individual would not necessarily mean automatic suspension, and

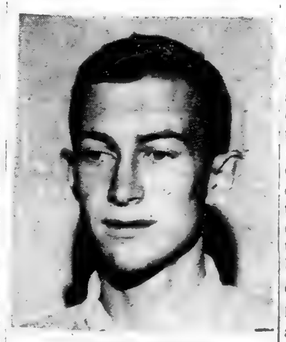
Whereas: Additional flexibility in the distribution of penalties of this nature would elevate the Honor Councils from their present positions closely akin to juries, to a position of true judicial bodies; and

Whereas: The primary function of the educational institution is to teach, not punish;

Therefore Be it enacted by the student Legislature of the University of North Carolina, that:

Article I Convictions of persons for cheating where it is the first offense, shall carry with it maximum penalty of suspension for a period of one semester. The maximum for first offense cheating shall only be imposed on such offenders as are judged by the council involved to be flagrant and premeditated violators. The usual punishment for first offense cheating convictions will be probation for a period of not less than one semester nor more than two semesters.

Article II Individuals who have been placed on a probation status for cheating will be assigned by the Dean of Students Office to a faculty counselor to whom the probationer shall report bi-weekly and at other times when needed to report progress and/or problems of adjustment.



Article III No portion of this bill is to be interpreted as prohibiting or discouraging the imposition of more moderate penalties in cases where the council involved feels that the circumstances warrant a more lenient penalty.

By HERB BROWNE
Chairman, Men's Honor Council

The Legislature bill which is to come before the students for decision on Tuesday proposes to liberalize the honor system and to emphasize the rehabilitative aspect in dealing with violators of the honor code, by permitting first offence violators to remain in school on probation. But such a sentence of probation, even under the supervision of a professor already overloaded with duties, would have actually no real meaning. Its few restrictions would not bring the student to realize fully the significance of his action — a breach with his pledge of honor to himself, his fellow students and the University.

The desired feature of rehabilitation is well attained in our present system by permttting a student suspended for cheating to return to school after the usual period of one semester to resume work. And it is significant to note that well over a majority of persons suspended do return to school, better realizing their responsibilities under the Honor System.

It has been argued that it is harmful to send a student home during suspension to where he acquired the dishonorable tendencies which led to his cheating in college, but do we believe that in the homes of the average student are taught ideas which are alien to the principles inherent in the honor code? The necessity of facing the parents is a part of the experience of realization to the seriousness of the breach of honor committed.

HERB BROWNE
. . . realize the seriousness

It is the duty and the actual practice at present of the Honor Councils to consider the individual circumstances of each case carefully to be able to render a decision which is fair and just to the defendant in the light of his particular situation. This bill would direct the Men's and Women's Councils to place on probation every person cheating for the first time except in flagrant and obviously premeditated instances. By the establishment of such a rule to be followed, the flexibility and discretion which the Councils employ in examining each case and arriving at a decision would be seriously curtailed. To be able to render decisions as fairly and equitably as possible the councils must not be denied this flexibility.

It can not be asserted that the Honor System at Carolina operates to complete perfection, but the proposel changes in the bill now before the students for decision does not strike at these imperfections; instead they seem to do away with certain of those elements that in the past have contributed to the systems best effectiveness.

Hey, Ma, Come Look What Just Landed In The Back Yard!

If you're a down to earth sort, you must forgive us this morning. We are indulging in a cosmic kick.

A good-sized hunk of this page is taken up with a reputable analysis of U. S. and Russian progress in out-of-this-world matters, rockets to the moon and all that, something which many reasonable scientists are saying can no longer be lightly dismissed.

Meanwhile, those flying somethings called saurcers are still with us. Within the week, they have been reported over France, Italy, Austria, Yugoslavia and Trieste. Within the month, Norwegians, Swedes and Danes have sighted them, or have said that they have.

The French, naturally, have seen bigger and better saucers than anyone else. They even claim to have seen the saucers' pastel-colored occupants. The mayor of Chateau Neuf-du-Pape has issued a decree forbidding flying saucers to land. The French National Assembly is considering an investigation of defenses against saucer invasion.

Government observatories in Brazil and Yugoslavia have reported the objects, and so, by golly, has Clare Booth Luce, the American ambassador in Rome, who watched one sail over her head one afternoon at "a terrific speed."

We will stop, if you don't mind, just short of editorial explanation of flying saucers. We are more at home with the University than with the Universe. But we thought you might be interested in the hottest tip from our office space-o-graph: Don't chuckle at that paper-bound Ray Bradbury science-fiction story. It might not be fiction, after all.

A Great Deal Of Gracious Living (XIV)

Instructions on Gracious Living in Chapel Hill have been piling up lately. They have been duly spindled and catalogued and are here presented for the attention of the proper authorites.

1. A new color scheme for the University's television bus is in order. This unbelievably gaudy vehicle has been variously identified as a Cole Bros. Circus truck, the bus of a traveling Harlem boogie band, and a rolling exhibit of Coney Island souvenirs. It deserves a more somber color scheme. The avowed intention of TV, admittedly, is to take the University to the people. The people, however, might be scared off if they see the University coming at them in yellow, red and blue from 10 miles away.

2. Gracious Living in Graham Memorial requires a coffee machine. The hundreds of students who daily carry on the necessary government dispensing, ballroom dancing, pool shooting functions of the building guzzle more than the capacity of the kitchen's sloppy little pot. A mechanical coffee vendor would give out java by the clean, tasty, efficient cupful, and would more than break even, financially.

3. Campus politicians, understandably eager to have their posters read, should nonetheless refrain from tacking them to trees, which is illegal and unsightly, and to other posters, which is frustrating to those who want to know, not only for whom to vote, but, for example, when "Three For Tonight" is coming to the campus. That particular billboard is unreadable, at this writing, because of an even dozen political barnacles pasted on its face.

4. And speaking of signs, here's one more that's got to go: The big one at the corner of Country Club and Raleigh Roads that says, with an arrow, "Campus, Business District." The University drags out this huge, unsightly monstrosity every fall to point out the proper road for football patrons unfamiliar with the town. It was doubtless painted years ago by an intoxicated workman; a sober sign painter, in an hour's work, could turn out a sign that would do the job without cluttering up the landscape, which is otherwise quite pleasing at that point.

We call on student government and the South Building fathers to institute these reforms, which are necessary if Gracious Living in Chapel Hill is to move on apace.

TV Antennae Are 'Fixtures,' Declares IDC

Louis Kraar

THE INTERDORMITORY Council's Friday secretary, Marlyn Zager, breezed into the New East Annex office with a stack of freshly-written letters. Two "IDC Central Staf" members sat in a corner talking over a budget matter.

IDC Social Chairman John Beshera slipped another note into a manila envelope marked "Current Memos," and Manning Muntzing—boss of all this activity—flipped through the memos of the day.

Meantime I scanned the wall decorations, mostly newspaper clippings about the IDC and a chart with a square for each dorm President.

"Oh, good to see you. I noticed a memo here about your coming," Muntzing said, officially welcoming me to the bustling office.

I asked Manning about the television antennas that he is writing President Gray about. (I had read in the paper that the IDC had voted to appeal to Gray in order to get the University to pay for TV antennae twisted by the hurricane.)

Manning told me that he had talked to Director of Operations J. S. Bennett, who had told the IDC chief that it was the responsibility of the individual dorms to pay for any repairs. (I had also read that in the paper, but someone came in and I didn't get a chance to say so).

Bruce Morton, president of Grimes Dorm, was the boy who came in at that point. Manning said that Bruce, since he introduced the idea of writing President Gray, could probably explain why the IDC thought it was the University's responsibility to fix broken antennae.

"IT'S THE law of fixtures," Morton said.

I admitted that I had never heard of such a law, thinking it must have been something the student Legislature passed in that confused last session.

Morton, who I learned later is a law student, said that as soon as the antennae were "attached to the building as fixtures, they become part of the real estate." In other words, he said, "the antennae—once attached to the dorms—became University property."

What about the TV sets themselves? I asked Morton, and learned that TV sets aren't fixtures "because they're not permanently attached to the building as fixtures."

I wondered just how "permanently attached" the antennas were, since they are unattached at the moment. And Muntzing said at that point that he thought the anennae were poorly installed by University workmen. "They didn't even put up any guide wires," said Muntzing.

A "Central Staff" member, who was standing about, said he thought rotary antennae weren't supposed to have guide wires. But Manning assured him that he had looked into the matter, and that the TV industry had provided a special guide wire for rotary antennae.

MORTON PRODUCED a North Carolina Supreme Court case (Wentz v. Fincher), which was considered in 1851. The decision, according to law student Morton, declared that "where one builds a rail fence on property owned by another, the title of the rails passes to the owner of the land."

I wonder what President Gray, who also went to Law School, will think of the IDC's argument. If he looks at volume 34 of the N. C. Law Reports, he'll find Morton's case.

There's always the chance that the University will agree that it owns the antennas, then say that since it owns them, it can choose not to repair them.

'How Do You Feel About — Uh — Nonagression Pacts?'

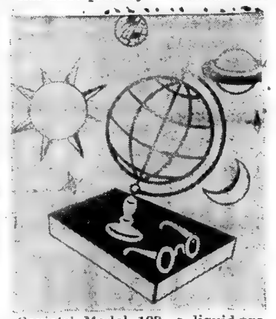
Will The Russians Beat Us To The Moon?

Albert Parry
In The Reporter

Increasingly boldly, yet preserving all the rules of security, the Russians are talking of their work and plans in the problems of space travel. It is true that early in August, the Soviet Academy of Sciences declined to send its experts to the Fifth Congress of the International Astronautical Federation meeting at Innsbruck, Austria. But from rostrums of their own choosing such experts do talk.

Professor Alexander N. Nesmeyanov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, says, "Science has reached a point where it is realistic for us to speak of sending a stratoplane to the moon and of creating an artificial satelite for the earth."

"Would you say that our dreaming is taking us too far? Perhaps we are talking of decades and centuries hence? No! We are convinced that it will be our generation that will carry out the first flight to the moon." Thus spoke Professor V. V. Dobronravov, an outstanding Soviet physicist and mathematician. Together with other experts in the field, he recently addressed a special meeting of Moscow writers, who were told of the work accomplished by Soviet astrophysicists in the field of interplanetary flights.



The Coming Thing

Should we take these Russian astro-scientists seriously? Yes, we should, say some American experts. Last summer among my luncheon companions at a foreign policy conference on an American campus there was a colonel from the Air War College. He listened carefully to the speaker of the occasion, a NATO representative, expound on the Allied land and sea forces in Europe. Then he shook his head and whispered: "True, true . . . Still, our chief concern should be those Russian rockets. They are the coming thing."

The Soviet claim that Russians are among the very first to think seriously and scientifically of interplanetary travel finds support in such a sound observer as Vice Admiral Leslie C. Stevens, U.S.N. (Ret.), former American naval attache in Moscow. While on duty in the Soviet Union he acquired a Russian book, first published in 1903 (most likely by Tsiolkovsky), devoted to a simple and clear technical discussion of guided missiles for space travel. "My copy," remarks Stevens in 'Russian Assignment,' is one of fifty thousand of the tenth edition, published in Leningrad in 1935 . . . Interplanetary travel is just the thing to catch the Russian imagination . . . There is an excellent chance that the Russian engineers, who do not lack for brains, will pioneer in this field."

Foremost in paying attention to Soviet researches in the field is George P. Sutton, chief of the Astrophysics Department of North American Aviation, Inc. Early in May he sounded a note of warning to the members of the third annual Symposium of Space Travel, held at the Hayden Planetarium in New York.

Privately studying whatever fragmentary data he could find on the interplanetary work done behind the Iron Curtain, Sutton summarized his investigations of ten years as follows: Rocket work has first priority in Russian. The Soviets' Model 103, a liquid-propelled rocket engine, weighing astonishingly little (perhaps no more than two Amercian automobiles), has the thrust of fifty-three conventional turbojet engines, exceeding five times the trust of the German V-2 rocket.

The Soviet aim is to have a 5,000-mile per hour guided missle, said Sutton. It would emit a 160-foot tongue of flame with a temperature of 5,000 degrees Fahrenheit, twice the melting point of steel. Inside the rocket the pressure would be nine hundred pounds per square inch, which is much higher than in any other known rocket. The blast sending the rocket on its way would burn a tremendous hole in the launching site.

If a Red satellite of the earth is finally evolved by the Russians, Sutton continued, it would easily carry passengers. A two-million horsepower blast would start it off, and it would girdle the globe every four hours at the height of a few hundred or thousand miles above the earth. It would bombard the earth with radio propaganda; it would keep the western camp under constant observation and threat; and, finally, it could be used for war and conquest. "Right now the Soviets are erecting elaborate bombproof launching stations in their part of Europe," he declared.

The Warnings Of Experts

The existence of Soviet launching stations suggests to Sutton and other American experts that even if the Soviets do not launch space platforms, they are planning to use rockets with deadly warheads against us.

Sutton quoted Soviet engineering reports as saying that the Russians are designing a winged version of the German V-2 that would develop two million horsepower. It would carry an atomic warhead a distance of five hundred to a thousand miles in about half an hour. Another, a two-stage missle, would have a range of 1,865 miles.

Other specialists have issued yet sterner warnings. Last July 21, Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri, former Secretary of the Air Force, in a carefully prepared speech to fellow law makers in Washington said that the Soviets were apparently attempting to create an intercontinental missle with a hydrogen warhead, a range of four to five thousand miles, and a margin of accuracy measured in mere hundreds of yards.

In the opinion of Walter Dornberger, it may take the Soviets six to nine years to achieve an operational long-range guided missle. He feels that Americans can do the same job in five years and perhaps even less, but to do this, much red tape has to be cut and cleared away and one man authority instituted in this all-important field of research and production. He claims that in the United States too many, channels of authority have to be navigated before even a simple decision is made.

Dornberger is the German scientist-general who was the Nazi-appointed and (he now claims) Nazi-hampered head of all the V-2 missle experimentation at Peenemunde. He has been in the United States since 1945, working first for the Pentagon and later for the Bell Aircraft Company.

The Pentagon appears to agree with Dornberger. Late last July, it was made known that in the Pentagon's view of the situation the Soviets might put into the air their first intercontinental ballistic missile no later than 1960.

All this is but a glimpse of the Russian rocket effort. But, even that is sufficient to tell us that a crucial race in astrophysics and astronautics is on.

Credo

It's A Tough Life In The Lower Quad

Dick Creed

Well, now.

More people have told me this week that dorm men aren't a pack of morbid, envious, socially deprived, discontented, frat-hating lower quad hermits.

Ease off, men. Nobody said they were. I didn't, at least.

I did give what I thought were the reasons for what some have called the "distinct line of division between fraternities and dormitories," namely that frat men have money, cars, liquor, club-life, and girls, and that dorm men don't.

I still say that if anybody finds a reason, this has to be it.

It's a long way from lower quad to fraternity row.

Sure, there are boys in the lower quad who have money, cars, liquor and women. South Building, dorm managers, and campus politicians point to the row on row of cars in lower quad parking lots; the remind us of the dorm parties, dorm dances, dorm displays, and all that.

Then they come up with the conclusion which they think makes every body love everybody else and Carolina.

They say that "the boy in the lower quad" is a legend, a myth, that he doesn't really exist.

He does exist.

He's outnumbered maybe, but he does exist.

He's the boy who came to Carolina his freshman year with a book entitled "Best Methods of Study" under his arm and fifty dollars and an application for a part time job in his pocket.

He's the boy who picked up his class tickets and went back to his room and figured out a time budget—an hour by hour, day by day schedule for Monday through Saturday. A schedule for one week was all he needed, because every week would be alike until next semester.

He got a few fraternity bids, put on his grey flannel suit, his rep stripe tie, and walked over to the gang of red brick, columned edifices which make up fraternity row. It was a long way to fraternity row, and he was nervous. He knew damn well he couldn't join a fraternity, but he still wanted to make a good impression over there. Later, in his dorm, he joked with the boys about being given the hatchet or blackballed.

He's the boy who wrote to his mother every week and lied to ter quite a few times when he told her she need'nt send any money this week.

He's the boy who was disappointed when he went to the party in his dormitory basement. They said there would be girls there. A few came. But they could be described as "lower quad girls."

He hated to spend money on liquor or beer. But he did when he had a little extra money and a little extra time, to be sociable. He hadn't drunk any before he came to Carolina, and his conscience hurt him a little when he did now. He didn't tell his mother. She wouldn't understand.

The boy in the lower quad has friends. It's interesting that the ones he made during his freshman year are the best ones.

Some of the boys in the dorm are better off financially than he is, some of them worse. Some of them have cars and money and girls and could join a fraternity if they wanted to. Others have all these things but can't get into a fraternity.

"The boy in the lower quad" is the one who gives the lower quad the character it has. And by "the boy in the lower quad" I mean the boy who leads the college life of economic and social poverty. His more fortunate neighbors in his dorm are usually indifferent.

If there is any line of division between fraternities, you can bet that it will finally center him.

Although a number of boys in the dormitories do have money, cars, liquor, and girls, if anybody finds a reason why there is a line of division between fraternities and dormitories, that reason will be the fact that there are so many boys there who don't. He is the dorm man. He is "the boy in the lower quad."

Back To The Wonderful, Neglected Art Of Satire

From The Charlotte News

"'Tis strange we don't hear much talk about th' Ph'lippeens," said Mr. Hennessy.

Mr. Dooley, across the bar, replied:

Columns like the above, written in 1900 by Finley Peter Dunne, helped Americans see and chuckle at their own shortcomings in their awkward new role as a world power. For Mr. Dunne was a master of satire. At times his rapier pricked sharply. But frequently his writings met with requirements of Lady Montagu, who wrote in satire's golden age, the 18th century, that

Satire should, like a polished razor keen,
Wound with a touch that's scarcely felt or seen.

Satire is an ancient device, used first by the Greek Archilochus, and by Romans like Juvenal. Reynard The Fox, a product of unknown Frenchmen during the Middle Ages, was a devastating comment on the foibles and chicanery of the time as was, later, Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels. Alexander Pope, one of satire's practitioners, knew the dangers and limitations of his trade. "Satire's my weapon," he wrote, "but I'm too discreet, To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet."

But satire, alas, has in these post-Shavian days been sorely neglected. Cartoonists practically have the field to themselves. Thus we are pleased to read, in Harriet Van Horne's column in the New York World Telegram-Sun, that a radio network is bold enough to enter the field in a major way.

The Canadian Broadcasting Co. has produced an hour-long dramatic satire entitled The Investigator. The story opens with a plane crash, after which The Investigator finds himself at the gates of heaven. He assumes the gates will open wide. But no, the gatekeeper tells him he'll have to be investigated by the Permanent Committee on Permanent Entry.

The Investigator meets some of his pals outside the pearly gates—Torquemada and Cotton Mather among them. When the investigation starts, St. Peter's qualifications as chairman are questioned. Result: A new investigation is launched. Many "subversives" are queried—Socrates, Jefferson, Voltaire, Mill, Luther, Spinoza. (But the committee has much trouble with Karl Marxes as another committee had with Annie Lee Mosses. It calls up Karl Marx the piano tuner, and Karl Marx the watchmaker, but Red Karl can't be found.)

And so it goes, until the scholars and thinkers eggheads are trying to reform his domain.

all go to Hell where Lucifer is in a pet because those

What this country needs is more chuckles, at itself. Enough of the pundits, historical novelists and exposers. Bring back the wonderful, neglected art of satire.

Sounds

Tom Spain

Chet Baker, who only a couple of years ago was playing Sousa marches with an Army band, can be called a genius of jazz. Rated No. 1 on both Metronome and Down-Beat polls, Baker has established a trumpet style altogether new. His playing is quiet, meditative, and modest. He holds none of the loud commercial flash which has become a trademark for jazz musicians, his style being more musical than sensual. Perhaps best in ballad and blue interpretations, Baker's tone is sot and smooth, with a slightly fuzzy sound, usually derived from the poor condition of the musician's lip. Not so with Baker. He proves his technical ability in that he can mantain the same softness playing either high or low notes. Sometimes Baker's trumpet sounds like a ready alto sax, and at other times he can play in unison with a piano. The effect is unique and very popular.

Kemp Nye is showing off one of the early Chet Baker albums. Since he had not been in the jazz field more than a couple of years, Baker has little history behind him in the form of recordings. After leaving the Mulligan group, Baker formed his own quartet and recorded many sides on the Pacific Jazz label. Here we find four of the first ones, which feature Larry Bunker, drums and Carson Smith, bass. The pianist is Russ Freeman, another young phenomenon of the modern era.

Another fine record on the Pacific label has found its way into Chapel Hill. Lee Konitz and Gerry Mulligan, who's quartet at that time included Chet Baker. A more perfect illustration of good West Coast jazz could be found nowhere. As producer Howard Lucraft says, "Great jazz necessitates the right atmosphere," and the conditions for the recording could be no better. The Haig, the West Coast's jazz center, was the scene, and Konitz and Mulligan are at their best. One side of the ten-inch LP features Konitz solos, while on the other we find Mulligan and his bariton sax. The music is termed creative extemporization by Konitz who is the foremost alto saxaphonist of the progressive school, and the two stars lead the group on one of the most imaginative tours ever put on record.

The Gerry Mulligan quartet, with or without Lee Konitz, is worthy of its esteem, not only because of its imaginative extemporaneous style, but because it creates a fine sound. The Mulligan music is not for the trained ear of the jazz addict alone, but can be understood and appreciated by anyone who chooses to listen.

Setzer, Sasser Score Touchdowns As Frosh Easily Out-Play Deacon Freshmen, 12 To 0

WILSON, Nov. 12—Carolina's Baby Tar Heels completely outclassed a Wake Forest freshman eleven here tonight by a score of 12-0. The Tar Babies were never in real danger throughout the contest.

The game was the disputed postponement of the contest scheduled last month.

Halfback Howard Williams, a literal workhorse, carried 21 times for the Tar Babies and gained a total of 109 yards.

Quarterback Buddy Sasser completed five of 10 passes and his sub, David Reid, completed one for three, keeping the Deaclets on their toes.

Carolina's forward wall was much superior to the Wake Forest line, out-blocking and out-tackling the Wake crew throughout the game.

Tackle Willis Setzer and Sasser scored the Carolina touchdowns. Setzer tallied after picking up a blocked kick, while Sasser hit paydirt with a three-yard run in the third period.

Carolina won the toss and elected to receive. The kick was taken by Buddy Payne at the Carolina 31, but he was dropped at the 28 by a host of tacklers. The Baby Tar Heels got off to a bad start, as they proceeded to lose 18 yards in three plays, the ball moving back to the Carolina 13.

Williams Runs

Quarterback Buddy Sasser booted out to the Carolina 41, where Ron Halstead, of Wake Forest, took the ball and scampered 13 yards to the UNC 29. Three tries at the Tar Baby line and one attempted pass netted exactly six yards and Carolina took over on its own 23. In two plays Williams moved the ball to the Carolina 41.

An attempted pass by Sasser was incomplete, and Williams again took the ball, moving six yards for a first down on the Wake 47. Three plays resulted in a net loss of two yards.

Sasser punted to the Wake Forest 15 and the Deaclets ran the return to the 19.

Three plays and the Deaclets lost four yards, the ball moving back to the 15 where Wake Forest kicked to the 50 out of bounds.

The quarter ended with the ball on the Wake Forest 47, Carolina in possession.

Wake Forest, in a hole on their own 21, quick-kicked to the Carolina 18. Carolina tried three plays and Sasser punted to the Wake Forest 43. The Deaclets tried three incomplete passes then faded to kick.

Setzer Scores

Howard Gaca charged through and blocked the punt. Setzer picked up the ball on the 35 and lumbered for the first touchdown. Paul Blazer's attempt for the extra point was wide.

In the third quarter, with Carolina in possession on the Wake 40, Sasser passed to Jim Barnum complete on the 10. Two plays later Sasser bootlegged for the touchdown on a three-yard run around the right side. Blazer's kick again was no good.

Carolina nicurred numerous penalties throughout the game. The Tar Babies were charged 60 yards in the last half alone.

The team now has a season's record of 3-1.

Bryant Sparks Soccer Victory

By DICK ARMSTRONG

Carolina's determined soccer team defeated Duke yesterday by a score of 2-0. It was the second straight Tar Heel victory over the Blue Devils and gave the UNC squad its third ACC win.

Center-forward Chip Bryant was the offensive star for the Tar Heels, scoring both goals. Bryant took a pass from Tommy Kirkland and scored in the first quarter, then tallied again in the third period on receiving a corner kick from Noel Sullivan.

Duke's Leon Ponte, who has been the scoring leader for the been the scoring leader for Duke all season, was held in check by a stout Tar Heel defense. Goalie Don Gladstone played his usual fine game as he thwarted several potential Duke scoring threats.

The Carolina win was a team victory in every respect, as the Tar Heels would not be denied. The only UNC reserve to see action was Bob Boerner, who replaced Harry Brown for a short time in the third quarter and then went in for Jim Bunting, who suffered a leg injury in the final period.

Yesterday's victory at Durham boosted the Tar Heel record to 3-1-1 in ACC play, and gave them a 3-3-1 record for the entire season. The last game of the season will be against N.C. State at Raleigh November 16th.

Frosh Booters Edge Pack, 1-0

Carolina's freshman soccer squad evened up its season's record at 2-2 yesterday afternoon when the team downed N. C. State, 1-0, at Fetzer Field.

The only goal was scored by George Holt, right outside, but coach Harry Pawlik credtis the whole team with the victory.

"Everybody turned in a fine performance," he said, "and the first team ran very well. That won the game for us."

Pawlik signled out John Harris, Bill Blair and Charles Covell for particular mention. Pawlik cleaned the bench in the hard-fought victory.

State put up a tough battle and almost won the match through an edge in experience. Because of a shortage of freshman players, the Wolves employer three versity boys. In addition, State has three South Americans on the team.

The freshman squad's next match is Wednesday against State in Raleigh. It will be the last contest of the season for the frosh. Game time is 3 o'clock.

Duke Liked Today Over Deac Eleven

WAKE FOREST, Nov. 12 (AP)—Duke, its national prominence dimmed after trouncings by Army and Navy, gets down to the business of trying to win the Atlantic Coast Conference football title, meeting Wake Forest here tomorrow in the first of three remaining ACC games for the Blue Devils.

Duke, its overall record reduced to 4-2-1, is 1-0 in the conference. Wake Forest is 1-2-1 in the cricuit and 2-4-1 overall.

A two-touchdown favorite, Duke meets South Carolina and North Carolina after this one. A sweep would give Duke a 4-0 conference record and prime positoin for selection as the conference representative in the Jan. 1 Orange Bowl game against the Big Seven choice.

21 Witnesses Heard In Boxing Inquiry

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 (AP)—The State Athletic Commission today heard 21 witnesses in an inquiry into charges of alleged "blacklisting and discrimination" in New York boxing.

The charges were brought by the recently formed Metropolitan Boxing Alliance against the New York Boxing Managers Guild.

At the conclusion of more than six hours of testimony, the commission, with Chariman Robert K. Christenbury presiding, ordered the inquiry continued until next Friday morning.

The North Carolina team enjoyed a smooth three-hour cruise in their chartered DC-4 Capital airliner, arriving in South Bend at 3 p. m. (CST).

Klochak's injury is the big question mark in the Tar Heel camp tonight. The doctor who treated his shoulder in Chapel Hill Thursday when the injury was incurred was brought along to advise on his condition. But from all indications, the line-busting sophomore will answer the starting whistle. Sonny Ridenhour, reserve halfback, is the only other seriously-injured Tar Heel. His injured leg prevented him from taking part in the drills today, and he may not dress tomorrow.

Upon completion of today's practice, the North Carolina squad traveled via bus to Elkhart, Ind., 17 miles from South Bend, where they will stay tonight at the Hotel Elkhart.

Western Union

Somewhere around seven or eight hundred names ticked off at Western Union's South Bend, Ind. station last night . . . in time to be presented to the UNC football team this afternoon.

The names, all on a roll of paper and tied with a Carolina blue ribbon, were collected by the University Club here and sent via Western Union.

Pretty Telegrapher Claudia Cannady, who tapped out the names last night, had nothing but praise for the University Club in general and Miss Lee Strickland, coed from Atlanta, Ga., in particular. Miss Strickland compiled names, wrote salutations and counted words for the better part of the day.

Miss Cannady, who herself has more school spirit than 10 students, personally saw to it that the message would be tied in a "real" Carolina blue ribbon.

UP, SP Meet In Hot Debate; Attendance Condemned

By LLOYD SHAW

Leaders of the University Party and the Student Party leveled blasts at each other at Thursday night's legislative session.

Max Crohn, University Party floor-leader, said the Student Party had "sought to completely bottle down the procedure of the evening." Crohn made this statement after a dispute over the germanity of a speech supporting the establishment of a Legislative Complaint Board. This bill was recommitted to the Ways and Means Committee. Crohn said, "I stepped out unable to take it any longer."

Joel Fleishman, Student Party chairman, said "I was amazed that the University Party floorleader would even consider leaving the Legislature Hall to prevent the Assembly from having a quorum and thus keeping the Legislature from continuing with the business."

Charlie Dean (SP), chairman of the Rules Committee, called the attendance at Legislature for the last three weeks a "disgrace." Under the Legislature by-laws, a legislator with two unexcused absences is to be called before the Rules Committee to explain. If the absences are unexcused, the Rules Committee recommends expulsion from the Legislature. Three legislators are to come before the committee next week. Between 23 and 30 legislators were at Thursday night's meeting at various times.

Jim Turner's bill establishing a Legislature Complaint Board called for the board to meet biweekly to hear complaints and suggestions from members of the University community. The board would vary its meetings from place to place. There was dispute on the details of the bill. Milton Cooke (SP) moved the bill be recommitted and it was on a divided vote. It was reported out of committee by a vote of 4-1.

Fleishman, referring to Crohn's leaving the hall, said, "This is typical of the type of irresponsibility which the UP has, on occasion, exhibited in the Student Legislature and it was particularly shameful since only four of the 12 UP legislators were present, only 1/3 of the number of persons the UP has in the student Legislature . . . there is absolutely no excuse for his trying to disrupt business by leaving the hall. And there is also no possible excuse for the UP's having only 33 1/3 attendance at Legislature . . . the Student Party had over 70% of its representatives present."

Crohn said, "Due to the fact that my colleagues of the Student Party sought to completely bottle down the procedure of the evening with what I consider to be unnecessary parliamentary mishmosh in an evennig in which there were to be an unusual amount of bills to come before the body. The SP unscrupously wasted the time of the Legislature. It is my opinion that in doing this the SP was only showing its majority might and exemplifying its usual policy of petty politics."

Though 30 legislators were accounted present, various calls for a quorum came in with 23, 23, 25 and 26. Absentees were: Sam Benard (UP); Tom Bennett (SP) —with debate squad; Sonia Bergen (SP); Gordon Brown (UP); Caroline Davis (SP); Anne Huffman (SP)—debate squad; Manning Muntzing (SP)—at Duke meeting; Elsie Peterson (SP); Claude Pope (UP); Bey Webb (UP)—with debate squad; Ed Hudgins (UP); Ruth Jones (SP); Charlie Ackerman (UP)— at quiz; Dan Wallace (SP), and Bob Harrington (SP)—debate squad.

The Legislature set up a commission to study the problem presented by the lack of University housing in sufficient quantity. The bill was ntroduced by Amy Cooke (SP).

Max Crohn (UP) introduced a bill concerning the seating situation at Memorial Hall. Stating that seating at the Hall is uncomfortable, the bill would start the wheels turning for the Legislature to take it upon itself to better arrange the hall.

A bill setting up a Student Welfare Board, introduced by Charlie Dean (SP), to handle resolutions dealing with the administration passed.

Chuck May's (SP) bill putting a legislator in charge of introducing legislation pertaining to Victory Village; Joel Fleishman's bill setting up a Social Facilites Commission to work with the IDC in solving campus social problems; and Tom Lambeth's bill setting up a training program for newly-elected legislators passed.

Max Crohn moved during the session that the resolution which sought to eliminate physical education for veterans be taken out of committee. The motion failed. The committee did not have copies of the bill and was unable to study it.

Sonia Bergen wa selected Clerk of the Legislature to replace Caroline Davis, who resigned to practice teach; Tom Lambeth was elected to the Publications Board, and Norwood Bryon was elected chairman of the Finance Committee.

Newman Plays At Salem College

Dr. William S. Newman, associate professor of music and chairman of instruction in piano here, presented a piano recital at Salem College, Winston-Salem.

Dr. Newman is author of "Thirteen Keyboard Sonatas of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries," "The Pianist's Problems" and "Keyboard Sonatas by the Sons of Bach." He has is preparation "A History of the Sonata Idea" and "Toward An Understanding of Music."

In addition to his positions here, Dr. Newman is chairman of the Senior Piano Committee of Music Teachers National Association. He is also a member of the Executive Board of American Musicological Society.

and even then might not avoid an unfavorable court action."

If the people reach the conclusion that " if we can't have segregated education, then we don't want any public education," the problem is still unsolved, Kramer said and continued:

"Then, if the states succeed in eliminating public education, one possibility would be that the federal goverment, unwilling to permit several million youngsters to remain uneducated in a modern world, might step in and take over the job."

Dr. Kramer analyzed several other suggested means of avoiding the court's decision.

Avoid Decision

1. Gerrymandering of school districts. This might succeed in cities if segregation adherent would tolerate about 75 per cent segregation. The present school boundaries follow racial boundaries to a large extent. It would not be true however in rural areas. Here would be required "gerrymandering that would make political gerrymandering look amateurish."

2. Separation of sexes in separate schools has been occasionally mentioned, mainly with the idea of avoiding emotional feeling by social relations between races. Again segregation adherents would have to be satisfied with incomplete segregation.

3. Manipulation of mental and physical standards for schools, thereby assigning "better" students to one school, "poorer" students to another. This might be so handled that the races remain segregated, Dr. Kramer said.

4. School assignment by administrators. Superintendents now have discretionary powers to assign certain students to specific schools. States might give them broader powers, and thus make possible continued segregation. However, each case could be challenged and brought to court. The result would probably be delay in settling the issue. However, the court, if faced with hundreds of such cases over a period of years, might devise a remedy to cope with this.

A variation on this plan would be immediately to desegregate all schools, then immediately permit parents to request transfers of their children.

5. Triple school system. Here white, Negro and mixed systems would be established on a voluntary basis. The whites would be expected to choose the white school; some communities might "informallay see to it" that Negroes chose the Negro schools. The result would probably be that there would be no mixed system. If there were, the financial burden would probably be too heavy. The South, Dr. Kramer stated, has had difficulty supporting two separate systems. What chance would there be with three?

The Duke professor outlined the following choices the Supreme Court now faces in dealing with the problem:

A. It can frame a decree stating that segregation will end at a given date, probably soon.

B. It can frame a decree stating that segregation will end gradually over a perior of years.

C. It can refer the matter of a decree to a "special master," a legal term referring to a leading legal authority who would then make the decision.

D. It can send the cases back to the lower courts, telling them to issue decreees and giving instruction as to the matter of time, and so forth.

Leaders Talk At Duke

Student leaders of Carolina and Duke, meeting at Duke Thursday night, mapped plans to prevent vandalism on the two campuses during the Thanksgiving holiday. A supper meeting of the groups served as a sounding board for preventative ideas.

The students agreed to point out to their respective student bodies the "immaturity" of vandalism and the stern punishment, possibly extending to suspension from school, that can result from defacing or destroying property on either campus.

The meeting, an anual affair, included a brief talk by Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver and by the Duke dean of men.

Tom Creasy, UNC student body president, and Duke Student Govermnent Association President Worth Lutz led the discussion.

—Monument—

January 27, 1835."

The obelisk on the campus of UNC is not the only tribute to the University's first president. Caldwell County is named for him, the only one in North Carolina named for an educator. There is a building on the campus which bears his name. There is also another tribute of a less distinguished nature over near Iron Mountain. In the lower part of the valley of Bowlin's Creek, there is a small eminence, once a volcano in Triassic times. The hill is known as Mount Bolus, an abbreviation of Diabolus. The name was given it by students in honor of President Caldwell because of his diabolic ingenuity in apprehending students.

So for those of you who have been wondering, Joe is going to have his monument put back in proper shape soon. They're just some more important things to be done first. Nothing's going to be hurt by its lying there for a little while longer, except, perhaps, Joes' dignity.

Dr. J. P. Harland Goes To Charlotte For Lecture

Dr. J. P. Harland left yesterday for Charlotte where he gave a lecture last night on "Archeology and the Bible" to the Men's Club of the Myers Park Methodist Church.

Cobb Invited

Cobb Dorm has been invited to a dance date at WC tonight.

Cobb's president, Louis Brumfield, said yesterday that WC's Bailey Dorm had extended the invitation to the "Country Club Boys" for the waffair, which gets under way at 8 o'clock.

He asked that all men who wished to go and needed transportation to see him in room 119, Cobb. Cars will be leaving at 6:30.

upon it. Actually the responsibility placed upon the honor courts under this measure will be far greater than it is at present.

And the last, and perhaps sole argument, which cannot successfully be dened is that the bill goes against past tradition. Tradition, and tradition alone, has demanded that everyone convicted of cheating shall be suspended, regardless of circumstances. How much finer a thing can we do by establishing a new tradition — a tradition which respects and concerns itself with the needs of the individual?

For the past 80 years the Honor Council has been a jury dispensing a rather dubious justice. How superior will the Honor Council now be under a re-vitalized tradition?

The answer is obvious: we will then have a court of mercy as well as one of justice.

Folks Liked Carnival

By MARILYN HEDRICK

The Tin Can Sports Party held last Thursday night looked like a Coney Island carnival on a busy Saturday night.

UNC students from dormitories, sororities and fraternities made up teams to compete in all kinds of games from the broad jump to golf putting to driving nails.

The Alpha Delta Pi and Sigma Nu team won first place in the sports event. McIver Dorm and the Kappa Sigma fraternity won second place.

In the sports event the students enjoyed basketball crip shooting, bowling, throwing darts, driving nails, obstacle runs and various other competitive sports.

The obstacle run seemed to be the most exerting event as students ducked through hurdles, jumped a five-foot stand and skimmered through a sawdust bed tryong to beat the clock.

Other entertainment included badminton, box hockey and archery.

A big square dance concluded the evening, with music furnished by the Rhythm Rangers. Some students were clogging (a snappy heel-toe rhythm) to the dance music while others stepped lively in the manner of their grandfathers.

As the evening concluded the atheletes and would-be athletes emptied their shoes of sawdust and left the fun-filled sports party a little tired but happy.

Interviewing Now Underway

The interviewing program of the Office of the Dean of Women, designed as a service to undergraduate women students on the campus, began on Oct. 21.

During the first semester, freshman and new transfer students receive a card specifying a date before which they are to make an appointment. Juniors who entered as freshmen students are also asked to come in for an interview to continue their personnel folder. Departure interviews are scheduled in the spring for graduating seniors.

The prefactory interview provides an opportunity to begin a personnel folder which contains a background record of scholarship, activities, interests and a record of experience in the University. The student is asked to provide the information. At this time she also receives the results of the Kuder Preference Test and the Ohio State University Psychological Examination which are give during the Orientation period to new students.

In addition, the program provides the opportunity for women students to meet and know the members of the personnel staff.

Before the senior woman leaves the campus, the departure interview is scheduled. It consists of bringing the personnel record up to date by obtaining an over-all picture of the period spent here. It not only completes the recording of significant information, but also presents an opportunity for the student's self-evaluation of her program and activities here.

The service continues after graduation when these records combined with those in the Central Office of Records, are used as a basis for recommendations and for other informative purposes.

University's Not Liable For TV Antennas, Says Official

By LOUIS KRAAR

A South Building official made it clear yesterday that the University would not assume financial responsibility for dorm television antennas damaged by Hurricane Hazel.

The official, Purchasing Director J. A. Branch, said the University acted only as an agent for the student Legislature in obtaining and installing the TV sets.

Branch cited the student Legislature bill granting the dorms the TV sets. The bill states in its last article that "after the appropriation (of the sets) the financial responsibility for maintenance . . . shall be assumed by the dorm to which it has been appropriated."

IDC Action

Branch made his statement after an announcement this week by Manning Muntzing, chairman of the Interdormitory Council, that the student dorm group would ask President Gordon Gray for financial aid in the antenna matter.

The IDC voted 23-11 to appeal to President Gray after Bruce Morton, president of Grimes Dorm, presented what he termed "the law of fixtures." According to Morton, a law student, as soon as the antennas were attached to dormitory roofs, they became University property.

Based On Judgment

Morton said he based his argument on a North Carolina Supreme Court case (Wentz v. Fincher) considered in 1851. The decision in that case, Morton said, stated "where one builds a rail fence on property owned by another, the title of the rails passes to the owner of the land."

The IDC, in making its motion, said that Director of Operations J. S. Bennett had officially said the tangled antennas were the responsibility of individual dormitories. However, the student group will base its protest on the theory that dorms have only limited funds and that such repair would exhaust their appropriations.

Muntzing would not say whether or not he agreed with Morton's stand, but he did say he would go along with the IDC's decision to write President Gray. Muntzing also complained that the antennas were poorly installed.

Creasy Commends Bi-Partisan Handling Of Book-X Problem

Student body President Tom Creasy issued a statement yesterday concerning the bi-partisan committee on Book Store profits.

"One project that both parties hind has ben the Book-X and vending machines profits project." Creasy said.

The three students on the committee are Max Chron (UP), Charlie Hyatt (SP) and Creasy.

Creasy lauded Hyatt's efforts in his statement by saying, "he has been on the committee for two years and has put forth continual effort in working for better prices at the book store."

Creasy also announced in his statement that the entire Campus Store Committee will meet this week to further the plans of the student committee.

Another Bouquet

Creasy tossed another bouquet to another committee member, Sam Wells, in the statement. Said Creasy. he "has been invaluable in preparing a case and strengthening the dormitories' argument for having the profits (from vending machines) returned to their respective dormitories."

The president ended his statement with the wish that "these two very important projects be kept ou of student politics."

He continued, "Charlie Hyatt and myself have agreed that it has been and will be necessary that both parties work together on the vending machine and Book-X profit project; for only by presenting a united front to the adenting a united front to the administration and trustees can we hope to accomplish our goals."

Dating Discussion

Mrs. Arnold Nash, formerly Carolina's marriage counselor, will speak on "Do's and Dont's of Dating" at the Freshman Fellowship meeting tommorow night.

The meeting will be held upstairs in Lenoir Hall at 6:15 p. m.

Mrs. Nash will consider questions on dating, courting, marriage and sex that have been asked by members of the Fellowship. There will be a question and answer period following her talk.

Dorm Council Was Set Up In Autumn Of '35

By NEIL BASS

It was a crisp, sparkling day in the autumn of 1935. In a smoke-filled room in South Building a decision was being made which was to leave a vivid impression on the "Carolina Mode of Life" for a great number of succeeding years. This was the genesis of the Interdormitory Council.

Since this comparatively unmomentous beginning, there has been a remarkable transformation. The once unimportant transformation. The once unimportant group has become an institution. The council has become the coordinating agent, the very pulse of all men's dorm activities.

The principle in part on which the organization was founded is set forth in its by-laws in these words: "To promote and maintain an efficient system of dormitory government and to foster a wholesome program of social activities."

Not only has the dorm government lived up to its established ideology, but it has gone still further. For by virtue of the group's continued efficiency, and fair policies, it has been vested with the power to speak for the dorm man.

Power

This power evolves from the principle on which the group was originated . . . that the council is composed of representatives from every men's dorm on campus. Each dorm has a voice in the diplomatic affairs of the organization.

Such representatives are duly elected by the individual dorms before Oct. 15 of each year and are required to take an oath stating that they "will work diligently to maintain suitable dormitory conditions" before assuming office.

The IDC is headed by Manning Muntzing, current president. On his executive deparment falls the task of synchronizing the vast arteries of the organization, the dorms. Assisting him are those leaders: Bob Barlowe, vice president, Richard Haywood, secretary, Dave Whitaker, treasurer, and John Scott, court chairman.

Primary and practically indispensible links of the Interdormitory Council are the functions provided by the various commttees.

The committees and their chairmen are: coed visiting, Bob Harrington; dorm improvements, Baxter McIntyre; finance, David Whitaker; vending machine, Sam Wells; rules, Bob Barlowe, and social, John Beshara.

Social

The last com., in its initial year has presented one of the most active agendas for social activity that the campus has ever known, and, accordnig to its chairman, "the program is just beginning."

The statement aptly describes the philosophy that the present IDC possesses. As president Muntzing puts it, "The council covers many phases of dorm life, each of which has a definite goal."

Expenses

Itemized expense accounts of the candidates in the fall elections are dul by 6 p.m. Monday. They may be turned in at the Student Government Office in Graham Memorial or to Graham Rights in 28 Steele. Any candidates failing to report their expenditures will be disqualified from the election.

Pease Porridge Hot . . .

The newspaper had previously complained of the color of the dining hall's scrambled eggs.

Design School Is Honored

N. C. State College's School of Design has been chosen by the State Department in Washington to help prepare an exhibition on architectural education in America.

It is one of seven of the nation's major institutions of architecture picked for the job.

The exhibition will be made of approximately 40 panels(six from each school. The panels will illuschitecture as reflecting in the work of advanced students.

Dean Henry L. Kamphoefner of State College reported that the exhibition will be circulated throughout Europe and South America over a two-year period by the U. S. Information Agency.

The exhibit items are to be delivered to the State Department by March 1. Eduardo Catalano, acting head of the Department of Agriculture in the School of Design is in charge of the preparation of State's exhibit.

Those schools picked in addition to State's School of Design are the University of California, Harvard, Illinois Institute of Technology, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, University of Michigan and Yale University.

Management Official Here For Confabs

C. K. Morrison, from the Civil Service Commission in Washington, met with students here last week to announce the annual Civil Service Junior Management Assistant Examination.

"The purpose of the Junior Management Assistant Examination," Morrison said "is to recruit outstanding young people with interest in careers leading to high-level positions in the Federal government. The examination is intended to bring into Gorvernment those young men and women who show outstanding promise of developing into future administrators."

Positions are available "for persons with background in public or business administration or the social sciences who are interested in and have an aptitude for administrative work."

For further information, Morrison requested to see Professor Paul W. Wager or Professor Fred N. Cleaveland in Caldwell Hall.

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish Whip UNC In Top-Heavy Game, 42-13

By FRED BABSON

Parker And McMullen Snag Aerials For Only UNC Scores

NOTRE DAME STADIUM, SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 14 — The mighty Notre Dame legions trotted onto the field and simply outclassed the Tar Heels of North Carolina, 42-13, here today before more than 55,000 fans.

North Carolina, ranked eighth in the nation in pass defense before today, were the victims of a devastating aerial attack, conducted by four Irish quarterbacks, as Coach Terry Brennan cleared the bench after acquiring a safe lead early in the game. The victors gained 213 yards through the air.

Notre Dame's All-America candidate, Ralph Guglielmi, guided the Irish to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter, completing seven of 12 passes, one for a touchdown, then retired for the afternoon.

The Irish also maintained supremacy on the ground, grinding out 185 yards rushing, not counting a kickoff return of 77 yards and a pass interception while Carolina could only manage an aggregate of 64 yards.

In the first half the Irish dominated the activities overwhelmingly, gaining 90 yards on the ground, 175 in the air, and rolling up 12 first downs; while UNC picked up only 29 yards rushing, nine yards passing, in accumulating three first downs. Notre Dame led at the half, 28-0.

Most of the Irish regulars were out of the second half, as Brennan experimented with his sophomores, and not until then did Carolina manage to make two successive first downs. Paul Hornung, 18-year-old, 6'2", 190-pound sophomore quarterback handled a greater part of the signal-calling chores for Notre Dame after Guglielmi left the scene. Hornung, who is being heralded as potentially one of the greatest Irish quarterbacks ever, gained 72 yards in seven carries for a 10.2 yard rushing average, besides running a pass interception back 70 yards. He completed only two of seven passes, but some of the blame for his lack of success in this department lay in his ends inability to hold onto the ball.

Senior halfback Connie Gravitte only carried the ball four times, but gained 41 yards, to lead the losers. Most of Gravitte's yardage came on his 34 yard scamper in the third quarter.

End Will Frye and Center George Stavnitski were the outstanding defensive players for the losers.

Stocking Fund Starts

This year, as in the past four, the Empty Stocking Fund is continuing its service to the Chapel Hill community.

Already this year, requests from 250 needy families in the Chapel Hill area have poured in to fund headquarters. Last year, 500 families received Christmas boxes.

In past years, the Fund has operated on a centralized basis. Gifts, hundreds of them, were collected, sorted and wrapped by the Junior Service League, which sponsors the fund. This year, if the number of donations last year was any indication, the job will be too big for the League to handle. Therefore the program has been put on an individual and group basis, using the adoption method which has been successful in Durham for some time.

Those who wish to adopt familes should notify Mrs. G. P. Childress, the chairman of the Fund, at 9-9303 before December 20. Upon notification, the committee will furnish the adopter with the names, ages, sizes, special needs and address of the family adopted.

Education Students To Start Practice Teaching Tomorrow

UNC's School of Education Teacher preparation program will move into the second phase of the fall semester's work tomorrow, as some 55 men and women transfer from the University campus to the classrooms of the state's public schools.

By Jan. 21, the prospective teachers will have completed eight weeks in the actual work of classroom teaching and management under the guidance of competent teachers in the public schools.

Nineteen of the group have prepared for elementary teaching; the remaining 36 have prepared for teaching in various fields of secondary education, including English, social studies, mathematics, Spanish, physical education and music.

Schools receiving student teachers include Goldsboro, Raleigh, schools of Leakesville-Spray-Draper, Jamestown, Albemarle, New Bern, Lowes Grove, Sanford, Durham, Charlotte and Chapel Hill.

The program of teacher training, which has been followed for several years by the University, includes a half-semester of concentrated preparation for field experience, consisting of a study of records and reports; lesson and unit planning; observation, and school visitation. The second half-semester is then devoted to work ni the classroom.

The future teachers live in the school community and become a part of the faculty of the school to which they are assigned. In addition to classroom teaching, they will direct out-of-class activities, attend faculty meetings and workshops, observe other teachers and their methods, become acquainted wtih all phases of school administration and participate in community affairs related to the school.

State's Brief Is Ready

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's contentions on the subject of segregation in the public schools are scheduled to reach the U. S. Supreme Court Monday.

Some 40 copies of the state's brief in the segregation cases were placed in the mail by the attorney general's office yesterday. They will be released to the press of the state in morning papers tomorrow.

In declaring school segregation unconstitutional last spring, the Supreme Court invited states with segregated schools to participate in arguments on how the decision is to be made effective. The court will hear oral arguments ih tne cases next month. North Carolina was one of the states' which accepted the invitation to join in the arguments.

In its brief, the state is expected to ask the court for the longest possible time to place desegration into effect. It is also expected to urge that federal district courts and local school officials be given wide discretion in deciding the status of particular schools and school districts.

How Red Is The Schoolhouse?

National Education Week comes to an end today, and we would echo for you some of the week's words, spoken in behalf of educational freedom by a teacher, a preacher and a politician. Their speeches were made in Des Moines, Iowa, Atlantic City, New Jersey, and Guilford College, North Carolina on different days. What they had for their audiences was a uniform warning: Keep our schools free.

The teacher was Dr. Courtney G. Smith, president of Swarthmore College, who spoke at Guilford's Founders' Celebration. "We must withstand," he said, "the anti-intellectual currents of our day . . . the effects of virtuous but blinkered statement," which have produced a climate of fear, so that "any statement concerning Jeffersonian democracy is automatically preceded with the remark: 'Of course, I'm no Communist, but . . .'"

New Jersey Governor Robert B. Meyner, speaking Thursday in Atlantic City, told a group of educators that the country's teachers have been "the victims of demagogues" and as a result many of them are afraid to deal with controversial issues. And he submitted evidence: a survey of teachers in his state which showed that most New Jersey teachers feel it is dangerous to compare the Russian and American systems for fear their motives will be misunderstood.

And Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam told the Iowa State Education Association, "Men who declare that in every little red schoolhouse there is a little red teacher bearing false witness that is well nigh treason."

Bishop Oxnam said, "It is unfair and un-American to call upon our teachers to serve in antiquated structures for inadequate remuneration. But what is even worse, the teacher has had to face the criticism of ignoramuses who have gratuitously questioned the teachers' patriotism."

These three citizens who brought such similar messages to their listeners this week, are not, we suggest Quixotes tilting with windmills. There is a threat to the freedom of our schools, and its name is not Communism, but demagoguery. Every day, the insidious news releases of organized agencies come to the Daily Tar Heel office, pointing out, often in illiterate fashion, ways of saving the University from subversion. We cannot help noticing how valuable a purpose they would serve for the Communists if they found they way into print and contributed to a loss of faith in our schools.

It is encouraging to see that men of the caliber of Bishop Oxnam, Dr. Smith and Governor Meyner recognize this threat to scholastic freedom for the treachery it is. As Bishop Oxnam noted, "The schools will determine whether tomorrow's skies are to be filled with falling bombs or tomorrow's streets are to be filled with brothers."

Dr. Odum & Varied America

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

Americans traveling comfortably in their own land and visitors from overseas may touch down at the big cities, stay at the sleek, many-storied hotels, gaze at the glittering big-store windows, sight-see in any one of the cars sold by the million, and observe that America is all the same.

But do these people know that in Kentucky green beans are cooked with bacon, with milk in Maine; that house ceilings are calcimined in Massachusetts but papered in Iowa; that New Englanders cool off on the piazza on a warm evening, Alabamans on the gallery; that hot breads are wholesome in Arkansas but slow poison in Wisconsin; that the trail of one type of village house can be traced from Virginia, through Missouri, to New Mexico?

SATCHMO ARMSTRONG

From His First Two-Bit Blast To His Present Gravel-Growling Greatness, Satchmo's Kept 'Em Happy All The Way

New Orleans Life, Loves, & Music

'Yaaas, Lawd;' It's Louis Armstrong

Fred Powledge

SATCHMO: My Life in New Orleans. By Louis Armstrong. Prentice-Hall, New York. 246 pages, with 14 pages in black-and-white pictures. $3.50.

Louis Armstrong received 12 cents for his first band engagement. Since then, he has steadily progressed until now the "Satchmo" is rated by music lovers throughout three continents as the white-eyed, gravel-voiced pinnacle of jazz.

Louis Armstrong did not come by his fame easily. He tells all about it in a book, My Life In New Orleans.

The book is a simple book. It has simple words, and simple sentences. To some people the sentences and words may be too simple. But to the people who sat spellbound as Louis Armstrong played "Sleepy Time Down South" in Memorial Hall last spring, to the people who went collegiately crazy when he growled "yeah" at the end of his song, the book is a good one.

The book is a history of New Orleans in the first quarter of this century, the time when King Oliver and Oscar (Pappa) Celestin and Sidney Bechet were carving their ways through the rigors of Crescent City life into the big time. And it is a history of a simple man nicknamed first Dippermouth, then Satchelmouth, finally Satchmo.

Louis Armstrong was just a kid when he pulled a pistol out of his pocket and shot it in celebration of New Year's Eve. The shooting of said pistol landed him in the New Orleans Colored Waifs' Home for Boys, where he learned to handle a cornet.

When he was released from the Waifs' Home, (". . . The place was more like a health center or a boarding school than a boys' jail. We played all kinds of sports, and we turned out some mighty fine baseball players, swimmers and musicians. All in all I am proud of the days I spent at the Colored Waifs' Home for Boys . . .), he became a musician in fact.

New Orleans funerals were his specialties . . . "It was a real sad moment when the Onward Brass Band struck up the funeral march . . . Everybody cried, including me. Black Benny beat the bass drum with a soft touch, and Babe Matthews put a handkerchief under his snare to deaden the tone. "Nearer My God to Thee" was played as the coffin was lowered into the grave . . .

". . . funerals in New Orleans are sad until the body is finally lowered into the grave and the Reverend says, 'ashes to ashes and dust to dust.' After the brother was six feet under ground the band would strike up one of those good old tunes like "Didn't He Ramble," and all the people would leave their worries behind. Particularly when King Oliver blew that last chorus in high register."

And daytimes he peddled coal in Storyville, New Orleans' famous red-light district. Later, ". . . about four o'clock when the gals started piling in from their night's work," he would make music in Storyville's dark, smoky dives.

"They bought us drinks," Satchmo writes, "and we started those good old blues."

From the first Louis was surrounded by ladies of doubtful character. He remembers several "stepfathers," and during his early days in Storyville he got to know the inhabitants of the red-light houses rather intimately.

"I was always afraid of the hustling gals," he writes, "because of my experience with the chick who pulled her bylow knife on me and stabbed me in the shoulder.

"Still the whores continued to chase me.

"Of course," Satchmo says (and you can almost see his eyes gleam when he says it), "I must admit I just couldn't resist letting some of the finer ones catch up with me once in a while."

During the years, Satchelmouth Armstrong has served to bridge the gap between a real American style of music and the American public, which has a strange knack for accepting the commercial, cheap version over the real one. Satchmo has, with the possible exception of his latest record, "Skokian," fed the public only the true Dixieland style.

His repertiore of records is the history of jazz. In 1947, he teamed up with Jack Teagarden, Barney Bigard (who's still with Satchmo, and who played here with him last spring), Dick Carey, Sidney Catlett, Arvell Shaw and huge Velma Middleton (who, with Louis, rocked Memorial Hall with "Baby It's Cold Outside,") and let go with "Muskrat Ramble," "Royal Garden Blues," "Stars Fell On Alabama," "How High the Moon," "High Society" and "Body and Soul."

He's played "When the Saints Go Marching In," "Dippermouth Blues," "New Orleans Function" (also known as "Flee As A Bird—Oh, Didn't He Ramble"), "A Kiss To Build A Dream On" and "Blueberry Hill."

Armstrong, whom I personally feel is the greatest jazz artist of all time, once said "Dixieland is a way you feel—it ain't something you say."

The book is a good book, if for no other reasons than (1) it was written by a jazz great, a man who will be remembered long after his hundred years are out; and, (2) it is an accurate, although not too chronological, history of New Orleans jazz.

When the University wakes up and sees the importance of jazz in American it could pick no better textbook than My Life In New Orleans.

The Satchmo sums up what is the first part of his life—he says he'll "live to be a hundred or more"—with this bit of prose:

"I don't want anyone to feel I'm posing as a plaster saint. Like everyone I have my faults, but I always have believed in making an honest living. I was determined to play my horn against all odds, so . . ."

and I had to sacrifice a whole lot of pleasure to do

It looks like old Dippermouth, white eyes and all, won. If the past 54 years are any indication of what the next 46 "or more" will be, I need only say what Satchmo says at the end of "Sleepy Time Down South:"

"Yaaas, Lawd."

Finnegans Wake: A Literary Incense

Ed Yoder

The resonant voice of James Joyce, reading a famous passage from Finnegans Wake, paused, the bell rang, and students began moving out of the English 97 class.

A girl turned to me as we were going out and said, "I just can't see the sense lot his." Hers wasn't an unintelligent or indifferent statement; for during the preceding hour we had been musing collectively over one of the English language's most esoteric pieces of literature — namely Joyce's Finnegans Wake.

This long, subconscious dream-narrative has puzzled a lot of people for a long time. Some quite accomplished students of literature are frank to admit that they never have read the novel in entirety. I think I would look askance at anyone who claimed to have done so, anyway.

It is recorded that Thornton Wilder, who wrote a play, Skin of Our Teeth, based on Finnegans Wake, has read the novel carefully several times. Likewise Edmund Wilson has read it. Gilbert Highet estimates that out of every thousand of us, three or four own copies and one has read it. He says he's tried 15 times and failed 15 times.

Opening Finnegans Wake at random, you are likely to be confronted by such a watarcrass shartclaths aff tha arkbashap af sentence as "and he had ta barraw tha watarcrass shartclaths aff the arkbishop of Yarak!" (one of Joyce's more intelligible sentences) or a completely puzzling string of words like "Was she wearing shubladey's tiroirs in humour of her hubbishhobbis, Massa's star stellar?" Often the natural human reaction to something that puzzles us is one of contempt running to scorn or indifference running to apathy. Most likely, we want to know whether such monstrosities (by ordinary standards) as Finnegans Wake have a reason for being

I think they do—and, as we try to understand the experiments that are being made, we ought, at the same time, to remember that what seems strange today may be as clear as a flash tomorrow, both literally and figuratively.

James Joyce is identified most commonly with the so-called "stream of consciousness" writers. Getting onto home soil, Ernest Hemingway and William Faulkner, our two most recent winners of the Nobel Prize for literature, have been identified with this mode of writing. The idea held to by the stream of consciousness writers is that life doesn't always assume as much order as orderly-written literature would lead us to believe. That is, when we look out at a situation, it often suggests something else, which in turn suggests something else — and so on. This conception of the sub-conscious mind—the inner mind that records our sense impressions — as something joined and flowing and continuous like a river is not new.

Lawrence Sterne's Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy, Gentleman, published 1760-67 in the mid-eighteenth century, is a sort of literary granddaddy to a novel like Finnegans Wake. Sterne, a wily craftsman, is more interested in suggesting his story than in telling it. He says he got disgusted with the many rapid-fire readers who skim nonchalantly over their novels, searching for the threads of the story, and fail to get the asides. So he writes in Tristram Shandy, a novel that is impossible to read as you would read today's newspaper stories (this column, for example).

He catches one of his readers off base. Madam, he asks at one point, do you recall such and such a previous happening in this novel? Of course she doesn't remember. So Sterne sends her back to find the incident before she can continue the story.

The point of stream of consciousness writing, stated rather abstractly, is that these writers are attempting to divest themselves of the power of logical arrangement and put things down as they occur, logical or not. It is not an old or a novel device, then; but when so much of it is compressed into so small a place, as in Joyce, it becomes rather weird.

One of the most typical passages, and as well, one of the most famous, in Finnegans Wake is the washerwomen episode, where the two are discussing Humphrey Chimpdon Earwicker's wife, Anna Livia Plurabelle. This is the passage that Joyce himself recorded; his moderately pitched, modulated voice gives it an oral touch that is highly explanatory in itself.

We were listening to the record in Dr. Russell's English 97 class before the girl indicated that she was puzzled. This is the passage into which Joyce worked scores of puns on the names of rivers.

The river, the flowing of life, is the symbol in the novel for Anna Livia Plurabelle. This is from the passage, too, which Gilbert Highet recites to lull himself to sleep when he is wakeful:

> Can't hear with the waters of. The chittering waters of. Flittering bats, fieldmice balk talk. HO! Are you not gone ahome? What Tom Malone? Can't hear with the bawk of bats, all the liffeying waters of. Ho, talk save us! My foos won't moss. I feel as old as yonder elm . . . Tell me, tell me, tell me, elm! Night night! Telmetale of stem or stone. Beside the rivering waters of, hitherandthithering waters of. Night!

Vocal rendition lends a real melody to this.

In sum, I wouldn't say that a book like Finnegans Wake is one into which the average reader wants to plow for the sake of reading a book. He who picks up this novel is treading on distant and fertile ground. The most important attitude should be one of curiosity about what the author has in mind. It is disgusting to turn to a literary page, as I did, in one of the state newspapers and find literary experimentation compared to the jottings of the mentally-deranged. Besides being bad taste, this is downright illiterate.

Bacon remarked once that "some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested." Finnegans Wake can certainly be tasted, but it is next to impossible to swallow it, let alone chew and digest it.

With apologies to Mr. Bacon, I suggest that when you are in the right mood, it is the book to be inhaled like incense.

A Look Into Faulkner's Private World

Louis Kraar

FOLKS IN THE tiny college town of Oxford, Mississippi called him "Count No'count." His dad was secretary and business manager of Ole Miss, and Bill Faulkner did odd jobs about town.

Bill Faulkner tried attending the college as a special student, but after flunking English his second semester he quit and went back to odd jobs, loafing, and—occasionally—writing.

A friend, Philip Stone, encouraged Bill to write more, helped him get located in New Orleans, and William Faulkner was on his way.

Such is the background, at least part of it, of the man who won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1950. The story of Faulkner's life is an unusual one, and The Private World of William Faulkner, by Robert Coughlan (Harper & Brothers, 161 pp.) depicts it in readable terms.

Faulkner, who told a college English class once that Thomas Wolfe was his choice of contemporary writers, grew up with a rich family background. And it was this background, typified by his great-grandfather William Cuthbert Faulkner, who provided the material for books about struggles and the South.

Faulkner's great-grandfather commanded soldiers, wrote books and built a great railroad. Faulkner puts his conquests on paper in a dramatic manner in novels like Sartoris.

Coughlan in this biographical work depicts Faulkner as a quiet man whose life was as full of inner conflicts as his books.

The author concludes from Faulkner's routine that "one is tempted to believe that a great part of his writing has been the product literally of his unconscious mind . . ."

Conscious or unconscious, Faulkner stands out as an impressive literary figure, as well as an unusual person. He wrote such works as The Sound and the Fury and As I Lay Dying, and he won a Nobel prize. Then, when he needed money, Faulkner turned to Hollywood and the movies; before that he wrote what he considers his big potboiler Sanctuary, which had a great popular success.

When Faulkner stood in Stockholm and told the "literary people" his creed, he gave one of the speeches of the century.

CPU Roundup

Jim Turner

(This is the first in a weekly series of columns by members of the Carolina Political Union. Each week the CPU member who is sponsoring the bill to be considered by the group will explain his stand in this column.—Editor.)

The Carolina Political Union will discuss on Sunday night at 8 o'clock in the Grail Room a resolution which proposes in on fell swoop to repeal all laws which legislate in any way personal vice. This is to include laws pertaining to prostitution, gambling, alcohol, bigamy, and Sabbath activities.

While this perhaps seems on the surface to be the instrument of a bunch of libertines airing their favorite pipe dreams, it actually involves one of today's forgotten political problems, that of personal liberty. In these days of McCarthyism the basic political axiom that the individual is sovereign in his personal actions lies covered by years of legislative and judicial encroachments.

In truth the only sphere in which power can rightfully be wielded over a member of society against his will is that in which he does harm to others. Admitted that a man can do harm to himself which will affect those around him and at times society as a whole, yet public opinion is the proper device which offsets this, and appeals to an optional respectability on his part. Politicians, according to John Stuart Mill, probably the leading political philosopher of the 19th century, "have occupied themselves rather in inquiring what things society ought to like or dislike than in questioning whether its likings or dislikings should be a law to individuals. They preferred endeavoring to alter the feelings of mankind on the particular points on which they were themselves heretical, rather than make common cause in the defense of freedom."

As Mill says, the laws which grow up on these subjects are usually reflections of the personal likes and dislikes of those who make them and soon become outdated in the forward advance of humanism. Early Massachusetts had a penal code as strict on card playing and dancing as are laws today on theft and arson. Personal morality, always a relative concept, in the final analysis turns out to be only enlightened utility.

Not only does an individual have a right to act as he or she pleases, but any two or more people have an innate freedom to unite for any purpose not involving harm to others.

Furthermore no society which does not hold these rights absolute and unqualified can not call itself free, regardless of its type of government.

Perhaps a few limiting words should be said in closing about this proposal. It is meant to apply only to fully mature individuals and not in any sense to children. It does not purport to endorse any of the vices, but merely to free them from legislative control. On the whole, however, the Carolina Political Union has chosen wisely to discuss this timely topic. All students are invited to attend, as usual.

Duke Alumnus Writes Humorous Book About Army

Recently, an ex-campus leader and politician was inducted into the Army and reported back to me that "the Army fully lives up to his most hellish expectations," and just as recently Random House introduced a new author and book to the reading public. The book is titled No Time For Sergeants (Random House, 214 pp, $2.95), and the author, Mac Hyman, a Duke alumnus, (don't let that discourage you from reading the book) convincingly depicts the Hargrove antics of recruit Will and his little friend Ben, who go through a series of seemingly endless misadventures.

My friend who was recently inducted isn't laughing at a couple of situations like Will's in which he doubtlessly has been involved himself, but his uniform is too new to fit naturally. His story takes place at Fort Jackson, S. C., and Will is at a place called Fort Thompson, Ga., also a Third Army area. That's where the resemblance ends. For, the follies of Will are akin to the improbable escapades of the Ring Lardner, Ed Streeter, World War I Johnnies, and the more recent mishaps of Hargrove and Maulden's Joe.

Will didn't particularly mind being drafted. His paw, though, not liking the manner in which the draft board agent came out to their farm demanding draft-dodger Will to go back with him, wouldn't let Will be toted off in a car with so uncourteous a stranger. So Paw ups and barricades the farm with barbed wire and has his shooting irons waiting when the agent, aided by the police returns. Paw finally had to let Will go, but he did receive the satisfaction of making Will walk all 27 miles.

Course Will, now, did right well for himself during the first few days in the Army. He only massacred half-dozen or so recruits in the latrine one night when they were having a mite of a joke with little Ben. And, too, Will even managed to get himself into the Air Force even though he couldn't understand Yankee-talk hardly none. But h'it weren't no matter, 'cause Will made up his mind to do right and even managed to pass a psychiatric test and got into gunnery school.

You'll laugh at Will; you'll like him, but you'll laugh at him. If you've yet to face the fears of the armed forces, read about Will and get your laughs now; you might even pick up some valuable information on what is ahead of you. And if you already have your own scars, go ahead and read it anyway. It's cheaper than a psychiatrist and it's guaranteed to do as much good.

For a first book Hyman has come through with a remarkably clever piece of comedy, presented subjectively and, for a change, in natural dialect—John Beshara.

Blue Devils Win Another Step Toward Orange Bowl Date

Barger, Jurgenson, Post, Nelson, Pascal Pace Duke Victory Over Deacs, 28-21

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Nov. 13—(AP)—Duke's football team rebounded from a scare in the fourth period today to throttle Wake Forest's Deacons, 28-21, and take another step along the path the Blue Devils hope will lead to the Orange Bowl.

Duke scored twice in the first four minutes of the third period to take a 21-0 lead before the aroused Deacons, who missed three scoring chances in the first half, came to life.

Wake Forest tallied twice after Duke's third score, but Duke applied the crusher right after the second Wake Forest score, early in the last period. Sophomore quarterback Sonny Jurgensen and halfback Ed Post clicked on a 65-yard pass play to put the game beyond recall.

Barger Key Man

Capt. Jerry Barger, Duke quarterback, engineered his team's first three scores. He flipped a second period pitchout to halfback Bob Pascal, who ran wide around right end for the last six yards of an 85-yard drive.

Duke swept 79 yards on three plays, a 15-yard penalty impeding the drive somewhat, after the second half kickoff. Barger hit end Tracy Moon in the end zone from the 19 for the score.

Some three minutes later Barger went 42 yards on a keep play to score.

Guard Jim Nelson's four conversions for Duke make his year's record 16 in a row.

State Defeats Richmond, 14-6

RALEIGH, Nov. 13—(AP)—Sophomore halfback George Marinkov shook loose on an 82-yard kickoff return to lead N. C. State to a 14-6 victory over Richmond today before a crowd of 7,500.

The Wolfpack had a 7-6 lead in the closing minutes when the pint-sized Marinkov, who leads the Atlantic Coast Conference in kick-off returns, took a Richmond kick on his 13 and raced to the Spider's five before he was dragged down by halfback Ed Santoro.

On the second down Marinkov plunged over from the one. Guard Al D'Angelo converted the second of the Wolfpack's two extra points.

State rolled 80 yards for a second period touchdown with quarterback Eddie West flipping an eight-yard pass to end Ronnie Gall for the score.

Richmond, sparked by a 30-yard punt runback by halfback Dan Wagner, moved 45 yards for its touchdown midway in the final period.

Santoro passed to end Phil Curley from the six for the touchdown.

State end Harry Lodge, who played an outstanding defensive game, blocked guard Bob Sgro's extra point kick attempt.

Wildcat Eleven Routs Memphis St., 33-7

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 13—(AP)—Kentucky packed the buk of its scoring punch into the last half to rout Memphis State, 33-7, today and insure a winning percentage this football season.

The victory was Kentucky's fourth straight and its sixth in nine starts as it worked the first time this season against the single wing system in a prep for for next week's finale with traditional rival Tennessee, another single wing outfit.

PRINCETON UPSETS YALE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 13—Inspired by Royce Flippin, back in action for the first time in nearly a month, fired-up Princeton upset Yale 21-14 today with Flippin scoring all three touchdowns for the Tigers. The winning one came with only 16 seconds left in the game.

—Irish Win—

Trailing 42-0 in the last quarter, the Tar Heels capitalized on an intercepted pass and a Notre Dame fumble to shove across two tallies, thus avoiding the humiliation of a whitewash.

Center Bill Kirkman intercepted an aerial thrown by fourth string Irish quarterback Jim Bigelow on the North Carolina 42. Albert Long fired two straight passes to Larry Muschamp, good for a combined gain of 26 yards. On the next play Long looked for a receiver downfield, saw none, and lobbed one to Ken Keller in the left flat. Keller reversed his feild, running laterally the width of the field and down to the five yard line where he was finally knocked out of bounds. With first and goal, Long sent Keller around right end, but he was hemmed in and lost two yards. A pass was incomplete on the next play, but the second time Long pitched, he grooved a strike to Larry Parker in the end zone for a score. Long also converted, making the count 42-7, Notre Dame.

A few minutes later, ND's Bigelow completed a pass to Pete Neznesky, but the sophomore end fumbled when tackled by fullback George Wallin, Wallin recovering for the Tar Heels. Doug Farmer, at quarterback for UNC, hit Parker with a toss, good for ten yards. Notre Dame drew a five-yard penalty, then Farmer threw to Halfback Larry McMullen, who took it on the goal line and went over. Farmer's placement was wide, and Carolina trailed 42-13 with 35 seconds remaining.

The Irish got off to a quickstart when Jim Morse took the game-opening kick-off on his goal line and sped 78 yards to the Carolina 22, where Don Klochak overtook him. Guglielmi sent Joe Heap into the line for two yards; Morse added two more; and Don Schaefer smashed for nine yards and a first down. Guglielmi gained two, then passed to Morse for seven yards to the North Carolina one yard line. Heap trotted over left guard and scored standing standing up on the next play. Schaefer converted. ND-7; NC-0. The score remained the same at the close of the first chapter.

In the second stanza the Irish gassed their machine up and rolled to three touchdowns to put the game on ice.

The second Irish TD was set up by Guglielmi's screen pass to Heap which carried down to Carolina's seven yard line. Heap swept right end on a pitchout from Guglielmi to go over untouched. Schaefer converted. ND-14; NC-0.

The nevt ND score was practically all Guglielmi, as he connected with Heap on a long toss up the middle for 41 yards; then hit Matz for 16 yards; and climaxed the 82-yard aerial drive with a fourth down, eight-yard toss to Morse in the end zone. ND-21; NC-0. Guglielmi retired after this, and Hornung and Tom Carey took the rein.

A 47-yard pass play, Carey to Halfback Dean Studer, highlighted a 75-yard scoring drive, which saw Carey flip one nine yards to End Jim Munro for TD No. 4, with 40 seconds left in the first half.

Notre Dame's third period tally came when Hornung faked beautifully on a dive play, keeping the ball himself and scampering 38 yards t othe Carolina four. Fullback Frank Pinn smashed over for the score. Hornung's placement was good. ND-35; NC-0, at the end of the third period.

Hornung attempted a 14-yard field goal, which was unsuccessful, on the first play of the last period.

Scatbacks Set Gamecock Pace

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 13 (AP)—Halfbacks Mike Caskey and Carl Brazell, South Carolina's whizbang scatbacks, led the Gamecacks in a 27-0 South Carolina cocks in a 27-0 victory over Virginia here today before 19,000 Boy Scout Day fans in clear weather.

Sophomore quarterback Mackie Prickett kept the pump primed with expert signal calling and passing.

The two halfbacks combined in 87, 62 and 79-yard touhdown drives.

The two halfbacks combined in 87, 62 and 79-yard touchdown thrusts. A last minute pass interception at the Virginia 32 set up the final touchdown.

Caskey picked up 19, 9 and 8, and Brazell got 15 late in the first period to put the ball on the Virginia three. Fullback Bill Worhman plunged over in two tries as the second stanza opened. End Joe Silas placekicked the first of three conversions.

Claskey dashed for 16 yards up the middle and Brazell rolled wide for 15 in the second scoring drive that was capped by his eight-yard touchdown sweep to the left.

Brazell returned a punt 13 yards from his 21 then took 13 and 3-yard passes from Prickett in the fourth period to set up Caskey's 46-yard scoring run on a four-yard pass from Prickett.

Sub end Billy Rivers intercepted a Virginia pass at the visitors 32 and returned it 21 yards to the 11. Later sub halfback Tom Woodlee swept wide left for nine yards and a touchdown.

Ohio State used just six plays to cover 87 yards in the first quarter. Watkins went the last 30 yards, and tackle Francis Machinsky threw the key block. Watkins fired the drive with a 28-yard sprint down the left sidelines, and Cassady contributed a 23-yard run.

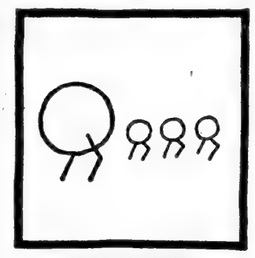
Szymanski Hears Cheer From Hospital Bed

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 13 (AP)—Notre Dame center Dick Szymanski, resting in a hospital 1,000 miles away, today heard a cheer given for him just before the Irish-North Carolina football game started today.

Szymanski was listening via radio in a Philadelphia hospital when the Notre Dame cheering section gave rousing "He's a Notre Dame Man" chant especially for the injured Irish center.

Szymanski, a senior, had his collegiate career ended when he suffered a ruptured spleen in the Penn game last Saturday.



ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 13 (AP)—Dick Jackson's 98-yard run with the opening kickoff touched off an explosive Cornell offense that buried Dartmouth today, 40-21, for the Big Red's fourth straight victory after losing their first four games.

Pi Delta Phi French Frat Initiates 11

The new members of Pi Delta Phi, French honorary fraternity, who were initiated in the recent fall ceremony are the following: Shelton Alexander, Dale Dawley, Francis Drake, William Ferris, Albert Gminder, Robert Harde, Owen Moore, Miss Eunice Sayre, Charles Thompson, Miss Arda Walker and Edwin Yoder.

A banquet at The Pines was held with the initiation ceremony.

the blue and green freshman

(and the pancakes)

"He's cute," said one coed to another.

"Umm, hmm, but he's crazy," replied Coed Two.

"Crazy how?" asked the first.

"Well, for one thing, look how he dresses. He has a whole wardrobe of those perfectly stunning Van Heusen Vanahue shirts . . . you know the beautiful colored ones with the wonderful collar styles, those short ones and button-downs and spreads and everything?"

"He must be loaded," commented No. 1. "He's really cute."

"Silly. You don't have to be rich to own Vanahue Shirts. They may look like custom shirts, but they only cost $3.95."

"So what's so crazy?"

"Look at him," replied No. 2. He's got on that lovely green Vanahue with a blue suit."

"I don't care. He's cute."

"But he could wear almost any of his others . . . the pink, the yellow, the blue, or even the vintage. It's only because he's nuts."

Shortly thereafter, our No. 1 girl met the freshman in question at the drug store. With astonishing tact, she said: "My girl friend thinks you're nuts."

"So does my room-mate," he replied sadly.

"Why?"

"Just because I like pancakes."

"I love pancakes," she answered.

"You do? Well, gee, come over to the fraternity house. I've got trunks of 'em."

"You're cute," she said.

Thomas Wolfe Scholarship Fund Initiated

FILLMORE HYDE (right), director-editor of the New York University Press, presents to Dean Thomas Clark Pollock a check for $787.25, which will be used to establish at NYU a Thomas Wolfe Scholarship Fund for the study of American literature. The money is the initial royalty payment on two books co-authored and co-edited by Dean Pollock and Professor Cargill — "Thomas Wolfe at Washington Square" and "The Correspondence of Thomas Wolfe Wolfe and Homer Andrew Watt." Published last January by the NYU Press, both volumes have gone into their second printing. Dean Pollock and Professor Cargill are donating all royalties to the scholarship fund at the suggestion of the late Professor Watt, who was chairman of the College's English department when Wolfe served there as an English instructor (from 1924 to 1940).

'New Concept' Of Employee Training Outlined At Meet

A new, simplified concept for employee training administration was described today by an official of the U. S. Navy Department in an address before the second Fall Conference on Industrial Training held here.

George F. Koenig, training director for field activities of the Navy's bureau of ships, said the new concept, which he developed during the past two and one-half years, is designed to "assist line and staff officials concerned with the planning, implementation and appraisal of employee training courses and programs.

Koenig's new concept, which has been tested, is now being introduced throughout the country in many industrial plants, laboratories, and offices varying in size from 200 to 15,000 employees.

"Many comptrollers are now reporting to their supervisors on the dollars which their organizations are spending for employee training and comparing these expenditures with the returns which result therefrom," Koenig said.

Listed as significant features of the concept: "Three basic types of training which cover the training and development requirements of all classifications of such employees as engineers, executives, artisans, supervisors, buyers, clerks and technicians.

Dr. Allen R. Solem, psychology department, N. C. State College, led a discussion during the morning session in which he described methods for changing attitudes of employees.

"Attitudes and behavior of employees are not susceptible to the facts," he said, "but they are emotional rather than intellectual."

Dr. Solem asserted that "attitudes arise out of experiences and improving supervision does more with less effort to improve attitudes of employees than any other method." He also listed as constructive methods: improvement of job surrounding, study of boss-worker relationships, and non-directive counseling, in which the employee is given an opportunity to express himself freely.

The one-way conference was sponsored by the North Carolina-Virginia chapter of the American Societies of Training Director with Prof. R. P. Calhoon, of the UNC Business Admission school, chapter secretary-treasurer, in charge of the program.

Chancellor R. B. House welcomed the group at a general session this morning chaired by Charles M. Loomis, personnel director, Colonial Williamsburg Corp., Va.

Chapter President Lester F. Zerfoss, assistant director of general industrial relations, American Enka Corp., Enka, also brought official greetings from the ASTD, Duncan C. Hunter, Pisgah Forest, training director, Ecusta Paper Corporation, gave the Carolina industrial conference report.

An analysis of Dan River Mills' training program was given by C. J. S. Schollenberger and C. Ray Lancaster, director and assistant director, respectively, at Dan River Mills, Inc.

The afternoon program included a talk by Dwight H. Livingstone, assistant director of training, Fieldcrest Mills, Spray, and a business meeting of the N. C.-Va. chapter of ASTD.

The conference, a part of the University's adult education program, was arranged by the UNC bureau of business services and research, headed by Dr. R. S. Winslow, an ASTD member.

Time Magazine Speaks Of President Gray

A recent issue of Time Magazine, reporting new repercussions of the J. Robert Oppenheimer case, describes President Gordon Gray of the University of oNrth aCrolina as "one of the five or ten university presidents in the U.S. most respected by the academic community of the nation."

Referring to the three-man special security board, headed by President Gray, which "withdrew Oppenheimer's security clearance although not reflecting on Oppenheimer's loyalty." the Time article says: "The procedure of the Gray board was scrupulous, and most of the weighty testimony against Oppenheimer came out of his own mouth."

The entire article is concerned with a recent book, "The Hydrogen Bomb," written by two Washington reporters, James Shepley and Clay Blair, Jr., both from the Time-Life Bureau.

The Shepley-Blair report declares that construction of the hydrogen bomb was delayed by conflicts and opposition from high governmental officials, including Oppenhemer, who was chairman of the Atomic Energy Commissions' General Advisory Committee.

Winston Dorm Whoops It Up

THE BOYS IN LOWER QUAD ENTERTAIN
. . . 'Brigadoons' may be next big step

29 Out Of Legislature's 50 Seats Will Be Selected Today; Also 'Leniency' Measure

6 Of 19 Men's Dorms Are For 'Brigadoons'

Six of the men's dormitories on campus have approved the Inter dormitory Council's proposed The Brigadoons by large majorities.

The dorms which have approved the measure are Stacy, on Nov. 3, Lewis and Grimes, on Nov. 4, Alexander and Aycock, on Nov. 8 and Ruffin, on Nov. 11.

In addtion to these dorms, four have voted to have a referendum on The Brigadoons. These dorms are Old West, Mangum, Cobb and Connor.

As the plans are set up now, if the measure passes, The Brigadoons would sponsor a dance twice a year beginning in 1955 with a name band which is popular with the majority of the students.

A professional floor show would also be planned.

If at all possible, a stage or screen personalty will be present to help with the entertainment, according to IDC spokesmen.

The final details will have to be decided on by the Board of Directors.

CRITICISM

Criticism of the idea has centered about the contingency that dormitories be required to pay a proportionate share of the expenses, according to the number of people in the dormitory.

According to a spokesman for the IDC, the reason that the matter of expenses has been incorporated into the by-laws is not because the IDC fears that it could not sell a sufficient number of tickets to sustain a loss, but because of tax laws.

"In order for The Brigadoons to succeed, the wholehearted support of all 19 men's dormtories is needed. Without their support it would not be advantageous to indorse the idea."

BY LAWS

The proposed by-laws of The Brigadoons are as follows:

Article I. Name

This organization shall be known as The Brigadoons.

Article II. Purpose

The Brigadoons is to be created as a function of The Interdormitory Council in order to sponsor a dance this year to be played by a name band, and one such dance each semester starting with the 1955-56 academic year. It is the purpose of this organization to promote the social welfare of the dormitory men and to promote fraternal relationship among the dormitories and other campus organizations.

Article III. Membership

1. Representatives from all men's dormitories shall be appointed to a Board of Directors. The representation shall be apportioned thusly:

2 Old East, Old West, Battle Vance Pettigrew, Whitehead, and Steele
2 Upper Quad
2 Lower Quad
2 Cobb
1 Joyner
1 Alexander
1 Conner
1 Winston

2. In addition to the above named representatives, the President of The Interdormitory Council shall be ex-officio President of The Brigadoons, and the Social Chairman of The Interdormitory Council shall by virtue of his office be a member of the Board of Directors.

3. The Board of Directors shall elect from its membership the following named officers: director, assistant director, secretary and treasurer.

4. Representatives from the men's dormitories shall be appointed by a majority vote of the Dormitory Executive Committee or the entire dorm where possible and by a majority vote of Dormitory Presidents where necessary.

Article IV. Funds

1. Each dormitory would be required to sell 25 per cent of the residents in their dormitory a bid to each dance. In the event that such a sum was not received, it

UNC Will Decide On Leniency Bill Today

President Tom Creasy said yesterday that approval of Dave Reid's "leniency bill" would "mean in time the destruction of our Honor System."

The bill, which would liberalize punishment in first offense cheating cases, will be voted on in the campus elections today.

If it passes, it will become a constitutional amendment.

"It is my personal hope," said Creasy, "that the referendum will be defeated."

The President's statement came after more than a month of argument betwen Dave Reid, author and presenter of the bill, and Herb Browne, chairman of the Men's Honor Council.

The Daily Tar Heel printed the text of the bill and extended statements from Reid and Browne Saturday.

Said Reid, "For the past 80 years the Honor Council has been a jury dispensing rather dubious justice. How superior will the Honor Council now be under a re-vitalized tradition? The answer is obvious: We will have a court of mercy as well as one of justice."

Said Browne. "It can not be asserted that the Honor System at Carolina operates to perfection, but the proposed changes in the bill now before the students for decision does not strike at these imperfections; instead they seem to do away with certain of these elements that in the past have contributed to the system's best effectiveness."

Two Classes To Pick Their Officers Today

Those who will run for junior class offices as SP candidates are as follows: President, Tom Bennett, Morehead City; Vice-president, Miss Joan Palmer, Charlotte; Secretary, Miss Pat McBane, Burlington; Treasurer; Miss Ji Ji Rainwater, Springfield, Mo., and Social Chairman, Miss Donna Ashcraft, Fairmont, W. Va.

Running for Junior class offices under UP are: President, Bill Sanders, Asheboro; Vice-president, Ken Anderson, Kinston; Secretary, Miss Ann Wrenn, Greensboro; Treasurer, Al Resnick, Miami Beach, Fla., and Social Chairman, Miss Mary Dunn, New Bern.

Freshmen class candidates for office as UP candidates are: President, George Ragsdale, Raleigh; Vice-president, Jay Walker, Roanoke, Va.; Secretary, Ham Morrison,Hagerstown, Md.; Treasurer, Van Woltz, Greensboro and Social Chairman, Miss Amy Morse, Washington, D. C.

Eleven Seats Will Be Filled On 2 Honor Councils Today

Eleven seats in the currently preminent judicial system of student government will be under contention in today's campus elections.

The judicial system, particularly the men's and women's Honor Councils, were brought into the politicad spotlight during the controversy over the "Leniency Bill" which will also be voted on today.

The following candidates have been endorsed by the bi-partisan selections Board for Men's Honor Council seats: Gene Whitehead, Charlie Tompkins, Bill Pindar for the one freshman seat; Bill Bob Peele, Mebane Pritchett, Rick Coker for the one sophomere seat; James Seely, Tommy Moore, Ogburn Yates for the two junior seats. Jack Warner and Bill Redding are running independently for the freshman seat.

Endorsed for the Women's Honor Council were Esten Bahannon, Nancy Jordan, Nancy Carpenter, Edna Dillon, Jean Palmer, Jean Roberson, Lois Owen, Robin Fuller, Pat Dixon.

Endorsed for three men's seats in the Student Council were Ned Hardison, Scotty Hester, Mac Morris, Gerald Parter, Claude Pope, Jake Rountree.

Dottie Figel was endorsed by the selections board for the six months seat in the Student Council left vacant by a resignation.

38-12 SP Majority On The Fire Today

By LOUIS KRAAR

Student voters will decide today whether or not to return to the Legislature the most powerful majority held by a party in student government history—the 38-12 margin now held by the Student Party.

As campaigning came to a vigorous close late yesterday, leaders from both parties predicted a legislative victory.

Twenty-nine of the Legislature's 50 seats are up for election today, 21 SP seats and eight University Party seats.

Only seven of the SP seats at stake in the election are in town districts — the traditional UP stronghold. Thus UP leaders, aiming at a legislative victory, predicted a turnover of dorm seats. Dorm districts are traditionally the SP's strongest political grounds.

The SP has 17 holdover seats in the Legislature and the UP has four. Thus to usurp the SP's legislative majority, the UP would have to win a number of dorm seats.

TURNOVER UNLIKELY

However, a turnover in the control of the Legislature seemed unlikely yesterday since—even if the UP won reelections for its town seats and took the towns seats now held by the SP—the SP would still hold a majority.

UP leaders have been talking in terms of winning 20 seats. On the other hand, SP politicians said they expect to retain most of their powerful margin.

HALF EXPECTED

Election Board Chairman Graham Rights predicted that about half the campus would vote today. In the past the voting in fall elections has ranged from 20-36 percent, running slightly higher when a campus-wide office was at stake.

Rights attributed the higher expected vote to a revision of polling places which involves dormitory dwellers to vote where they live and provides more convenient polling places for town students.

Legislature candidates for the UP are:

Steve Phelps, Winston-Salem, and Buzz Merritt, Greenville, S. C. for Dorm I; Bill Blue, Wadesboro, and David Whitaker, Williamston, for Dorm Men II; Bob Stapleton, Gastonia, Bill Gin, Goldsboro, and Bill Groce, Canton, for Dorm Men III; Lionel King, Asheville, and Bill Kirkman, Burlington, for Dorm Men IV; oJhn Zollicoffer, Henderson, Jim Monteith, Sylva, and Pat Hunter, Charlotte, for Dorm Men V; Jack Stevens, Asheville, Hoke Thompson, Shelby, Larry Cobb, Massapequa, N. Y., Col. McMillan, Houston, Texas, Jim Martin, Charlotte, and Tom Johnson, Norfolk, Va. (6 months seat) for Town Men I; Laura Ervin, Morganton, (6 months seat), Nan Brown, Laura, Md., Jane Cocke, Asheville, Luanne Thornton, Palm Beach, Fla., for Dorm Women; Babe Bauman, Lakewood, Ohio, for Town Women; Jim Exum, Snow Hill, for Town MenII, Charles Ackerman, New York, N. Y., Watt Huntley, Smithfield (6 months seat), Kay Wilson Rocky Point, (6 months seat), Jim Beatty, Charlotte, (6 months seat), and Gerry Harrington, Sanford.

Student Party candidates are: Louis Brumfield, Yadkinville, Barry Clark, Charlotte, for Dorm Men I; Bob Harrington, Greensboro, and Keith Snyder, Lenoir, for Dorm Men II; Bob Elder, Siler City, Jack Hudson, Waxhaw, and Bill Maready, Jacksonville, Fla., for Dorm Men III; Jim Armstrong, High Point, Bob Young, Asheville, for Dorm Men IV; Bill Baum, Elizabeth City, Chuck May, Bennettsville, S. C., Jim Turner, Winston-Salem, for Dorm Men V; Amy Cooke, Bethesda, Md., Ruth Jones, Charlotte, and Marry Ann Keeter, Shelby, for Dorm Women; Sue

Creasy Calls For A Large Vote Today

Student body president Tom Creasy yesterday gave his opinion on students voting in the campus-wide elections.

"I hope that every student will realize the importance of this day," he said, "and consider it his duty and responsibility to vote. Tomorrow we will send 28 Legislature, one of the most important bodies in our entire school," he continued.

Creasy added, "We will also vote pro or con on a measure that will largely determine the future of our Honor System. "I cannot stress enough the real importance of every student's voting."

Di To Debate Segregation Bill Tonight

Tonight at 8 p.m. in the Di Hall on third floor, New West, the Di Senate will debate a bill calling for the ending of segregation on the campuses of all state-supported institutions of higher learning in the fall of 1955.

In addition, the bill proposes the gradual ending of segregation in the public schools on a unit-grade-school basis, depending on the proportionate sizes of the population in terms of Negro to white population.

Following the regular session, there will be an executive session during which business items will be taken up. The questions of whether the student Legislature will be allowed the use of the Senate Hall, and of whether the Di should schedule a full-dress debate will be decided.

Plans For Annual Beat Dook Parade, Queen Now Underway

Judging of queens for the annual Beat Dook parade will be held Thursday night, according to Claude Pope, chairman of PiKA Fraternity's parade committee.

Pope said queenship candidates will be dinner guests of Pi Kappa Alpha on Thursday night.

Judges this year will include Edwin Lanier, mayor of Chapel Hill, Katherine Carmichael, dean of women, and E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theater.

The float parade, which will pass through Chapel Hill Nov. 23, will leave Woollen Gym at 3 p.m. Pope requested all float-builders to have their structures in front of the gym at 2 o'clock. Judging will start at 2:30.

Deadline for turning in entry blanks is midnight tonight. Pope, who lives at the PiKA house, will take entries.

Pope said no entry fee for floats will be charged, and no maximum will be placed on float on float cost.

The floats will be judged on beauty, originality and effectiveness of idea, and will carry out the Beat Dook theme.

Presentation of awards for floats in four divisions — dorm men's, dorm women's, sorority and fraternity — will be made at a pep rally after the parade.

Said Pope yesterday, "We hope that all of the organizations have already made plans for a float and have selected their candidates for queen. If not, now is the time to do so."

Interdormitory Council Sends Letter On Antennas To Gray

The television antenna situation has been referred to President Gordon Gray, according to IDC President Manning Muntzing.

In a letter to the University president, Muntzing mentioned the fact that many of the antennas installed by the Buildings Department were damaged by Hurricane Hazel and stated that it is "our hope that the antennas damaged can be repaired by the University." Muntzing also said that since the antennas are fixtures of the building they are legally property of the University.

In the event that the University is unable to furnish monetry aid, Muntzing said the IDC would "appreciate any arrangements the University could make in furnishing labor in the repair of the antennas."

Muntzing also mentioned the fact that dormitories have very limited funds and that the "cost of labor in hiring a private concern has almost completely wrecked the program of many dormitories."

National Elections Will Be Talk's Topic Tonight

"What Happened in the Election and Why" will be the topic of a panel discussion to be held tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Library Assembly Room.

The meeting, sponsored by Pi Sigma Alpha, political science fraternity, will be open to all students and the general public.

More Parties Are Scheduled In Dormitories

Two more parties will be held tonight in connection with the Interdormitory Council Social Committee's program to have individual dorms hold parties with the women's dorms and sororities.

Graham Dormitory will entertain Carr Women's Dormitory with a party tonight from 9 to 10:15 p.m. in Graham's social room.

Melvin Brown is president of Graham and John Barringer is vice president and social chairman.

A combo will be at the party and one of the dorm residents will show slides of his tour to Europe in addition to other entertainment.

Aycock Dormitory will hold an ice cream party tonight from 9 to 10:15 for the PiBeta Phi Sorority in Aycock's social room.

Byron Ransdell is president of Aycock and John Heath is vice president and social chairman. A combo will also be at this party along with other entertainers.

'Snake Pit' Shows Tonight

"Snake Pit," starring Olivia DeHavilland and Leo Genn, will be presented in the auditorium of Carroll Hall tonight at 7 o'clock.

The picture is a case history of a young woman suffering from schizophrenia, one of the most common of serious mental disorders. The story is told in a simple, straightforward manner without any attempt to inflate or cover up the conditions in our state institutions.

Dr. James Fortin, University psychiatrist, will lead a discussion period which is an interesting and integral part of the program.

This is the season's first presentation by the joint YMCA-Hillel Film Forum which in the past has sponsored a varied selection of motion pictures and faculty speakers. No admission will be charged.

Here's Where You Vote

Here's where students cast their votes today.

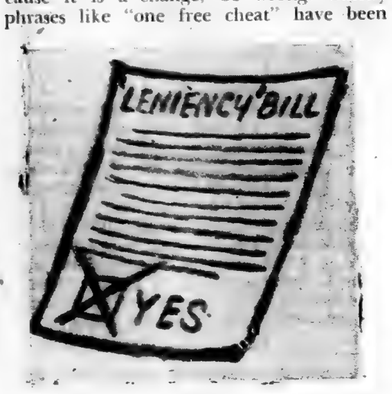
Vote Today: You'll Deserve What You Get Tomorrow

Vote YES For Justice In The Honor System

The Daily Tar Heel hopes you'll vote "YES" on the Leniency Bill today. In so doing, you will be voting to strengthen the honor system immeasurably.

If you vote "YES", here's what you will be voting for:



1. Suspension from school for flagrant and premeditated cheating offenses.

2. Probation to faculty counselors for first offenses which are judged by the Council not to be flagrant and premeditated.

This would be a change from the present system which can be fairly stated this way: If you cheat, you leave schoo. Extenuating circumstances rarely affect that dictum. If you cheat, and admit that you cheated) you leave school, whether yours was a momentary mistake, like glancing to the next desk and copying a multiple-choice answer, or a premeditated crime, like stealing an answer sheet and bringing it to class. If you cheat, no matter why or how or to what degree, you leave school.

That is unjust, and that is what the Leniency Bill would change. If you are able to see the difference between momentary mistake and premeditated cheating, you owe it to the campus to vote "YES".

A number of respected and thoughful student leaders have opposed the Leniency Bill. We submit that they are bound by a senseless and irrational bond with "tradition," a feeling that any change in as old a thing as the honor system must, just because it is a change, be wrong. Catchy phrases like "one free cheat" have been bandied about and have colored sober consideration of what the Leniency Bill will do, if it is passed.

What it WILL do is establish a measure of justice in an unfair system by differentiating between flagrant and minor violations; it will take a firm step toward an extensive system of rehabilitation; it will recognize the fact that suspension from school for any cheating offense, without regard for extenuating circumstances, is in no way rehabilitiation, but revengeful punishment; and far from weakening the honor system, the Leniency Bill will strengthen it, by making it obligatory for the courts to judge cases on their merits rather than under the "cheating equals suspension" equation.

We urge you to read the bill with care before you vote. If you do, we are convinced you will see its equity; we are convinced you will vote to put consideration of the errors of first offenders in the University on a higher plane, by voting "YES".

Suspension Or Probation Is Today's Issue

Louis Kraar

THE CAMPUS will decide today whether it feels that a student who has cheated the first time should go home for rehabilitation or stay here under probation.

This is what the debate over leniency bill boils down to—despite debating and boiling on both sides about tradition, honor, and systems. And while this reporter has great faith in honor and tradition, one remembers that even here these things mean different things to different persons.

David Reid and other proponents of the leniency bill feel that a first-offender can be helped more by a system of probation than by suspension. Probation is an educational experience, while suspension is mere punishment, leniency supporters argue.

On the other hand, opponents of the measure—which include Men's Honor Council Chairman Herb Browne—contend that the leniency bill would wreck the Honor System. Suspension is an educational experience, and it is the only way to teach cheaters the seriousness of their offense, argue leniency opponents.

This reporter has supported the leniency bill because it seems seems that in this college community exile for forgetting one's honor is too stern a measure for first offenders. If education is the University's purpose, then it should begin to educate its cheaters here—instead of sending them home.

It has become an axiom here that if you cheat, you'll be kicked out of school. It is sometimes called suspension, which means you may come back. Other times, it is called indefinite suspension, which means you may not return. Either way,, it is stern punishment. And it lacks the mercy inherent in any American justice.

Faculty counselors can help instill a sense of honor in students who have forgotten or never mastered it. The faculty—made up of men like Dr. Alfred Brauer and Dr. J. R. Caldwell and others who know both honor and students well—can make probation work.

If it's tradition that you want when you vote today, look back to the year 1875. The Di and Phi societies were Carolina's only student government then. A student was suspended by the faculty, and the Phi asked that he be turned over to the society for discipline. The faculty agreed, and the Phi decided to give the student another chance. That's how student government began—with leniency.

U. S. Reneges On Loans

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — While the USA is worrying about Joe McCarthy and while Washington is more deluged with pro-McCarthy church lobbyists than at any time in years, an all-important backstage debate is going on regarding Latin America which could advance the cause of Communism greatly.

In brief, Ambassador Merwin L. Bohan has resigned as U.S. Ambassador to the Rio De Janeiro Economic Conference because that conference will be run by Wall Street, not for the good of Pan American Cooperation.

The Rio De Janeiro Economic Conference, scheduled to open next week, was the bait held out by John Foster Dulles at the Caracas Conference when he got our Latin friends to support the USA regarding Guatemala.

Great things would be accomplished at Rio, Dulles told the Latinos as an alibi for little happening at Caracas. Especially he held out the promise of Big U. S. loan and economic aid.

But now Ambassador Bohan has resigned for the specific reason that no real economic aid or loans will be forthcoming.

What has happened, briefly, is this. For some time, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey has argued that the United States should not advance money to Latin Americans but that they should borrow from the International Bank. This was one of the issues between Humphrey and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, Ike's brother, when the latter visited Latin America. And at that time Milton won. He kept the export-import bank alive as a means of loaning money to Latin America.

However, Brother Milton has gone back to Penn State College, while Secretary Humphrey remains on the job in Washington. In fact, he remains about the most powerful cabinet member in Ike's official family. Furthermore Humphrey will be the top U.S. delegate to the Rio Economic Conference. Dulles, who was planning to go, is now worn out and will not go.

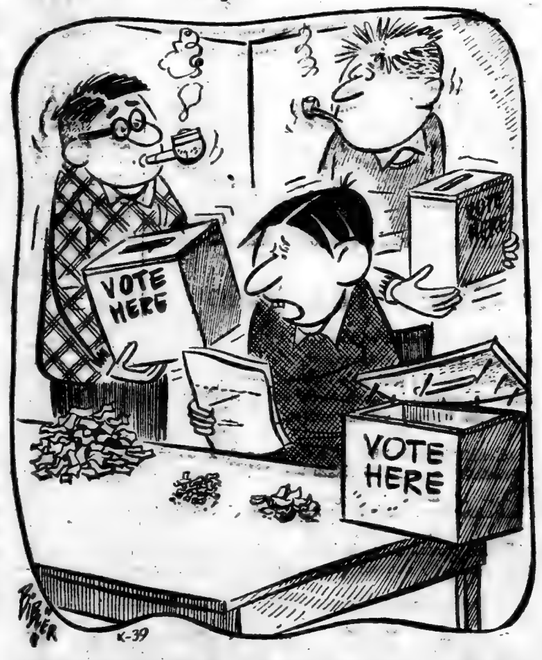
Hardboiled Humphrey

So Humphrey has put across the policy that loans will not be made by the Ex-Im Bank unless Wall Street, operating through the International bank, turns them down.

State Department advisers don't entirely like the Humphrey policy. But they are very discreet in their opposition. After all, Humphrey is the most powerful member of the Cabinet.

What they point out is that loaning money to Latin America is not a financial matter but a political one. In brief, we should not be loaning money to a semi-Communist country even it it's sound financially. On the other hand, we may want to loan money to a friendly country which needs help to throw off Communism.

The State Department, not Wall Street bankers, is qualified to make this decision, the diplomats argue. And they are vigorously against turning this vital instrument of national policy over to the bankers, either Wall Street or any other group of bankers.



Washington Pipeline

While the Senate hubbub continues over Senator McCarthy, who has done little more than shout about the Communist conspiracy the government's Subversive Activities Control Board quietly begins hearings today that should lead to the permanent crippling of a key Red front, The Civil Rights Congress for years has blown the propaganda horn for the Communist Party. It is operated as the Red rescue squad but has never identified itself with the party . . . Theophile Kammholz, Ike's appointee to the key post of general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, is an old buddy of Sinclair Weeks, the Commerce Secretary, who always has his big business finger in the President's Labor decisions. Weeks picked Kammholz as the Commerce Department delegate to last year's International Labor Organization meeting. The fact that Weeks picked him for the NLRB isn't going to help Secretary Mitchell's resentment that Weeks meddles too much in Labor Department affairs . . . Albert Beeson, the Eisenhower appointee to the National Labor Relations Board last year, whose evasiveness before the Senate Labor Committee led to a full-scale floor fight over his nomination, has written Eisenhower stating that he does not want to be reappointed. He cites his wife's health as the reason. (Actually, his appointment would be turned down by a Democratic Senate.) . . . Roger Kyes, the former Assistant Secretary of Defense now back at General Motors, has employees at GM's Home Appliance Division in Dayton complaining that he's conducting a reign of terror. . . . The public has raised such a ruckos over the colored stripes on the new tax forms that the color scheme will be abandoned next year. Tax Chief T. Coleman Andrews has been defending the system because he has already printed up so many tax returns that he is stuck with them. However, the color gives away the approximate amount of taxes your neighbor pays, and the plan will be junked.

T. COLEMAN ANDREWS
. . . what to do with those damn tax forms?

The Case Against The Leniency Bill Summed Up: Vote 'No' Says Hauser

By Chuck Hauser

(Chuck Hauser, the author of the following article, wrote his daily "Tar Heel at Large" column for this newspaper last spring, but stopped when he went to work for The Chapel Hill Weekly. He returns today to comment on what he calls "the most important thing ever to come up on the Carolina campus."—Ed.)

WHEN A FRESHMAN arrives at Carolina for fall orientation, he is immediately struck with the emphasis which is placed on the Honor System. He is convinced that nothing at the University is held in higher esteem than the Honor System, and he is told that this Honor System, more than anything else, moulds what we know as the Carolina Way of Life. He later comes to realize that the Honor System is not perfect, but at the same time he discovers that those who violate the Honor Code are dealt with severely. He knows that sooner or later violaters are caught, and he knows that if they are found guilty in our courts, they will not be let off with a light punishment, because we do not take our Honor System lightly.

A BILL which is to be voted on by the student body in the election today would change all this. It is a new policy which would so fix punishments for honor violations that a first-offense cheater WOULD be let off lightly. Specifically, it calls for probation as the standard punishment for first-offense cheating, rather than suspension from school for one semester. Instead of telling a freshman during orientation week that we do not tolerate cheating at Carolina, we would have to tell him that we do tolerate it. Instead of telling him that we hold our Honor System in such high regard that we deal strictly with persons who violate it, we would have to tell him that he may violate it and nothing will happen to him unless he violates it a second time. In other words, we would have to announce that the Honor System is now a "Free-Cheat" System, where everyone except the "flagrant violater is permitted to remain in school.

IT CANNOT be denied that when the punishment for a specific crime is lowered, the temptation to commit that crime is raised. Many more students will take a chance on violating the Honor System if they know that (1) the Honor System is not really very important anymore, anyway, and (2) they will get off lightly even if they get caught.

THE BACKERS of this free-cheat bill make a number of claims which are misleading, distorted, and in some cases false: They say the Honor Councils now automatically suspend everyone who is convicted of cheating. This is not true. In cases of clear-cut violations of the Honor System, suspension is the usual punishment, but the Councils consider each case separately, and if circumstances warrant, the offender is put on probation. This new policy would tie the hands of the Honor Councils in determining punishments in individual cases.....The backers of the bill say the new system will provide "rehabilitation" and "counseling." It does this only on paper: The bill calls for a "faculty counselor" to be appointed for each probationer, and the student is to report to him bi-weekly. This is not very realistic. Faculty members are overworked with hundreds of committees and "extracurricular assignments now, and it will be impossible to find enough faculty members with both the interest and the time to serve as counselors. Without a system of supervision, probation does no effective good. And the proposed supervision is purely imaginary.

I DON'T KNOW the motives of the people who are pushing for the passage of this so-called leniency bill. I do know what they will accomplish if the bill passes: They will succeed in weakening an Honor System which needs every bit of strengthening we can give it. Honor cannot be compromised. The dishonorable person has no place in society until he has learned that society will not tolerate dishonor.... I ask this: If you believe in the Carolina Honor System, vote NO in the leniency referendum today, because the future of our Honor System depends on your vote.

Legislature 'Abrogated Duty' In Leniency Bill Matter

Editor:

The student Legislature has brought the Leniency Bill before the student body for its decision in the coming elections. It deserves us well to consider it carefully prior to our expression at the polls. I would like to submit some points which might well be taken into consideration by the conscientious student voter.

The bill proposes to liberalize punishment for first offense cheating and states in its preamble the reasons for its existence. It asserts, and I believe, mistakenly, that reporting of cheating cases would be more frequent due to absence of automatic suspension it alleges greater flexibility, yet by its own words denies this flexibility by charting a single course to be taken against first offenders: "The usual punishment . . . will be probation . . ." The generalities of the first and fourth parts of the preamble need not be repeated here.

A reading of the bill shows that, if approved, it will be subject to th interpretation that the Honor Council will give to its phrasing.

Article II designates that the dean of students' office assign a violator who has been put on probation to a faculty counselor. This section of the bill is entirely unenforceable as it purports to direct the dean's office, which prerogative the Student Legislature naturally does not have. The dean's office might find it very unwise to expect faculty members' aid in the administration of the honor system; in fact, I would not be suprised if the faculty members would declare in the same vein. Placing supervision of probationers in the faculty, too, might well be considered a strange departure from our concepts of freedom.

Yet, the student body has provided for a balance of power between the two departments, and for expressly such occasions. To overcome this "defect," then the legislature has seen fit to abandon the channels through which legislation should flow. It has gone beyond the point of mere abrogation of duty. Keeping their fingers crossed, relying on the argument of 'faith in the student body." the same student body which charged them and its President with a specific responsibility, the legislators now hope that we, the students, will act for them in a matter that they would not decide themselves.

There Is Danger In The 'One Free Cheat' Idea

Editor:

During the past weeks the campus as a whole has become more aware of the honor councils and their procedures. This cognizance results from the efforts of David Reid to liberalize penalties in first offense cheating cases.

The main cause for complaint is that the councils are guilty of using only one punishment, suspension, for persons convicted of cheating. That suspension is more often given as the penalty arises from the fact that the councils, in reviewing the case, attempt to answer three questions:

What is best for the student?

What is best for the university?

What best upholds the traditions of preceding councils?

The answer is a difficult one to find. However, when suspension is decided upon as the answer, it is because the councils feel that the student may accquire a better perspective if he is remover for a time from the environment where his cheating took place. His offense is a serious one, and in order that another violation may be prevented he must be made to realize the full significance of what he has done. He has proved unworthy of the trust placed in him by the University and by the other students.

In this bill probation is suggested as the usual punishment for those cheating violators who are on trial for the first time. The fact that probation has a far different meaning for girls than for boys goes unnoticed in this bill. Although the bill affects both councils in the same manner, probation for a girl includes the additional requirement that she remain in her place of residence from 8 p.m. until 5 a. m. Therefore the girls receive a more strict penalthy for committing the same offense.

Several penalties exist that are exercised by the councils. These penalties range from expulsion to council reprim and and includes probation among the alternatives. Thus, as you can see, the bill offers no definite change in the present system.

One of the purposes of the bill is to encourage reporting violators. Since the possibility of suspension still remains, more widespread participation cannot be accomplished in this manner.

A danger lies in the misconception of "one free cheat." Although there is no justification for this erroneous idea, there is the possibility that the bill may be misconstrued to mean just that in a few years.

If you too have lost faith in the honor councils in general and in their discretion in particular, the responsibility rests on you to correct the trouble. The leniency bill is not the solution. You have the opportunity today of exercising the privilege of selecting for council members the candidates whom you have observed to be the most conscientious, the most capable, the most intelligent. In your hands rests the decision.

—Kendrick Townsend

The Ram Sees

The politicians who are supporting the free-cheat leniency bill in the referendum today say that the bill will help the Honor Councils by giving them more freedom in deciding punishments. This is so patently untrue that it is almost funny. If the whole business weren't so tragic, I think I would laugh. Every Honor Council member is opposed to this leniency bill. They would not be against it if it really gave them "freedom in fixing punishment." All the bill does is to force the Councils to slap a cheater's wrist and ask him to be a good boy, instead of telling him to leave Carolina and not to return until he knows the meaning of honesty.

Back Injury Ends Long's Grid Career

The North Carolina football picture, gloomy following the humiliating 42-13 loss to Notre Dame Saturday, appears even darker with the announcement that Albert Long and Marshall Newman are out for the rest of the season due to injuries.

Long's injury came as a complete surprise to the Tar Heel coaching staff, and puts an end to the versatile Durham athlete's football career at Carolina, as he is a senior. Long, who has alternated at the quarterback slot with Len Bullock most of the season, received a back injury in the Irish encounter, but it was not considered serious. Upon returning to Chapel Hill, he reported to the infirmary for a routine check. X-rays were taken, and after inspecting the pictures, doctors advised that he retire for the remainder of the season. It is not known how the injury will affect Long's participation in other sports. He was a basketball reserve and a baseball regular last year. Long's record this season: Completed 17 of 28 passes for 200 yards and three touchdowns; gained 122 yards rushing in 36 tries.

Newman, who started the year at quarterback and was shifted to fullback in the Wake Forest game, was the victim of a knee injury in the 20-26 Tennessee loss. The rawboned junior has been out of uniform since then, but hopes were held that he would be back in action before the season ended.

With the definite loss of Newman and Long, Coach George Barclay's quarterback corps has dwindled to two, Len Bullock, who has started since Newman switch to fullback, and Dough Farmer, who moved up to third string at the same time.

Along with the bitter came the sweet, however, with the announcement that Ed Sutton will be ready for the Virginia tilt. Sutton emerged as the Tar Heels "great white hope" when he romped to two touchdowns, gaining 124 yards, in the 14-7 victory over Wake Forest. He sprained his ankle severely the Monday following the Deacon game, and has been out since then, missing the Tennessee, South Carolina, and Notre Dame games.

Yesterday afternoon at practice, Sutton was dressed in light equipment and running on his ankle. Afterwards, he said that he felt much better and that he was ready to go against the Cavaliers.

Ken Keller also experienced a minor injury against the Irish, but it is not serious and he will see action against Virginia. Keller hurt his shoulder.

Beatty Wins

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Nov. 15—Jim Beatty, Carolina's Flying Tar Heel, summoned his last ounce of energy to burst past Maryland's running ace, Barr Grimm, in the last 20 yards to win the Atlantic Coast Conference cross-country meet and set a new course record here today. The stocky Tar Heel's time of 18:07.8 bettered by 33 seconds the old record for the three and eight-tenths mile course.

Grimm, who beat Beatty last year when they were both freshmen, but who has seen the Flying Tar Heel's heels twice this year, posted an 18:12 mark to take second place. Dave Miller of State was third at 18:25, and Bob Barden of Carolina was fourth with 18:36.

Maryland won the meet with a low score of 26 points; UNC was second with 36 points; Duke was third with 96; Virginia fourth with 114; Wake Forest fifth with 141. State did not qualify as a team due to a shortage of participants.

Booters Play State Today

Carolina's varsity soccer squad travels to Raleigh today to meet N. C. State in their last outing of the 1954 season. Gametime is 3:00 p. m. on the Wolfpack campus. The Tar Heels, by virtue of a previous 1-0 win over the Wolves, will be the favorites.

Coach Marvin Allen observed yesterday that the UNC squad still has a slim chance to win the ACC title. Virginia, with 0-0-2 record, and Maryland, sporting a 2-0-1 mark, meet this week to decide which of the two will be probable ACC champs. But the Tar Heels, with a 3-1-1 record, may have a shot at the title if they defeat State today. Conference officials may decide in favor of the Tar Heels since they have played two more game than either the Terrapins or Cavaliers.

Baptists Hear Dr. Poteat Speak On Christ & World

Some 70 Baptist students heard Dr. William H, Poteat of the UNC Philosophy Department discuss the topic "Jesus Christ-the Hope of the World" Sunday night.

The professor first questioned the truth of his topic, pointing out that such a statement is doubtful if one means that Christ is our ultimate hope. But in the sense that He is our hope for tomorrow, the statement is no doubt a truthful one, Dr. Poteat told the students.

Dr. Poteat concluded by saying that if the Christian holds the belief that Jesus Christ is the hope of the world, then nothing can happen tomorrow that will rob his or her existence of meaning.

Leniency Measure Fails In Referendum By 629 Votes

University Party Solons Take Ten Legislature Seats

2,923 Voters Go To The Polls To Upset Large Edge Of SP

By FRED POWLEDGE

The University Party won 10 seats in the student Legislature last night. The Student Party, which before yesterday claimed a 38-12 majority in the lawmaking body, consequently lost 10 seats. Count now stands at 28 seats for SP; 22 seats for UP.

Yesterday's vote was one of the largest on record for fall elections. According to Elections Board figures (compiled from the number of votes cast for and against the leniency bill), 2,923 students out of an enrollment of more than 6,000, cast votes. Last fall, 2,200 votes were recorded.

Normally, fall elections bring relatively small votes, while spring elections, which determine government officers and various other campus positions, are larger.

ONE BLOCK CONTESTED

One block of votes, Town Men's I division, was contested, according to Elections Board Chairman Graham Rights. In that area, the name of Colin "Tex" McMillan (UP) was left off the ballot. A hearing will be held this afternoon at 1 o'clock to determine whether the Student Party, which plans to contest the election, has grounds for requesting re-vote.

THE LEGISLATORS

Those elected, according to Rights, are as follows:

Dorm Men's I: Steve Phelps (UP) and Louis Brumfield (SP); Dorm Men's 2: Bob Harrington (SP) and David Whitaker (UP); Dorm Men's 3: Bob Elder (SP), Jack Hudson (SP) and Bill Maready (SP);

Dorm Men's 4: Jim Armstrong (SP) and Bob Young (SP); Dorm Men's 5: Bill Baum (SP), Jim Monteith (UP) and Pat Hunter (UP); Town Men's 1 (contested): Jack Stevens (UP), Wayne Brown (SP), Hoke Thompson (UP), Larry Cobb (UP) and Jim Martin (UP): Tom Johnson (UP) was elected for six-month seat;

Dorm Women: Nan Brown (UP), Ruth Jones (SP) and Luanne Thornton (UP): Sue Fink (SP) elected for six-month seat; Town Women: Bebe Baumann (UP); Men 2: Jim Exum (UP); Town Men 3: Charles Ackerman (UP), Jim Beatty (UP) and Jerry Harrington (UP): Watt Huntley (UP) and Kay Wilson (UP) elected for six-month seats.

Elections Discussion

Pi Sigma Alpha, national honorary political science fraternity, will discuss "What Happened In The Elections And Why?" at an open meeting tonight at 8:30 in the Assembly Room of the Library.

Bill Sanders Chiefs Juniors; Sonny Evans To Lead Frosh

The University Party took all offices in the junior class last night, and it was a three to two toss-up in favor of the Student Party in the freshman class.

UP candidate Bill Sanders was elected junior class president over Tommy Bennett (SP).

The rest of the junior class officers, all University Party candidates, are Ken Anderson, vice-president; Ann Wrenn, secretary; Al Resnick, treasurer, and Mary Dunn, social chairman.

FRESHMEN OFFICERS

The freshman class named Sonny Evans (SP) their president, over George Ragsdale (UP).

Vice-president is Jay Walker (UP); secretary, Nancy Nussear (SP); treasurer, Jim Dixon (SP), and social chairman Amy Morse (UP).

Almost Up

Caldwell Monument is finally on the way back up.

The venerable old obelisk, which fell to Hurricane Hazel last Oct.16, was the scene of much activity and much sidewalk superintending yesterday, as University workmen rolled a power winch over the shaft and attached ropes.

The monument is expected to to be totally up soon.

Student Auto Registration Is Required

After Nov. 19, student cars without the proper registration stickers will be reported by the police, according to a notice issued by the Traffic Committee of the University.

The announcement further states that trustee regulations require any student of the University who keeps and uses an automobile to register it with the office of the Dean of Student Affairs and obtain an indentification tag for display on the windshield of the car.

Automobiles may be registered and identification plates obtained between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. in the Office of the Dean of Student Affairs, 206 South Building.

The Regulation was made by the Traffic Committee at a meeting last week when it was decided that a number of student automobiles was not registered.

Wallace Doesn't Want Them

Jim Wallace has got a pair of pants and a shirt in his office.

Jim Wallace doesn't know to whom the clothes belong.

It seems that Wallace, who's director of Graham Memorial, was approached by a soaked and dripping student last Oct. 16—the day Hurricane Hazel hit.

The student, said Wallace, was on his way to Washington, D. C., for the UNC-Maryland game. He had a change of clothes under his arm, said the GM director, and asked Wallace's permission to change into dry trousers and shirt in the student union.

Wallace consented, and the student—then dry and warm—went on to Washington.

His clothes were still in Wallace's office yesterday. Wallace wants to get rid of them.

UP Mighty Happy; SP's Turner Is Out

By DICK CREED

The University Party was "mighty happy" last night over its gains in the student Legislature.

While it didn't gain control of the Legislature, the UP did reduce its deficit in the previously SP-infested body by 20 seats.

Now the SP has a 28-22 hold. Since spring elections the SP has enjoyed a 38-12 lock at the UP.

UP Chairman Rueben Leonard, contacted after it was apparent that his party would make an appreciable gain in the Legislature, said, "We're mighty happy that the election has ended like it has."

He added that he is "looking for even greater victories in the spring."

SP Chairman Joel Fleishman, contacted before the returns were complete, declined comment "at the present time" but promised that he would issue a statement today.

"Turner lost" was alternately whispered and shouted in the halls of Graham Memorial when it was announced that the Student Party floor-leader and long time SP chieftan had been defeated in Dorm Men's District V by the victory of UP candidates Jim Monteith and Pat Hunter.

Turner, bustling SP warhorse from Winston-Salem, said that he does "not intend to leave student government" as a result of his defeat and that he considered the defeat "temporary."

Claiming that he had "no aspirations for the spring elections, Turner said however, "This is not the end of what student government can do for me and what I can do for it."

Leonard said the UP in Legislature "will work harder than ever now to see that what's best for the student body will be carried out."

The UP's hope that it would gain seats in the dorm men's districts materialized as it won one seat in Dorm Men's I, one in Dorm Men's II and two in Dorm Men's V. Dorm districts are traditionally inclined to go SP, and the SP carried there yesterday.

As usual the UP carried the town districts, copping 14 seats there to the SP's 3.

Only five of the 11 seats under contention in the judicial councils were decided. The other six will be decided in the runoff election Tuesday.

Tommy Moore and Ogburn Yates won the two Junior seats in the Men's Honor Council; Scott, Hester, Claude Pope and Jake Rountree won the three year seats in Student Council. Dottie Figel was uncontested for a six months Student Council seat.

To be decided in the runoff are one freshman seat and one sophomore seat in the Men's Honor Council and three seats in the Women's Honor Council.

Secretary Of State Thad Eure To Speak To BA Frat Tonight

THAD EURE

. . . speaks tonight

North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure will speak to a dinner meeting of Delta Sigma Pi professional business fraternity tonight at 6:30 in The Pines restaurant.

Eure's topic was not known yesterday, but it will deal with professional business interests, it was announced.

The fraternity announced that on Friday it made a field trip to hosiery division of Burlington Mills in Burlington. Baxter Mangum, assistant personel manager of the division and a graduate of Carolina in 1954, acted as host.

Reid Assails Campaigning Tactics; Creasy Is 'Pleased'

By LOUIS KRAAR

Student voters gave a 629-vote thumbs down to the David Reid leniency bill yesterday in a campus-wide referendum which brought about half the student body to the polls.

The official vote, announced late last night by Elections Board Chairman Graham Right, was 1,776-1,147.

Reid, sponsor of the measure to liberalize punishment in first-offense cheating cases, criticized a pamphlet distributed by the opposition as "negative slander and fabrication."

In a prepared statement, Reid declared:

"To me the most disappointing feature of this election was the conduct of some of our opponents on the Honor Council. I am very sorry that they felt it necessary at the eleventh hour to lower the tenor of the previously high level campaign. I doubt that the injection of negative slander and fabrication will prove in the long run to have been wise.

"To those who are disappointed with me in the result of today's vote, I say we have suffered a setback, but our purpose is not lost. We are in the right. Some day soon there will be more than one punishment for making a mistake under the Honor System."

CREASY 'PLEASED'

President Tom Creasy, reached late last night by telephone, said that he was "very pleased with the student body's decision."

He added that he "sincerely felt that the bill would have developed into a free-cheat bill."

Creasy said he believed that the Reid leniency bill would have "destroyed our Honor System."

LOST FROM FIRST

The tide of votes was against the leniency measure about 2-1 even in the earliest returns. Just an hour after counting began, the vote was 634-385 against the bill. As all the town districts were counted and Cobb Dorm—an hour later—the vote was still against leniency, 785-469.

By 10:30, with all but two dorm districts reported, the vote was still decidedly against the measure, 1,151-753.

As the final votes were tabulated, the earlier wide margin closed somewhat. But there was no question about it by 11 o'clock. Official Election Board figures showed the measure defeated by a firm 619 votes.

Law Students Send Telegram To Sen. Ervin

A number of students in the university law school yesterday dispatched a telegram to the Hon. Sam J. Ervin, North Carolina's senior senator, commending him for his stand in the McCarthy censure move. Senator Ervin, member of the senatorial committee investigating McCarthy, announced Monday that he favored the move which would on two counts relieve McCarthy of his Permanent Investigation Subcommittee chairmanship.

The telegram, which bore the signatures of approximately 100 students, was spontaneously conceived by Miss Niomi Morris of the Law School and received quick response from all students who were asked to sign it.

It stated in part that "We feel that every citizen of North Carolina has been slandered by the charges made against you as our spokesman in the Senate."

List Of Needy Being Added

Christmas this year will be a happier time for many needy families and single persons in the Chapel Hill area, according to officials of the Empty Service Fund, sponsoored by the Junior Service League.

A list of those people who would not otherwise have a Christmas unless adopted by individual students or organizations is now being compiled. Any families that are known to be in need may be reported to Mrs. G. P. Childroth at 9-9303 before Dec. 8. and they, too, will be considered for adoption, Fund spokesmen said.

Those families and persons to be considered for a Christmas basket will be asked to submit a form giving size of family, ages and sex.

CHRISTIAN SERVICE SOCIETY

The Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Orange Methoist Church, located on the Airport Road, will sponsor a turkey supper on Saturay night from 5:30 until 7:30. The plates will be 50c an 75c.

COMMUNITY DRAMA

The Community Drama Group will meet at 8 p.m. on Sunday night in the Assembly Room of the Library to read Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset." Miss Myra Lauterer, who is directing the reading, has requested that anyone who would like to read get in touch with her in advance. She can be reached during the evening at 2231. Copies of the script are available at Miss Stella Lyons' news stand in the post office.

CARDBOARD MEETING

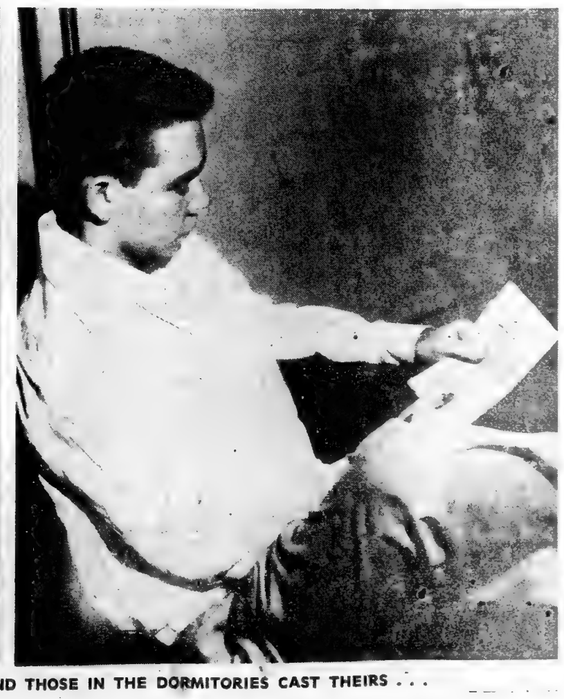
There will be a Cardboard meeting tomorrow night at 7 o'clock in the APO Room of Graham Memorial. Ushers have been requested to bring their passbooks for the Duke game.

SSL MEETING

The State Student Legislature delegation will meet tonight in the Grail Room at 9 o'clock.

Training Program

The Office of the Dean of Women announced that on Thursday, another session of the In-Service Training Program will be held. The program is designed for the personnel staff of the Office of the Dean of Women and for other interested persons on the campus.



The session, the fourth in a series of five to be presented, will be held in the afternoon at Carroll Hall. The importance of religion on the campus will be the focal point of the meeting.

Chancellor Robert Burton House will be featured.

'Hey, Joe, Get Mr. Gray On The Phone— The TV's Still Busted'

The attempt of Interdormitory Council President Manning Muntzing to get the University to pay for repairing dormitory TV antennas is the most brazen move of the year.

The student Legislature law which put television in the dorms specifically places responsibility for upkeep of the sets with the dormitories. At least one dorm has already solved the twisted antenna problem by an obvious means—taking up a collection within the building. But in most dormitories, TV screens have been dark ever since Hurricane Hazel blew through a month ago.

In his arrant letter to President Gray, Muntzing said the University should repair the antennas, since "they are property of the University," something Muntzing and the legislators who pushed the bill through would certainly deny under any other circumstances.

The picture this situation presents—of the IDC squawking to South Building for solution of a minor problem—is antagonistic to the idea of student self-government, something we are supposed to foster on this campus.

President Gray should, and very probably will, tell the IDC to fix its own antennas. The only consistent alternative is for the Administration to take over direct control of dormitory affairs.

The Quiet, Quiet Campus

The Dialectic Senate last night debated a bill calling for the end of segregation in state-supported colleges.

This is good, we suppose. The Di is a talking society and this is something to talk about. But as the time for the Supreme Court's edict on the method of integration comes near, not one individual on campus has spoken up publicly to say that segregation is wrong. Not one organization has been moved to action on this most pressing issue of the day. Not one student group has publicly affirmed that it is in favor of admitting Negro undergraduates to the University.

(While the Di was debating segregation, James Slade and Romallus Murphy, Negroes, were studying in their segregated rooms on third floor Steele.)

A Word To The Wise

Datelined "Washington, Nov. 14," the story read this way:

"The police followed their noses to the master bedroom of a brick home in a quiet residential section of the Capital today and found a cheerfully bubbling copper still that had ben turning out about 85 gallons of corn whiskey a day.

"Millard A. Dorsey, 31-year-old elementary school teacher was arrested and charged with violating Federal liquor laws. Lt. Nunzio Bonaccorsy, who led the raid, said Dorsey had been operating the still since last June to supplement his teaching salary."

And who, we want to know, but the nosy Capital police, would have scotched such a happy little deal as that? What manner of dead soul does it take to prohibit an elementary school teacher, most overworked and underpaid of men, from spreading home-brewed warmth among the District populace and at the same time adding to his own meager wage?

A pox on the cops, we say. And if there are any North Carolina grade school teachers (salary, $242) or underpaid University instructors listening in this morning, let them remember this: The Tar Heel pine woods make for better still concealment than master bedrooms do, our police don't have as sharp a sense of smell, and the asking price for a quart of corn in the open market can go a ways toward paying off that mortgage.

A Visit With Coeds, Cokes & Candidates

Louis Kraar

THE RENDEZVOUS Room of Graham Memorial hummed with the chattering of coed candidates when I stopped in the other afternoon for a coke and advice on voting.

Marilyn Zager, who is chairman of the Independent Women's Council who met me at the door, and who suggested that I have a coke, led me over to the coke bar. "We're hoping this thing will be a success. Try some cookies. We're having some entertainment, you know," she said without a breath and slipped back over to her post at the door.

Spying three girls dressed in shorts, white shirts, high socks, and high hats, I went over to talk to them.

"Oh, us. We're the entertainment," said one girl who a top hat with the letters "SP" on it and who later told me she was Jackie McCarthy.

I asked what party the other two girls in the trio supported, and one of the girls, Joy Carter, said, "I'm neutral. I mean, I'm not for either party." Joy picked up a hat from a nearby table with the letters "No P." enscribed on it.

The third girl, who said her name was Susie Roberts, showed me her high hat. It said, "UP."

Well assured that the entertainment would be non-partisan, I proceeded over to the only other male in the room, Ed McCurry of the University Party.

"Are you one of the candidates," I asked Ed, who looked like something in a Franklin St. clothing store window with his tweed coat, flannels, and reserved air.

"No. No, I'm not. I'm just an interested student, you know. Just wanted to see how things were going," Ed explained.

TREASURER DON Fowler of the Student Party came up with Ann Wrenn, UP candidate for junior class secretary. Miss Wrenn smiled, said she hoped she'd win when I asked her, and scurried over to meet UP Chairman Rueben Leonard, who had just come in.

The trio was warming up over in the corner with "Five Foot Two", and I left Fowler and McCurry to see Leonard.

I'm counting on us taking about 20 seats in the Legislature," he said confidently. "It looks pretty good, I think," he added turning to Miss Wrenn, who smiled and nodded her head in agreement.

SP leader Manning Muntzing, who also runs the IDC, strolled in wearing a gray flannel coat and looking surprised that there were only a few other males in the crowd.

"Campaigning?" I asked Muntzing, who said that he just "stepped in for a coke," and went over and drank one to prove it.

A minute later I found myself talking to Jane Cocke, who said she was running for Legislature in the women's dorm district and was majoring in sociology. I wished her well, then stepped back a little ways to listen to the entertainment, which was just beginning.

The coed trio strutted, looking rather unusual with Fowler's and Muntzing's sport coats on, and sang a song called "Election Preview," which told candidates that it was too late to campaign and that the leniency bill would ruin the Honor System.

On the way out, I met Robin Fuller, who said she was from Raleigh, and who wore a card that said she was running for the Women's Honor Council. I asked her about the leniency bill, and she said, "I don't see any sense in it."

I knew it was time to leave then, so I did.

'This Is Serious—Get Me The Republican National Committee'

McCarthyites On Capitol Hill

Drew Pearson

Washington A middle-aged woman opened the Senate office building door of Sen. Earle Clements of Kentucky and stepped inside.

Abruptly she asked the stenographer sitting at a desk near the door:

"Whom are you for?"

Senator Clements' secretary was perplexed. The woman visitor had not announced herself; had given no name, but on her breast was a large button. It read: "God bless Joe."

The intruder did not give the senator's secretary much time to ponder.

"Whom do you work for?" she demanded.

This again was a weird question, since the door of the office was plainly marked: "Senator Clements of Kentucky."

Before the senator's secretary could answer, the visitor blurted out: "Ah Ha! You won't tell whom you work for. That shows where you stand...afraid to tell whom you work for!"

And she flounced out.

Thus operate the Joe-Must-Stay lobbyists who have descended on the capital like a swarm of locusts.

Behind Joe's Lobby

Sen. Joe McCarthy borrowed a page from the communist book when he imported organized demonstrators to try to stampede the Senate into voting down the censure resolution. Backstage story can now be told of their noisy march on Washington.

Their spiritual leader was Rabbi Benjamin Schultz who, ironically, joined forces with the nation's most poison-mouthed anti-semite, Gerald L. K. Smith. Under an assumed name, Smith also slipped into town to help organize the demonstration for McCarthy.

Smith registered as "Stephen Goodyear" in Room 1017 of the Mayflower Hotel, not far from Rabbi Schultz's room. Both spent most of their time on Capitol Hill, huddling with pro-McCarthy senators and herding the demonstrators around.

Significantly, the McCarthyite invasion followed the same pattern as the frequent communist marches on Washington, when the Reds have poured into town to try to influence Congress.

Like the Reds, the McCarthyites got their instructions from professional organizers, who acted as pep leaders, They came bearing placards, shouting slogans—a boisterous but disciplined mob. They also swarmed into the Senate gallery and trooped from office to office in small groups, pressuring senators. Down to the last detail, this is the standard communist technique.

The McCarthyites were recruited mainly from freedom clubs and McCarthy clubs that Joe has been organizing in Brooklyn, Boston, and a few other cities. The main contingent, estimated at about 650, boarded a 7:30 A.M. train at New York City's Pennsylvania Station.

A copy of the "Tablet," A Catholic publication of Brooklyn was waiting on each seat. This contained an inflammatory defense of McCarthy, including his word-for-word attack on the Watkins Committee.

As the train chugged toward Washington, the professional organizers wandered down the aisles, giving instructions and whipping up enthusiasm. Significantly they denounced both Republicans and Democrats alike.

QUEEN MOTHER ELIZABETH

'What is a Western?'

One beetle-browed pep leader assailed President Eisenhower as "soft" on Communism and proposed Senator McCarthy for President. Thils was greeted with cheers.

When the train pulled into Washington's Union Station, the demonstrators were greeted by a District of Columbia police officer wno warned it was against the law for them to parade their placards on Capitol Hill. The McCarthyites booed him down. Nevertheless, the organizers were careful to collect all the placards before they moved on the senate. Instead they handed out several mimeographed protests for the demonstrators to sign and present to various senators.

In the past, Red demonstrations in Washington have had little effect upon Congress. But the McCarthy pressure tactics seem to have some or the solons cowed — particularly Senator Case of South Dakota. perhaps this is because the only mail being received is from the McCarthyites. Though all the polls, plus the election returns, show that McCarthy's public following has dropped, the mail has been lopsided in his favor. Perhaps this may be because the McCarthites take the trouble to write, while those against him don't.

It may also be because the tactics of some McCarthyites are so rabid. One of their favorite tricks is to call up a senator known to be against McCarthy, in the middle of the night, and shout over the phone: "Who promoted Peress?" Then the caller hangs up.

These anonymous calls have so disrupted the sleep of some senators that they have had their phones disconnected.

Also chiming in the propaganda chorus is Col. Robert H. Williams of Los Angeles, the noted anti-semite who claims that Presidet Eisenhower is a captive of "Marxian internationalists." In the past, Williams has distributed a cropped photo, taken in Berlin right after the war, of Eisenhower sitting with Marshall Zhokov the soviet commanding general in Berlin. It is no secret, of course, that Eisenhower and Zhukov tried to keep the Russan and American armies friendly, but the gory description given in "Williams Intelligence Summary" is geared to give the connotation that Eisenhower is a tool of Communism.

All these irresponsible forces have been brought to bear on the Senate, plus the voices of some well-meaning people who seem sincerely to believe the statement of Cardinal Spellman's assistant, Msgr. Edward Martin, that McCarthy is being censured because of his Catholicism. Whatever the motive, it adds up to one of the most concentrated pressure drives in recent Senate history.

Queen and A Westerner

Her Majesty, the Queen Mother of England, relaxed from her round of official duties to take in Broadway's top musical hit "Pojama Game", and afterwards was escorted to the dressing room of the star, John Raitt.

"I suppose," said Mr. Raitt, "That there were some things in the show that you didn't understand."

Queen Elzabeth said she had learned a lot of American words since her arrival here, but admitted that there were some that still went over her head.

"For instance." she asked. "What is a Western?"

"A Western," replied Raitt, "is a sandwich made of a fried egg, with ham, tomatoes, green peppers, and onion all mixed up."

"It sounds perfectly delicious," replied the Queen. "I'm going to have to try one."

Sen. Morse, once the left wing of the Republican party, is a study in disappointment. He was elected to the Senate, and proved himself so glib a dribbler of phrases that he managed to stay there. Republicans are hesitant to run against one another, there being so few in office anyway. But they do tend to be somewhat inhospitable to the politically aberrant in their own party.

Sen. Morse just never achieved that power in the inner circle which is so dear to the hearts of the politically ambitious. He was naturally disappointed. Even at the national conventions he sat in the balcony. Achieving no eminence by the usual means of politics, he jumped out into the middle of the road.

But he appears to be tiring of the "independent" distinction. More realistically, he is probably looking for political security, found only in political parties.

Reaction Piece

Mundy Hears Discussion On His Column

David Mundy

Ever hear people talking about you? No, not imagining, but actually hearing them? It all comes from writing a column for the DTH and having your visage relatively unknown on campus.

Last week U. S. marshals proff Friday's column, I made another mad dash, over to Lenoir Hall. Barely had I settled down with a newspaper and "dinner" when some words floating over from the next table attracted my attention.

He's an Asheville boy, isn't he?" (Asheville being a village near my home.)

"Yes, we have one or two other campus wheels from Asheville, too." (Or words to that effect.)

"How did you spell it?"

"M-U-N-D-Y."

At this point I turned halfway around and almost introduced myself to the two gentlemen. My failure to do so was amply rewarding.

From the remainder of the conversation I retain only fragments:

"He doesn't like anyone, does he? Did you see what he had to say about ——— this morning?"

"Oh, well, those little ——— have to write about something. They just can't think of anything else." (All too correct, I fear.)

"Can't you do something about all these attacks?"

"No, you just have to grin and bear it. There are limits to libel, though. The minute he steps over a little bit more-BAM-he is all gone." (The other one assented. References to libel were frighteningly frequent.)

The views were enlightening, but not wholly unexpected in regard to the people talking. One, it seems, is (was) running for an office. He was treatening to "haul someone in front of the Honor Council" should they dare even lay a pencil to one of his posters.

My desire to introduce myself abated with the development of their conversation. Just as I finally decided that there would be considerable humor in leaning over and announcing myself to be the object of their opprobrium, they departed.

Still, the occasion was not a complete loss. Counting them, I know "Reaction Piece" to now have nine readers; ten, counting the linotype operator.

And a Republican dream has come true. For years the Republicans in the western counties of the state have been complaining: "If only we had a district attorney, we could end these Democrats stealing elections."

Now there is a Republican district attorney, a former state chairman. While assorted state politicians and agencies were achieving a great deal of publicity over alleged vote frauds (Republican, of course), the D.A. was investigating.

Last week P. S. marshals proceeded to arrest a slue of Democrats, county chairman, state representative, et al. And while the state "report" on election irregularities is still circulating in official channels, a House investigating group delves into some Republican charges in the ninth, tenth, and twelfth districts. The group has troubles, though. Since the group hasn't subpoena powers, the "poor, maligned, honest Democrats" won't show up to defend themselves from "all these dirty smears."

The ballot-casting may have ended, but those $10 ballots just won't stay cast this time.

The Eye Of The Horse

Roger Will Coe

The Horse sees imperfectly, magnifying some things, minimizing others . . . "—Hipporotis, circa 500 B. C.

THE HORSE was hoofing along Campus Cameron when I saw him. He had a T-square, dividers, a ruler, and countless and sharp pencils with him.

"My idea for a School of Architectural Writing is taking hold, Roger," he chittered. (I hate him when he chitters!) It may win me a big prize!"

This was not what I had heard, at all, at all. I had heard that it—well, did The Horse own a synonym for 'Stunk'? Strictly gloryboat art!

"I am in line for the new Lebon Literary Medal," he informed me, "for what is hailed as the greatest of literary innovations, if not of all time, at any—"

Could I finish it for The Horse, please — ? If not of all time, at any rate, of modern times! And who, pray, ever had heard of a Lebon Medal?

"It is, as its spelling indicates," The Horse explained, as he collapsed to the turf by The Playmakers, "sort of a backward Nobel, see?"

After what I had heard about The Horse getting a TV tryout, I did not think he should be of a frame of mind to discuss any viewing, of any sort!

"That you should mention my mortification," The Horse murmured sadly, his eight-balls of eyes crossed in emotion. "It should not happen to Jack Horner!"

If The Horse meant Jack Horner, the Durham Herald's sportswriter, I though the lad had in handsome degree atoned for any past misdeeds.

"That is why I say it in no wise should happen to him." The Horse restated. "Roger? Have you ever in your life tried to act a part under a slug's lug?"

Did The Horse mean, by any chance, a fat, pale worm?" Chance, my hoof!" was The Horse's reply. "I saw one!

"A fat, pale, goggled and joweled slug, and sitting at a table, no less, just as I myself sat at a like table; and every time I looked up—there it was!"

Why, this was scarcely credible! I had seen a TV dry-run or two. The camera took the pic and sent it back to a screen that faced the TV actor.

"You are telling me about it?" The Horse snapped. "I regret I must confirm both your statement, and what I saw: the pale, obese worm in the near screen was I!"

For the love of Mike, a TV actor was supposed to be eyeing the lens, or in its near vicinage, most if not all the time! Or was the subject, Horsehair?

"The theory is a worthy one, me bhoy," The Horse grimaced. "but when it ain't your copy, and you ain't had time to memorize it, what do you do?"

Well, I guessed you read it, holding it aloft and in such a way it was not in the picture. That was not difficult. What was the catch in that deal?

"I lost my bifocal glasses, is what," The Horse countered. "My reading glasses, which I wore, permit no holding copy at even an arm's length."

Brother, that must have a rare TV tryout! What had the tryer-outers to look at other than The Horse's pate, or to listen to for clear diction?

"The presence of ladies was all that prevented my making a few suggestions anent what they could do for other occupation," The Horse said sourly.

Well . . . there was always The Great American, Novel, to write. But if I could make a suggestion —don't do it in this Architectural Writing Style, please!

THE BRAVEST MAN OF THE WEEK: University of Arizona football coach Warner Woodson stood up at a meeting of the Downtown Boosters Club and told them to mind their own business.

The booster organization, known as the Towncats, asked Woodson at the weekly luncheon why his team passed on fourth down with two yards to go for a first down on Texas Western's five-yard line Saturday night. Western won 41-21. Woodson stood up and proceeded to lambast the boosters verbally. He began by telling them that their open criticism of his quarterbacks had given them an inferiority complex, so that they were afraid to call a play anymore. Woodson concluded his answer to why his team had passed on fourth down with, "A lot of you think you can do better. I don't. I don't try to tell you how to run your businesses. . . . I know more about football than anyone here, and I'm smarter about football than you. Stay out of my business so I can do better."

The Towncats gave Woodson a standing ovation when he had finished talking.

The North Carolina (Basketball) Coaches Association is sponsoring a full week of basketball clinics this week. The clinics are conducted by the coaches of the various colleges in the state, along with their respective teams. Coach Frank McGuire and his Tar Heels held a workshop in Henderson last Monday night.

When asked how he thinks his quintet will stand up against the other Big Four teams this season, McGuire refused to express optimism. He explained why: State has three men in the stratosphere, one 6'11", another 6'10", and another 6'9". Duke has a couple of giants of equal height. The tallest man the Tar Heels have is Paul Likens at 6'10". Lennie Rosenbluth is 6'5" and Bob Young is 6'6". Of the three, Rosenbluth is the only one who appears to definitely have a starting position, which would put the locals at a definite disadvantage under the backboards against the Duke and State giants.

However, McGuire, one-time St. John's of New York great, shed his cautiousness long enough to reveal that he is hoping for, at least, a split with his Big Four adversaries this year.

The humiliation of the Notre Dame massacre was excruciating, but, otherwise, the game was profitable from the UNC point of view: (1) The split from the gate receipts of a near-capacity crowd of 55,410 exerted a fattening effect on the local treasury; (2) The Tar Heels enjoyed a close-up of how a team should operate; (3) The Notre Dame band was magnificent, and (4) the great, indescribable fighting spirit of the Notre Dame student body, from whence comes the Irish team's almost unconquerable "will to win," was so evidence that it should make Carolinians shameful for their apathy.

Win Over UVa. Predicted By Coach Barclay

By BERNIE WEISS

Carolina football coach George Barclay, this time not with his tongue in his cheek, has predicted that his Tar Heels will take the University of Virginia this Saturday in Charlottesville.

Last week the No. 1 mentor expressed optimism concerning his team's chances against Notre Dame—the outcome was a 42-13 win for the Irish.

Barclay, however, feels confident of the Tar Heels now. After reviewing scouting reports of the Cavaliers, he has decided that the only Cavalier threat is posed through the air. Carolina's aerial defense is of top quality, despite the fact that it took a beating last Saturday.

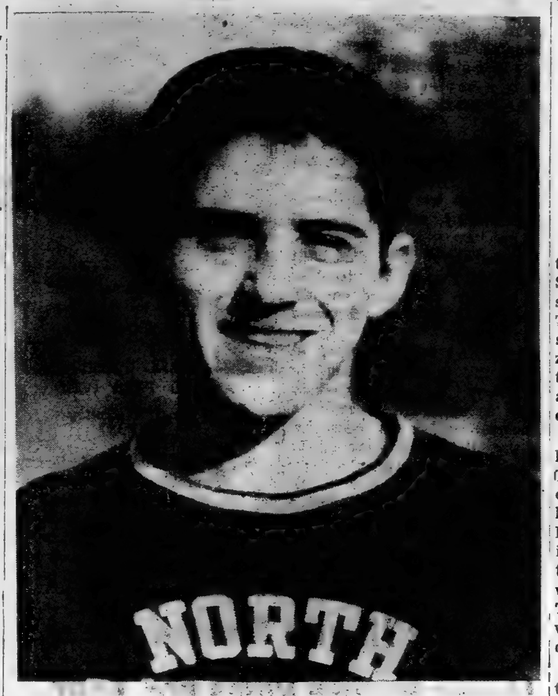
Virginia's offense is piloted by Rives Bailey, a slightly built junior who possesses a most accurate arm. Bailey also has a good understudy in sophomore William Clarke, a southpaw.

But, Barclay said "This is one game we're after. We should have a good day and we should beat them."

The Cavaliers' running attack is comparatively weak, the only powerful ball-carrier being Herbert Hartwell. Hartwell likes to drive up the middle and off the tackles. This composes the bulk of the Virginia rushing attack.

Wallin Shines In Long Drills

North Carolina held one of its longest and roughest workouts of the seas on today as Coach George Barclay pushed preparations for Saturday's ACC clash with Virginia at Charlottesville.



The latter part of the session was held under lights.

Halfback Ken Keller and Fullback George Wallin sparked the squad through a long offensive workout against the freshmen after Coach Barclay had put the emphasis on defense in the earlier part of the dril.

Wallin, running with the No. 3 team, gave his best display of running this season as he dashed to two touchdowns, both on long runs. He has been sidelined most of the season with an injury.

Halfback Ed Sutton, who has been out with an injury, stayed out of the rough work.

Halfback Larry Parker was forced to miss practice with an upset stomach.

Flying Jim Beatty Is 'Athlete Of The Week'

A short, stocky sophomore who has been described as potentially one of the greatest cross-country runners in Carolina track history has been chosen by the staff of The Daily Tar Heel as "Athlete of the Week."

The runner is Jim Beatty, who, the Flying Tar Heel, has won every race he has participated in this year (eight) and has captured the State championship and the Atlantic Coast Conference Championship.

Beatty won the weekly award on the basis of his performance Monday in the ACC title race, held in College Park, Maryland.

The five-foot, five-inch, 138-pounder finished first in that race, besting a field of 50 and Maryland's Alva "Burr" Grim by five seconds. Beatty set a new course record, as he has done often in the past, by touring the Terrapins' 3.8 mile layout in 18:07. The previous record was 18.40.

Grim led Beatty until approximately 150 yards from the finish, when the Tar Heel put on a burst of speed to capture the race and the title and the record.

Coach Dale Ransom describes Beatty as "a tremendous worker and a splendid athlete." His praise is well-founded, Beatty having won all his races this season and all but one last year, his first.

A week ago this past Monday, Beatty ran in the State championship jaunt at Raleigh. His record time was 20:19. The mark he broke was 20:50.

Races on other courses perhaps seem a bit easier to Beatty, as the Carolina tour is one of the toughest in the conference. The course includes successive 75-foot hills within the final mile. Runners here have named the spot "Dead Man's Hill."

On Carolina course Beatty set a time of 19:42. The record was established against Maryland in a dual meet October 23.

By the time he is a senior, Beatty should be a nation-wide figure, for there are many other fast runners in the ACC to push him to his finest efforts.

Beatty will run one more race this season. It will be the State A.A.U. race Davidson, 20 miles north of Charlotte. The occasion will be what might be called a homecoming for the leather-lunged Carolinian, Charlotte is his home.

Girls Hockey Team Tackles WC Today

The UNC Women's Hockey Club, which tied Meredith College in their last encounter, meets the girls from Woman's College today at 4:00 p.m. at Kenan Stadium. The Carolina girls, impressive in their play at Meredith, are looking for their first win of the season. Everyone is invited to come to the game.

The probable starting line-up for Carolina: Chappie Chapman at left wing, Joan Haley at left inner, Carol Taylor at center forward, Sara Cashwell at right inner, Amy Morse at right wing, Charlotte Clement at the left halfback slot, Jackie McCarthy holding down the center half position, Anne Miser at right half, Linda Clement at left fullback, Pat Carter at right full, and Linda Garris will hold down the goalkeeper position.

Zetes Gained Campus Intramural Finals With 19-0 Win Over DKEs In Frat Finals Friday

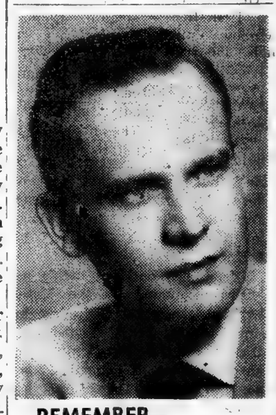
By BOB DILLARD

A vaunted Zeta Psi Intramural team downed a sluggish Law School-3 squad yesterday by a score of 8-0, to take the Intramural Tag Football Campus Championship. The game, played in a drizzling rain, saw the Law School attack bog down early in the game, and the Zetes take full advantage of their opponents' weaknesses.

Law School received the opening kick-off on their own 32-yard line. The Lawyers could move the ball only five yards in five downs, and kicked out to the Zeta Psi 30-yard line. The Zetes lost eleven yards in two plays, but a flat pass out to the sideline on the next play was good to the Law School 38. The Lawyers held, and the ball went over to Law School at their own 25 yard line.

Law School moved downfield to the Zete 30 yard line in five plays, largely on the strength of a 40 yard pass play, but this time the Zetes held, and Law School kicked to the Zeta 12. To avoid the possibility of the Lawyers scoring a safety, the Zetes booted on the second play from scrimmage. The Lawyers took over on the Zete 43.

The Lawyers almost came through with a touchdown in the next sequence of downs, as a long pass grazed the tips of a receiver's fingers in the end zone, but the Zeta Psi team held the Lawyers to a two yard gain in five downs, and the Lawyers kicked.



Zeta Psi took the ball on their own 18 yard line, and in three plays, pushed across the only score of the ball game. The touchdown came on a 39 yard pass play, with Chic Young taking the ball and outrunning two Law School defenders. The try for the point was blocked, but the Lawyers were offsides. On the second attempt, the Zetes passed, but the pass was wide and the score read, Zeta Psi-6, Law School-3, 0. The half ended a few plays later.

Neither team could gain any yardage in the early part of the second half. Pass interceptions on both sides cost the two teams scoring chances.

The Zetes missed a beautiful opportunity to score when they intercepted a Law School pass at the Lawyers 29 yard line, but the Lawyers held, and pushed the Zetes back to the 45 yard line. Zeta Psi kicked to the Law School five yard line to set up the safety. An incomplete pass thrown from behind the goal line gave the Zetes two points, and with the free kick from the 20 by the Lawyers, the game ended.

Zeta Psi moved into the finals by virtue of a 19-0 win over DKE last Friday, while Law School gained entry by a win over Winston-2 last Thursday.

Party Slated For Richmond

By JAKE WADE

Mr. J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders, the University of North Carolina alumni secretary, has dispatched a communique to a group of his constituents in which he says: "Back in the 'old days' North Carolinians were accustomed to 'take over' Richmond on the occasion of the annual Carolina-Virginia football game."

That's right, according to the very vivid memories of the older alumni, and also as noted in the archives, and Mr. Saunders is pitching an alumni party in Richmond Friday night to provide a little nostalgic touch to the 1954 between these two institutions.

But the game this time is at Charlottesville, not Richmond. The heat of the ancient rivalry is not as apparent these days, but some of it is left. It's a big conference game and victory means much. The Tar Heels and Cavaliers have been up and down this season. They should be well matched and a first rate game is promised.

LONGEST SERIES! . . . It's Carolina's longest series, the game this week to be the fifty-ninth. . . . The Tar Heels are slightly ahead, 29 to 26 and with three contests ties. . . . Like most football series, the results have run in cycles. . . . In 1892 two games were played, one going to each team . . . then Virginia had a long stretch of wins with the tradition being that, no matter how good the Tar Heels had been over the season, the big orange "V" scared the daylights out of them on Thanksgiving Day. . . . That was when the game was played annually in the old days.

The Tar Heels did not begin to hit a continuous winning stride against Virginia until the late 1920's, when they started making up a big deficit. . . . Collins, Wolf and Snavely turned out teams which were superior rather regularly. . . . After that, in Carolina's general drop-off, and with Art Gueppe turning out great offensive combinations at Charlottesville, the tide began going the other way. . . . Virginia piled up big scores to win three in a row until last year. . . . With a new coaching set-up on both sides, the Tar Heels came back for a 33-7 win. . . . This year it looks like it could be anybody's game.

Student Legislature Meeting Will Get Underway Tomorrow

RALEIGH (AP)—The annual North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly will convene Thursday afternoon in the Capitol for a three-day session.

Some 300 delegates from 30 or more of the state's colleges and universities are expected to attend. Gov. Hodges is scheduled to speak at the opening of the assembly.

Also appearing on the Thursday afternoon program will be Eric Potter of Duke University, president of the assembly's Interim Council.

After its opening formalities, the assembly will recess until Thursday at 7:30 p.m. when it will split into a senate and house of representatives. Each house will elect officers and hold a short business session.

The assembly will elect new interim officers Saturday.

The two largest delegations are expected from the University of North Carolina and North Carolina State College.

Trucking Chief Speaks Here

"More than 1,800 Tar Heel cities, towns and communities depend entirely on truck transportation for everything they eat, wear and use. In fact, the North Carolina Trucking Industry has helped banish the 'economic isolation' of many smaller places," an industry spokesman said here today.

Jeff B. Wilson, Raleigh, director of Information and Safety of the North Carolina Motor Carriers Association, was guest speaker before the transportation class in the School of Business Administration.

Dr. J. C. D. Blaine, associate professor of business administration, UNC, introduced Wilson, who is also editor of the monthly magazine, "Tarheel Wheels" and vice-president of the Southern Safety Conference.

Wilson was on of a series of speakers representing transportation and traffic being sponsored in their campus lectures by the newly-formed Transportation and Traffic Club at the University.

JEFF B. WILSON

In reminding that North Carolina is a state of small farms, cities and towns, Wilson said: "It ranks 10th in the United States in population, but has only one city of more than 100,000 population—Charlotte. Yet Tar Heel factories are within overnight truck delivery distance of great Eastern and Southern markets."

"The trucking industry in the state is not an industry apart to itself, but an important part of every community. It is the basic life-time in the economic and social life of North Carolina," he continued.

Wilson also outlined safety activities conducted by the Motor Carriers Association, including the annual State Truck Rodeo, the "Driver of the Year" program, "share the road" campaign, and the N. C. Truck Driver Training School founded by the Association at N. C. State College.

Discussing road taxes paid by trucks, he pointed out that "The trucking industry does not receive or expect a free ride—We pay our share. We pay huge highway user taxes, plus the usual business taxes, although trucks number only 19 per cent of the vehicles using the highways."

"The limitations of the trucking industry's growth and development in the Tar Heel State should be set only by the industrial progress and cosial achievement of the people in North Carolina," Wilson said.

Trustees Will Visit Here Next Monday

The Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees of UNC will pay its annual visit to the University on Monday, Victor Bryant, Durham, committe chairman, announced today.

In the day-long visit the Committee will hear reports of progress and plans for the future for the University from admini strative heads as well as reports from student leaders on their activities.

The Committee will continue its policy of talking with individuals from faculty or student body who have suggestions or problems to present.

Individuals desiring a conference with the Visiting Committee have been asked to communicate directly with Chairman Bryant, Visiting committee chairman, at Box 666, Durham; or with Charles M. Shaffer, assistant to the Chancellor, chairman of arrangements, at 302 South Building, Chapel Hill.

Ivey Gets Newspaper

Alfred (Pete) Ivey, University graduate of 1935 who spoke here last April 28 to the annual student government banquet, will become executive editor of The Shelby Daily Star about Dec. 1.

Ivey is now an associate editor of the Winston-Salem Journal and Sentinel.

He spoke here last spring on "What Price Eggheads? or Big Wheels and Flying Saucers."

The speech was an examination of democracy on the Carolina campus.

At that time, Ivey said, "At Chapel Hill . . . we live together and come to understand one another under relatively favorable circumstances.

"Student self-government at Chapel Hill is an experiment in democracy. It is a democracy within an autocracy, or rather a democracy within an oligarchy. But that oligarchy is answerable to another higher power: the Trustees and the Legislature of North Carolina. And that higher power is responsible to another higher power, the people of North Carolina, a democracy."

Ivey also included several remarks pertinent to the fraternity drinking problem which was under heavy debate at the time.

While at Carolina, Ivey was editor of the Carolina Buccaneer, a member of the Golden Fleece and director of Graham Memorial.

Student Health Service Gives Hours, Excuse Rules For Year

The Student Health Service maintains facilities to provide medical care in the event of illnesses and emergencies. Students are encouragd to use the service when the need arises, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Health Service.

Rgular office hours are 9-11:30 a.m. and 2-5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 10-11 a.m. and 4-5 p.m. Sunday. Student visits should be confined to the scheduled office hours except in case of unavoidable conflicts or emergencies.

Students may be excused from classes for medical reasons if the attending doctor feels an excuse is justified. The excuse will be granted only at the time the illness occurs.

Students who are excused are responsible for class work missed. Excuses are not granted for reasons other than medical and are not granted at night, Saturday afternoon or Sunday.

If a student is ill at home, a signed statement by a physician or parent must be presented at the Infirmary before the student can be excused from classes missed, said the report.

Episcopal students from the Diocese of East Carolina will observe a Corporate Communion this Sunday at 7:30 a.m. with the Rt. Rev. Thomas H. Wright leading the service.

Bishop Wright will also preach at the 11 a.m. service at the Chapel of the Cross Episcopal Church and adddess the Canterbury Club at their 6 o'clock supper meeting.

Bishop Wright, who lives in Wilmington, has jurisdiction over the Diocese of East Carolina. He was chaplain of Episcopal students in the University in 1930 following his graduation from the Virginia Theological Seminary.

Before his election and consecration as bishop, Dr. Wright was rector of churches in Lumberton, Lexington, Va., San Francisco, Calif., and San Antonio, Tex.

Gov. Hodges Doesn't Want To Give Budget Ideas Prematurely

Raleigh, (AP)-Gov. Hodges said yesterday he does not plan to release his views on the state's serious budget problems before the convening of the 1955 General Assembly.

His views will be made public in his budget message, he told reporters at his Tuesday morning news conference.

Hodges said he is wrestling with the budget he and the Advisory Budget Commission will present to the Legislature. He plans further conferences with Asst. Budget Director D. S. Coltrane and will meet with the Advisory Budget Commission today.

In answer to other questions, Hodges said he agrees with the principles of separation of the state's Prisons Department from the Highway Commission and freedom of newsmen to cover legislative proceedings.

When asked if he favored prison separation the Governor replied "I have previously said I favor separation in principle. . .I think we ought to indicate that is the direction we ought to go." However, he added, "there is much to be said for both sides."

As to whether he favors repeal of the so-called "secrecy law" passed by the last Legislature, Hodges said "Nobody could disagree in principle" with the idea of full reporting of legislative proceedings.

But, he added, there would have to be "a mutual agreement" between reporters and legislative committees, in some cases, on what should be reported.

What was his opinion on the state's brief on school segregation which was presented to the U. S. Supreme Court Monday? "It was thoughtfully done," he answered. It was done "as well as could be expected without going into specific details."

North Carolina asked that federal district courts be given wide latitude in placing desegregation into effect. It told the court that an immediate end of segregation might result in racial strife and abolition of the state's public schools.

During his news conference Hodges announced he will hold a conference on hurricane relief here Nov. 22. He said the state's entire Washington congressional delegation, members of the council of state, and state, federal and local officials of many eastern North Carolina towns have been invited.

We need to do more" for areas devastated by Hurricane Hazel, the Governor declared He said the "loss of beaches is far worse" in many cases than some personal property losses because they are a big source of revenue for the state and their areas.

Student Solons Start Meeting Today At Noon

Twenty-nine Carolina students will leave shortly after noon today for the state capitol in Raleigh to attend the 18th North Carolina Student Legislative Assembly.

Today's session will begin at 4 p.m. with a plenary business session, including the election of officers and adoption of rules for this year's meeting.

Carolina delegate Joel Fleishman is a candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives for the three-day assembly.

Other UNC delegates to the House are James Turner, floorleader; Lewis Brumfield, Milton Cooke, Charlie Dean, Harold Downing, Sue Fink, Gordon Forester, chairman of the delegation; Jim Holmes, Anne Huffman, Charlie Hyatt, Tom Lambeth, David Mundy, JiJi Rainwater, Keith Snyder and Bob Young.

Delegates to the Senate are David Reid, floorleader; Virginia Agnew, Manning Muntzing and Scotty Hester, alternate.

Alternates to the House are Dick Albert, Tom Bennett, Ruth Dalton, Bob Harrington, Al Isaac, Bill Moore, Lloyd Shaw, Luanne Thornton and Frank Warren.

The Carolina delegation will introduce three bills to the assembly.

The bills for this year are on desegregation in the public schools, a bill in approval of academic freedom, and a bill endorsing the Eisenhower administration.

The first assembly of the State Student Legislature was sponsored in 1936 by Pi Kappa Delta forensic fraternity at State College. This group was more an oratorical society which meet annually for debate than a legislative assembly

In the fall of 1947 the fraternity announced that it had dissolved itself and the legislative assembly This act resulted in action on the part of the Debate Council here at Chapel Hill in making an all-out effort to revive the group.

After long discussions, representatives from State, Meredith, WC and UNC decided to continue the assembly. In November this nucleus group formed a council and elected Earl Fitzgerald of Carolina, president.

Members to this year's assembly were chosen on the basis of personal interviews with the selection board.

This selection board was headed by Carolina's two members of the Interim Council, Joel Fleishman and Sue Fink.

Elections Board Rules Town Men's Race Valid

Fleishman To Ask Council About Verdict

The Election Board declared yesterday that the Town Men's I Legislature race was valid, and Student Party Chairman Joel Fleishman appealed the decision to the Student Council.

The controversy, which resulted from what the Election Board called a printer's error, arose Tuesday when it was learned that Colin McMillian, a University Party legislative candidate, had been omitted from the ballot.

The Election Board, in announcing its decision yesterday, said that since McMillian did not wish a re-vote, the election was valid.

Fleishman, in contesting the Election Board decision, contended that Election Board Chairman Graham Rights had told him early Tuesday the race would be invalid.

"We would have worked to get the vote out. But since Graham told us the eleotion wasn't valid, we didn't" Fleishman said.

Rights said that he did tell Fleishman that, but later learned it was a mistake.

APPEAL TODAY

The Student Council will hear Fleishman's appearl today at 4 o'clock. Fleishman, however, said he would not be able to attend himself and would have to send a representative.

McMillian told Rights Tuesday morning that he would ask for a re-vote, according to the Election Board chairman. Then, after the votes were counted, he changed his mind, Rights said.

The UP won four of the five seats open in Town Men's I in the election; thus party leaders have no desire to re-run the election. On the other hand, the SP is eager to gain a re-vote because it could mean more seats.

In making its decision the Election Board declared:

"Due to a printer's error in the ballot for the Legislature in Town Men's I, Colin McMillian's (UP) name was omitted. This error was not discovered until yesterday's election. This left the election in that district open for contestion (sic) by the candidate whose name was left off the ballot. McMillian said that he did not want to contest the election, and if there was a re-vote in that district, he would withdraw his name from the slate.

"However, since there was no contestion (sic) by the candidate in question (McMillian), the Election Board decided by a unanimous decision that the ballot in Tuesday's election in Town Men's I be considered valid and that there were no grounds for a re-vote to be held in that district."

Horace Williams House Is An 8-Sided Shrine

By BARBARA WILLARD

"We don't live in a house, we live in a shrine," Dean Fred Weaver said of his home. It is listed in the phone book as simply 611 E. Franklin St., but it is listed in dozens of other books as a place of historical significance.

This "shrine" once was the home of Horace Williams, who came to Carolina in 1891 as a professor. He had been here as a student and native North Carolinian many times before. Williams returned to his old alma mater to take charge of philosophy and psychology, a brand new field of instruction at the Tar Heel University.

At this time, George T. Winston was president and also occupant of the house that Williams was to make famous.

The house, according to Robert W. Winston, Williams' biographer, was built n 1840 and known for a time as the old Hildreth Smith place. Here Hoke Smith, Secretary of the Interior under Wilson, spent his early days.

It is also said by some that a man named Hedrick built it in 1840. Each person has a different story to tell about the origin. In her Letters, Mrs. Cornelius Phillips Spencer says the house was first built in the shape of a hexagon, but Dean Weaver, being very familar with the house, says that it was in the shape of an octagon, the reason for this supposedly being that the man who built the house thought that bees were the most advanced civilization, and a symbol of the bee hive should be the strongest form of structure. Each room was built so as to have a fireplace and an outside door.

To appreciate the signifigance of the house, one must first appreciate Williams. Dean Weaver said of him, 'He was not the kind of man everyone loved. He kept livestock in the back yard. He would not connect to the city water supply for years. He lived along alone after his wife died. He was a crank, a character.

"When he lived in the house it was a dungeon, but not now. It has all the drawbacks of an ald house, but we love it."

"NIGHTMARE"

Winston, in his sons "The one-story, stuccoed house was old and misshapen, a rambling, inconvenient affair on the side of a steep incline. At the bottom of the hill was the famous Roaring Fountain, a spring distant two or three hundred yards from the house. From this spring and up that long incline water for the home must be toted. A more inconvenient dwelling would have been hard to find. In truth it must be said of the old place that for the inconvenience of housekeeping it had no parallel except perhaps the habitation of an eastern Yogi. . .Mrs. Williams made some improvements in the house. On the south side she arranged a study. She likewise changed the vestibule into an inviting studie. But even with these additions the place was so old and poorly arranged that it is a nightmare."

Improvements have been made through the years, but the "nightmare" was much visited even them. Dean Weaver once visited Williams in his home. "I considered him a great teacher," he said. "It never entered my mind I'd live in his home."

When Horace Williams died he left everything that he had to the University, including his home place, with its vast yards and big old oak trees. When Hurricane Hazel visited Chapel Hill recently she blew over the biggest of the oak trees and supposedly the largest tree in Chapel Hill. It was estimated at 300 years old. There was a slight damage to the house.

Another interesting aspect of the house is the fact listed in many reference books, including the British reference book, there is one room in the house that has 14 sides.

The house has a history; from the man Smith who had a political record or if Hedrick built ti, he was run out of Chapel Hill for proslavery views, Wnston, who was head of the University from 1891 to 1896, to Horace Williams, educator who taught such men as Edw. Kitter Graham, Frank Porter Graham and our own Phillips Russell.

The home, the shrine, is a living portrait of Horace Williams. He taught Hegel, but he practiced Socrates. As Socrates once said to a sort of gadfly, if I may use such the men of Athens of himself, Winston says of Williams, "I am tached to the state and always fastening upon you, arousing and persuading and reproaching you."

GADFLY'S HOME

This is the gadfly's home, a reproach to comfort in his day, a persuasion that comfort is not the important thing, and a thing that

Leniency Bill Author Called A Bad Sport

By DICK CREED

Herb Browne, Chairman of the Men's Honor Council said yesterday that the council, as an organization, "had nothing to do" with putting out the handbill which Dave Reid this week called "negative slander and propaganda."

And Chuck Hauser, former managing editor of The Daily Tar Heel and author of the handbill, accused Reid of displaying "poor sportsmanship" over the defeat of his leniency bill."

After the elections in which his leniency bill was defeated Tuesday night, Reid said that "one of the most disappointing features of this election was the conduct of some of our opponents on the Honor Council."

He said he was "sorry that they felt it necessary at the 11th hour to lower the tenor of the previously high level campaign."

Said Hauser, "As long as this is his attitude, let him attack me and not the Honor Councils for the anti-leniency bill poster which was circulated the night before elections."

'PERSONAL OPINIONS'

Hauser said that the handbill "expressed the personal opinions of myself and other individuals campaigning against the bill" and that it contained no "negative slander and fabrication."

Browne indicated that he had carried on a personal campaign against Reid's bill for leniency in the case of first offense violators of the Honor System. It was known yesterday that Gordon Forester and several other members of the Men's and Women's Honor Councils had carried on similar campaigns.

"I think that the most important point," said Browne, "is that the Honor Council had nothing to do with putting out the poster."

Browne also thought the handbill contained no "negative slander and fabrication."

According to reports from Hauser and President Tom Creasy, Hauser wrote the handbill and Creasy approved it. Ed McCurry was instrumental in distributing copies about campus.

Hauser had asked interested individuals to help pay for printing costs. Browne said yesterday that he has been asked to contribute, but that he had "not decided" yet whether he would or not.

He said that if he did it would be as "an individual and not as Chairman of the Men's Honor Council."

Following is the text of the handbill:

"Don't undermine the Honor System: don't approve a 'free cheat' law which will encourage students to take a chance on the first offense; don't vote for a policy which would let cheaters know they could get away with it—the first time; don't tear down the Carolina way of life by permitting persons who have lied, cheated or stolen to go unpunished; vote no on the referendum for first offense honor violations."

Prof. Wells Will Lecture

Prof. William Wells of the English Department will deliver the Faculty Lecture in the Humanities for the fall term in Gerrard Hall at 8 p.m. next Tuesday. His topic will be "Erasmus and the Praise of Wisdom."

Professor Wells has been a member of the UNC English Department since 1935, when he came from a teaching appointment at the University of Southern California. From 1943 until 1945 he was Academic Co-ordinator of the Navy V-12 program in the University, and from 1946 to 1952 he was Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. At present he is chairman of the University faculty.

The Weak Links In The Honor System

Needed: New Rights For Defendants

The failure of the Leniency Bill means that the principle of the "second chance" does not, for the time being, anyway, enter campus law. But out of the leniency struggle has arisen an interest in the Honor System on the campus that is positively unparalleled in recent years. As one opponent of the measure remarked night before last while the referendum returns were coming in, "If this makes the students realize that we've got an Honor System, it will all be worthwhile."

During the last few weeks, the organization and procedure of the Honor Councils have come under a microscope, always a good thing for institutions. And out of the disagreement on the Leniency Bill has emerged a measure of agreement on certain weaknesses in the scheme of our courts. Some members of the Councils, in fact, those who opposed leniency most violently, have recognized some weak links in the practices of the courts and are eager to see them changed.

The Daily Tar Heel favored the Leniency Bill. We still believe its passage would have strengthened the Honor System. But there are four other changes which remain to be made. They must be made if the rights of defendants under the law are to be adequately protected.

1. The accused should in all cases hear all of the testimony against him.
2. The acused should in all cases be supplied with counsel.
3. The accused should have the right to subpoena witneses through the court.
4. The accused should have the right to an open trial.

The Squeeze Play On Justice

The Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution reads in part, "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a...public trial...to be confronted with the witneses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

Those same four rights, which, since 1790 have been guaranteed all Americans in courts of law, are the rights which are abridged, to greater or lesser degree, by student courts.

The present campus laws mention the right of an accused student to "face" his accuser. In the past, this has usually been interpreted by the Councils as meaning what it literally says. The Councils have brought the acused face to face with the accuser, then asked the accused to leave the Council room while the accuser testified. This could be shrugged off as a humorous interpretation of the law, if it did not work to such deadly disadvantage of the indicted student, who may be innocent and struggling to prove it to the court. He has a small chance of doing so if he does not listen to the testimony of the accuser and to the testimony of all the other witnesses against him.

THE HONOR SYSTEM
. . . after all those years, it's time for a change.

Some Councils apparently have granted this right to those charged with Honor System violations, but only on request, detrimental to his case.

This being true, there has not, of course, been cross-examination of witnesses by the defendant, a principle older than the English Common Law, without which a successful pleading of a case would be all but impossible for an attorney in a law court.

But students accused of campus crime have to get along without it.

The Right To Counsel

The right to counsel is a guarantee which has received better treatment at the hands of the courts. It is usually made clear to a student charged with an honor violation that he may choose a member of the Council to help him with his defense.

This varies, however, from Council to Council and year to year. The reforms necessary in this area are two: The accused should always receive an "attorney" and the counsel should not vote on the case of the student he has defended, nor should he join in the deliberations of the court after he has made his plea.

There is little evidence of Councils following the spirit of the law and insisting upon the right of the accused to hear evidence

The Men's Honor Council, for example, customarily tries several cases at each meeting. Each defendant should be assigned a Council member for his defense. That member should then examine all the evidence, act as confidante of the defendant, prepare his case, summon witnesses, advise the defendant on laws and practices of the court, and, if the accused student pleads innocent, do his best to convince the court of that innocence. At present, one member of the court may act as adviser to each defendant, but he cannot, in any proper sense of the term, be called a defense attorney.

By this same token, there should be, in each case before the courts, a "prosecutor," who would investigate the case independently and present evidence against the defendant. Like the defneder of the accused student, of course, he should then be removed from deliberation and voting on the case.

If the counsel for the defense and prosecutor roles were methodically rotated, no Council member would be overworked and the cases could be clearly and efficiently presented to the Councils. Most important, such a plan would effectively transform the Councils into real courts where justice might be served. The present system—under which the Councils act as prosecutor, defense attorney, judge and jury all at once—is outmoded and inadequate.

The right of the accused to require witnesses to testify in his behalf is another hit-or-miss proposition with the courts. Sometimes, witnesses have been called. Nowhere is it specifically stated that witnesses must testify at the request of the defendant. This should become an absolute guarantee; the defense counsel should have as a part of his responsibility the obligation to put it into operation.

Opening The Door

We respect the right of the courts to remain closed and highly secretive for the protection of accused students. Defendants —even guilty ones—deserve a quiet trial.

However, we also insist that students who want an open hearing should have the right to it. This right is not now present in campus law.

The open trial is an ancient and honored tenet of justice. If it is not granted to a student who desires it, we are denying that student any guarantee to a fair trial. We are saying to him what the courts do, in fact, now say: "You have to accept our judgment and you must say nothing of this to anyone." This is an unsavory form of trial at best, and at worst, a modern-day star chamber.

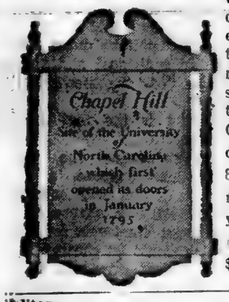
Across the bottom of the summons presented to those charged with honor violations is the statement, "This summons is to be returned to the Chairman of the Council on appearance for trial. All proceeding as of the issuance of this summons are confidential." This can hardly be interpreted any other way than to mean, "Do not talk about this outside the court."

The reform that should be brought about is simple: closed courts should be at the discretion of the defendant.

Some will argue, "With that plan, people might be hesitant to turn anyone in for honor violations, for fear they will be pointed out as the accusers." The answer comes readily: In the first place, accusers, if they are truthful, have nothing to fear from affirming the truth publicly; second, it is imperative, even if some convictions are lost and some guilty go free, to attain the open trial principle; and third, most defendants will still prefer closed trial, anyway.

Cluttered With Cobwebs

The securing of these ends is at least as important as was the much-discussed Leniency Bill to the future of the Honor System. Some of these reforms are understood to be already under discussion in the Councils.



THE DOOR
. . . once behind it, the accused student is inadequately protected.

Most of them could be implemented by the Councils under the present laws, or by simple additions to Council bylaws.

Until students acused under the Honor System have the right to hear and cross-examine opposing witnesses, until they are, as a matter of course, supplied with counsel for defense, until they have the right to require witnesses to testify and to demand an open trial, they wil have inadequate protection. Until these changes are accomplished, the Honor System will remain cluttered with cobwebs and rarely effective.

The Man With The Strong Character

Eric Sevareid On CBS Radio

Good evening.

Some times, to add to the meaning of the headlines, a reporter must be personal. Eleven years ago I was a war correspondent, flying toward China over the infamous "Hump." There came a terrifying moment when the passengers, mostly GI's, stood near the door, trying to summon the courage to bail out of the crippled plane. Precious moments passed. Then one of the three civilians aboard, the diplomat who clutched a dispatch case to his chest, gave us a wry smile and leaped out. His action broke the paralysis; we all followed; and all of us, but one, survived.

In the weeks that followed, we were never entirely sure we would get out of those jungle mountains; in such circumstances men learn truly to know one another; who is weak; who is afraid; who is impetuous, and who is strong, and calm and prudent. As the time passed, the GI's and I began to recognize the civilian with the carefully guarded dispatch case as one among us with a calm and natural courage, as one who would never panic, who never complained. He was the one we chose, for common sense and discretion, to deal with the touchy and dangerous Naga head hunters, our undecided hosts.

Mostly we feared Japanese patrols, and a day came when we heard there was a Jap patrol not far away. The Colonel in charge gave orders that we three civilians, in case of attack, were to take our guns and try to escape, while the soldiers remained to fight. It was the diplomat who said, "In the first place this would be dishonorable. In the second place, we'd never get out." Fortunately, there was no attack.

There was, however, a long and painful hike in rain and heat for all of us. There were moments when another step seemed quite impossible. In such moments, it was generally the diplomat who would sing out with some thing like, "Onward and upward with the arts," and we would laugh and gasp and keep on climbing. I began to faint with heat and thirst on one suffocating slope; the man who left his half pint of water with me — all he had — was, of course, the diplomat.

After we emerged into India and the military reports were in, there was a move in the Air Force to decorate our diplomat for his outstanding personal conduct. I do not know if he ever received the decoration. But none of us in that strange party, I think, would have disputed the choice. For I thought then, as I think now, that if ever I were in deep trouble, the man I would want to be with would be this particular man.

I have known a great number of men around the world, under all manner of circumstances. I have known none who seemed more the whole man; none more finished a civilized product, in all that man should be — in modesty and thoughtfulness, in resourcefulness and steady strength of character.

The name of this man is John Paton Davies. He is the man Secretary of State Dulles, on the recommendation of a five man board, has just broken on the wheel of official disgrace. The Foreign Service officer dismissed, three years short of retirement and pension, after twenty-three years of his life — and almost life itself — in the arduous service of his government. Eight times he was investigated; eight times he was cleared. One by one the politically inspired charges of Communism or disloyalty or perjury were dropped; the ninth board came up with something new, called defects of character. Mr. Davis is not, concluded the board and Mr. Dulles, of sufficient judgment, discretion and reliability.

Sufficient, one may ask, unto what? Their test can only have been of supernatural design. I saw their victim measured against the most severe tests that mortal man can design. Those, he passed. At the head of the class.

This is Eric Sevareid in Washington.

Now We've Got'a Man Who'll Turn His Back on Anybody

What It Was Was The UP Campaigning

Louis Kraar

RUEBEN LEONARD, Jack Stevens and the other University Party chiefs sprawled out on the desks in the student government office looking satisfied. The UP had just recovered from two of the worst legislative defeats in campus history.

'How does it feel, Turner?" Leonard asked Jim Turner, as the SP floorleader smiled through his first defeat.

"Well, boys, I think this election did us good," Turner said.

"Really?" kidded one of the UP boys.

"You see, with the big majority the SP had in Legislature, it was like being right up to the bars at the gates of heaven. You know, heaven is winning in the spring. Now we've just stepped back a pace or so to get a look at heaven so we can crash those gates in the spring," Turner explained. He still wore a smile.

UP LEADERS learned an election lesson last year in Legislature races. And this fall, they put that lesson to work, breaking the old SP monopoly on dorm votes.

"Our candidates were just better," explained Chairman Leonard at the Zeta Beta Tau House, where the party was discussing its victory.

I told Rueben that the SP had said the same thing about its candidates.

But ours really campaigned this time," added Leonard. That was the real explanation for the UP comeback in this mid-year election so void of partisan issues.

SP candidates, campaigning with the confidence of a wide legislative majority behind them, apparently concentrated more on their confidence and less on their campaigning.

The UP, on the other hand, won some seats in all men's dorm districts but one including a seat in the lower quad.

LONG-RANGE effect of this fall election will be a more active Legislature, one in which the interplay of parties will mean something.

With a 28-22 majority, the SP still can push through its program. And, with the backing of a possible Creasy veto, the UP will have more of a chance to get sit legislative program through, too.

THE LENIENCY fight, settled by the students, resulted in the campus becoming more informed about the Honor System.

In this sense, then, no one really lost the fight. Both sides of the controversy were interested in a better Honor System, but they disagreed on method. With the campus better informed on the system, there can be no real losers.

The Egghead Revolution (Continued)

Ed Yoder

"Eggheads of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your yolks!"

That summons to revolution had been issued by Nosnevets during the Presidential Campaign of 1952. He had gotten the nomination of the Egghead Party; for that year, the revolutionary fever had yet to grasp the Eggheads cells and they wanted a peaceful coup.

Unfortunately, after the mud and the sloth of the election subsided, Nosnevets had made a very poor showing and the Eggheads sank into despair. (Some historians believe that this was the real fusing point of the revolutionary elements.)

Nosnevets was defeated by a coalition of the Military-Worshipers, the Younger Suburbians, the Businessmen, the Misguided Farmers and Laborers Club, who had voted for a famous general. The Eggheads were rather disappointed that so many people could vote for a man who admitted that he was grossly naive in the affairs of statecraft; but they accepted these voting habits as symptoms of the "Swinish cult of anti-eggheadism" that seemed to be gaining ascendancy in the nation.

(Another symptom of the same mania was the "harmless" program of Uncle Tan Snoot, who had wireless time sponsored by H. L. Hump's oil company. On his program, often full of anti-eggheadism, Uncle Tan Snoot discussed such questions as: "McCarthyism: Good, Better or Best?" and "Tidelands Oil: Sh-Should The States Get Just The Oil or The Whole Ocean?")

Hardly had the Great Censure of McCarthy failed when Nosnevets was on his way by train to the Cambridge Station. His manifesto was being quoted from overturned stock market ticker-tape machines and from the steps of a thousand captured American Legion homes all over the country. Eggheads were milling in the streets of Chapel Hill, too; they had organized and were already in contact with the central group in Cambridge. They tried to mobilize for a march on New York for the first great battle of the revolution. They were delayed, however, and The Great Wall Street Debacle took place without them.

The thousands of Eggheads, bands playing, EDA banners waving, marched down the Boston Post Road on November 30 from Cambridge toward Wall Street. In a speech in Cambridge, one of the revolutionary leaders had told them,

"The seat of our great enemy is in the materialistic bastions of Wall Street. The people who work there may be friends of the Eggheads, but we all remember the patches we wore in the seats of our shells in '29 Onward to Wall Street!"

A roar shook the walls of Cambridge and in a few minutes the streets there were empty. In the distance a train whistle sounded; the deisel train drew into the Cambridge Station and Nosnevets stepped spryly out onto the platform. It was deserted, too. Everyone had left for the Wall Street Debacle and only a lonely porter lingered near the station.

"Howdy, Ialda," he said to Nosnevets, "where ya been?"

"I've been in exile in Illinois." Ialda answered. "Where is everybody? I heard the Eggheads were having a Big Revolution, but nobody's here but us."

"All gone down to New York," the porter said. "There's gonna be a big battle down on Wall Street. American Legion and New York Stock Exchange against the Eggheads."

Frosh Booters Down N. C. State, 3-0, In Final Tilt

North Carolina's freshman soccer team defeated N. C. State's frosh booters, 3-0, in Raleigh yesterday to avenge a loss by the same score suffered by the UNC varsity the day before at the hands of State's varsity.

Jerry Bryson, George Holt, and Charlie Covell accounted for the Tar Heel tallies. Coach Harry Pawlik singled out Bill Blair, John Harriss, and Walt Sturdevant for the excellent play in the hard-fought contest, in which Pawlik emptied his bench.

With this victory the frosh closed their season, finishing with a record of three wins and two losses. The varsity season ended with their loss to State Tuesday.

Rams Offense Leader In Pro Loop; SF 2nd

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Los Angeles Rames, two games behind leading Detroit in the National Football League's Western Division, still is the top offensive team in pro football.

The Rams, with Norman Van Brocklin leading all passers, and Paul (Tank) Younger tied with Joe Perry for the ground gaining leadership, have gained 3,445 yards—1,503 rushing and 1,942 passing.

San Francisco, also two games off the Detroit pace, ranks second in total mayhem with 3,696 rushing and 1,470 through the air. New York's Giants, new leaders in the Eastern Division, moved from fifth to third in total offense with 2,795 yards—1,288 rushing and 1,507 passing. Detroit, which has played one less game, is fourth with 2,742, of which 936 is rushing and 1,779 passing.

On the ground, San Francisco holds a 200 yard lead over its Coast rival, Los Angeles, in rushing. The Forty Niners have gained 1,696 yards to 1, 503 for the Rams. New York has gained 1,288 to rank third.

Through the air, the Chicago Bears lead over Los Angeles 2,165 to 1,942 yards. Detroit is third with 1,779. Percentage wise in passing, Cleveland has completed 60.7% of its passes to 56.2% for Pittsburgh.

Detroit replaced San Francisco as the scoring leader with 237 points in seven games. New York in eight games has 232.

Swords Clash As Fencing Season Gets Underway Here

Now that cool weather is upon us, the sound of clashing foils rings out at Woollen Gym. Each Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday on the east side of the Gym, a group of hard working fencers are busily preparing for their coming meets against the series of teams they will meet this season.

Numbered among this series will be such teams as N. C. State at Raleigh, Vanderbilt of Tenn., Kentucky, Lincoln Memorial Univ. (Tenn.), Shaw Air Force Base of S. C., Augusta Military Academy of Fort Defiance, Va. and others. Coach Pebley Barrow, who in 1950 with Franz Ross revived interest here in the sport after the war, has issued a call "for all interested persons with previous experience or not, to join the team."

"Instruction for novices is available in all three weapons," he continued. "Since the team was organized on an intramural club basis, they have worked diligently and met many other schools as well as holding individual competitions in each of the three weapons. They are seeking recognition as a minor varsity sport and hope soon to achieve this as the team at N. C. State has done. This will enable us to letter those men who make the team," Coach Barrow stated.

"There is also an opportunity for anyone desirous of fencing, regardless of whether interested in the team competitions, to come down to the Intramurals Department-sponsored activities night on Thursday from 7-9 p.m. to use the equipment and receive instruction. Both fencing and badminton are presently being offered.

"This year, as in the past, at the close of the season in May we will have an individual competition with suitable trophies and awards in each weapon and open to anyone on campus. We are also currently seeking someone for the job of manager of the fencing team to look after the equipment and help with the arrangements for meets with other teams. As to the berths on the team—they are wide open to everyone and the returning veterans could only fill about half of them if they all come out and are successful in retaining theirs. This means the rest must be filled by novices and the way is open to all. We want and need anyone who is interested and will practice regularly and faithfully," Barrow concluded.

MONOGRAM MEETING

The Monogram Club will hold a meeting at 7:15 tonight. Plans for entering a group in the Valkyries Sing contest will be discussed. All members are asked to wear their monograms every Thursday, and also to the club meetings.

A discussion of plans to show movies of the Justice era football games at the end of the current season will be held.

Tar Heels Pass Well In UVa. Preps

Quarterbacks Len Bullock and Doug Farmer gave an impressive aerial show today as the North Carolina Tar Heels ran through a lengthy practice sesion in preparation for Saturday's clash with Virginia in Charlottesville.

Bullock and Farmer, the only quarterbacks left in the Tar Heel camp, after a back injury to Albert Long, hit their receivers with regularity against a freshman team and each contributed a couple of long runs.

Also impressive during the scrimmage was right halfback Connie Gravitte who reeled off several long dashes.

In the early part of the practice, the Tar Heels concentrated on defense with both the ground and aerial phases getting lengthy attention.

Coach George Barclay said today that the team will leave for Charlottesville Friday morning by bus. The squad will run through a practice session there Friday afternoon.

Aussie Stars Top Americans

SYDNEY, Nov. 17 (AP)—Ken Rosewall and Lewis Hoad of Australia defeated Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and Ham Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., 3-6, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3 today in the doubles semifinal of the New South Wales tennis championship.

The Australians secured a breakthrough when Richardson dropped service with a double fault in the fourth game of the fifth set.

Trabert's return of service was very sound and Richardson played a fairly steady game except for weak forehand returns.

Rosewall's service returns were better than Hoad's but Hoad's service was consistent and powerful throughout.

Earlier Wimbledon champions Mervyn Rose and Rex Hartwig defeated John Barrett and Roger Becker, England, 6-0, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, in the other semifinal.

State's Marinkov ACC Soph Of Week

RALEIGH, Nov. 17 (AP)—North Carolina State halfback George (Wagon Wheels) Marinkov has won honors as the Associated Press Atlantic Coast Conference Sophomore of the Week.

Other sophomores who turned in outstanding work included Duke quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, Wake Forest halfback Mill Barnes and Wake Forest end Jack Ladner.

Sugar Ray Robinson As Elusive As Ever

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson, a hard man to pin down either on paper or in the ring when he was champ, is proving almost as elusive again now that he has announced plans for a comeback.

He and his advisers have been hedging in all directions about the first competitive appearance. A Hamilton, Ont., promoter said the former middleweight king would show for him, but Sugar Ray quickly said that was just an exhibition.

Yesterday a Detroit promoter said he'd signed Robinson to meet Joe Rindone of Boston Dec. 8. But today Joe Glaser, Robinson's business manager, said Robinson hasn't signed for a Detroit fight.

"We have received propositions from various promoters for Robinson's first comeback fight," Glaser said, "but we have not accepted any of them as yet."

(Author of "Barefoot Boy With Cheek," etc.)

THE INTELLIGENCE QUOTIENT OF NED FUTTY

Chloe McColgate was a beautiful coed who majored in psych and worked in the I.Q. testing department of the university. She did not work there because she needed money; she worked there because she loved and admired intelligence above all things. "I love and admire intelligence above all things," is the way she succinctly put it.

Ned Futty, on the other hand, was a man who could take intelligence or leave it alone. What he loved and admired above all things was girls. "What I love and admire above all things is girls," is the way he put it.

One day Ned saw Chloe walking by on the campus. "Holy Toledo!" he exclaimed. "How sweetly flows that liquefaction of her clothes!"

The following day he saw her walking past again. "Great balls of fire!" he exclaimed. "Next, when I cast mine eyes and see that brave vibration each way free, O, how that glittering taketh me!"

When he saw her again the next day, he could no longer contain himself. He ran up and blocked her way. "Excuse me," he said, tugging his forelock, "I am Ned Futty and I love you beyond the saying of it. Will you be mine?"

She looked at his quarter-inch haircut, his black rimmed glasses, his two-day beard, his gamy T-shirt, his tattered jeans, his decomposing tennis shoes. "You are not unattractive," she admitted, "but for me beauty is not enough. Intelligence is what I require in a man."

"I'm smart as a whip" said Ned with a modest blush. "Back home everybody always said, 'You got to get up pretty early in the morning to get ahead of old Ned Futty.'"

"Maybe so," said Chloe, "but if you don't mind, I'd like to make sure. Will you come into the I.Q. testing department with me?"

"With you I would go into a malted milk machine," cried Ned Futty and laughed and smote his thigh and bit Chloe's nape in an excess of passion and high spirits. Scampering goatlike, he followed her into the I.Q. testing department.

"First I will test your vocabulary," said Chloe.

"Shoot!" said Ned gaily and licked her palm.

"What does juxtaposition mean?"

"Beats me," he confessed cheerily.

"How about ineffable?"

"Never heard of it," smiled Ned, plunging his face into her clavicle.

"Furtive?"

"With fur on?" said Ned doubtfully.

Chloe sighed. "How are you on arithmetic?" she asked.

"A genius," he assured her.

"What's the difference between a numerator and a denominator?"

"My feeling exactly!" said Ned with an approving nod. "What's the difference?"

"If a man earns fifty dollars a month," said Chloe, "and saves 12% of his earnings, how long would it take him to save $100?"

"Forever," said Ned. "Who can save anything on $50 a month?"

"How do you find a square root?"

"How should I know?" replied Ned, giggling. "I'm no square."

"How are you on English?" asked Chloe.

"I speak it fluently," said Ned with quiet pride.

"What is the present tense of wrought?"

"Wreet," replied Ned, clutching Chloe to him and dancing 32 bars of the Maxixe.

"Next I will test you for manual dexterity," said Chloe. She handed him a board punched full of oddly shaped holes and a collection of oddly shaped pegs. "Fit the pegs in the holes," she instructed him.

"Let's neck instead," suggested Ned.

"Maybe later," said Chloe. "First the pegs."

He fumbled about for a longish interval. Finally he tired of it and reached for Chloe.

But she fended him off. "Ned Futty," she said, "you are dumb. You have the highest dumbness score of anybody I have ever tested. Consequently I cannot be your girl, for I love and admire intelligence above all things."

He hurled himself on the floor and clasped her about the knees. "But I love you!" he cried in anguish. "Do not send me from you, or you will make my world a sunless place—full of dim and fearful shapes!"

"I am sorry," she answered, "but you are too dumb."

"Reconsider, madam," he begged, "else a miasm looms before me."

"Go," she said coldly.

Spent and speechless, he struggled to his feet. With leaden steps he made his painful way to the door. There he stopped and lit a cigarette. Then he opened the door and started away to his gray and grisly future.

"Stay!" called Chloe.

He turned.

"Was that," she asked, "a Philip Morris you just lit?"

"Yes," he said.

"Then come to me and be my love!" cried Chloe joyously. "For you are not dumb! You are smart! Anybody is smart to smoke Philip Morris with its fine vintage tobaccos, its cool relaxing mildness, its superior taste, its snap-open pack. Ned, lover, give me a cigarette and marry me!"

And they smoked happily ever after. © Max Shulman, 1954

Caldwell Monument Is Finally Going Up

THE CALDWELL MONUMENT
. . . after a month, dignity is coming back

By ARCHER NEAL

Joe Caldwell is finally having his dignity restored. At least efforts to do so were carried out Tuesday afternoon. This first attempt proved to be unsuccessful, however. They underestimated Joe.

The heavy shaft proved to be too much for the capacity of a crane mounted on a Horton Transfer Company truck.

They managed to shift it around on the ground, but that was all.

Ample supervision was provided by campus superintendents and photographers covering the event.

The straw boss had to refer to the 1926 Yackety Yack to see which way the emblem near the top of the shaft faced. One photographer knew he had a hot scoop, because nobody knew what it was. (The emblem commemorates Dr. Caldwell's services to the State and to religion. It consists of a railroad wheel, an engineer's transit and the Holy Bible.)

A local policeman respectfully moved away from the base when told he was standing in the spot where Caldwell was buried. He said Joe probably wouldn't know the difference anyway.

Interest in the project died after it was abandoned for the day, except for a small boy who played around on the monument after everyone had left.

J. S. Bennett, director of operations, said the man was supposed to come back yesterday with better equipment, but he didn't show up. The project should be completed in the next day or so. You might call it a monumental effort.

Maid Of Cotton

Out of the 11 entries, three will be chosen by the judges to go to Memphis, Tenn. for the national contest.

In Victory Village:

Phones May Be On The Way

By DAN WALLACE

THE STUDENT Council will meet today to consider an appeal by the Student Party for a new election in Town District 1 which includes Victory Village. If the appeal is upheld, the new election will be held this coming Tuesday.

FIVE of the eight legislative seats from Town District 1 are open in the fall elections, and these seats will again be contested if the new election is approved.

THE NEW ELECTION appeal by the Student Party is based on the SP claim that vigorous campaigning was withheld in the Village on the day of election because it was discovered on the election morning that the name of UP candidate Colin McMillan had been left off the ballot. The SP was informed by the Chairman of the Elections Board, Graham Rights, that McMillan had requested a new election, which would be granted. After the election, McMillan withdrew his request for a re-vote. In view of these facts, the Student Party has demanded that the new election be held as was originally intended.

FREE PUBLIC PHONES may be installed in the Village again, J. S. Bennett, director of operations, said yesterday, if it is determined that the Villagers need them. He said that a survey is now being made for the purpose of studying and analyzing the situation. Evidence included in the survey will be the number of calls made through the pay phone and the number of those with and without phones.

THE VILLAGE board of directors will hold their monthly meeting this Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the rec center. Villagers are invited to attend.

CHAIRMAN of the board, Ed Best, has commended board members, Nell Hood, Ruth Sluder, Sam Barnard and this columnist for their good work this semester.

SOMEONE reported the other day that some brass hats at Fort Bragg thought that "those civil service workers are socialists."

MILDRED PHILLIPS, director of the Village Day Care Center, has announced that the nursery will be closed on Thanksgiving Day. She also stated that the nursery will be closed for one week during the Christmas holidays, and that during this period there will be a baby-sitting service. Those who wish to apply as baby-sitters for this period should contact Mrs. Phillips at the rec center.

NEW BIRTHS: A son was born to David and Barbara Myers, 22 Jackson circle, on Monday. Robert and Sylvia Minteer of 114 Mason Farm road gave birth to a baby boy yesterday afternoon.

Geographers Meeting Here

More than 100 geographers will convene at the University today for a three-day meeting of the Southeastern Division of the Association of American Geographers.

This will be the first meeting held by the Southeastern Division in this State.

In addition to representatives from North Carolina, delegates will come from seven southern states: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Tennesesee.

A highlight of the program will be an address by National Association President Dr. Joseph Russell, of the University of Illinois, who will speak at a banquet session in the Carolina Inn Friday night.

The three-day program will feature a symposium of papers presenting geography of North Carolina. Riley Staats, University of Miami, president of the Southeastern Division, will preside.

Registration will begin in O. Max Gardiner Hall at 8 o'clock Thursday morning.

Officers of the group in addition to President Staats are W. R. Johnson, Memphis State College, vice-president; Coy T. Phillips, Woman's College, secretary; and W. H. Pierson, University of Florida, treasurer.

WC Science Group Meets

The Harriet Elliott Social Science Forum of Woman's College will be held today and tomorrow in Greensboro.

There will be no charge for attendance.

The topic for the Forum will be "Forces Underlying International Affairs."

The program will begin at 8 o'clock tonight, with Dana Adams Schmidt of the New York Times as the principal speaker.

The Forum will meet tomorrow at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. The speakers will be Clausen Knorr, professor of international affairs of the Foreign Affairs Institute at Princeton University, Margaret Meade, anthropologist and author, and Dana Adams Schmidt

Va. Alumni To Meet

Alumni of UNC living in Norfolk, Newport News and Richmond, Virginia, areas will hold meetings this week with University representatives taking part in them.

Alumni Secretary J. Maryon (Spike) Saunders and Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, will speak at all three meetings.

The University film, "In the Name of Freedom," will be shown in Norfolk and Newport News.

Members of the Athletic Department will attend the session in Richmond on Friday night before traveling to Charlottesville for the North Carolina-Virginia football game.

roused, and still arouses, the interested person.

Before Thomas Wolfe took his own leave, he, a devoted Horatian, paid a tribute to the "Old Master" that was characteristic of all. "To me, you were above good, above ruth, above righteousness. to me you were the sufficient negation to all your teaching. Whatever you did was, by its doing, right. And now I leave you throned in memory. You will see my dark face burning on your bench no more; the memory of me will grow mived and broken; new boys will come to win your favor and your praise. But you? Forever fixed, unfading bright, my lord." —

Very appropriate in its title and meaning in relation to Horace Williams, who whose body has gone but whose teachings and home remain is the final tribute from Wolfe's "We took philosophy seriously in those days, and each of us had his own. And, together, we had our own "Philosopher." He was a venerable and noble-hearted man—one of these great figures which almost every college had some years go ago, and which I hope they still have. For half a century he had been a dominant figure in the life of the entire state. In his teaching he was a Hegelian. The process of his scholastic reasoning was intricate: it came up out of ancient Greece and followed throught the whole series of "developments" down to Hegel. After Hegel—well, he did not supply the answer. But it didn't matter, for after Hegel we had him—he was our own Old Man.

"Our Philosopher's "philosophy," as I look back upon it, does not seems important now. It seems to have been, at best, a tortuous and patched-up scheme of other men's ideas. But what was important was the man himself. He was a great teacher, and what he did for us, and for others before us for years, was not to give us his "philosophy" but to communicate to us his own alertness, his originality, his power to think.

Wake Forest-UNC Squabble Reborn In Tribble's Speech

According to a story appearing in Old Gold and Black, the Wake Forest student newspaper, on Nov. 15, Wake Forest President Harold W. Tribble said in chapel on the morning on Nov. 12 that he was "convinced" Carolina men instigated the brawl which flared during the Wake Forest UNC football game Oct. 23.

The College president, according to the story, expressed the opinion that Consoles was "slugged" apparently "with an elbow." He continued by saying that Wake Forest is not perfect or above reproach. Consequently, Wake Forest players and fans alike participated in the fight which occurred.

The story continued, saying that, according to Dr. Tribble, UNC officials were invited to attend a sesion in which the two schools would study pictures of the Chapel Hill game. In all, he said, about 10 days were spent by Wake Forest in attempting to iron out the difficulties which had arisen between the two schools. But Carolina offered "no cooperation."

According to the Wake Forest paper, Dr. Tribble said that the statement which actually appeared in the newspapers was a complete misrepresentation of the joint statement which had been prepared by representatives of both schools at a meeting in Raleigh.

Following this, Dr. Tribble said he dedicated more time toward correcting this second problem between the two schools, according to the story. His attempts were unsuccessful, he said.

The story quoted Dr. Tribble as saying, "We want no painting done." It added that he urged Wake Forest students against wanting retaliatory action, quoting him as saying "I hope I don't."

According to the story, Dr. Tribble

University's Symphony Sets Concert Soon

The University Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Professor Earl Slocum, will be heard in a program of Brahms, Rachmaninoff and Tschaikowsky on Nov. 30 in Hill Hall.

Dr. William S. Newman will be guest soloist with the 56 piece orchestra in Rachmaninoff's "Concerto Number Three in D Minor."

Professor Slocum, conductor of the University Band and teacher of theory in the University Department of Music, is also chairman of the annual North Carolina Band Clinic.

Dr. Newman, author, lecturer and teacher in the Music Department, has concertized throughout the United States. For the last several years, Dr. Newman and Mr. Edgar Alden, assistant conductor of the University Symphony, have given annual recitals in Chapel Hill, playing sonatas for violin and piano.

The University Symphony is composed of instrumentalists from other departments of the University as well as the Music Department and musicians from surrounding communities.

Coed Dorms Getting Quiz Files

Spencer Sets Dance

Spencer Dorm will have a date dance tonight at Graham Memorial, from 9 until midnight.

Dare Peace, dorm social chairman, announced in the final plans yesterday that "Blue Moon" has been selected as the theme of the dance to be held in the Rendezvous Room. Music will be furnished by the GMAB combo, and refreshments will be served. A floor show has been planned for a part of the evening's entertainment.

House mothers of the campus sororities, fraternities and dorms, as well as personnel in the office of the Dean of Women, have been invited.

Women's Council Establishing New Study Conditions Program

The Independent Women's Council has started a program to improve study conditions in the women's dormitories, provide quiz files and encourage scholarship.

The program is being carired out by scholarship chairmen in the dorms. The office of scholarship chairman was instituted in the dorms for the first time this year. The office may be held only by independent women.

The scholarship chairman for the year are: Misses Jenny Gratz, Marion Chalmers, Carr; Phyllis Shepherd, McIver; Sandra Wax, Spencer, and Martha Lentz, Nurses' Residence.

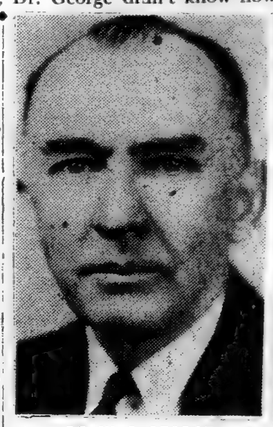
The Council's project of setting up quiz files in the dorms has been completed. File boxes for exams have been distributed to the dorms, and the organization of files has been started. The acquisition of quizzes and exams will be the major jobe of scholarship chairmen throughout the semester.

STUDY CONDITIONS

With the aid of the administration, the Independent Women's Council is trying to improve study conditions in the dorms. Improvements include adequate lighting, desks, chairs and attractive appearance. McIver has recently remodeled its study room.

The scholarship chairmen are planning to establish libraries in each dorm and to subscribe to magazines and newspapers for the dorms. Libraries will consist of books contributed by the students or purchased by the dorms. Each women's dorm has been given three books by the administration for the project.

Last year a scholarship cup was awarded to the women's dorm having the highest scholastic average. the award will be continued, and if a dorm should receive the cup three consecutive years, the cup will be awarded to that dormitory permanently.



The Council hopes to have a satisfactory study environment and a complete quiz file in each dorm by the end of the year.

Prof Starts Petition Favoring Segregation

By FRED POWLEDGE

Dr. W. C. George, UNC professor of anatomy who Wednesday started a campaign against integration in state schools, yesterday said he anticipated "a large list of signatures" on his petition, which is scheduled to eventually land on Governor Hodges' desk.

As of yesterday, however, Dr. George didn't know how many names had been signed to the petition, which he and "a few other people" authored. He said a "small number" of petitions have been given out.

DR. W. C. GEORGE
. . . starts petition

One Chapel Hillian, W. P. Jordan, said his copy of the petition has acquired "about 30" names since late Wednesday afternoon. Jordan is a local real estate man.

The document, which started circulating Wednesday, calls upon the Governor and the state Legislature "to do everything in your power to maintain separate schools for white and Negro pupils."

The petition termed segregation a "biological-social problem," and stated that "the members of the two races signing this petition wish to live on terms of peace and good will and helpfulness with one another under a program of separateness in social life."

Both Dr. George and Jordan said they knew of no Negro signatures, but both also said they knew of several Negroes who would sign if given the opportunity.

Dr. George was born in Yadkin County in 1888. He received his AB degree here in 1911, and became a zoology instructor in 1912. He joined the UNC Medical School staff as a professor in 1924, and was head of the Anatomy Department from 1940 to 1949.

He is listed in Who's Who and is author of several articles on the development of man and other vertebrates.

University officials declined to comment on the petition.

Chancellor Robert B. House, when asked for comment, said "In the first place, I haven't read it (this morning's account of the petition).

The Chancellor said he had just returned from an out-of-town trip, and had not had time to look into the matter.

Asked whether he would comment later, Chancellor House said "I will not. I will be busy this evening, too."

Gordon Gray, president of the University of North Carolina, had "no comment."

SP Can't Contest Election

The Student Council yesterday upheld the Elections Board's decision that the Town Men's I legislative election was valid and that the Student Party could not contest the election.

In a 5-2 decision the council rejected SP Chairman Joel Fleishman's appeal of the Elections Board decision made Wednesday.

Fleishman and other members of his party had argued that although it was the name of UP member Collin McMillian which had been left off the ballot in that district, the SP had the right to contest the elecion and call for a re-vote.

Ofter the executive session of the Student Council yesterday, Chairman Walten Joyner said that it was an 'implied but not a written" law that in a case where a name is left off a ballot, it is the exclusive right of the person or party involved to contest the election.

Fleishman, in contesting the Elections Board's decision Tuesday, said that Elections Board Chairman Graham Rights had told him that the election would be invalid.

Consequently, said Fleishman, his party didn't work "to get the vote out."

The UP won four seats in the districts. The SP won one.

Rights appeared before the council for the Elections Board yesterday.

Dave Reid represented the Student Party in the absense of Fleishman, who was attending the State Student Legislature in Raleigh.

According to Joyner, Reid said that because people in the district had been informed that the election would be invalid, "15 to 25" people didn't vote.

Quartet Thrills UNC Audience

By NEIL BASS

A capacity Memorial Hall audience was held spellbound last evening by the delightful performance of the world's first 4 piano ensemble.

The vivid interpretations of the world renowned musicians ranged from "La Campanella" by Liszt to the bedlam producing theme song from the radio serial "The FBI in Peace and War."

A 40 fingered "Curvature of Melody," the quartet is composed of: Glauce D'Attili, Adam Garner, Edward Edson and Frank Mittler.

The concert was presented as a part of the scheduled agenda of the Graham Memorial Student Entertainment Committee, John Page, chairman.

Playing predominantly selections from Liszt and Schubert, the talented pianists changed tempo abruptly after the second intermission and swung nimbly into Thompson's "Ragtime Base" and Anderson's "Fiddle Faddle," reusing the audience with electrifying results. After three encores, the quartet concluded their performance with the swift moving "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Glee Club Is Going To Va.

The University Men's Glee Club, under the direction of Professor Joel Carter, will leave today at 11 a. m. for Charlottesville, Va., where they will sing in a combined concert tonight with the Virginia Glee Club.

The Carolina Club will sing: "The Campbells Are Coming," "The Virgin's Slumber Song." "The Foggy, Foggy Dew," "The Scissors Grinder" and the Bach chorale, "My Chosen King Is Christ the Lord."

The two clubs combined will sing "Tarantella," by Randall Thompson, and the school songs of UNC and the University of Virginia.

After the concert, the UNC Glee Club plans to attend the pen rally being put on by UNC supporters. They will lead in the singing of schools' songs.

Band Reorganized

With the close of football season next Saturday, the University Marching Band will be reorganized as a Concert Band.

There are openings for players of all instruments. Any musicians interested in joining the band should see Professor Earl Slocum, 105 Hill Music Hall, for an audition.

Secretary Of State Thad Eure Points Out Law's Weaknesses

North Carolina Secretary of State Thad Eure told members of Delta Sigma Pi Wednesday that "We should have more uniformity in our corporation laws, and there are many minor weakness in them at present.

'I believe," he added, "any amendments should come in line with the steady progress of our state."

Eure spoke at the regular monthly professional meeting of the UNC chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, professional business fraternity.

THAD EURE
. . . don't force too much

He traced the development of corporate laws in North Carolina, and indicated the tendency toward uniformity in these laws in other states. He said such laws are necessary to a certain extent, but "the people of North Carolina will not swallow hook, line and sinker" any attempt to make sweeping revisions or attempt to enact a model law of uniformity. The changes must be made gradually toward the desired ends, Eure added.

Eure cited the failure of the mechanical inspection law in North Carolina as an example of trying to force too much change on the people at one time.

AGITATION FOR UNIFORMITY

In a question period following his speech, Eure said that agitation for uniformity is coming from North Carolina lawyers who have corporate practices and clients outside the state and have to keep up with the corporation laws of 48 states.

A study commission composed of outstanding lawyers and faculty members of law schools in North Carolina has been working for several years on the problem of making some move toward uniformity in our corporate law system, he said. Their findings will be presented at the next session of the General Assembly.

Eure noted that the number of active corporations in North Carolina has remained fairly constant in the past eight or ten years. There are 800 to 1,000 filings of new corporations in North Carolint every year, but a like number go out of business or fail to meet with state requirements.

Eure graduated from UNC law school in 1922, and was elected to the House of Representatives

(See EURE, page 4.)

Fleishman Elected Speaker

By RUTH DALTON

RALEIGH—Joel Fleishman was unanimously elected speaker of the House of Representatives at the 18th session of the North Carlina State student legislature yesterday afternoon.

Fleishman was nominated for the leader's post by Miss Jennie Smith of Guilford College and then the assembly voted as a whole to accept him.

Jim Turner, recently defeated SP floorleader, was elected Parliamentarian in the house.

Other officers for this year's assembly include Miss Dot Hunt of Meredith, Speaker Pro Tempora; Emo Boado of East Carolina College, Seargeant-at-arms; Miss Mary Turner of Livingston College, Reading Clerk; and Miss Janet Brown of Greensboro College, Recording Clerk.

The other oustanding feature of this first 4 p.m. session was a speech by Gov. Luther H. Hodges.

Gov. Hodges said that the state faced its most critical problems in 25 years and that most these are of a fiscal nature.

"I believe that the people of North Carolina want and expect he services of a modern nd progressive state to continue and if you tell them the whole truth, they will themselves carry the burden."

Hodges also spoke of his own undergraduate days at Chapel Hill, and said, "We settled problems more quickly and better. If you will do the same. You will get through more quickly and do a better job.

"I feel the young people have more enthusiasm and are more closely affliated with the ideals of the Democratic Party than their seniors."

In the Senate, Wade Cooper of East Carolina College was elected President and Lloyd "Doc" Cheek of N. C. State was elected President Pro Tempora.

The House and the Senate reconvened last night at 7:30 to begin considering the bills and resoluions on its agenda.

The four bills up for debate last night were a bill to extend the student visa introduced by WC; a resolution requesting that all cities in North Carolina whose population exceeds 50,000 install electromechanical traffic cops introduced by Shaw University; a bill for an act to establish a constitution for the SSL introduced by Duke University Women's College; and a resolution providing a qualified negative for the Givernor of North Carolina introduced by High Point College.

No Flag-Raising Tomorrow

If there's going to be a North Carolina flag in Charlottesville this weekend Thad Eure won't be carrying it!

The genial Secretary of State recalled his experiences at the Carolina — University of Virginia football game when he was the center of a near riot.

Eure had attended many of the Tar Heel's games cheering the team from the sidelines with a giant North Carolina flag.

But at Charlottsville, according to Eure, "half a dozen Virginia students jumped out of the stands and attacked me." Ushers, police and highway patrolmen had to be called in when Carolina rooters came to Eure's aid.

Eure recalled that after order was restored, someone on the Tar Heel bench used splints to repair the staff of the damaged flag, and it was once again waving proudly, but closer to the bench than before.

Fearing further attack following the close of the game which Carolina won, 33-0, Eure said he "stayed in the middle of the players as they left the field for the bus and crouched down between the seats."

Back at the clubhouse Eure traded overcoats and hid his flag in the trunk of an automobile before going into town. He said "Boys were looking all over Charlottesville for me. They weren't going to let me or my flag leave the State!"

Eure, speaking at a dinner meeting of Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity, wished the team the best of luck but vowed that he was "not going back" As for Duke — "They would probably treat me worse than Virginia did," he said.

UNC-Duke Rivalry Flares Up At SSL

By LOUIS KRAAR

RALEIGH—The traditional rivalry between Carolina and Duke flared up here yesterday at the State Student Legislature. However, Carolina politicing ended the affair quietly.

The flare up started some hours before this mock legislature of college students began. UNC's Joel Fleishman, Gordon Forester, and Jim Turner roamed the halls of the Capitol drumming up votes for Fleishman, who was running for Speaker of the House.

George Coltrane, a fiery Duke politico from High Point, asked Fleishman what he thought of a constitution Duke planed to introduce.

Fleishman siad he objected to a clause that said delegates to this mock legislature would have to be approved by each college's student government. Coltrane, angry at Fleishman, canvassed the arriving delegates. The word echoed through the rotunda between the House and Senate chambers—Fleishman might have trouble from Duke.

"Doc" Cheek, N. C. State president and WC forces were pressed into action.

UNC's Turner took delegates over by the rotunda railing, quietly stumping for Fleishman support. But Duke forces—one of the largest here—were campaigning too.

Some minutes before the session oficially bgan, Forester herded the Carolina students into the tiny Capitol press room to talk strategy. He read out a list of candidates from other schols with which he had swaped votes.

"I got to get back out there." Forester said. "Duke might give us a little trouble."

The politicing in the halls ended gradually, the echoes of last—minute deals still in the air.

The House swiftly and efficiently chose Fleishman speaker miuntes later without opposition.

Presbyterians Set Party

A square dance, hayride, entertainment and refreshments are slated for members of the Presbyterian Westminster Fellowship tomorrow.

The fellowship's annual Party-Square Dance will be held in the cafeteria of Camp New Hope, outside Chapel Hill. A truck will leave from the group's "hut" tomorrow at 7 p.m. for those who wish to ride in hay. Cars will leave shortly after 7 o'clock for hayride abstainers.

Refreshments and entertainment will be featured at the party, along with square and round dancing.

White Supremacy On The Campus

Evasion of the Supreme Court's ruling on segregation was inevitable in states like South Carolina and Georgia, where white supremacy is a widely accepted dogma and racial feeling runs deep. We expect better from North Carolina.

The brief that this state filed with the Court this week was not disappointing. It pleaded for time, and properly so, since this greatest social change since Emancipation cannot be accomplished in a few days. But North Carolina's argument did not breathe defiance for evermore.

Without claiming for ourselves any supernatural insight, The Daily Tar Heel believes that is the position of most North Carolinians, that we should proceed slowly toward educational equality for Negro citizens. Unfortunately, there are some who have proclaimed that segregation must be continued at all costs, who have tried to stand against the law and against the tide of justice in our time.

A State Senator from Burgaw has said, in presenting a petition to the governor, the Court's decision "will destroy both the Negro and white races." A loom fixer in a Durham textile mill, one of the incorporators of the "North Carolina Association for Preservation of the White Race, Inc.", has warned of impending bloodshed if school segregation is ever ended.

This phonograph record has now been inherited by a man named W. C. George, a professor in this University. Dr. George, who is an anatomy teacher and ought to know better, says, "When you cross up different breeds of animals, including man, you soil the breed." That is not true, but more important, it is not the question. The ending of segregation in the schools does not involve "cross-breeding", the ancient and insistent claim of those who oppose desegregation to the contrary notwithstanding. This is not a matter of biology but a matter of legal justice.

Dr. George has connected the University of North Carolina with the "segregation at all costs" doctrine in the headlines of the state. The University has traditionally found itself in the forefront of the struggle for racial equality; it has been an almost completely accepted idea that when racial barriers come down in the state, they will fall here first. The white supremacy assertions of one of its professors do not, we are convinced, coincide with the University's will or the path it will follow.

The Insecurity System & Education

Another tentacle of the security system has reached out of the Defense Department to squirt its black ink into educational waters.

Debaters at West Point and Annapolis got word from upstairs the other day that they no longer will be allowed to debate with other schools on the admission of Red China to the U. N.

The cadets at West Point and Annapolis are there, true, to be trained for armed service; but what the Defense Department has failed to realize is that these cadets have given the military academies the responsibility of educating them. Education comes as much (if not more) from lively thinking about lively issues as from absorbing all thoughts and facts that suit the authorities.

The military academies, lying under the jurisdiction of the Defense Department, must feel the harshest lash of control. But on every campus where students must sign a loyalty oath to participate in ROTC programs, its influence has also been felt. Word comes to us of a Duke ROTC student who had made arrangements for a tour of the USSR, only to be told that if he carried his plans out he would be considered a security risk.

The Defense Department will someday we hope, be brought to the realization that a service in which vigorous thinking is discouraged (and, in this case, even prohibited) will attract only the most mediocre of mediocrities. We fail to see the "security" in that.

Carolina Front

The SSL Is A Symbol Of Student Power

Louis Kraar

RALEIGH—College students, some 27 of them from UNC, have come to this capitol city to do what their elders dread to do this year—run the State Legislature.

With the problems North Carolina will face in January when its legislators meet, many seasoned politicians probably are wishing the students were running the real Legislature.

But this weekend's efforts are only a game. It's called the State Student Legislature, a mock legislature. But it's a game with a purpose.

The students who fill the House and Senate today are going to tackle the state's biggest problem this session—that of racial integration in schools. Carolina placed the integration bill on the agenda. It says, in effect, that students realize integration is the only anwer to the Supreme Court's ruling.

THE RACIAL integration measure is, perhaps, the most appropriate issue the students will discuss. The state issued a brief on the subject this week that said we should proceed slowly in mixing races in the public schools.

The brief talked in terms of social upheaval, tradition, and law. It didn't mention these students sitting in the Capitol this weekend, but the history of this group shows that integration can work.

A State College debating fraternity set up this mock legislature in 1936. It met regularly and uneventfully each year until 1945. During these years, the students were received by the Governor at the Mansion.

I suspect in these years the high spot of the State Student Legislature was this social function at the Mansion.

Carolina and Woman's College in 1945 called upon the other schools to admit Negro delegates to the next year's session. The resolution caused so much discusion that the Assembly called it quits for the day. While the group was adjourned, Carolina and WC students were lobbying.

When the vote came, the liberal wing of the Assembly won, 110-48.

The following year students of both races participated in the meeting. Voting did not split on racial lines. Things went as usual except that Wake Forest sent no delegates, and there was no social at the Governor's Mansion.

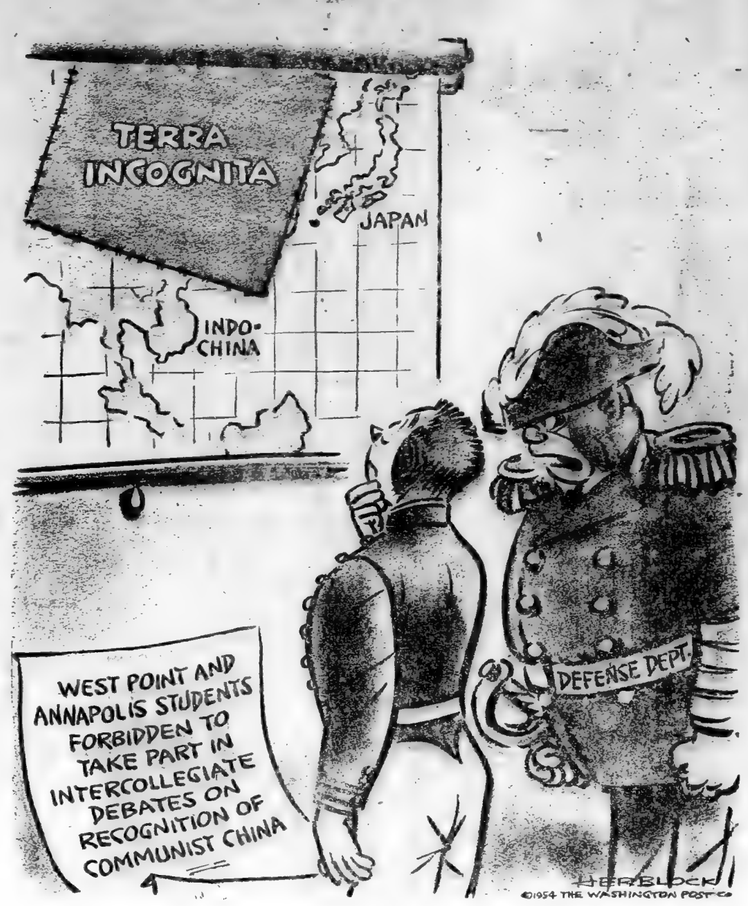
THE STATE College law fraternity that started the State Student Legislature announced in 1947 that it had dissolved itself and the mock legislature. The reason was clear, but it wasn't mentioned in the announcement.



Carolina's Debate Council stepped in, and WC joined the effort. The group survived. And in 1949, it grew.

Today's State Student Legislature sitting here in Raleigh is a symbol of what North Carolina students can do, students of both races.

Leaders of the Assembly, several of them Carolina students, have spoken of the purpose of this group. One pointed out that the SSL meets to discuss bills "to point out weaknesses and inefficiencies in our state government when and where they exist." They usually add quietly that the State Student Legislature has no power. And while it is true the State Student Legislature has no legal power, the power of students sitting, talking and working together domnates these halls.

You won't find this power in the law books. But it is in the minds and hearts of these 300 students here.

'You're Not Here To Think, Mister'

A Close Look At Joe

Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — McCarthy debate in the Senate, like the unofficial debate in the nation, has veered toward greater divergence and more bitterness instead of more unity.

While a strong group, led by Senator Case of South Dakota wants to appease Joe, another group, both Republicans and Democrats, is amazed at the way its colleagues ignore Joe's roughshod trampling over the rights of other Senators.

This group includes some of the oldest and most distinguished members of the Senate, who cherish its prestige as the most important deliberative body among the free governments of the world. Men like George of Georgia, Neely of West Virginia, Hayden of Arizona, Green of Rhode Island, have been in the Senate a quarter of a century, have fought to protect its dignity and decorum.

And, though they are Democrats and Senator Watkins is a Republican, they have great respect for his judicial temperament; and they resent the attacks on him—from two points of view.

No Religious Prejudice

One is the implication, given by Monsignor Edward Martin, when introduced as the spokesman for Cardinal Spellman in New York, that the move to censure McCarthy was motivated by the fact that he is a Catholic. It happens that Senator Watkins was a Bishop in the Mormon Church and his Democratic colleagues bitterly deplore the implication that he or any of them are motivated by religious prejudice.

Second, Watkins and the members of his committee were appointed by the entire United States Senate to perform a duty — namely, study the censure charges. They, therefore, speak for the entire Senate. And when they are charged by McCarthy with being "handmaidens of Communism," many Senators feel he is actually condemning the entire Senate.

That is why the dilly-dallying debate of South Dakota's case regarding General Zwicker sounds like arguing over how many angels can stand on the point of a needle. While Case is debating this, other Senators are strong in their support of Senator Watkins that McCarthy is in contempt of the entire Senate because of his "handmaidens of Communism" charge.

Furthermore, they point out that 46 original charges were brought against McCarthy by Senators Flanders, Vt., Fulbright, Ark., and Morse, Ore., and that the Censure Committee leaned over backwards by boiling them down to only three.

McCarthy's Forgotten Record

Here are some of the other charges, more or less forgotten while Senator Case argues over the legalistic detail of the date when major Peress was promoted.

1. Though one censure charge against McCarthy is his refusal to testify regarding his finances, the Watkins Committee overlooked the findings of an earlier Senate Committee showing how McCarthy collected money to fight Communism, then invested it on the commodity market.

2. It is well known that McCarthy accepteed a $10,000 check from the Lustron Corporation. Yet what isn't generally known is the remarkable coincidence in dates.

On Nov. 5, 1948, the Senate Investigating Committee, of which McCarthy was a member, recommended an official investigation of Lustron. Exactly seven days later, Nov. 12, 1948, McCarthy received the $10,000 check from the company he was investigating.

3. It's against the kickback laws for a Senator to accept money from his employees. McCarthy got around this by "borrowing" the entire bank account of his assistant, Ray Kiermas, whenever he needed it to bolster his stock-market speculating.

4. Eight of McCarthy's past 12 income-tax returns have been found in error. In each case, the error was in McCarthy's favor. For example, during his first three years in the Senate, he reported a gross income of $59,604.59. He claimed stock losses of $43,217.87 and interest deductions of $18,262.96. This adds up to loss and deductions of $61,480.83 for the three years. In other words, he went in the hole $1,876.24. Yet he managed to keep a healthy personal bankroll.

5. It's a matter of sworn testimony that McCarthy frequently went to the racetracks with Lustron's president, Carl Strandlund. At the 1949 Pimlico Preakness, according to the testimony McCarthy borrowed money from Strandlund to bet on the horsees.

Reaction Piece

Senator Sam, Predictions, And The SP

David Mundy

Senator Ervin has taken to the big time with considerable gusto. A few months ago he was a relic of small-time state politics who had advanced to the eminence of a state supreme court. Now he (billboards will read "VOTE FOR SENATOR SAM") is pleasurin' hisself (another good old mountain expression) in the U. S. Senate.

The years spent meditating on the bench have served him well, in the construction of an ever-flowing reservoir of pretty little stories. (As one old lawyer told a young one; if you haven't enough evidence to argue your case without perjuring yourself, tell 'em some funny little folksy stories.)

And like most senators of the caliber generally elected by southern states, he has even taken to using the "high falutin" terms associated with the "gentlemen's club." Senator of North Carolina? Not on your life Senator Sam is a "SENATOR OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA."

He even orates about the great time-hallowed and most precious traditions of the Senate, which are being dragged in the mire by such demagogues as McCarthy.

Senator Sam has been more than a little turned by his sudden prominence in the public press. Now the road to fame and fortune lies not in fighting Communists (if it ever did), but in criticising McCarthy, those damned Wall Street big business men, power lobbies, and those corrupt Texas robber oil barons. Senator Sam has hit limelight road at just the right moment: he doesn't have to pause for retooling or retrenchment, as do older Senators who have to maintain something like a consistent record.

He has become one of the front-runners of the hate-Joe pack. Sic'em, Sam. This is the first time in years that a North Carolina Senator has had so much publicity. You might even go down in history for this; perhaps even get into the index of a history text. Your hour of glory, at least your hour of fame, has arrived.

Take it and rejoice, for tomorrow you return again to oblivion. More than a collection of funny stories is needed to be, as you so quaintly style it, a "Senator of the United States."

* * *

And our senator-elect might get almost as much publicity if he ever gets up to make a few remarks of his own in the Senate. An equally illustrious member of the House from North Carolina did just such a thing once: he contributed the word "bunkum" to our language.

* * *

Recall those New Year's predictions of a few columns past? They are developing beautifully. The UP did pick up several seats Tuesday.

The SP, justly or unjustly, has been tagged with a label which reads, "Petty Political Machinatos." This time they got a horse laugh and a heave-ho.

YOU Said It: Writer Takes Creed To Task

Editor:

I would like to take issue with Mr. Dick Creed and his article "It's a Tough Life In The Lower Quad" that appeared in Saturday's paper.

To begin with, he started out with a rather fallacious argument; the idea that there is a line of demarcation between fraternity and dorm residents, and that there is much jealousy and resentment between them. This is just plain untrue. There are several fraternity men who live in this dorm, and they are just as friendly and as well-liked as the non-fraternity men. They do not in any way act superior to non-fraternity men, or live in the entirely different world that Mr. Creed implies . . .

The Creedian picture of the lower quad boy is misleading and ill-considered. Granted, many people do not have the financial resources to equal those of some fraternity men. Some, indeed, have barely the resources to maintain existence here—but you don't hear them complaining. I am one of those who barely gets along, and I'm having the time of my life.

The only parallel to Mr. Creed's unfortunate lower quad boy is found in the pages of Thomas Wolfe's "Look Homeward Angel," where Eugene Gant, a new student on the hill, is such an impoverished neurotic creature as Mr. Creed assumes all of us to be. Might I remind Mr. Creed of three points. Such events are fictional, they took place in a different day and time, and they were formulated by a writer who was far and away superior to Mr. Creed.

There are many phrases in that article that set Mr. Creed off a social snob of the greatest magnitude. The unfortunate air of superiority and smugness may have made good copy, but it wasn't very well chosen. He has neighbors who can outtalk him, out-think him, or out-write him on almost every point, yet Mr. Creed is sorry for them. Obviously he doesn't know them very well, certainly not well enough to realize that by doing a little sweating for their education they are not exempt from enjoying it. Perhaps he should sneak to some of the veterans who live on his floor and find out if they're distraught over having to do without those luxuries that he insists are so necessary. He'll find out that they have no need for fraternities to enjoy themselves.

E. E. CUMMINGS

. . . ten poems a year since 1894.

e. e. Has Succeeded More Than Most

Aldous Huxley, Robert Nathan, Westbrook Pegler, Dorothy Thompson, James Thurber and Mark Van Doren are all 60 years old this year, and so is Edward Estlin Cummings. All of these people were born in 1894; that and the fact that all of them have had their say in the fields of philosophy, cartooning, poetry or Roosevelt-baiting is obviously all they have in common.

Mr. Cummings, e. e. to us, (and this is the point of dragging all these sexagenarians into the matter) has succeeded better than any of his peers in getting works to say exactly what he wants them to say. In a few lines of type, he can be more cynical about politicians than Pegler, as funny as Thurber, and almost (but probably not quite) as philosophical as Huxley.

If you don't believe it, go out and buy his book (Poems: 1925-1954. Harcourt, Brace, & Co. $6.75) which has all of his poems, 600 of them. They should be read, one, or at the most two or three at a time. Slowly. So that the Fourth of July oration or the April sunset or the violent death or whatever sinks in. This book will last you a while. Dr. Lyman Cotten has said Cummings' poetry is like "a strong perfume that quickly tires the nasal nerves" and it is so. Cupido ergo sum is the motto here, "I feel, therefore I am." An overdose of this perfume will lay you out, exhausted.

But it is well worth the inhalation. Here is Cummings the intellectual puzzler, Cummings the tough guy. Cummings the obscene, Cummings the romantic. Here is rejection, in spades—everything from American bigness ("from every B.V.D. let freedom ring") to science, art, and Ernest Hemingway ("what does little Ernest croon/in his death at afternoon?/ (kow dow r 2 bul retoinis/wus dewoids of lil Oinis")

The typography would will probably hail getting this typesetter's terror into print as the biggest thing since the Gutenberg Bible. The literary world will be pleased to have in one volume all the works of one of our great individuals. E. E. Cummings is a man with something to say, something you may not agree with, but that you will not find uninteresting.

Decidedly not.

Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Baylor Picked To Win

NEW YORK, Nov. 18, (AP)—The spot is marked "x" for the country's two top football teams, Ohio State and UCLA, who tackle bitter rivals in Saturday's round of year-end traditionals.

But the "upset knob" on our crystal gazing machine, overworked all year, has gone on the blink. So we ride with the champs.

Last week we hit 38 of 52 for a .731 average, making the season's mark 313-124 for .716.

The semifinal stab:

Ohio State over Michigan: The Buckeyes were expected to slip up somewhere, as has been their custom. They'll be loaded and should win by two touchdowns.

UCLA over Southern California: An edge here to the old-fashioned single wing, which features a halfback whiz named Primo Villanueva.

Notre Dame over Iowa: Just a matter of which is madder over last year's tie, thee third in four gaames, and the fainting ncidents.

Oklahoma over Nebraska: A breeze for the Sooners, whose line is as fast as the backfield.

Baylor over SMU: The Bears rested last week while SMU had a toughie with Arkansas.

Yale over Harvard: After two straight defeats, the Eli sophs find themselves again on Dean Loucks' trigger passing.

West Virginia over North Carolina State: Freddy Wyant and the Mountaineers' iron-man line give Coach Pappy Lewis another banner season.

California over Stanford: Paul Larson pitches the Golden Bears to a three-touchdown victory.

Minnesota over Wisconsin: An individual battle between Bob McNamara and Alan Ameche, with McNamara the victor.

Kentucky over Tennessee: Thee Wildcats went years before they finally beat a Vol team. Now they know it can be done.

GI Gets Settlement For Strange Reason

BRISTOL, England, Nov.18 - A baseball-playing American Air Force sergeant said in court today that ever since being banged up in a highway accident he "collapses between second and third base."

The British judge, for whom the geographical positions of second and third bases had to be plotted on a diagram called a diamond, was so sympathetic that he awarded the airman damages of 281 pounds 16 shillings or $809.04.

The airman, S. Sgt. John Panas of Manchester, N. J., stationed near Shaftesbury, was hurt in September, 1953, when his car collided on a narrow country road with a bus of Triumph Coaches, Ltd., of Hampshire.

Panas told Justice Laurence Byrne he was in a hospital 16 days because of concussion and injuries to his toes and knee.

"Before that I played all games, football, basketball, but especially baseball," Panas said.

"I was a member of my unit baseball team," he continued. "But now I find that my knee gives out between second and third base, and I have to hobble home."

Jim Beatty To Compete In Nationals Monday

By RAY LINKER

Carolina's top distance runner, Sophomore Jimmy Beatty from Charlotte, will represent the Tar Heels in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's sixteenth annual cross country championship at Michigan State College, East Lansing, Michigan, next Monday.

Beatty went undefeated in eight meets this season as he led Carolina to a 5-2 record, the state championship, and second place in the Atlantic Coast Conference. In doing so he set new records for three of the five coures that he ran on his home Chapael Hill layout, the N. C. State course, and the Maryland trail. The latter proved him the conference individual champ.

After seeing Beatty in his early season performances, track Coach Dale Ranson entered him in the nationals, but it was his fine victory in the ACC meet than prompted Ranson to give him the final approval for the big meet. In the conference run he out-distanced Maryland's Alva "Burr" Grimm (for the second time this season) by some twenty yards for the crown.

Beatty came to Carolina, after winning the high school state mile race for two years, to lead the freshman cross country team to an undefeated season and a state championship, as he won all seven meets against other freshman competition and set records for two of the three frosh trails he ran on (Chapel Hill and State).

During the outdoor track season Beatty ran ten races and turned in ten victories for the freshman team. In one meet he won the half-mile, the mile, and the two-mile. He established two all time Carolina freshman records during the season, doing the mile, his specialty, in 4:22.6 and the two-mile in 9:44.7. He also scored two exceptionally good half-miles—a 1:59.2 and a 2:00.

The only mark against the outstanding distance runner is his 26 college races came in the Indoor Games last year, when he, as a frosh, finished second in the ¾ mile run to Grimm, the same runner Beatty defeated Monday for the ACC crown.

Ranson, Carolina's track mentor since 1925, says of Beatty: "There's no doubt in my mind that Beatty is potentially Carolina's greatest distance runner of all time.He's already one of the best I've ever coached."

In the nationals the competition is extremely keen in which there will be 36 teams and over 250 individuals, including George Terry of Boston University, recent winner of the IC4A championship in New York, and Ben Angle, VMI's lanky runner who won the Southern Conference meet on Monday.

Jock Willie Shoemaker Hickok Athlete of Year

NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (AP)—Jockey Willie Shoemaker, who won his 2,000th race during the month, today was chosen winner of the October award in the Hickok Pro Athlete of the Year poll.

The veteran rider hit the 300 victory mark for '54 in October, making it the fourth successive year in which he booteed home 300 or more winners. He rode his 2,000th winner at Tanforan on Oct. 20.

Shoemaker received 15 first place votes and 96 points on a 3-2-1 basis to beat out Johnny Antonelli, the New York Giants' southpaw ace. Antonelli received 17 first placers but only 68 points.

Tar Heels To Hold Drills At Virginia Today

North Carolina's Tar Heels took it easy today as they closed out their work here in preparation for Saturday's clash in Charlottesville against Virginia.

The squad will leave for Virginia tomorrow morning and will hold a practice session there tomororw afternoon.

Dummy plays and pass defense consumed most of the practice time, but Coach George Barclay had his charges review all phases of their game during the course of the workout.

With the exception of quarterback Al Long and fullback Marshall Newman, who have been declared out for the remainder of the season because of injuries, Barclay noted the Tar Heels as being in good physical condition.

Sub left half Sonny Ridenhour, who had to miss the Notre Dame game because of a muscle injury in his leg, has returned to full duty, as has fullback George Wallin, who has been bothered with a badly swollen face.

WHO ARE INDUSTRY'S TOP YOUNG SCIENTISTS?

Ten men between the ages of 26 and 40 were featured in a recent national magazine article which presented a portrait of the young scientist in America today. These particular men are a sample of the most brilliant young scientific minds in industry.

It's interesting to note that three of the ten are with Bell Telephone Laboratories, three with General Electric and one each with four other companies.

The variety of opportunity in research and other phases of telephone work has always attracted an unusually high percentage of the nation's best young men.

Consult your Placement Officer about opportunities with Bell Laboratories . . . also with the Bell Telephone Companies, Western Electric and Sandia Corporation. Your Placement Officer will be glad to give you details.

THREE OF THE TEN ARE AT BELL TELEPHONE LABORATORIES—

Mathematician Claude Shannon won fame for his Communication Theory

Physical Chemist William Baker introduced new concepts that have improved synthetic rubber and fibers

Physicist Herring is known for his understanding of the quantum mechanics of the solid state

Reports on a statewide opinion survey on International Trade being carried out by the North Carolina League of Women Voters were made at a regular meeting of the League's State Board of Directors held here recently.

Mrs. Harold W. Walteers, Chapel Hill, state president, headed the sessions which included reports from the Survey Committee on its activities in various cities of the state.

He has completed several weeks of field work in contacting many of the leading trucking companies in the state. The information which he has gathered will be used as the basis for the development of a series of case studies dealing with problems of management and policy formulation in the trucking industry.

These cases will be used for instructional purposes in the traffic courses offered as a part of the major in transportation and traffic in the School of Business Administration here.

The research fellowship in motor transportation was established by the Business Administration School through a grant received from the Pilot Freight Carriers, Inc., Winston-Salem.

—Wake Forest-UNC Squabble—

ble concluded by telling the Wake Forest football team that he wanted them to know that not only he, but the entire student body was behind them each time they represented the College.

The second statement from Dr. Tribble was issued on Nov. 8, in which he said that the original joint statement was misrepresented in the newspapers was as follows.
